

EMU ANYONE?
ED/OP PAGE A5.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE ☆☆☆☆☆ 9.04.02

Lombardi arrives

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

With Chancellor John Lombardi at the helm, it appears the University of Massachusetts is already making progress financially and strategically from the position it was in last year.

"You're an interesting university in many ways," the new chancellor said. "It's interesting partly because of its historical trajectory and the way in which it's placed in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and partly because of the kinds of problems that it has."

"UMass is like all first-rate research universities," he said. "It's what I call a quality engine. Its purpose in life is to bring together, inside the University, the highest amount of high-quality students, high-quality faculty, high-quality research, high-quality resources, high-quality staff, and turn them loose.

"If you can get all of those people together, what you have is tremendously effective engine," he said.

Lombardi isn't starting off blind to the problems at hand. "I'm starting out relying on the work that's already been done by the faculty and the staff and the students and the administration to put together an assessment of problems and issues and opportunities that are available throughout the campus and to understand them," he said

"I'm basically an auto mechanic at heart. I like the car to run right. When I see a car that isn't running right, I'm usually inside, looking for something to make it better. When it runs right, well, I'm just as happy as a clam," he said.

Addressing the Problems

Lombardi sees several things missing on campus. While he's the first one to admit that money is lacking in the state and at the University, he sees it as a responsibility of the University to come up with alternate sources of income when the economy falls on hard times.

"Other states have responded faster than Massachusetts and UMass to build other sources of revenue, whether it's fundraising, or whether it's entrepreneurial activities, or whatever it is," Lombardi said. "UMass is coming a little bit late to the game of generating alternative sources to sustain the quality engine and keep it running and doing what it needs to do."

That isn't the only problem, though. "The second thing the campus needs to do is be a little tighter in its focus," Lombardi said. He thinks that UMass is a victim of its own circumstances. "We're 25,000 students. 25,000 students is not a small university, but it's not a big university. We're right in the middle. Because we're not big enough to do it on volume [of students], we have to do it on effectiveness."

Lombardi sees two things standing out above all others. "We have to focus on the two things that really drive every first class university, and that's teaching and research. If we do those two things right at the highest and most effective level, everything else is going to take care of itself," he said.

A campus foundation?

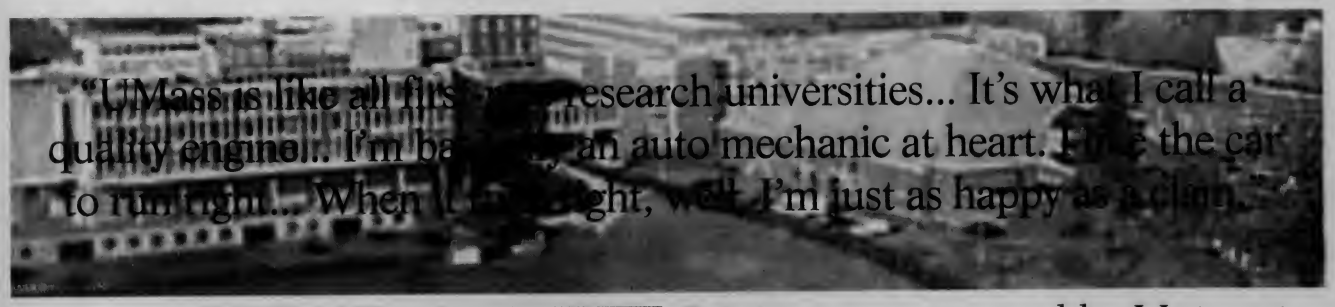
Lombardi comes to UMass with a reputation as a master fundraiser. "While we're not here to make money, the things we do take money," Lombardi said. "Our goal in fundraising is real simple-minded, it's too raise money. That's real straight forward."

Lombardi already has goals in mind to increase fundraising. "It takes an entity to do the fundraising that is campus specific," he said. "We're working on the possibility of creating a campus foundation."

According to Lombardi, all good fundraising stems from the hard work of volunteers. He sees no reason it should not be that way at UMass as well. "The people are there, but they don't know quite where to locate their energy," he said.

A campus foundation could fix that problem. Its sole purpose would be to organize and recruit volunteers who drive the fundraising projects themselves. "When you have a volunteer-based coherent organization, then you can start building the donor support, the volunteer support, that drives all good fundraising," Lombardi said.

"People think that fundraising is done by the university. Actually, it's done by the volunteers who care and who want to help you. If they're not there doing that with you, you won't get it done," he said.



Lombardi also admits that fundraising can be

Turn to CHANCELLOR, page A18

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

Chancellor John V. Lombardi arrives on campus this semester with a reputation for being a masterful fundraiser.

Crash claims athlete

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Stephanie Santos, a 19-year-old sophomore on the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team, was pronounced dead at 12:15 a.m. on Sunday, June 9 at Baystate Medical Center from injuries sustained in a one-car crash the prior evening.

Santos, riding in the front-passenger position of a 1990 Nissan, was on her way to a high school graduation party when friend Michelle Mateus, 20, lost control of the car and crashed into a utility pole in Granby, police said.

Mateus was hospitalized in fair condition following the crash and back seat passenger Kara Williamson, 18, escaped injury. Both were teammates of Santos' on the Ludlow High School soccer team.

Police reportedly found empty and full alcohol containers in the vehicle. According to Mateus' lawyer, Michael Jennings, blood tests taken following the accident showed she had not been intoxicated.

Mateus was released on July 8, on her own recognizance following a plea of innocence in Ware District Court to the charges of vehicular homicide while intoxicated, negligent operation of a motor vehicle, operating under the influence of alcohol, possession of liquor as a minor, speeding and failure to keep right.

A pretrial hearing is scheduled for Sept. 6.

Santos was just off her freshman year as leading scorer for coach Jim Rudy's Minutewomen.

"She was a wonderful kid," Rudy told the Associated Press (AP). "She was a coach's dream."

A soccer exhibition match was held in memory of Stephanie Santos on Sunday, August 18 at Lusitano Stadium according to the Springfield Union-News-Sunday Republican.

The Springfield United team played a team comprised of Ludlow alumni, with the proceeds going to the Santos family. The family hopes to use the proceeds to establish a scholarship in Santos' memory.

"The whole [Ludlow] community is shocked," Ludlow High School girls soccer coach Jim Calheno told the AP. "Stephanie was a great person... She was a role model for girls in Ludlow, especially because she was so small. It's tragic."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Stephanie Santos.

Santos was a member of the National Honors Society and graduated top ten in her class from Ludlow. She was a four-year varsity starter for the girls' soccer team before moving on to UMass.

Her college team plans to dedicate a plaque in her honor at the new Rudd Field in Amherst.

Information from the Associated Press and the Springfield Union-News-Sunday Republican was used in this article.

RA Union recognized by University

By Kristin Shrewsbury and S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Resident Assistants vote to unionize was recognized by the University of Massachusetts Amherst Administration on July 31, 2002. The RA Union will set precedence as the first recognized undergraduate labor union. Negotiations with the University begin this November.

Union members and the University agreed together that they would jointly release a single public statement. Neither will be available for further comment.

The subject of negotiation will be limited to the terms and conditions of employment of the RAs; both parties have agreed not to negotiate over academic issues.

"We haven't started negotiating the working conditions and we've agreed not to negotiate over academic issues," James A.W. Shaw, President of United Auto Workers Local 2322, said in a statement released by the university. "Right now we feel that the administration have handled this situation well despite this long standing dispute and we've now begun to see a strong indication that the University is taking the RAs seriously."

There are currently 365 RAs and Community Development Assistants (CDAs) in the bargaining unit of the United Auto Workers Local 2322.

Negotiations will include a selected bargaining committee voted on by members of the RA Union. Shaw further explained that life would continue as normal for the RAs coming into the fall semester, and policies implemented last spring will still stand.

"We will be working under the same conditions until both sides come to an agreement on the changes that will take place," Shaw said. "In the meantime RAs will democratically elect a bargaining committee to go before the University."

The Resident Assistants decision to unionize on March 5 was supported by the state labor relations commission who certified the results of the election. However, until July 31, the University had refused to recognize the RA Union due to their undergraduate status. The University asked that the labor commission reconsider their certification of the RA group as a Union.

In a letter to RAs during the spring semester, former interim chancellor Marcellette G. Williams argued that the union would conflict with the basic ideals of the RA position.

"Unionization is particularly incompatible with your position as a student leader and role model in the residence halls...Collective bargaining with an outside entity will, in my view, inevitably collide with core educational and administrative decisions," wrote Williams.

Both RAs and UAW Local 2322 members expressed their pleasure at the University's decision to begin discussions.

"This is a historic day for organized labor and the UAW. Today's agreement shows that unions are appropriate for all workers, including undergraduate student workers," Shaw said. "Unions bring democracy into the workplace, and democracy is always the right solution."

"I'm very happy and relieved," said Crista! Cruz, an RA who helped organize the union. "We still have a lot of work to do now. We need to form a bargaining committee and put together our proposals, but we are excited at this historic opportunity."

Dave Synnott, a senior and a RA for three years, expressed his satisfaction over the announcement in the jointly released press statement.

"Today, undergraduate student workers are taking their rightful place at the table of organized labor. We are forever grateful for the support of our fellow union sisters and brothers, community members, and elected public servants. We look forward to negotiating an agreement with the University that provides fair treatment, a living wage and a voice at work for all of us."

Turn to RA UNION, page A9

Diversity Calendar

Thursday, September 5

Barbara Ehrenreich will discuss her book Nickel and Dimed: On (Not) Getting By in America at 7:30 p.m. in the Chapin Auditorium, Mt. Holyoke College.

The Campus Crusade for Christ hosts its first meeting for the fall at 8 p.m. in 162 Campus Center basement.

Friday, September 6

Hillel will hold Conservative Rosh Hashana Services at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the UMass Student Union. Liberal services will be held in the Ballroom. Dinner will follow at 8:15 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. Students must sign up for dinner by September 4.

Saturday, September 7

Hillel will hold Conservative Rosh Hashana Services at 9 a.m., 6 p.m., and 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge in the UMass Student Union. Liberal services will be held in the Ballroom at 10 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Lunch will be served at 1 p.m., dinner at 7:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. Students must sign up for meals by September 4.

Sunday, September 8

Hillel will hold Conservative Rosh Hashana Services at 9 a.m., 6:30 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge at the UMass Student Union. Liberal services will be held in the Ballroom at 10 a.m. Tashlich will be at the campus pond at 1 p.m. Lunch is at 1:30 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union. Students must sign up by September 4 for meals.

Today is the last day for The Belles of Amherst: Contemporary Women Artists in the Collections of the Mead Art Museum and University Gallery, the University of Massachusetts at the Fairchild Art Gallery, Amherst College. The Mead Art Museum's exhibit is in honor of Amherst's 25th year as a coeducational college.

Monday, September 9

The Stonewall Center is hosting its Annual Open House from 4-6 p.m. in Crampton, Southwest. The Center will provide snacks and beverages. This event is open to the public, but is not wheelchair accessible.

Previews for upcoming weeks:

Smith College will host a "Women and Financial Independence Workshop" September 10 at noon in the Stoddard Auditorium. Lunch is free for the first seventy participants.

Smith College presents the "No More Victims Family Members Speaking Tour" September 10 at 7 p.m. at John M. Greene Hall. Key speakers include U.S., Afghan, Israeli and Palestinian family members of September 11 and subsequent conflicts.

Mt. Holyoke College and the Massachusetts International Festival of the Arts present Thelma Holt's lecture "Internationalism in the Theater". Holt is a British theater producer and former chair of the British Arts Council.

The Stonewall Center welcomes new and returning graduate students with its Graduate Student Reception September 12 from 4-6 p.m. at Crampton, Southwest.

Hillel House hosts Israeli Dancing lessons September 12 at 7:30 p.m. The lessons are free and beginners are welcome.

Event of the week

Hillel will hold Conservative Rosh Hashana Services at 7 p.m. Sept. 6, in the Cape Cod Lounge in the UMass Student Union. Liberal services will be held in the Ballroom. Dinner will follow at 8:15 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room. Students must sign up for dinner by September 4.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic calendar semesters. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded as "The Index" in 1890, became the Index Collegian in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a member of the Associated Press since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

☆ ☆ ☆ Colophon: special thanks and a shout out to the people who made this issue possible: Erica Hidalgo, Mike Kulak, and Ruth Sund. Thanks, guys! ☆ ☆ ☆

Campus housing still short

By Rachel Smith
Collegian Staff

The number of students assigned to temporary housing is down from last fall. Approximately 194 students will live in temporary housing this fall, in addition to 100 students who will be housed in the Campus Center Hotel, according to the University of Massachusetts Housing Office.

The total number of students in temporary housing is estimated to be less than the 370 students who called the Hotel home last year. 317 students were assigned temporary housing in the residence halls last fall.

According to Dave Vaillancourt, assistant director of Housing Services, around 100 to 150 students will cancel their housing assignments during the first week of school.

"The demand for housing is tracked all summer," Vaillancourt said. "The real demand doesn't show up until opening day."

Most students who met the housing office's deadlines received permanent housing assignments. The majority of students in temporary quarters this year applied for housing late.

Vaillancourt attributed students canceling housing assignments earlier to the increased student awareness of fees. The housing office worked with resident assistants to publicize late cancellation fees.

"The folks in this office did some real good PR," Vaillancourt said.

The housing office tracks trends in cancellation rates, and movement on and off campus. They use housing trends to estimate how many students will need on-campus housing. The sooner students decide where they want to live, the more accurate housing's estimations are.

"Students are making great decisions," said Vaillancourt.

Although UMass admitted fewer freshmen this year, the need still exists for temporary housing. Housing Services didn't try to dissuade transfer students from applying for housing while residence hall assignments are still in demand among sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Sophomores are required to reside on-campus, but many junior and senior students prefer to live in the residence halls due to the cost of living in the Pioneer Valley, and the comparatively low cost of living in the dorms.

Although lounge areas in dormitories are being converted into temporary living spaces, the housing office is attempting to leave at least one lounge open for general student use in each dorm, according to Vaillancourt. Last year, dorms in Orchard Hill had no open floor lounges.

"RAs and students will have access to common space so they can start working on building communities," Vaillancourt explained.

UMass is one of the few schools in Massachusetts that houses students in temporary quarters.

"I think we treat people pretty well," Vaillancourt said. "Our choice is to use temp housing or triple-up double rooms."

While the housing cancellation fees helped encourage students to make early housing decisions, don't look for cancellation fee increases any time soon. Vaillancourt is "satisfied" with the current fee schedule, although fees will probably change in the less immediate future.

"The number one piece to success is students are making early decisions about where they want to live," Vaillancourt said. "Students are helping each other."

Information technology minor offered

By Miriam Godfrey and S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Amherst will launch a new interdisciplinary undergraduate minor in information technology (IT) this fall.

The minor, according to a UMass press release, will be the first of its kind in the state public higher education system. It will be the only campus-wide interdisciplinary minor.

"The development of the information technology minor is further evidence that the University constantly strives to address the economic and cultural needs of the Commonwealth," said UMass President William M. Bulger in a UMass press release. "With this initiative, our faculty is positioning the University and its students for a prosperous future."

The pilot program will not require any new University resources, while growth of the program will rely on external funding. In its trial run this fall the program will be open to any undergraduate student, but is limited in size to approximately 50-75 students.

The minor will be composed of a minimum of five, three-credit courses. Several of the courses are geared towards students not majoring in fields such as computer science, engineering, or information systems but who still want to gain skills in IT.

Courses taken during this fall semester may be credited towards the completion of the minor pending discussion with a department advisor. Applications are available through the chair of the UMass IT Task Force, Professor Bill Israel of the Journalism Department. They must be submitted by October 1 allowing students to enroll in classes for the spring semester.

"Many great institutions like ours are preparing computer scientists and electrical and computer engineers to fuel the knowledge economy. Our new IT minor is unique in seeking to empower students from every discipline to use information technology in new combinations that make each grow. The result, we believe, will be new knowledge, new innovation, and an economic wallop for the Commonwealth achievable in no other way. As the high tech sector recovers, we hope to grow the program with partners from industry, government, and non-profits, who will need these new kinds of students the most," said Israel.

The UMass Amherst Information Technology Task Force, formed in 1998, embarked to revolutionize the Commonwealth of Massachusetts by educating students to employ, develop, and innovate their respective fields with information technologies according to a University press release. The Commonwealth Information Technology Initiative (CITI) is a program to augment the academic IT programs throughout the twenty-nine community colleges, state colleges and universities in Massachusetts.

According to the UMass information technology programs Web site the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education delegated $1.7 million in November 2000 for the funding of the first IT curriculum in public higher education. The money is being used to enhance faculty skills, modernize materials in computer science, computer engineering, and information technology. These developments began on October 13, 2000, when more than one hundred faculty and administrators from the Amherst campus convened for a workshop to define the components of the IT minor. Roughly one month following this session, Cora Marrett, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs announced the appointment of Brenda Phillips to the position of administrative director of CITI. Phillips offers a great depth of experience enhancing educational programs. Phillips will work alongside Marrett, who is a principal investigator of CITI.

Two other faculty members, recently honored by the Massachusetts Telecommunications Council, will be very involved with the organization; from the computer science department, Professor Jim Kurose was recognized for his efforts in workforce development, while Dean Joseph Goldstein of the College of engineering was named Workforce Development Leader of the Year.

New athletic director takes over

By Matthew F. Sacco
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts chancellor John V. Lombardi introduced Ian McCaw as the Amherst campus' new director of athletics on July 15.

"It has been an interesting experience to walk-in in the middle of the [AD search] process that's rolling right along, but fortunately the people involved in this process did a great job surveying the world," Lombardi said. "As a conclusion of it all, we have a fine candidate. He has compiled an excellent record and has stellar references. People around the country whom I have talked with tell me great things about him that reinforce all of my own instincts and those of the committee."

McCaw will replace Bob Marcum who retired on July 14 after almost a decade at the position. Marcum left Amherst for a position with his Alma Mater, Marshall University.

He inherits a program, which sits at a crossroads in development. Seven varsity sports have been cut in the last year due to financial constraints yet the athletic program as a whole is just off what many consider a highly successful decade of competition.

Marcum's tenure saw the men's ice hockey program be reinstated in 1995, the men's basketball team reach the Final Four in 1996, the football team win the division I-AA championship in 1998 and the men's lacrosse team reach the NCAA quarterfinals last season.

In hiring the new AD, Lombardi and the committee sought to address one of the programs' most pressing needs, its budget.

"This is an institution whose athletic program commands tremendous respect," Lombardi said. "I found that out before I got here when I called around the country and asked people what's the story at UMass-Amherst. They told me that this is a program with an extraordinary collection of coaches and players. It has a reputation in athletics that is exceptional, but does not have a lot of money. They pointed that out to me and I said that I am from Florida and know about money. I thought maybe I could bring some with me, but I don't think they would have let me."

So with McCaw's reputation for successful fundraising spawned from his time at Northeastern University and Tulane University, he was chosen from a pool of finalists.

"Fundraising, first of all, is something that I enjoy very much," McCaw said. "I had quite a bit of experience with this over the past five years at Northeastern building up our development program and also as development director at Tulane for two years. It is something that I very much enjoy and view as an extension of my personality."

As to how he plans to raise funds for a program that has had trouble finding a consistent source of generous donors, McCaw offered an answer.

"We have to be obviously very innovative, especially in reaching out to the Boston area alumni and friends and quite frankly I think we'd be up to do a lot in the Boston market because it is a very prudential area and we are going to have to work extremely hard putting together attractive alumni events around the athletics contests we have there," McCaw said. "One of the great assets that I feel we have is we are the University of Massachusetts with the flagship campus in the commonwealth and I think we need to do a better job of reminding the state of that and really promoting ourselves as Massachusetts' team. I think there are a number of marketing and fundraising issues that we need to get moving on to particularly reach that Boston market, as it is so critical both in terms of its fundraising potential and also the number of people in that market that are connected to this institution in some way."

COURTESY SERVICES OFFICE
Ian McCaw joins the University of Massachusetts as the new director of athletics.

The Burlington, Ontario native has worked as an athletic director in the Bay State for the last five years and is a 1987 graduate with a master's degree in sport management from UMass.

During his introductory press conference, McCaw was asked whether he would attempt to involve the school's nationally recognized sport management program in the functions of the athletic program, something his predecessor did not do.

"Well there are certainly some incredible professional faculty over there that have great insight and great understanding of intercollegiate athletics and sports in general," McCaw said. "So I want to take advantage of their expertise in various areas and I would want that to be a relationship that works very close with the athletic department."

McCaw, 39, comes to Amherst after his tenure as Director of Intercollegiate Athletics and Campus Recreation at Northeastern.

Before NU he was senior associate athletics director of development and associate athletics director of external affairs at Tulane University. In 1996 McCaw was named co-interim director of athletics and was responsible for the 16-sport Division I-A Green Wave program.

He is chairman of the NCAA Division I men's ice hockey committee and Hockey East and National Consortium for serves on the America East, Atlantic 10 football, Academics and Sports Executive committees.

McCaw is only the fifth permanent athletic director since 1911, following in the footsteps of Curry Starr Hicks (1911-1948), Warren P. McGuirk (1948-1971), Frank McInerney (1972-1992) and Marcum (1993-2002).

He received his bachelor's degree in sports administration from Laurentian University in Sudbury, Ontario in 1985.

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market ...where the apple is just the beginning!
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537

Looking For Something To Do?
Atkins Farms Has Something For Everyone!

Farm Fresh Produce
Country Bakery
Meat Market
Deli & Lunches
Specialty Foods
Homemade Fudge
Full Service Florist
Fruit & Gift Baskets
Gift Department
Take-Out Food
Ice Cream Bar
Specialty Cheeses

A unique country market nestled in one of the oldest apple orchards in New England. Atkins is just a five minute drive south from UMass on Route 116. You'll enjoy a unique shopping experience where old time service is an everyday treat. Sample some of New England's favorite foods or pick up a country gift as a keepsake.

Attention Parents!!
Student Special Care Packages
Great idea for parents far away from their busy, hard working, and hungry college student.
Birthday Cakes
Flowers, Balloons
Snack Paks
Get Well Paks
Mix & Match Paks
& many more!
Call for our brochure
(413)253-9528 or
1-800-594-9537
www.atkinsfarms.com
Deliveries Mon-Sat

#1 three years in a row!
Best! 2001
UMASS
Massachusetts Daily Collegian

103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01001
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR, JAIME LOO

Following the law

University finally faces reality

It's about time.

After years of hard work, the Resident Assistants have finally gotten their day. Since the idea of a RA union first surfaced years ago, people on campus have been divided on the issue. Many people said it didn't make sense for undergraduates to unionize — being an RA just means being a student leader. Others said it was necessary to make sure RA's still had the same basic rights as regular students, and without the union that would never be achieved. The closer they were to a union, the more heated the debate became. The columns that have appeared on this page over the past year are a testament to the strong opinions, we at the Collegian have had.

When the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission (MLRC) voted to recognize the new union last spring, most of us thought it was over. Despite the legal recognition, administration was ready to spend taxpayers money to wage a costly court battle against the union. Not only was the university breaking the law, but they were willing to spend precious money during a fiscally uncertain time.

Finally, over the summer there was a breaking point. At the end of July, the university announced that they would begin bargaining with the union. The RA union has become the first undergraduate union in the country. This is good news for some returning students and bad news for others.

We don't all agree with an RA union. We never will.

Something we can agree on is that we're glad the university has finally made the mature decision to obey the law. Because that's what the MLRC's ruling is. A law. Not an opinion. Throughout life there are many rules and regulations that are disagreeable, but that doesn't mean they should be broken. Rules and regulations are created with specific intentions. The first step is always the hardest, but at least it's been taken. There's still a long road ahead for the RA union and the university as they head to the bargaining table. In the weeks and months ahead, we'll probably be hearing a lot more about the bargaining process. And again the campus will be buzzing with debate over decisions that are being made, or even continuing to question the merits of the union. There will be many more letters written to us, and many more columns focused on the issue.

We'll never agree.

But at least we're finally dealing with the reality of the ruling and following the law.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Loss of life hits close to home

I don't think there's a one of us that will ever forget it.

The body of a baby, dead right here on our own campus. A baby potentially murdered.

I remember it. I remember feeling guilty because while it seemed like every other person on campus wanted to hang the mother from a tree, I wanted to hear the rest of the story. I remember not wanting to let anyone else know that I felt that way. That it somehow made me weak. I remember holding out hope that maybe just maybe the baby had been stillborn, and that nothing truly horrible had happened.

In the time since we all went home last spring, the case of Jennifer L. Paluseo and her baby has continued to unfold. Paluseo was arraigned in court in June. She was charged with the murder of her newborn son. Autopsies have confirmed that the baby was born alive.

Details have been slow to trickle through. We've learned that the baby was indeed born alive, a living and breathing baby. Paluseo pleaded innocent to murder. Her attorneys say that she never processed that she was pregnant, or that the new life born was hers to take care of.

Where does one even begin to assess guilt and blame in a situation like this? And why is it that's the first thing that we have to do?

Prosecutors will drag their story back out when the trial begins. They'll tell the jury how the baby was born in a dormitory shower the night of May 1. They'll repeat that the baby was born alive and healthy, and that minutes later he was suffocated when Paluseo wrapped him in a towel and put him in a plastic bag.

The prosecutors will say that she cleaned the whole thing up. That she went back to her room and acted like the whole thing never happened — watching TV, goofing around on the computer like the rest of us would on a normal day. They'll say that she then went back to the bathroom later in the evening to take the plastic bag containing the thing that never happened away, and that she discarded it in a trash room.

It's easy for us to condemn Jennifer Paluseo because we know what she did was grotesquely wrong.

But it's even easier for us to condemn Jennifer Paluseo because we don't know her as a person at all.

I can't get inside Jennifer's brain. I have no idea what she was thinking. I can't begin to comprehend the pain, loneliness, confusion, panic and bitterness that had to be there for Jennifer to deny that the entire thing happened, as her lawyers say she did.

I don't want to. It's terrifying.

It's beyond comprehension for us to believe that the whole story could slip through the cracks until it was too late to do anything. It's tough for us to understand that Jennifer's friends and family could leave things be when she denied that she was pregnant.

And it's easy to look for who didn't try their hardest to reach Jennifer – to find a scapegoat somewhere, anywhere, if we can. It makes us feel better. It doesn't make it right.

A horrible, horrible thing happened last spring in our very own backyards. A grievous, disgusting act of violence was committed on our very own campus in a bathroom that could have been any of ours.

"Where does one even begin to assess guilt and blame in a situation like this? And why is it that's the first thing that we have to do?"

That's why we're angry. We get way too squeamish for comfort when we realize that Jennifer could have been anyone that we ourselves personally know. The slap in the face that comes with news like this makes us realize how ignorant we were to how bad things can really get for some people. This story probably has no happy ending regardless of what happens next.

Jennifer Paluseo was wrong. I know it, you know it, she knows it. She ended the life of a helpless innocent, and for that, she need to be held accountable.

But I hope she gets better than iron bars for the rest of her life. I hope that she has the chance to find the help that she's going to desperately need to come to grips with what happened. I hope that it doesn't destroy the rest of her life. I hope that when all is said and done, she gets another chance to live life.

One innocent life has already been lost. The only bigger tragedy is if two are.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

Interested in writing for Ed/Op? Come down to our office in the Campus Center Basement and talk to Jamie or Regan, or e-mail us at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

Time to face a new year

So tomorrow is my twentieth birthday. The whole concept kind of freaks me out. Me, twenty. I thought I was going to be a kid forever. There is a lot to think about these days, such as what am I doing? I think I worry too much, in fact I know I do. I have been told so before. Over analyzing little things brings me into what I call deep thought mode. Once I am in that mode I think of how things could have been, should have been and could have been if I only did this or I did that. Even worrying about something that I can't control pops into my mind, such as why I am turning twenty already.

It often seems that the New Year should be celebrated at the start of the new school year. Nothing really seems to change after the hair drops in December. Yet, in September it seems so much does. The end of the summer leading into the beginning of autumn leaves us with bare trees instead of full branches. Kids go back to school and prepare for homework from a grade that is always a little harder than the previous. Then for me, I celebrate my birthday, which means one year has come and gone and I am older, again.

CAITLIN MCCARTHY

This changing of seasons and this changing of times comes and goes with every new school year. This year I am especially nervous, after a tough last semester left a bad taste in my mouth. Going back to school is not that easy a task for me and requires not only physical, but mental preparation. Once again I am packing up my life and leaving so much behind. I leave my home and my room, which are my comfort zones and where I have total privacy. My family and friends who support me in everything I do and dream to do, back me up and make me smile every day, but soon they won't be there anymore. I pack up the car and drive away from it all, it just vanishes in the blink of an eye. I am leaving and I am alone.

Last summer I could not wait to go to UMass. Every time I realized I was actually going there I just got this overwhelmingly excited feeling inside because I was just in love with the school. I never thought I would get homesick or have any problems like that. First semester was great, but slowly, sand, I don't remember exactly how or when things got incredibly depressing for me. It was a combination of things that triggered my feelings, but the feelings I had make me scared to go back and face another year.

The countdown is on and there is exactly one week until I am back on campus. All my friends are talking about going back to school, if they're not there already. I think how little feels so scattered right now and how I live here for three months and there for nine months and I feel so unsettled no matter where I am. So I sit and try to convince myself how things are going to be different for me, better for me, but it is so hard. I think I can do it, I know I can do it but it is what I make of it.

When I think back to how my heart used to skip a beat just knowing I was accepted to UMass I wonder what went wrong. I am at the school I wanted to be at so my dream came true. I live on a big, beautiful campus at a school with a good reputation academically that has plenty to offer socially. There are people all over the campus and most of them are friends, and everyone is in the same situation. We are all young adults trying to make something of ourselves in this world, just trying to get by day by day. We all go about our lives in a different manner because we have to do it whatever way works best for us. In this life we make most of the choices as to how we turn out in the end. Of course things happen accidentally that we can't help, some good and some bad, but everything we do and every road we take carves another path in our life. We have to make sure we don't take things for granted or we could get hurt in the end.

When I take a look at the wonderful life I have had and all the wonderful things I have done, whether it be with family, friends or by myself it makes me realize that I need to change my ways back to being happy go lucky. I should be proud of how far I have gotten and all I have accomplished. So as the summer after freshmen year of college slowly creeps away and what seems like a new year is beginning, things are going to change for the better. Although part of me wants to go run and hide from my car ride up to school, I realize that I am not six anymore. I am turning twenty tomorrow and I am excited, excited to take on the world. Well, they always say you should start small and build your way up, so in that case I am excited to take on UMass again. I am excited to face my fears, excited to meet new people, I am excited to be starting over and I am excited that I can once again be strong and be proud of my University, the way that I always used to. Come on now, everyone knows that these are the best years of your life, right? I have got to get with the program, get myself in gear. You know what, I am going to do this and you know why, because I am a twenty year old and I am ready for everything.

Caitlin McCarthy is a UMass student.

Letters to the editor

Dear Editor,

I am writing to express my sincere disappointment in how the University fails to expedite the graduate student financial process. As a second year graduate student I consider myself a surviving veteran of the annual war with the Financial Aid, Assistantship, Payroll and Bursar's Offices. At the beginning of the Fall Semester last year I found myself growing increasingly anxious and frustrated with my repeatedly failed attempts to receive the excess funds granted to me by the federal government. Not only does the University receive those funds prior to the start of the semester, but also they hold those funds until mid-October. If a first-year graduate student is lucky enough, they come across a helpful soul in one of the financial offices or in their own department that tells them about the financial aid miracle known as forcing your bill, I conside. myself lucky in that I received my $4,000 in the middle of September (although I later received a bill for a fee the University had not charged in the beginning).

In my misplaced optimism, I believed that as a veteran, my second-year annual battle would be easier to fight and win. I could even imagine myself receiving an excess check during the first week of class. However, today my dreams were shattered, apparently the deadline to have your excess check processed and available the first day of classes has passed and no one is sure of the date for the next round of checks. So I called the various offices to inquire about the status of my paperwork and was greeted by inconvenienced personnel with accusatory responses, somehow the fact that my paperwork had not been processed was my fault.

I understand that the diligent personnel in the Financial Aid, Assistantship, Payroll and Bursar's Offices are overwhelmed with work and I in no way fault them for my negative checking account balances. For the past several weeks and for the next month they will be swamped with paperwork and have to shield phone calls and visits from concerned students. The fault lies in the University policies and with those in higher positions of authority who make those policies. I was assigned my assistantship and registered for classes in the spring, received my financial aid award notice in July, and yet paperwork was not processed until the first of August. Would It not be in the University's best interest to begin to process some of the paperwork earlier than two weeks before the Payroll and excess check deadlines? Apparently not, apparently someone likes to overwork the few employees that survived the budget cuts.

And where does this leave my fellow students and me. It leaves us scrambling for cash, dipping into savings (what's left of it), charging necessities, like groceries, or if we are lucky, borrowing money from parents and other reluctant relatives. I am still reluctantly hopeful that my paperwork will be processed by the end of August to ensure that I am at least able to receive my first paycheck on time. But in the back of my mind, I can't shake the image of my paperwork on the floor, under a desk, in the office of someone who wishes they had taken early retirement.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Mutchler
Graduate student

www-daily collegian-com

www-daily collegian-com

It's only a game

1-0. I hate Kentucky. It goes deeper than this one game though. The last time UMass made it to the Final Four, we lost to Kentucky. That was in 1996, my dear readers. Seven years ago. Oh, I remember it well.

But this isn't about basketball.

It's the national pastime, baseball.

I'm actually not a baseball fan. I don't know much about the sport, besides the basics of how the game works. I learned baseball from a guy that lives down the hall from me who made me an honorary Mets fan. Naturally, being from Boston I'm also a Red Sox fan. Last week, I somehow became hooked on watching the Little League World Series(LLWS). Then again who in Massachusetts, baseball fan or not, wasn't naturally drawn to the series because a team from the state was actually playing. The Jesse Burkett All-Stars from Worcester, made it further in this series than any other team from the state.

The Burkett All-Stars lost the U.S. championship to Louisville, Kentucky who went on to the World Series. I was rooting for their opponents, a team from Sendai, Japan (the flashbacks of that Final Four game were just too much). It only took one homerun to seal the victory for Kentucky, which was the first U.S. victory in two years.

Most of the series was televised, so the entire country got to share in the joy and pain of these young athletes. The cameras were also focused on their parents sitting in the stands as well as coaches and the fans. Outnumbered by the American fans rooting for Kentucky, the Japanese parents had their own cheering section, trying their best to make as much noise as possible. The third baseman's father led the cheers, and was wearing a red and white traditional headband worn in competitions that read, "Refuse to Lose."

And, wow did those parents refuse to lose. During the bottom of the 6th, when it was pretty clear that Kentucky was going to win, the cameras panned over to the Japanese team's cheering section. All of the parents were sitting down quietly at this point just watching the game. When the last pitch was thrown, ending the game the entire Sendai team started crying.

All of them. The managers and coaches were ok, but all of the players were just crying. Some were bawling and clutching the dugout fence. Others were sniffling, letting big teardrops roll down their faces, before starting up again. And it didn't stop there. At least fifteen minutes after the game had ended, when Kentucky invited them to walk around the field with them, carrying the LLWS banner, at least half of them were still crying.

During the crying session, the cameras once more rolled back to the parents of the Japanese team who were still sitting there, quietly staring at the field. It was a sad sight to see and it was nationally televised. My first reaction was that the team was disappointed that they had lost. They were probably also under a lot of pressure from their parents, which I think truly got them. I think all of us in some way have been in that ugly situation before.

In an age where parents are unpredictable, and sometimes dangerous, spectators, maybe televising something like Little League is too much pressure for 11 and 12 year-olds. The teams in the final round of the series were faced with 36-40,000 spectators in the stadium not to mention the thousands of people across the country who were also watching. I think the amazing thing about the American teams, was that they played as if no one was watching. Even if no one watched the LLWS, they still would have played. You could tell that they loved the game and most of them loved the attention of the national media. I think they all worked hard to get there, and deserved a national audience.

It's too easy to point fingers at the media for televising sports events of young athletes. There are too many gray lines in that issue. I mean, honestly, what's the difference televising the LLWS compared to the Olympics where sports such as gymnastics feature athletes who are also around the ages of twelve and thirteen?

The true pressure comes from the home, and sadly what used to be fun can just be downright stressful. I wonder what kind of homecoming the kids of Sendai, Japan had. It's only a game and they're only kids. It's not the end of their baseball careers. They aren't going to be washed up at the age of 12, just because they were on the team that lost in the LLWS. I hope their coaches tell them that, because It's pretty obvious their parents won't.

The Jesse Burkett All-Stars returned to Worcester last week with a hero's welcome. There was a parade and a ceremony held for them on the steps of city hall. Though they didn't win the U.S. championships let alone the World Series, the celebration wasn't some sort of consolation party. It was a victory party, for their achievements. The city of Worcester sent the right message to their kids through this celebration. They played well and they did an awesome job representing the state.

They tried their best, which is something we often forget to celebrate.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian columnist.

"ANOTHER BUSH ADMINISTRATION, PRO-LOGGING, RIGHT-WING WHACKO!"

The death of a colleague

In early June, from the comfort of my own living room, I sat back in the chair from which I write now and watched Daniel Pearl die.

It's a decision I've lived with for the better part of three months. Gruesome as the offer promised to be, I sadly admit it was a tempting proposal at the time: the footage of his death, readily available online, was a chance to cut through the swirl of media attention and view the heart of the matter. A direct line to the unseen we all seemed to be facing. A primary source. Journalists thrive on that.

You'd be right to assume that the images before me inspired my stomach to shrink back and my mind to wash over with guilt. The horrific tape was further blackened by extremist propoganda intercut with the scene of his execution, though these particulars of the video are seldom what keep you awake at night. Taken as a whole, it shook me in a way I was not ready for. Stripped of its inevitable social and political ramifications, it unabashedly proclaimed the slaughter of an innocent man at the hands of cowards. Three months later, it still echoes. I watched Mariane Pearl's husband die. Adam Pearl's father. A brother. A son. I had no business being there, and regret that I ever was.

You know Pearl's story, or rather, you should. An accomplished journalist who oversaw the Wall Street Journal's South Asian bureau, he was an outstanding reporter and, by all accounts, a devoted husband and father-to-be. Up to his disappearance on January 23, Pearl had been reporting in Pakistan, tirelessly pursuing interviews with leaders of the country's Islamic movement. Four days later, the first email surfaced – including a photo of Pearl at gunpoint – verifying that he had been taken hostage. With so much doubt cast over the situation, the eventual news of a tape containing his death brought a stark reality crashing down. His obituary read, in part, like so many others have. 38-years-old, a husband and expectant father. College graduate. Reporter.

Pearl was a journalist, and though his travels overseas and my own work here aren't fit for comparison, I felt for him at first as a colleague, admiring the standards he set for himself and so passionately adhered to. His subjects were complicated and diverse, his audience the world, yet his goals, boiled down to their essence, were shared with writers everywhere, accomplished or otherwise. Find the story, write the story, share the story. It's a drive that's complicated to summarize – it's given at birth and up to the individual to pursue.

Pearl doggedly pursued this instinct to his death, an end brought by the hands of cowards who turned the slaughter into a media spectacle, both widely reported on and rapidly available to download on a whim in homes across the world. Locally, the website of the Boston Phoenix caused a national stir (no doubt reveling in the philosophy that negative press is still press) by publishing photos of Pearl's severed head in print and posting a link to the video from their official site. The decision made The Phoenix one of the few media outlets willing to go to such extremes to provide supply for an apparent demand. Advocates of the decision lauded the "bravery" of The Phoenix in bringing attention to reality, however brutal it may be. Enthusiastic messages posted on the site proclaimed it was the only true way to keep Americans aware of how far terrorists were willing and able to go. Others scolded the paper for glorifying a human death in the name of publicity, for taking the private pain of a family and spreading it into the greedy hands of society.

As emotions and opinions swelled, it rapidly became apparent to those just sniffing out the story for the first time that this was a situation that could no longer be distilled into the simple headlines that were feeding us – "journalist slain" merely hinted at the human tagedy unraveling beneath, raising more questions than existed answers. My only certainty was this, and remains so: whether he was murdered because of his reporting, his religion or for other reasons that have yet to come to light, the tragic end that Daniel Pearl came to should not have found its way onto a world stage for public consumption. Though it remains there as I write, it continues to fail as a "tool" for education or enlightment.

The Phoenix failed by garnering attention for itself through the death of a colleague. Publisher Stephen M. Mindich said that "...this is the single most gruesome, horrible, despicable, and horrifying thing I've ever seen." Despicable, yet it remains for any curious mind – of any age – to stumble upon. Despicable, which is perhaps the sentiment that most appropriately sums up the publications actions.

And then there is me. I failed by choosing to watch it.

Mariane Pearl has said that her husband's spirit lives on. It does, but not through the horrific images of his murder. Instead, it grows through the remarkable work he produced before his young life was brought to an abrupt end. Look there for your answers and insights – from ethnic cleansing and genocide to Middle Eastern politics, he cast a keen eye on difficult issues with a grace rarely found in print.

His words should stand as our true education, his life celebrated quietly by those who knew him and his death mourned privately by those who loved him. The rest of us simply don't belong.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist.

While you were gone

YOUSEF MUNNAYER

Well the summer is drawing to a close and the pioneer valley is alive again. Not that it wasn't alive over the summer, but from what I've heard when classes are over the livestock population is actually substantially higher than the human population in some areas.

Yes, I'm back again. For those of you who remember me from last year I'm glad to be writing for you again this year, for those of you who are new to The Collegian you will read some of my stuff from time to time. Occasionally you might throw the paper across a classroom because you might not agree with me, but hey that's ok – that just means free speech is working. You got to love that free speech thing. I guess we should enjoy it while it lasts, from what I understand they are going to inform Attorney General Ashcroft about its existence soon. He might just tear it up like some other constitutional rights he has put an end to.

Well, I want to bring your attention to some events that have happened over the summer and of course, those who have read my column last year know I will have a lot to say.

I think I might start with Jose Padilla. Yeah remember him, he was the guy accused of planning a bombing against the country. You might know him better as the "dirty bomber"(the media had fun with that one). Well anyway I just wanted to know what ever happened to this guy? Last I heard the American, first accused of being Arab (oh, what a dastardly crime!) was in some detention center for having some drawings of what our newly coordinated FBI called an attempt to plant a dirty bomb. Doesn't this guy get a trial? Well not according to Mr. Ashcroft. Or to Mr. Rumsfeld who called him an "enemy combatant" and said, "Our interest is not in trying him and punishing him." So what is their interest? Have not both these men sworn oaths to abide by and uphold the constitution, the very document which has saved this nation from anarchy? Sometimes I wonder if we should rewrite those powerful documents to suit our time, maybe re-phrasing lines to "liberty and justice for some." For clarification of "some" please ask Ayatollah Ashcroft.

Well, while Padilla was probably being politely "asked" to disclose information, other things were going on which I wish I could have written about at the time. Maybe the most pressing foreign policy issue of the summer was the speech President Bush gave in mid-June. For a week or so, many people were waiting and watching President Bush to hear what he had to say because It was expected that this speech would signal a new direction in the US stance on Mid-East policy. Finally after about a week or so of learning how to pronounce the 3 syllable words in his speech, President Bush told us that he wants to promote democracy in the Palestinian Authority but finds it too difficult to do with a leader chosen by the Palestinian people. Is it me, or is there more to President Bush's dyslexia than first meets the eye? So I guess what President Bush is saying is the Palestinians have to choose a leader that he agrees with before the peace process can continue. Well, thanks for your insight Mr. Bush but there is no Florida in the West bank or Gaza, and as close as you and Mr. Sharon might be, he isn't your brother and he isn't the governor. The Palestinian people will pick their leader and you will have to recognize him and deal with him. Yes, even if he disagrees with you.

Switching topics and continents, I want to say I was really angered by the latest economic blunder by our treasury department. As some may know some incidental statements in early august about Brazilian currency and Swiss bank accounts sent the Brazilian economy into a spin and the currency into a "free fall." But not to worry, the IMF was right there to bail out the Brazilians with a 30 billion dollar loan. Yeah! I just don't understand why we keep doing this. Was Argentina not enough of innuendo for Washington and the IMF? We continuously ask more countries to open their markets and economies and allow privatization of industries and in turn the IMF and the World Bank will give them some loans. Listen I'm not the type of person who pitches a tent in Seattle to protest globalization but someone has to blow a whistle here. The USA and more generally western nations are pressuring poorer countries to open their markets in turn for loans. So at that point western companies move into foreign nations, raising prices and putting the native people out of work and causing that countries economy to tumble to the point where they not only desperately need the IMF-World Bank loans but they are unable to pay them back, not to mention the interest on them. Now aside from the from the westernized companies who are sending checks home to Paris, London, or Washington, who is benefiting from this system? You might ask one of the 5 presidents of Argentina who served within the same week due to riots and resignations.

Finally, I want to touch on soccer. This summer's World Cup tournament was a true treat for any soccer fan, especially those awake at 2am to catch the live games. Also my appreciation goes out to Real Madrid and A.S. Roma, two European clubs that I had the pleasure of watching live this summer. The two teams played in front of a crowd of 70,000 people at the Giant Stadium to benefit the UN AIDS committee to help fight AIDS. The soccer players are not only world-class athletes but are world-class human beings as well. When sports are brought together with charity everyone wins. Well maybe not the IMF.

Yousef Munnayer is a Collegian columnist.

'Follow that bird'

SCOTT ELDRIDGE II

The emu is a large flightless bird that can grow to be as tall as six feet and weigh as much as 110 pounds.

The emu is a bird native to Australia, and lives on the continent's vast grasslands.

The emu is not supposed to be available to chase me while I hike through the temperate forests of Massachusetts.

So when the fast moving bird from down under and I crossed paths a few weeks ago, I was somewhat befuddled. I was hiking down the Appalachian Trail on a stretch that runs between Pittsfield and Dalton (in Berkshire County). It was intended to be an eight miler, a one-night hike that would give me the chance for some solitude before I came back to school. Between the looming ten days of RA training and the efforts to complete the first issue of the Collegian I knew I needed the break.

So I started on my hike, thinking that I would have a quiet trip through the woods. Such was not the case. So it goes.

My experience with the emu started peacefully. I had passed a group of four day-hikers who were resting along side the trail and had come into a hollow in the forest, where I first spotted the bird. This was not my first close animal encounter. A year ago in June I followed a moose through the woods of Savoy for an hour of chase and be chased. It was exciting to pursue the 1200-pound animal, barefoot. However, I knew that it was also a risk and did so cautiously.

The same was true of my date with the planet's third largest bird. I took some pictures, I kept my distance, and I was ready to carry on my way. Then came "the four old folks." Those placid hikers I had passed just prior had resumed their hike and caught up to me while I was snapping my shutter.

The emu and I had an unspoken agreement, I could take some pictures and she could continue in her pursuit of delectable underbrush. The day-hikers were not listed in any clause of our bird-hiker contract, and they broke the serenity.

The emu became interested when the talkative hikers approached. The older gentlemen sounded a quick call to arms and held their hiking sticks in a menacing fashion that only furthered the bird's curiosity.

The emu became interested when the talkative hikers approached. The older gentlemen sounded a quick call to arms and held their hiking sticks in a menacing fashion that only furthered the bird's curiosity.

Curiosity may kill the cat, but I was not so sure about our feathered friend. I was content with letting the meandering creature persist in its ventures, but typical human instinct told the older hikers that throwing things and hitting the bird would make it go away. They were wrong.

Apparently the only thing more interesting to an emu than humans are humans who act like they own the world. Despite the fact that the emu was far from it's native Australia, it was obviously doing alright in the forests of Western Mass.

This typical instinct of "kill or be killed" was not warranted on the AT. In the great outdoors it is only normal for people to be curious about animals, and animals to be curious about us. But that is where it should end. There is no reason for either one to force change upon the other.

Still, the "old folks" threatened the emu and then ran along the trail in an effort to escape. Genuine courtesy if you ask me. It's the leave him to take care of it tactic. Well the bird didn't know one human from another, and I was the new subject of its chase. And I do mean chase.

I happily let the bird walk around, coming within five feet of me and checking out my pack. I put away my camera, shouldered my backpack and started up the hill. When I restarted the hike, the bird was about 30 yards off the trail. When I looked over my shoulder shortly after, it was running after me and was closing a 20 foot gap.

This is an intimidating thing. Emus can outrun people, the following morning I found out they can top speeds of 30 miles per hour. They also have a knack for shredding their aggressors with sharp talons on their feet. I wasn't particularly worried that I would be attacked, but the piercing red eyes of the bird were enough to inspire me to drop my pack and get behind a tree. Meanwhile, the old folks had resumed throwing things. These guys were about as smart as the rocks they were hurling.

Eventually, after one half hour of hide and go seek with the Aussie bird, it lost interest and went back searching for food (during this time another hiker had come to help me make noise to scare the bird back down the trail, and the old folks had left in a hurry). Mike (the other hiker, and I went back, got our packs and parted ways. I went ahead at my grueling speed, passed the old folks, and got to the shelter where I chronicled my tale in the trail book.

Mike and his two companions eventually caught up and we reveled in the stupidity of our four nature-nuanced day-hikers. A through-hiker (someone traveling the length of the Georgia to Maine trail) named Christmas was also there, and he got a kick out of our "northern" ways of describing the encounter.

My night and following morning passed with little excitement, no new emus, no old emus, nothing more exciting than a chipmunk and a dozen birds.

There is however, a problem that remains quite evident with the instances on my brief excursion.

One thing that stands out is the selective respect of nature shown by "the four old folks." Obviously there was some appreciation somewhere in the caverns of their dense rock throwing skulls, otherwise they wouldn't have been out and about hiking in the woods on a no less than four mile hike.

So they were happy to enjoy the trees, the birds, maybe even the insects, but if anything that they hadn't seen before came too close it was worth destroying (one of the men in the foursome remarked that he wished he had a gun with him.) This is the more powerful of the two problems.

My emu story is surely an isolated incident that reportedly came to an end when an emu named Reba was captured in Dalton this past week. I am assuming that Reba is my emu, the pictures look the same and the bird's home is near where I started my hike.

More common incidents include encounters with raccoons, skunks, beavers and bears. The urge to destroy these animals seems to be rather persistent. After three bear shootings in southern Berkshire County I am content with my conclusion that the animals are not causing the problems.

In several cases, the people whose homes and yards were invaded admitted to leaving food out for the animals. This, folks, is a stupid thing. But it presents a paradox in the people who leave the food.

These homeowners are saying that they want animals to come closer, out of the woods to eat where they can be seen. Oh wait, that one came closer than I wanted, call the cops to shoot it. It seems a bit illogical to me that one can try and try to bring animals close to home only to have them killed.

And the second of the problems comes from the introduction of non-native or alien animals and plants. The emu is Australian, the Chinese snakehead that ravaged ponds this summer is an Asian fish, purple loosestrife and Eurasian Milfoil are choking northeastern plant life in ponds and fields.

The introduction of these species leads to problems. An emu is not accustomed to the woods and hills of Western Massachusetts, and we are not accustomed to it. As a pet it is being deprived of the arid grasslands of the island continent. As a loose wanderer it is an unknown species that will bring out the worst reactions from people who have never seen it before.

Resisting the urge to become an "old folk" can be tough. We want to think that we are prudent in our actions but the truth is in panic and fear we all throw rocks. So he smart, do what comes naturally and, at the same time, leave nature where nature should be.

Scott Eldridge II is a Collegian columnist.

SGA braces for new year amid widespread change

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Safety on campus, administrative alterations and high voter turnout are just a few of the Student Government Association's main priorities this fall.

Coming off a year of budget cuts, resident assistants unionizing and campus-wide changes the SGA is looking on to the future. However, over the summer changes within the administration left cause for concern.

With the recent dismissal of M. Ricardo Townes, Assistant Vice Chancellor of Campus Activities member of the SGA fought in a rebuttal against the decisions made by the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

"Losing Rick Townes was a tremendous loss for this University, and now that he is gone the SGA has lost one of our main pipe lines to the administration," Speaker Dan Saunders said. "We've formally petitioned to the administration to get Rick Townes back on this campus, but have been denied."

Saunders explained that in addition to Townes, several other changes within the administration have affected the SGA. Former Dean of Students, JoAnne Vanin has filled the vacancy left by Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos' move to Kutztown. Newly appointed Vice Chancellor of Campus Activities Gladys Rodriguez and Chancellor John Lombardi have also come to campus during the summer.

"We knew things would be different, however students are coming back to a different University than when they left," Saunders said. "This summer has been rough, not only losing Rick Townes, but also trying to keep momentum within the SGA as well as bring that same momentum back to the students this fall as we're dealing with an entirely new administration."

Saunders said that even with a new administration present on campus the SGA is working to establish a relationship with the new administrators and students.

"Policies are really good to have, however this year we're really looking to get more hands on with students and what they want," Saunders said. "We were elected to speak for students and bring their voices to the administration and we're looking to the student body to help us do that."

Safety has been a major cause for concern after numerous armed robberies and attacks occurred campus wide. As a result of budget cuts the University has since cut the escort services and are looking towards other options of safety.

"Two days before Javier [Cevallos] left he placed video cameras inside the lobbies of the Patterson and J.Q.A dormitories on campus as well as on the outside of the buildings," Saunders said. "The University is paying for protection of students in a few areas that won't stop crime from happening until after it has taken place."

"Two days before Javier [Cevallos] left he placed video cameras inside the lobbies of the Patterson and J.Q.A dormitories on campus as well as on the outside of the buildings," Saunders said. "The University is paying for protection of students in a few areas that won't stop crime from happening until after it has taken place."

Surveillance cameras were placed on the exterior of the Van Meter and John Quincy Adams dormitories a year ago causing debate between the administration and the SGA over spending priorities. Questions were further raised by the SGA over the effectiveness as well as ability to improve safety on campus.

"The SGA is not for surveillance cameras on campus. The University is spending a lot of money for something that doesn't stop crime from happening," said Saunders.

Saunders further explained that as a SGA they are looking to the student body to help them know what will make students feel safe on campus.

The SGA is also looking onwards to the Senate elections, which are tentatively scheduled for Sept. 25 and 26. Saunders explained that they are looking to promote the elections more this year in hopes of receiving a higher voter turnout.

"We have been talking to students all summer and are looking to put out some raffles at the time of the elections to get students involved," Saunders said. "We are going to have some very important referendum questions on the ballot concerning issues such as safety and we need the students impute. We're hoping that students will get interested and vote as well as get involved in what is taking place on this campus."

Other issues addressed by the SGA were that regarding an implemented 11p.m. curfew by former Interim Chancellor Marcie Williams. Members of the SGA explained that Lombardi has been willing to work with the SGA in extending this rule for specific events that take place on campus.

"We all have to be apart of what is going on at this University, it can't just be a select few," Saunders said. "It should be a great year and I'm glad to be back from summer so that we can start working again as an entire student body."

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
OPEN 7 DAYS Delivery Available
ICHIBAN
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice.
Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
Pizza
Calzones
Subs
and more...
Best! 2002 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best! 1999 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best! 2000 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Voted #1 Three Years
Free Delivery
Hours: 11am - 2pm
549-5160
Memeber O.C.M.P.

Forget free thought and speech.
College would be nothing without free checking.
Fleet Student Banking Package
Everything you need in a checking account.
• Balance your semester budget with Fleet HomeLink® Online Banking
• Automatically add to your summer savings with AutoSave
• No annual fee Student Credit Card*
• ATMs and branches located near campus and throughout the northeast
FREE
Visit a location near you.
Forward. Thinking® Fleet
Fleet Student Banking Package offer ends October 15, 2002. All Fleet HomeLink features are free except Online Bill Payment. [illegible] six months after you initiate your first bill payment. Thereafter, a monthly fee of $4.50 will be charged. *For Credit Qualified Applicants age [illegible] are registered marks and Fleet HomeLink is a service mark of FleetBoston Financial Corporation. © 2002 FleetBoston Financial Corporation. All rights reserved. Member FDIC.

Mill Valley
E·S·T·A·T·E·S
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

Microbiologist recieves large grant

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

University of Massachusetts Amherst microbiologist Derek Lovley received an $8.9 million, three-year grant to study a family of microbes.

The grant will sponsor research that will determine if the microscopic lifeforms have potential for uranium bioremediation in soil, as well as the production of electricity.

Allocated by the Department of Energy (DOE), the grant is part of a larger $103 million effort involving six national laboratories, 16 universities and research hospitals, and four private research institutes throughout the nation. The Institute for Genomic Research, Rockville, Md.; Argonne National Laboratory; and the University of Tennessee, Memphis will serve as research partners on the UMass project.

Lovley's research at UMass was targeted to further advance the DOE's "Genomes to Life" program, a new project that plans to take advantage of solutions that nature has already devised to help solve problems in energy production, environmental cleanup, and carbon cycling.

Started in 1999 by former Office of Science Director Martha Krebs, the Genomes to Life program seeks to understand entire living organisms and their interactions with the environment, by taking an integrated approach that will offer new insight into how microbial and human cells respond to environmental changes, according to the DOE.

"The substantial DOE commitment to this research reflects the remarkable achievements of Professor Lovley's work and the promise it holds for advances in energy production and environmental clean-up," stated Chancellor John Lombardi.

In recent years several of Lovley's projects have garnered interest, two of which will be used to further the Genomes to Life research. One such project explored the use of microbes to remediate soils contaminated with uranium; another looked at the same bacterium's ability to produce electricity from mud and other organic waste matter.

Lovley's new research is expected to provide a better understanding of the microbes' true capabilities, in terms of both environmental clean-up and energy production. As part of Lovley's research, scientists will conduct DNA sequencing on microbes found in their actual environments.

"This is critical because most past research has focused on bacteria that have been cultured in a lab," noted Lovley. "The lab work gives us a good indication of how these microbes may act and react in their environment, but this research will give us a much more solid sense of their abilities in real-world situations. We'll understand which genes get expressed, and under what conditions."

After sequencing 600 million base pairs of genes, scientists will use powerful computers along with new techniques in genomics to interpret the information.

"Nothing like this has ever been attempted in the field of microbiology and this raises the study of environmental process to a whole new level," stated Lovley, who compared the effort to "trying to put together 20 jigsaw puzzles, with all the pieces jumbled together on the floor. The information isn't very useful unless you have all the pieces in the right places, and can consider the overall picture."

This new research is possible because of information now available to scientists on the genomes of humans and on other organisms, such as microbes, plants, and mice, providing new perspectives of the inner workings of biological systems. The project's 10-year goal is to make advances in systems biology, computation, and technology that will contribute to increased sources of biological-based energy, help understand the earth's carbon cycle and design ways to enhance carbon capture, and lead to cost-effective ways to clean up the environment.

The Genomes to Life project is expected to make important contributions in the quest to venture beyond characterizing such individual life components as genes and other DNA sequences, toward a more comprehensive, integrated view of biology at a whole-systems level. Advanced technological and computational resources will help to identify and understand the underlying mechanisms that enable organisms to develop, survive, carry out their normal functions, and reproduce under myriad environmental conditions.

"This innovative research program offers biotechnology solutions that can help us produce clean energy, clean up the environment, and mitigate climate change," stated U.S. Secretary of Energy Spencer Abraham.

"One could hardly imagine when the Energy Department began the human genome project in the '80s that the resulting information and technologies could yield such diverse benefits."

(additional resource: http://doegenomestolife.org/)

Popular administrator loses job in reorganization

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Before stepping down as chancellor at the beginning of July, Marcellette G. Williams announced a number of significant administrative changes at the University of Massachusetts that resulted in the elimination of a 25-year administrator's job.

M. Ricardo Townes, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Campus Activity, was told in June that his job would be eliminated and that he would not be offered another position on campus.

A delegation of professors and student affairs employees led by Nelson Acosta, director of the office of ALANA Affairs and Afro-American studies professor John Bracey wrote in June to soon-to-be Chancellor John Lombardi expressing concern over the elimination of Townes's post. Lombardi responded, "I must decline to revisit administrative, personnel, and reorganization decisions in the student affairs and campus life programs implemented during the past academic year."

The elimination of Townes comes as a concern to students and administrators involved with the ALANA office and other minority organizations on campus. "My main concern is the effect Ric's leaving and a lot of other restructuring is going to have on the support services available to students of color at this university," Sonny Suchdev, graduate assistant and programs coordinator in the ALANA office said.

"People are extremely hurt and upset," he said.

Malcolm Beckwith, a senior Economics, Finance, and Social Thought and Political Economy major said, "He's what made students of color want to come here. When there was someone we needed to turn to, to talk to the administration, he was the one who would voice our opinions."

"To fire the most popular person in Student Affairs is unconscionable," Bracey said at the time of Townes's firing.

Bracey told the Hampshire Gazette in June that there was much friction between Townes and former chancellors Scott and Williams. "He got himself into a mess of trouble. The only logical thing is to slap at Rick as they are going out the door," he said.

"We've really gotten no response from the administration." Suchdev said last week on Townes's firing and the reorganization. "Once the students are back on campus, we'll see what we can do," Suchdev said.

According to Suchdev, reorganization has undermined the purpose of four major academic support programs for minorities: the Bilingual Collegiate Program, the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and Other Minority Students, the United Asia Learning Resource Center, and the Native American Student Support Program.

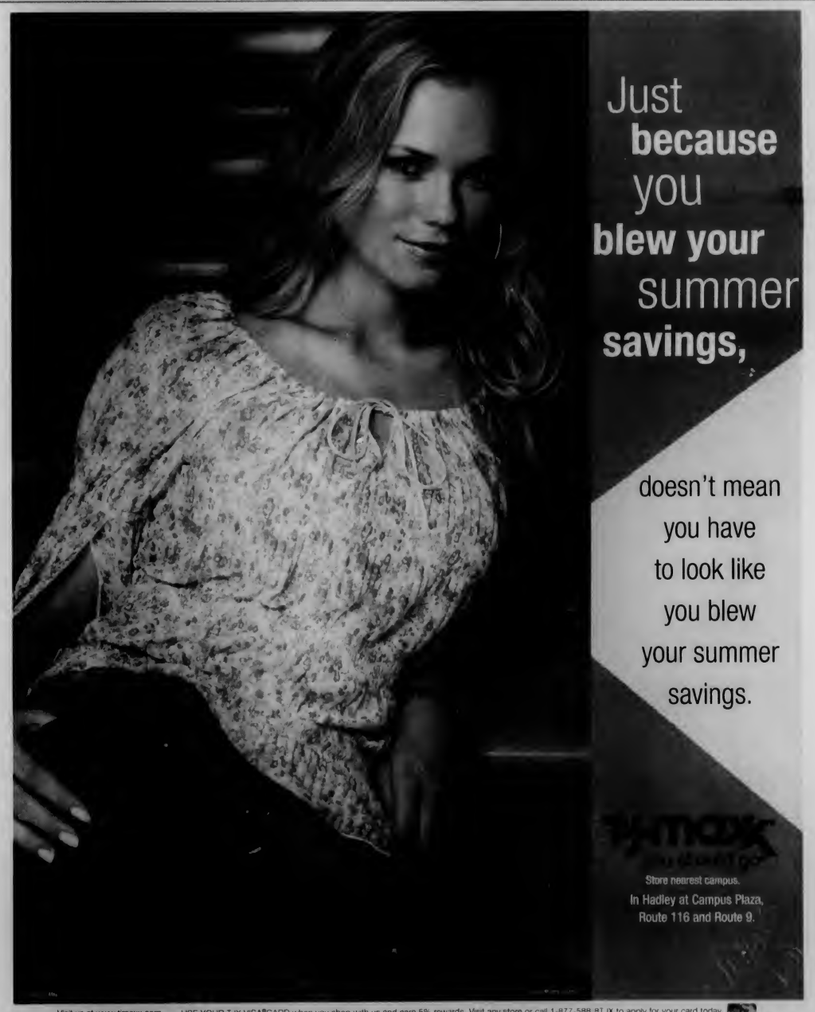
While the programs still exist, minority students will not be able to seek academic advising from them. Instead, the students will be referred to the Undergraduate Advising and Academic Support Center in the provost's office. "We're worried about the retention of students of color and the quality of education for them," Suchdev said.

ALANA will be involved in setting up teach-ins once the school year is in swing that explain the history of the altered academic support programs and the uses that they have, Suchdev said. The first teach-in is tentatively scheduled for Sept. 28.

Many other administrative changes were made as a reorganization effort to increase efficiency in light of budget cuts across campus.

Jo-Anne Thomas Vanin has been appointed interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, a post vacated when F. Javier Cevallos left to become president of Kutztown University in Pennsylvania. Vanin had been the Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Students since 1989. Associate Dean of Students Gladys Rodriguez will become the Dean of Students.

College and Department Head Changes



Individual	New Position
Janet Rifkin	interim dean of the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences
Andrew Effrat	interim dean of the School of Education
Jane Buran	department head of communication disorders
Joseph Berger	interim chair for the department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration in the School of Education
Peter Monson	acting department head of chemical engineering
Bruce Turkington	department head of mathematics and statistics
Jon L. Machta	department head of physics
Samuel Black	department head of veterinary and animal sciences
Donald Gjertson	department chair of accounting and information systems
Harley Erdman	department chair of theater
Ronald Mannino	department chair of accounting and information systems
Ronald Pipkin	department chair of legal studies

"Obviously there's always a step up," Cevallos said. "I also wanted to be on a smaller campus that was more student-oriented. I'm very happy here [at Kutztown]."

With the elimination of Townes's position, the Campus Activities group will now report to the Dean of Students Rodriguez. Campus Activities oversees Student Legal Services, Commuter Services, Greek Affairs, ALANA, and The Daily Collegian. The seven cultural centers (Anacoana, Latin American, Sylvan, Malcolm X, Martin Luthur King, Josephine White Eagle, and Yuri Kochiyama) that fell under Townes's leadership will now join the academic support programs in Student Affairs.

Another significant change in the campus organization is in the offices serving students, faculty, and staff with disabilities. All of those offices will be transferred to the Office of Equal Opportunity and Diversity (OEOD). These offices include Disability Services, Learning Disabilities Support Services and Counseling and Assesment Services. OEOD itself will report directly to Chancellor Lombardi's office.

Information from the Daily Hampshire Gazette was used in the writing of this article.

Visit us at www.tjmaxx.com USE YOUR TJX VISA®CARD when you shop with us and earn 5% rewards. Visit any store or call 1-877-588-8TJX to apply for your card today.

Grad student killed in wreck

One-car rollover claims life of Jennifer Lee

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Jennifer Lee, a University of Massachusetts Amherst graduate student, died at Cooley Dickinson Hospital from head and chest injuries sustained while she was pinned under the car after a one-car rollover July 27 on Eastman Lane. She was pronounced dead approximately one hour after the accident took place.

Daniel Krause drove the Plymouth Spitfire convertible involved in the accident, but was not harmed during the crash according to Amherst police officials.

Krause plead innocent to vehicular homicide at the Northampton District Court. According to the Campus Chronicle, Krause failed three Breathalyzer tests at the accident site. His blood alcohol level registered at .19, more than twice the legal limit. His pre-trial hearing was scheduled for August 22, but has been continued to September 26.

Lee earned a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's in business administration from UMass Amherst. She was working on a doctorate in education administration before the accident.

Involved in campus activities, Lee was the manager for the Textbook Annex last year and worked at the UMass development office this summer. She also worked for Student Affairs and as a peer counselor for the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and other Minority Students (CCEBMS).

Members of the UMass community can send gifts and donations in memoriam of Jennifer Lee to the University of Massachusetts at Amherst Development Office, Records and Gifts, 134 Hicks Way, Amherst 01003 or Chuang Yean Monastery, 2020 Route 301, Carmel, NY 10512.

Lee is survived by her mother, Judith, and father, Keng-Jen, and her sister, Rebecca, of Lowell. Her extended family resides in California.

New program in nursing

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts School of Nursing and School of Public Health and Health Sciences will combine their efforts to initiate a new master-level program in nursing-education this semester.

Under the direction of Nursing Professor Rachel E. Tierney, the program will enroll 20 registered nurses with bachelor degrees in a health field concentration each year, preparing them to serve in leadership roles in state and local public health organizations upon completion of the course. Graduates from this program will receive a joint Master of Science and Master of Public Health (MS/MPH) degree.

Tierney, who signed on to coordinate this $200,000 federally funded MS/MPH program last Feb., explained that the project's goals include recruiting registered nurses from diverse backgrounds to be leaders in developmental programs that focus on aiding populations rather than direct care of individuals.

Men and people of color are an underrepresented population in the field of nursing, noted Tierney, who earned her bachelors, masters and doctoral degrees at UMass.

"Only about five percent of nurses [in the United States] are men, but obviously men make up more than that in the population," Tierney stated. "And culturally, there are different techniques to know that are specific from culture to culture."

As such, Tierney would like to see a group of students enrolled in the program that would be more representative of population as a whole.

"Of course we're interested in registering any qualified nurses, but we're definitely seeking a diverse group," she said.

One part of her reasoning in searching for a group more representative of the entire population stems from some of the MS/MPH program's curriculum, which emphasizes the needs of the targeted communities.

Tierney provided an example of this emphasis in looking at the UMass campus itself.

"If we look at UMass as a community," she began, "we ask what are the needs and health concerns of its population. We would see such needs as issues with sexuality, smoking and drinking, and these would be the targeted health concerns for the community."

The MS/MPH program plans to take this philosophy to a national scale and will help its students to reasun out and eventually aid in developing programs to target the top health concerns of the U.S. population.

This curriculum is based on a national health effort in the works for results by the year 2010. Federal studies have been conducted in order to find the leading indicators that will determine how healthy the U.S. population, as a whole, will be by the year 2010. From this study, the 10 leading health issues include tobacco use, substance abuse, exercise, obesity, infections, physical activity, sexual behavior, mental health, injury and violence, environmental quality, immunization and access to health care.

"These particular things were chosen by the government as the national focus," Tierney said. "This will also be some of the focus of the MS/MPH program."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO/JESSE LEVINE

Professor Rachel E. Tierney.

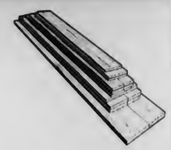
Students enrolled in the MS/MPH program must complete 60 credits from courses that incorporate curriculum from both of its sponsoring schools, including courses on biostatistics, epidemiology, public health education and practices, nursing theory and research and ethical issues.

In addition to class time, students must complete three clinical practicums—one in a rural setting, one in an urban setting and one with a concentration around an underrepresented population.

Tierney foresees graduates of the program heading positions at local or regional health departments across the United States or even in the armed forces, where their training on emergency planning and health responses to terrorism effects will come into play.

Even though Tierney has spent much time on campus as a student, this is her first year aboard with the UMass faculty.

"I am particularly delighted to be back on campus as project coordinator for this exciting and innovative dual degree program," she noted. "It's fun to be back here in a different way."



More than half of the program's required courses are currently available on-line and accessible for working professionals and parents. Tierney continued, adding that she is still recruiting for this year's class and is even encouraging all qualified people interested in the program to begin the application process right away. In the mean time, she advises those interested in the program to begin taking some of the required classes needed to complete the program. A list of the MS/MPH program requirements and qualifications can be found online.

On the Net: www.umass.edu/nursing

WRITE FOR NEWS! :)

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!

- Cinder blocks
- Plywood
- Shelving and brackets
- Desktops
- Keys
- Bookcase material
- Paints
- Brushes, rollers
- Hardware
- Picture Hangers

10% OFF WITH THIS AD

150 COLLEGE STREET

LEADER HOME CENTERS # : 413-253-3411

Glad He's Going to College

'Cause The Big E is Half-Price after 5 p.m. • Monday Thru Thursday With Valid College ID

Surf Bourbon Street
The Big E's Mardi Gras Parade, sponsored by Foxwoods
Weeknights 7:30 p.m.
Sat. & Sun. 5 p.m.
9/13 – 5 p.m.

Flip Out
On our 30 acre amusement park featuring the new Fireball
Pay-One-Price/Ride All Rides (Mon. – Thurs.) $15/Day

Enjoy The New Big E Cream Puff
The Fair's Newest Treat
New England Center

See It Live!!

- Saturday, Sept. 14, 8 p.m. CITY HIGH
- Thursday, Sept. 19, 8 p.m. B2K/IMx
- Sunday, Sept. 22, 7 p.m. SHAGGY

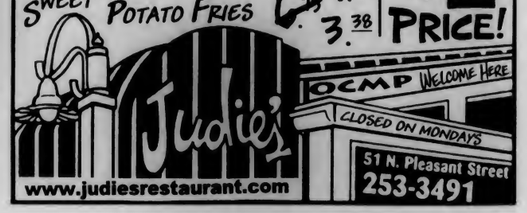
$6 Admission with College ID Monday thru Thursday after 5 p.m. reg. $12

WE COME TOGETHER at the BIG E



West Springfield, MA
Sept. 13 – 29
For More Info:
www.thebige.com (413) 737-2443

ALL SHOWS FREE WITH ONE LOW ADMISSION

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY

VEGGIE POTATO SKINS ~~3.95~~ 4.48
NACHOS ESPECIAL ~~3.95~~ 4.48
SWEET POTATO FRIES ~~3.75~~ 3.38

1/2 PRICE!

51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
www.judiesrestaurant.com

it's not for everyone, but that's [the point].

In Army ROTC you'll push yourself. Test your limits. And in the process, learn how to think on your feet and be a good leader. You could even get a scholarship. Register today for an Army ROTC class. Because you're not just like "everyone."

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC Unlike any other college course you can take.

For more information, contact UMASS Army ROTC at 545-2321.

Murder rates decline

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts Amherst sociologists Anthony R. Harris and Gene A. Fisher concluded a study that links the recent murder rates decline to advancements in emergency care services.

Harris and Fisher looked at United States murder rates between 1960 and 1999. While murder rates declined, criminal assaults rose dramatically, according to Harris.

"Because of the vast improvements in the nation's access to and quality of emergency medical care-particularly since the Vietnam War-the outcome of these assaults is far less likely to be lethal," Harris said in a recent press release.

The research covered 3,000 counties in the United States including urban, rural, and suburban areas.

According to Harris' study, lethal assaults have declined by almost 70 percent since 1960 due to 911 services, more hospitals, better-trained emergency medical technicians, and new medical technology. Harris claims that without modern emergency medical services, homicides would increase from around 20,000 to 70,000 annually.

Harris claims that his research will have a far-reaching impact on gun control legislation.

"Our research suggests that much of the work in this area might need to be done over again," Harris said. "For example, if in the past you saw a drop in the homicide rate after you eased up on laws on the right to carry concealed weapons, and you attributed it to the change in the law, without considering local improvements in the delivery of medical care, you would be coming to a questionable conclusion."

The solution, according to Harris, is to study firearm assaults whether they result in fatalities or not.

The study could also influence legislation concerning the nation's penal system, including the use of the death penalty although no legislators are planning anything right now, according to Harris.

"I'm not sure I'd want to be the person being tried once the court realizes that it was only by virtue of superb pre-hospital and hospital medical care that the person I'd pumped five bullets into survived," Harris said. "So I can imagine longer prison sentences down the road for criminal assault with great, but not lethal, injury."

Harris' study was featured in the New York Times Review and Homicide Studies, an interdisciplinary journal.

Library hours reduced

By S. J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Reserve reading services from the Biological Sciences Library and the Physical Sciences and Engineering Library will be moved to the W.E.B. Du Bois library this fall.

According to library staff the consolidation of the resources at a central, singular location, will increase the house in which the materials will be available. The Du Bois library, as the main campus library is open the most hours, and reserve materials are available to users whenever the library is open.

Electronic reserves will also increase this year as the library continues to add to the collection of online reserve sources. A new scanning department in the Library will support the efficient digitization of both electronic reserves and regular document delivery services. Electronic resources are available only to authorized University of Massachusetts Amherst users.

The Fine Arts Center Music Reserve Lab will not be moved due to the specialized equipment required of the collection.

The evolution of baseball will be on display in the Special Collections and Archives latest campus history exhibit, "Baseball Memories: A Historic Look at America's Favorite Pastime, 1860's to 1960s," from now until Oct. 15. The exhibit looks at the development of baseball from the beginnings of the Massachusetts Agricultural College up through the creation of a campus university system, as well as local town teams, Negro leagues, and women's leagues.

Exhibit hours are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Reading Room, Special Collections and Archives, Floor 25, W.E.B. Du Bois Library.

University of Massachusetts Amherst Libraries will reduce their hours this fall due to economic pressures. This will happen in all libraries across the University system.

The Du Bois library and the Physical Sciences and Engineering libraries will open at 9 a.m. weekdays, instead of 8 a.m. The Du Bois will close at 11 p.m. from Sunday to Thursday, instead of midnight, and it will close at 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, not 10 p.m.

The Biological Sciences library will be open at 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, with no weekend hours. The Physical Sciences and Engineering Library will be closed Saturdays. The Du Bois library will open at 2 p.m. on Sunday, not 10 a.m.

RA Union supporters took over the Whitmore Administration Building last year.

■ RA Union

continued from page A1

Ariana Sicairos, a RA and member of the union, described the work done to bring the RA union to this point.

"This is what we've all worked on for the past two years. Now that we have their commitment to working together with the RA Union, we feel we can negotiate a contract that serves the best interests of RAs across the campus," said according to a press release from UMass.

The University's decision to recognize the Union was a result of several mitigating factors officials said.

"The University will face a number of challenges in the coming months, including serious budgetary constraints and the many difficulties associated with the loss of hundreds of long-term and valued faculty and staff members who chose to participate in retirement incentive programs this year." Susan Pearson, Associate Provost for Faculty Relations and Budget said. "We believe this is a time when all members of the University community need to pull together to address these challenges and when all our collective talents and energies must be devoted to that end. We are pleased with our mutual agreement to separate academic from employment issues, and we look forward to a productive bargaining relationship with the RA union."

The decision to unionize was supported not only state wide, but locally as well. Members of the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO), the Graduate Student Senate and the Student Government Association (SGA) have all rallied in support of the RA's decision.

"As far as I'm concerned I'm glad to see that the Administration has agreed with the State Labor Union and hopefully they'll be able to figure out what is best for both sides," SGA Speaker Aaron Saunders said.

As the nation, state, and local community awaits the final decision to be made by both parties Shaw explained that many people would be watching the Universities next decision.

"A lot of people have their eyes on Amherst with all the press that has been focused on us, we've been a foundation for other schools," Shaw said. "Right now we're just focusing on putting together a bargaining committee, and granted we've had a lot of success, we're not at the finish line yet."

Welcome to University Health Services

Services Include:
- ✓ Allergy Clinic
- ✓ Laboratory
- ✓ Eye Services
- ✓ Contraceptive Services
- ✓ Radiology
- ✓ Physical Therapy
- ✓ Mental Health
- ✓ General Medical Care
- ✓ OB/GYN, Orthopedic, and Surgical Consults

Clinic Hours:
8:30 to 5:00 by appointment
24-hour urgent care

Appointments:
Medical 577-5101
Eye.....577-3244
Mental Health.....545-2337

Please bring your insurance card with you so we can update your records.

Students taking less than 5 credits are not billed on their tuition bill and need to make payment/enrollment arrangements directly at UHS Patient Services for coverage. This includes graduate students who have the health eligibility benefit.

Refer to the Basic Health Plan brochure or call Patient Services at 577-5192 for more information.

University Health Services
150 Infirmary Way
www.umass.edu/uhs

uhs

℞ UMASS HEALTH SERVICES PHARMACY
150 Infirmary Way
PHONE: 413.577.5030 • REFILL LINE: 413.577.5066

HOURS OF OPERATION: Monday–Friday 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.
Saturday 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. during academic year

- ✓ Full service pharmacy
- ✓ We accept most major insurances (Blue Cross/Blue Shield, Aetna, Tufts, Harvard Pilgrim, Health New England, GIC, Cigna, etc.). Please present card at Pharmacy.
- ✓ Full line of over-the-counter products at reduced price to save you money.
- ✓ We stock a full line of diabetic and surgical supplies, cold care kits and condoms.

WELCOME BACK TO THE TOWN OF

We always enjoy the slower pace of a summer in Amherst. But university and college students are what make Amherst a great place to live, work and play, and we welcome you back to our town - our town and your town.

This is a very difficult time for the University, and we expect a difficult time for the Town in the coming year. We also expect that good relations between the Town and the University will continue, even with new administrators and new challenges.

University students continue to play a big part in those good relations. Students have always provided many volunteer services, both as individuals and in small and large groups. Student firefighters and EMTs have provided vital services to the town for many years, and an expanded student force is helping us meet increasing demands for service. The annual, Spring "Into Amherst" day has been the most visible way for large numbers of students to provide services to the town you live in. We love the Community Service Learning program, and there are other student services too numerous to mention. Thank you for your services to the town.

The Community Partnership on alcohol-related issues includes representatives of students, landlords, officials of the Town and the educational institutions, and other citizens, and it continues to monitor those issues. The Amherst Police Department is dedicated to protecting the safety of Amherst's citizens and visitors - including your safety. We hope that students can enjoy college life without serious alcohol-related incidents.

We again give you a "heads up" about parking in and around downtown Amherst. Our parking garage has been completed, so downtown parking should be greatly improved. At the same time, our parking enforcement officers are charged with the responsibility of enforcing parking regulations. Be aware that the fine for parking in a handicapped space or discharge lane has been increased to $100. Please abide by parking regulations and respect the job that the parking enforcement officers must do. Or use the buses that your student fees pay for, or use the bicycle lanes and racks downtown.

Thanks again for being part of the Town of Amherst, and have a good year.

Select Board
Town of Amherst

Barry Del Castilho
Amherst Town Manager

National Briefs

Settlement against Enron pending

By Hilary Costa
The California Aggie (U. California-Davis)

(U-WIRE) DAVIS, Calif. – The University of California announced Tuesday a tentative $40 million settlement with part of the Arthur Andersen accounting firm in a class action lawsuit against Enron.

On behalf of Enron Corp. investors, the UC made an agreement, which is still pending court approval, to settle with the international Andersen firm Andersen Worldwide SC and the group's other non-U.S. firms. Those corporations were added to the amended complaint on Apr. 8.

The company's U.S. branch, Andersen LLP, was not included in the settlement and will remain a defendant in the lawsuit. According to a university press release, the domestic firms audited and signed Enron's financial statements.

"This substantial settlement is a favorable result for the class in light of the limited role of the non-U.S. entities, and represents one of the more substantial securities recoveries from an accounting firm," UC General Counsel James Holst said in the release.

Settlement talks with the international firms began in May after discussions with Andersen LLP ended without a settlement being reached.

UC spokesperson Trey Davis said that the "UC remains willing to talk with the U.S. firm and with other defendants in the case," and that it has not ruled out the possibility of a future settlement with other defendants.

Holst expressed similar sentiments.

"We regard this settlement as only a first step in obtaining recovery for the class, and will continue to pursue damages from the remaining defendants, most of whom had far deeper involvement in the Enron debacle than the overseas Andersen firms," Holst said.

The settlement funds will be disseminated among plaintiffs based on "an allocation formula that estimates their pro-rata share of total class damages," according to the release. Davis said the timeframe for that process has yet to be made concrete.

"There is no allocation plan as yet," he said. "It could happen as early as the first quarter of 2003, but given the size of this settlement relative to the total liability in the case, the distribution would perhaps not occur until further settlements and/or judgments are reached."

The UC system has been involved in litigation with Arthur Andersen since it was named lead plaintiff in the Enron securities and pension class action suits in February. The UC press release estimates the total losses of all Enron shareholders at more than $25 billion.

Cigarette ends budget deadlock

By Alvin Shen
The California Aggie (U. California-Davis)

(U-WIRE) DAVIS, Calif. – A new tax proposal presented in the state Assembly, while alleviating the state's budget problems, may also create complications for California smokers.

Assembly Speaker Herb J. Wesson Jr. (D-Los Angeles) first presented the new cigarette tax increase on Aug. 6 as a mechanism to end the budget gridlock.

"My proposal is a win-win for Republicans, for Democrats, and for all Californians," Wesson stated in a press release. "Either people quit smoking — which is good for everyone — or their habits help us balance our budget."

The bill proposes to raise the price of cigarettes by $2.13 to $3 in taxes per pack.

According to a press release from Wesson's office, an estimated $1.7 billion could be generated by the new tax increase.

Daniel Robovsky — an Assembly Budget Committee consultant under state Rep. Jenny Oropeza (D-Long Beach) — said that the money brought in by the new cigarette tax would go directly into the state's General Fund, which provides state appropriations for public education, healthcare and corrections.

According to Assembly Speaker Wesson, "this is the only tax [that will save] lives" and is entirely voluntary, only affecting those who choose to continue smoking.

However, the new tax also means additional inconveniences for those who sell tobacco products.

"The tax doesn't necessarily hurt our business, but it does create more of a hardship," said Janis Lott, co-owner of Newsbeat, a local periodical and tobacco shop in downtown Davis. "We always have to figure out how much to charge for cigarettes."

Lott and other opponents of the tobacco tax are not opposed to its intent, but believe that revenue should not go toward balancing the state's budget.

"We should at least use the money to fund prevention and counter-prevention programs to counter those promoted by tobacco companies," Davis High School's registered nurse Susan Hawkins said.

"It certainly is a deterrent," Hawkins continued. "Teen smokers are affected by the price increase. Most kids don't have unlimited funds; if they do smoke, they smoke less as prices for cigarettes rise."

If Wesson's proposal is included in the state budget, California will be joining a long list of other states that have substantially increased tobacco taxes as a way of closing budget gaps.

According to a press release from Wesson's office, 20 states have increased tobacco taxes in 2002. Louisiana, for example, increased its tobacco tax by 300 percent.

If California's Assembly passes the tax increase, cigarette prices could jump 245 percent.

One smoker, who did not give his name, said that the tobacco increase may potentially generate increased revenue for the state, but cigarette smokers will find a way around it.

U. Illinois-area river cleaned up

By Mary Tallon
Daily Illini (U. Illinois)

(U-WIRE) CHAMPAIGN, Ill. – Although ammonia released from the University of Illinois' Abbott Power Plant decimated fish populations in the Saline Branch of the Vermilion River last month, several Illinois environmental groups agree that the river can and will likely recover without any further clean up or repopulation efforts.

"With a spill of this kind it's really not possible to clean up," said Joan Muraro, spokeswoman for the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency. "The ammonia gets broken down by the river and it simply disappears."

The spill happened July 11 when the plant attempted to clean its boilers and accidentally released toxic amounts of ammonia into the sewer. About 80,000 fish died as a result of the ammonia discharge.

Muraro said her agency is now focusing its efforts on how to prevent future spills and to determine what legal action it might take against the University or the Urbana-Champaign Sanitary District for their part in the massive fish kill.

In spills like these, she said the Illinois EPA requires the group responsible to submit a proposal of how to address the problem, which is either accepted or rejected by the agency. If the proposal is rejected, the case is turned over to the Illinois attorney general's office, which will determine whether to prosecute those charged with responsibility for the pollution.

University spokesman Bill Murphy said the proposal needs to be submitted in two parts: one part to explain how to fix the situation and one to explain how to keep such an occurrence from happening again. He said if the University hadn't already submitted the proposal, it would shortly.

Beth Wentzel, watershed scientist for the Prairie Rivers Network, a Champaign-based river conservation organization, said the group is still considering whether to file suit against the University or the sanitary district under the Clean Water Act.

Wentzel said the group remains hopeful it can force the sanitary district and the University to ensure future ammonia spills don't happen through cooperative discussions instead of legal action.

The University's main concern is working with the Illinois EPA, Murphy said. He said he hoped other groups would look at the University's plans before considering legal action.

Illinois Department of Natural Resources spokesman Tim Schweizer said the ammonia spill was never a human health concern.

"The water quality is fine now," Schweizer said. "Mother Nature took care of most of it."

But Wentzel added that although the public's drinking water was not threatened, the spill did inconvenience fishers because the Salt Fork River was a "prime spot" for fishing.

Still, she said it's unlikely the river will need to be restocked with fish.

"They'll replenish themselves," Wentzel said. Stocking fish would need to be done earlier in the season to be effective, she said.

Poor economy slows fundraising

By Takashi Nakamichi
Indiana Daily Student (Indiana U.)

(U-WIRE) BLOOMINGTON, Ind. - During the 2001 fiscal year, Indiana University received more private gifts and grants than any other public university in the United States. Since then, IU's fundraisers have been sweating bullets to keep up that pace in the slowing economy.

Donors gave the University more than $300 million last year, making up 14 percent of IU's $2.1 billion operating budget, according to IU foundation reports.

The total for 2002, which will be released next month, won't beat the 2001 record partly because of the weak economy, said Barbara Coffman, executive director of communications at the IU Foundation.

But to beat the economy, IU fundraisers have been working extra hard by improving their communication with donors.

"One of the primary factors that affect giving is the economy," Coffman said.

During economic downturns, some individual donors lose jobs, and some corporate donors suffer declining revenues. That forces them to reduce the slow down payments for their pledged gifts, causing annual private support for IU to decrease.

"No matter how hard we worked, I don't think our number will be as high as last year's," Coffman added.

The major catalyst for the 2001 record performance is the Lilly Endowment, she said. It provided IU's life-science projects with $105 million, one-third of the $300.9 million the school received from the private sector that year. This year saw no such gifts.

Still, the picture isn't totally gloomy, as IU will likely have the third best year ever, Coffman said.

The Foundation plans to publish the official results of 2002 in

Turn to BRIEFS, page A11

BE ADVISED!
PRE-MAJOR ADVISING SERVICES
615 GOODELL BUILDING
N
W E
S
SERVING UNIVERSITY UNDECLARED & PRE-MAJOR STUDENTS
ADVISORS AVAILABLE MONDAY-FRIDAY 9:00-4:30

You want it?
ZANNA's got it.
Diesel.
Mavi jeans.
Steve Madden shoes.
Seven jeans.
Mia shoes.
Free People.
Urban Outfitters.
To The Max.
Joe Jeans.
Lots of jewels.
Clothing, shoes and accessories for women.
Downtown Amherst.

briefs

continued from page A10

September after having them examined by an independent auditor.

Communication with alumni may be a key to counter the slow economy.

"We are devoting a lot of time and attention to our corporate and foundation donors, hoping that once the economy turns around, they are going to remember that," said Richard Dupree, executive development director at the business school.

The Kelley school has cared especially about corporate donors in Silicon Valley and Wall Street, two major areas mauled by the recent economic recession, Dupree said. It has offered them faculty consultations, student interns and extra time to pay off their pledged gifts, hoping for their recovery and future paybacks.

"We are not at all turning our back on them," he said.

Partly because of these efforts, the Kelley school should see a record in private support for the 2002 fiscal year when audited, Dupree added.

In 2001, the Kelley school's annual fund, which solicits up to $10,000 a donor through direct mailing and phone calls, marked $2 million for the first time in history. This year's figure, though not yet audited, will be even higher, Dupree said.

School of Public and Environmental Affairs should also see a rise in private support for 2002, said SPEA's Development Director Susan Johnson.

"I think the events of Sept. 11 really heightened people's awareness of the critically important roles that public servants play," she said.

Also, SPEA fundraisers have contacted alumni more often than ever and tried to better convey financial needs, respect for donors and school activities, Johnson said.

School of Education is also trying to improve communication with alumni, said Sarah Baumgart, External-Relations Director at the Education School.

Like most departments, education focuses on financially savvy "major-gift" donors, who provide $25,000 or more, Baumgart said.

"So it's not a matter of more phone calls, but a matter of developing long-term relationships with donors," she said.

For 2002, the education school will post a five-year high in annual private support, Baumgart said. But the increase may be due to the rising amount of payments from donors who pledged gifts a few years ago, she said. The effect of the economic downturn will be seen later.

IU Foundation is running three fundraising projects partially designed to counter the slow economy, Coffman said. One targets international alumni, another targets women and the other is called "planned giving," which targets baby-boomers.

"We realized that [baby-boomers are] a bigger than ever pool of prospective donors for planned gifts," Coffman said.

Donating to their school gives baby-boomer alumni a way to contribute to the betterment of society, she said.

In the past five years, the private support for IU excluding non-governmental grants increased from $60 million to $230 million. This fiscal year may break the trend, but "it's a way of fundraising life," Coffman said.

Schools respond to budget cuts

By Melissa Lee
Daily Nebraskan (U. Nebraska)

(U-WIRE) LINCOLN, Neb. – Those involved in higher education in America probably hoped they would return this year to campuses free of budget problems. Unfortunately, that's not happening. Universities nationwide, bogged down by a sluggish economy and fewer state appropriations, are facing the bad news together. More cuts are on the way.

So those who aren't ready for another round of cuts might want to turn right back around and head for home. In the meantime, though, here's a look at how the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and a handful of its peer institutions are dealing with their budget cuts.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln community returns this week on the heels of an Aug. 15 legislative decision to reduce the University of Nebraska's budget by $15 million.

UNL will shoulder about half of that burden, which brings its total cuts over the past year to about $17.5 million.

"It's backbreaking. I don't even know where the money could come from," said Ryan Wilkins, Association of Students of the University of Nebraska president. "We're making all these cuts, but at what cost?"

That's yet to be determined. So far, university leaders have tried to keep undergraduate education away from the knife. But that's becoming increasingly difficult.

UNL Chancellor Harvey Perlman has said he might consider consolidating or eliminating programs, laying off employees or increasing tuition to balance the budget.

Nothing's final, though, and Perlman expects to announce his proposals on Sept. 10. After that, UNL's Academic Planning Committee will conduct public hearings to gauge reaction to the chancellor's cuts. The committee will forward its recommendations to Perlman, who will then announce the final cuts.

It's a process UNL has been through before, and Wilkins isn't looking forward to the next trip.

For one thing, the decisions are largely out of his hands. And for another, he's just plain frustrated.

"We're college students; we're poor," he said. "We rely on the university to ensure us a good education, but we're getting hosed over."

But not everyone sees it that way.

NU Board of Regents member Drew Miller of Papillion is confident the university will remain a quality one.

Miller points to NU's growing budget as evidence: Last fiscal year's budget was $407.4 million; this year's is $412.5 million – a 1.25 percent increase.

"Anybody who's thinking doom and gloom should take another look at the numbers," Miller said. "The rhetoric tends to get exaggerated."

As far as cuts go, Miller said he'd prefer to see entire programs eliminated over more across-the-board cuts, which UNL has chosen so far.

"We should be excellent at a few things rather than mediocre at everything," he said.

To Wilkins, any recent excellence is pushed aside by NU's constant budget battle.

"Everything good we're doing is overshadowed by these cuts," he said. "We've barely even started and we're already overwhelmed with them."

Iowa State University

Two years ago, Iowa State University in Ames, Iowa, began the school year with a base budget $50 million more than its current one.

That hurts.

"It's been a difficult process," said spokesman John McCarroll. "The years were dominated by a very negative thing."

In response, ISU has eliminated the equivalent of 209 full-time positions, cut course sections and degree programs and reorganized programs. Tuition, already up this year, likely will take another hike next year.

The cuts have prompted officials to look at the little things. McCarroll said. For instance, the university was able to save $1.4 million in energy bills last year. Several construction projects have also been delayed.

ISU's fall 2001 enrollment hit a new high of 27,823, which only compounded budget problems.

"You had more demands on faculty, and at the same time you had record numbers of students and fewer faculty," McCarroll said. "We're trying to cut back this year."

Now, he said, students and faculty can only hope things will get better.

"It was not a fun experience, and I don't think we want to go through it again."

University of Kansas

All units at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, Kan., are prepared for the worst: a mid-year cut.

They've already taken some heat, about $9.4 million over the past year. Some expected the cuts to be more severe, and there's a good chance those fears will materialize next January.

"It's not that it didn't hurt, but we're prepared for a lot more pain down the road," said spokeswoman Lynn Bretz.

In making cuts, KU has kept in mind its top priorities -students and research, Bretz said. Still, the university has suffered: For the first time since 1972, employees were granted no regular salary increases. Twenty-two were laid off, and an additional 32 positions were left vacant.

"Ultimately, it's meant a shrinking of the workforce," Bretz said. "When it comes down to it, you have to make tough decisions."

Budget reductions remain "just a bump in the road," she said. But further cuts could spell trouble for some units "already in an awkward situation."

"We don't feel like there's a lot of fat in our budget," Bretz said. "All it would take would be another cut to push those units over the line."

University of Missouri

Mary Jo Banken tries to be optimistic about the immediate future of the University of Missouri-Columbia.

That's difficult, though, given the university's budget situation. The state experienced a sharp drop in revenues last fiscal year, forcing a $38.4 million reduction for MU. And this fiscal year, MU's appropriations dropped again, from $199 million to $178.1 million.

"Higher education is experiencing a fiscal crisis of historic proportions," said Banken, a spokeswoman for MU, in an e-mail response.

University leaders are rallying to avoid any further cuts, Banken said. Consider what MU has already sustained: Along with department budget reductions, tuition has shot up and faculty and staff will receive no salary increases this year.

The university has also introduced an early retirement option that Banken said will result in several hundred faculty and staff leaving. Layoffs likely will be necessary in the coming year.

That's not all. If money continues to dwindle, MU could be forced to cap enrollment or even close one of its four campuses, Banken said.

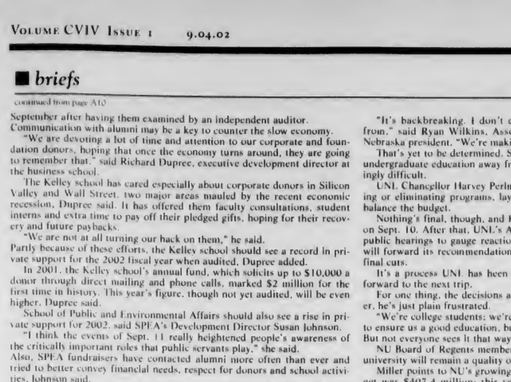
It's clearly not the easiest year for the university community. Faculty are burdened with extra workloads, students are having trouble getting into the classes they need and staff are worrying about their job security, Banken said. Though education remains MU's top priority, she said, "that is becoming harder and harder to do, and we do not see any resolution to the problem in the near future."

Purdue University

Brian Zink's evaluation of Purdue University's budget situation was pretty simple.

After rattling off the West Lafayette, Ind., university's problems, Zink, a spokesman, paused, then sighed heavily in frustration.

Here's why: Purdue's cuts over the past two years total $100 million. That's meant sharp tuition increases, program reductions and $3.2 million in reallocations. Also, all newly enrolled students must now pay an additional $1,000 in fees, which will garner about $8 million for Purdue.



On the bright side, Zink said, the university has not responded by laying off faculty. And funds earmarked for various purposes — financial aid, information technology and diversity programs - have come through.

"Morale is still OK," Zink said. "There's been a concerted effort to continue our mission.

"And I haven't heard anyone talking about pain. But that doesn't mean it's painless."

One of Purdue's next steps will be to level off its enrollment at 38,000, Zink said, which will allow leaders to keep improving education.

"That's what a university is here for," he said. "We have to find a way to make the money we have go toward students. If we can't do that, then we're not doing our job."

SNOOPING AROUND for a course?
ask us for a free course catalog or check it out on the Web
Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
UMASS
UMass Amherst
Fall Semester 2002
a lifetime of learning opportunities

Unplanned Pregnancy?
• Information
• Options Counseling
• Support
• Free Pregnancy Tests
All services free & confidential
CALL ALTERNATIVES
586-3000
1 Roundhouse Plaza
Northampton
774-6010
28 Federal Street
Greenfield

Best! 2002
UMASS ★★★★★★★
Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Voted
"Best Hotdog & Best Burger"
by Valley Advocate
Classic Road Side Dinning
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
Burger / Dogs
Fish / Chicken
Shakes / Soft Serve
287 Russell Street
Route 9, Hadley
585-0241
Pete's Drive-In
www.petesdrivein.com
OCMP & Major Credit Cards Accepted

Unlimited Nights & Weekends.
Fits all back-to-school schedules.
UNLIMITED
Nights & Weekends
Minutes on the America's Choice™ Network
Plus
1000
Mobile To Mobile
MINUTES
Long Distance Included!
Buy One. Get One Free!
Kyocera 2135
$49.99
for both phones
1 year contract on both phones. Some restrictions apply.
AMERICA'S CHOICE
FOR $39.99 monthly access
300 anytime minutes
Every month as long as you remain on the plan. With 1 or 2-year agreement. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 69¢/min.
All with no roaming or long distance charges when calling on the America's Choice™ network.
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. CDMA tri-mode phone with updated software required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless
www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley
322 Russell St.
413.587.3248
Holyoke
50 Holyoke Mall
413.533.2500
verizon wireless
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri. 9:01pm-5:59am Sat. 12am-Sun. 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and Calling Plan. Activation fee of $30-$35 required. $175 early termination fee. Requires credit approval. Not available in all markets. Cannot be combined with other offers. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Limited time offers. Geographic and other restrictions apply. Subject to taxes, other charges. See store for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless.

New course readies nursing students for emergencies

By Rachel Smith

[illegible] Public Health and [illegible] the School of [illegible] a new course [illegible] from Ready?" [illegible] to show students [illegible] to a terrorism [illegible] activities [illegible] mailed and [illegible] dirty bombs [illegible] unconventional [illegible] radioactive [illegible] bombs can be [illegible] as psycho- [illegible] rather than as [illegible] potentially [illegible] agents in spore [illegible] inhaled or absorbed [illegible] CNN sug- [illegible] use diseases [illegible] and plague [illegible] announced a [illegible] will [illegible] envi- [illegible] factors that [illegible] attack.

D.C. firefighters are learning how to use Geiger counters, tools that measure radiation. UMass is using knowledge to respond to terrorist activities.

Terrorism alerts can confuse people, claim course instructors S.R. DiNardi and J.M. Culley. They've designed this course to prepare students with reliable information, and to dispel myths according to the professors.

The professors will discuss the history of nuclear, biological and chemical (NBC) agents and will suggest methods students may use to deal with the medical problems that can ensue following the use of such weapons.

Terrorists are not the only culprits that can release NBC agents into the environment. Accidents such as chemical spills and nuclear power meltdowns and natural disasters can have the same effects as weapons of mass destruction. According to DiNardi and Culley, this course will cover the risks posed by NBC agents regardless of their source.

Students will use basic nursing skills to create a "workable personal protection program", according to DiNardi and Culley. They will cover terrorism response techniques at home, work, and school environments.

There are no prerequisites for the course and it is open to students in all majors. According to a press release by DiNardi and Culley, students should be able to define basic risks of a terrorist attack, respond appropriately, distinguish myths from reality in the media, educate family and friends, and minimize risk of exposure to NBC agents.

The professors also hope students will feel more secure after taking their class. Students will be less fearful once they are armed against NBC warfare with knowledge, according to the professors.

The course uses the web extensively; students must have internet access. All course materials are posted at http://webct.oit.umass.edu:8900/ and the course number is ENV HL 497B in the School of Public Health, NURSE 497B in the School of Nursing.

Drought plagues western Massachusetts

By [illegible] Smith

[illegible] average pre- [illegible] week. Western [illegible] experiencing the [illegible] cific drought [illegible] Blixt, University [illegible] Blossom pockets [illegible] commonwealth are [illegible] of its drought [illegible] water conserva- [illegible] Amherst sits part of [illegible]

[illegible] a hard look at [illegible] and. Usage pat- [illegible] Massachusetts and [illegible] noticeably effected [illegible] ease in precipita- [illegible] Massachusetts Drought [illegible] force placed the [illegible] drought watch in early [illegible]

[illegible] built its normal [illegible] and about half below normal in August. Southeastern Massachusetts is at an increased fire risk, and forest fires have emerged in Plymouth. According to the National Weather Service, New England is expected remain abnormally dry through November.

Western Massachusetts is not currently in emergency drought status, but apple crops were smaller this year than last. Smaller crops mean higher prices at the supermarkets, which is not entirely bad news for Belchertown farmers.

"Its not an economic disaster for the farmers," Blixt said.

The Quabbin Reservoir is at a level that's below normal, but it is expected to meet current demands, according to a joint press release from the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency and the Massachusetts Executive Office of Environmental Affairs. Some portions of the Southeast have still implemented water restriction.

Ground water levels are normal for Western Massachusetts, but Cape Cod is below normal. Ground water levels will probably decline across the Commonwealth in coming months, according to the press release.

Western Massachusetts has been under a drought advisory since July due to below-normal rainfall levels. According to Blixt, drought is a problem that will not go away.

"It's going to be a problem no matter what," Blixt said. "Drought will continue to be a problem on and off."

Blixt recommends Amherst residents conserve water as much as possible. Members of the Amherst community should follow local guidance from water suppliers concerning sprinkler use, laundry machines, and other activities that require a large amount of water.

Water conservation tips are online at http://www.state.ma.us/dem/programs/rainfall/drought.htm.

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

Security to improve, slowly

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Hired as the new University of Massachusetts Police Chief in June, Barbara O'Connor is the first person to admit that the campus has improvements to make in terms of security and safety on campus.

"Students don't feel safe here, especially in light of the high profile crimes we've had in the past year," she said.

Those crimes include three reported rapes, five armed robberies, and the death of a newborn baby in a dormitory bathroom. Nevertheless, O'Connor sees several ways that security has been improved for the fall semester. For one, the University of Massachusetts Police Department (UMPD) will again be fully staffed. In addition to the lay-offs last year, UMPD struggled with increased workloads because of a shortage of officers, with several vacancies throughout the department last year.

"I hired something like ten officers in my first few months as Acting Chief," O'Connor said.

The present staff stands at 42 patrolmen, eight sergeants, three lieutenants, and O'Connor herself. The one vacant spot in the department is that of Deputy Chief, the spot that she vacated when she assumed duties as Acting Police Chief last spring. O'Connor said that there will be a search for candidates for Deputy Chief and that the role will not be filled until they have hired a permenent re-placement.

The department is also searching for better ways to patrol the campus. One example of heightened security is the addition of a security officer patrolling the Fine Arts Center.

O'Connor also said that students will see more policing on bikes this year and that the department is leasing two Harley motorcycles. Both decisions were made in the hopes that it would give the department the ability to get to all parts of the campus on a quicker basis.

Physical security improvements have also been made on campus, with more potentially on the way. According to O'Connor, security cameras have been set up in several dormitories, including John Quincy Adams, Patterson, and Van Meter.

O'Connor said that while she can understand how some students would deem this as an infringement on their civil liberties, they should understand what the purpose for the cameras is. "It's simply designed so that when a significant crime occurs, we can identify those offenders responsible for it," she said.

The new Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor urges students to report potential crimes to authorities.

While the escort service remains a casualty of budget cuts, O'Connor re-minded students can still call (545-2123) and receive walking escorts from members of student security if they are uncomfortable walking home in a given situation.

"Providing a van service for 11,000 students is complicated and costly," O'Connor said. "When you don't have money, these are the choices you have to make... we're still providing that safety net with the walking escorts."

O'Connor made a plea to UMass students to do things that will promote safety. "The first thing I would tell students is to honor the security systems that exist in residence halls, the second thing I would tell them is to lock doors, the third thing I would tell them is to report suspicious behavior," she said.

"I can tell you, it's been twenty years that I've been here," O'Connor said. "The number of weapons, the number of knives... people's uncivil behavior is on the rise. People don't just duke it out anymore... they pull a knife."

"Students have a tendency not to report things," O'Connor said. "We have a response time of less than five minutes. That's better than you'll get in a city."

O'Connor stressed the numerous ways that students can report something that they see as a potential problem, including an anonymous tip line (577-TIPS) where students can report potential criminal activity without the fear of people finding out who the informant was.

"It's hard to find a suspect two hours later... Students have to make the call," she said.

Up to 50% OFF College bookstore prices!

CHEAP BOOKS

Compare Our Prices

- One of the LARGEST selections of USED BOOKS!
- Shop online at ecampus.com 24 hours a day!
- Shipping right to your door!
- No lines, no hassles!
- Guaranteed low prices!
- Also find DVD's, CD's college & greek apparel, laptops, at prices lower than your college bookstore!

eCampus.com
Books and Stuff. Cheap.
Call Toll Free 1-877 ecampus or visit us online at http://www.ecampus.com

FREE T-Shirt with $100 purchase
Enter coupon code "1100" at checkout.

The Daily Collegian needs YOU!

If you have any interest in gaining valuable experience in a newspaper setting by writing news stories, now is an outstanding time to come down to The Daily Collegian. Beats are available for interested writers. Call 545-1809, email to thedailycollegian@yahoo.com, or see Sarah, Dan, or Rachel in the Collegian newsroom, located in the Campus Center basement, for details.

Amherst College

DINING SERVICES OPPORTUNITIES

Amherst College is accepting applications for the following part-time positions beginning late August/early September

COOKS • FOOD SERVERS
DISHWASHERS • KITCHEN RUNNERS
Weekday and weekend shifts (breakfast, lunch & dinner). Previous food preparation and kitchen experience preferred.

MEAL CHECKERS
Breakfast, lunch, dinner and weekend schedules available. Must be able to work a minimum of three shifts (approx. 3 hours each) up to a maximum of 19 hours per week. Light cleaning duties (including tables) during and after hours. Will train.

CATERING
Banquet Captains • Waitstaff • Bartenders • Drivers/Setup • Catering Dishwashers
Work special function/catered events. Previous experience preferred but will train.

CAMPUS CENTER COFFEE HOUSE
Counter Service - Weekday and weekend late night shifts available

We offer competitive starting rates. No benefits. Interested candidates may submit a resume or complete an application at: Office of Human Resources, 201 Converse Hall, Amherst College, Amherst, MA 01002-5000.

Amherst College is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer and encourages women, minorities and persons with disabilities to apply.

Big Y WORLD CLASS MARKET
We've Got It All!

WELCOME BACK UMass STUDENTS!

175 University Drive
Amherst · 413-253-0416
Monday-Saturday
7am-11pm
Sunday 7am-10pm

WE ACCEPT OCMP!

Prices Effective September 5th to 11th
In Our Amherst Store Only.

From Our Kitchen

Sandwich Shop Hours:
7am to 9pm Every Day
Pizza Shop Hours:
9am to 9pm Every Day

Chicken Caesar Salad For Two
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Large 18" Cheese Pizza
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE
To Order A Pizza Call: 253-7690

To Place An Order Call: 253-8098

Small Philly Steak & Cheese Grinder
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Just Heat & Serve!

Grilled Lemon Chicken Breast, 4 oz
BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Big Y Day
UMass. Football
vs.
Central CT State
Saturday, September 7, 2002 1:00 pm
SAVE $2 Per Ticket With Your Big Y Express Savings Club Card
Up to 4 General Admission Tickets!
First Game of the Season!
Big Y Is A Proud Sponsor Of UMass. ATHLETICS
Tickets Are Available At The Mullins Center Box Office or Call 866-UMASS-TIX.

Come In and Sign Up For Your FREE Big Y Express Savings Club Card
UMass ATHLETICS EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

De-caffeinated

The Thirsty Mind coffee shop in downtown Amherst went out of business this summer. Loose Goose restaurant will be moving into the space.

Former student pleads innocent to charges

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Jennifer L. Paluseo, the 19 year-old mother of the infant corpse found in the William James dormitory on May 2, has been charged with first degree murder and removing or conveying a dead body.

Paluseo pleaded innocent to all charges at her arraignment on June 20. Released on $25,000 bail to her parents' home in Plymouth, MA, where she remains.

Charges were directed from a Hampshire County grand jury on June 11. According to Assistant Northwestern District Attorney Renee Steese charges of removing or conveying a dead body carries a maximum sentence of three years.

Elizabeth D. Scheibel the Northwestern District Attorney and her office in Northampton are in charge of the investigation.

According to the District Attorney's office, the newborn was fully developed and born alive. Cause of death, they believe, was affixation from being enclosed in the plastic bag. Scheibel confirmed rumors that the mother had denied the pregnancy to dorm mates. Adding that there is no evidence to show that anyone was with the mother during her labor or after.

"She was thought to have been pregnant. There is no information that anyone was with her at the time the baby was born."

Steese says that her office, "expects to prove the child was alive at birth."

Paluseo's court appointed attorney Terry Nagel was unable to comment on what his strategy during the case would be.

"We don't know what we're dealing with yet," Nagel said. "There are complex psychological issues at hand."

According to UMass officials, Paluseo withdrew from the University in early May at the conclusion of her freshman year. Paluseo had been a resident of the all-female Williams James Southwest dormitory where the body was found.

"This is a tragedy of great proportion," Jo-Anne Vanin, dean of students, told the Campus Chronicle on June 14. "The lives of a young woman and her family are irreparably changed. The entire campus is saddened with this news."

A female janitor discovered the body of the 9 lb. 3 oz. newborn Caucasian male around 7:30 a.m., Thursday, May 2, wrapped in a trash bag within a trash receptacle said Steese.

UMass and State Police were called to the scene at approximately 8 a.m. Soon after they questioned Paluseo.

The case will go to pretrial on Sept. 9.

Infant death raises safe haven question

By Mike Conlow and Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The recent indictment of a University of Massachusetts student charged with killing her infant child raises questions about baby safe haven legislation around the Commonwealth.

Baby safe haven laws allow parents to legally abandon their newborns at locations such as hospitals or police stations. A bill passed in the House July 30 144-10, and is currently being discussed in the Third Reading Committee.

A maintenance worker found Jennifer Paluseo's baby May 2 in a bathroom trashcan in the James dormitory. The mother is currently on trial for murder in the Hampshire Superior Court.

Forty-one states currently have baby safe haven laws, or comparable legislation allowing parents to relinquish babies to safe locations where they are then put into foster care. Residents of Massachusetts can legally take advantage of baby safe haven laws in neighboring states like Connecticut that have implemented such legislature. There have been more than 100 successful relinquishments across the country.

"Massachusetts needs a wake up call," Jean Morrisey a local advocate of the bill, wrote in the MetroWest Daily News. Morrisey and her husband, Michael, have been lobbying legislators to pass these bills since they volunteered to bury an abandoned baby that was found in Quincy, Mass.

Some opponents of the bill say it promotes irresponsibility by giving would-be parents the option to give up their children.

"There are a lot of things that sound good, but there could be negative consequences," said State Representative Kathleen M. Teahan in The Patriot Ledger, July 31. "I would rather see more education programs at college about pregnancy."

The bill is being debated in the house of representative as proponents try to gather necessary support.

According to bill proponent State Representative William Galvin, D-Canton, these laws will protect abandoned babies from illness and death while giving hopeful parents more opportunities to adopt newborns.

Representative Thomas O'Brien, D-Kingston is sponsoring House Bill 5281. O'Brien doesn't know that safe haven laws would have made a positive difference in the Peluseo case, but he said the legislation wouldn't have hurt.

"The only person who can answer that question is Jennifer, but at least the option exists" O'Brien said. "The option does not exist today. I wish that it had. I believe its time has come."

Opponents of the bills include Rep. David M Torrisi (D- North Andover), Rep. Francis L. Marini (R-Plymouth), and Rep. Jose I. Santiago (D- Lawrence) who all voiced their opposition to one of the bills, H-4453, in House debates on July 30. Rep.

Linda Harkins (D- Needham) and Rep. Karen Spilka (D- Ashland) have supported the bills. Proponents and opponents are working together to pass the bill during the informal session. Massachusetts requires unanimous consent to pass a bill into law.

Former Texas Governor George W. Bush signed the first safe haven bill into law in 1999. Massachusetts is now one of 9 states that do not have safe haven laws.

Budding Journalism Major.
Spent summer writing for hometown paper.
Future holds editorial position at major pub.
NICOLE
Her byline always includes AT&T.

Freedom of Expression.

Sign up for AT&T Long Distance and get up to 4 hours of calling on us.*

Choose AT&T for Long Distance when you sign up for local phone service. Then call 1 877-COLLEGE to add the AT&T One Rate 7¢ Plus Plan and get up to 4 hours of FREE calling.

1877-COLLEGE x27354
att.com/college/newterm

AT&T College Communications
your choice. your world. your voice.

AT&T

Long Distance • Internet Service • Virtual PrePaid Cards • International Calling

*Free minutes consist of monthly long distance bill credits and an AT&T Phone Card worth up to 2 hours of domestic calling. Terms and Conditions apply. Bill credit offer expires 12/31/02. Go to www.att.com/college/newterm for complete details.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

TechCavalry
help is on the way!
Computer Troubles?
We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com
Tape this ad to your computer!

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

U.S.-Mexico water dispute

By Erin Gage
DAILY TEXAN (U. TEXAS-AUSTIN)

(U-WIRE) AUSTIN, Texas - People on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border seek solutions to the water shortage that is making farmers wonder if the well has run dry.

To comply with a 1944 treaty, Mexico must transfer 350,000 acre-feet of water to the United States each year, but the Chihuahuan government hasn't covered its deficit from 1992-1997.

If the country can't comply because of water shortage, the treaty allows the water debt to be repaid in the following five-year cycle. The current five-year cycle ends Oct. 2.

"Chihuahua has had incredibly good rain. Chihuahua is not in extreme drought and it is going to make it hard for Mexico to state credibly that they are in extreme drought," Texas Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs said.

Some Texas farmers believe that Mexico is simply ignoring the treaty, while others say there is no water for Mexico to transfer.

Gene Hall, spokesman for the Texas Farm Bureau, said water withheld from Texas is being used to produce Chihuahuan crops that compete with Texan agriculture.

"Short of sending the troops into Chihuahua, I'm not sure what [Mexican President Vicente] Fox can do," Hall said.

Combs said the treaty should have included a way to ensure water is released.

"You have to have an enforcement mechanism in the treaty," Combs said. "You have to have a way to make people comply."

Gordon Hill, general manager of Bayview Irrigation District No. 11, said Willacy, Hidalgo, Cameron and Star counties have lost $500 million due to the water shortage.

"If Mexico does not stop the state of Chihuahua from withholding that water that belongs to us [Rio Grande Valley and Tamaulipas], we will no longer have farming in the Rio Grande Valley and Tamaulipas," Hill said.

The Mexican government has not delivered aid to its farmers as promised for crop losses suffered in 2001, and agriculture struggles in both countries.

"Farmers on both sides of the border are having a very difficult time," Combs said. "I go down to South Texas, and these farmers are talking about losing their shirts."

Farmers in the United States who use irrigation will soon receive compensation for water not received from Mexico. Combs expects to divide $10 million in federal aid among Rio Grande Valley farmers by the end of this year. The farmers also hope to receive 600,000 acre-feet of water by December to begin next year's crops. Mexico is expected to owe 1.5 million acre-feet of water by Oct. 2.

Researchers analyze rape

By Grant Smith
THE DAILY ATHENAEUM (WEST VIRGINIA U.)

(U-WIRE) MORGANTOWN, W.Va. - Researchers at a New Zealand university have spent the last 18 months analyzing the 1995 conviction of the alleged "Sunnyside rapist."

Now they're questioning the original investigation tactics used almost a decade ago.

"Basically what we found was a lot of errors within the evidence provided by eyewitnesses," said Matt Gerrie, a Ph.D. student at Victoria University of Wellington-New Zealand. Gerrie is one of two students analyzing the case.

Gerrie and fellow Ph.D. student Deryn Strange criticized the strategy used by police to conduct a photomontage and lineup.

During a Radio New Zealand interview aired Wednesday, they explained that different strategies can influence the way lineups or photomontages look to eyewitnesses.

Jack Hawkins, a former West Virginia University researcher, was convicted in 1993 on three first-degree counts of sexual assault.

The case was retried in 1995 after Monongalia County Circuit Court Judge Larry Starcher admitted to coaching prosecutors, as reported in the June 23, 1995, edition of The Daily Athenaeum.

Putnam County Circuit Court Judge O.C. Spaulding assumed Starcher's role and eventually granted Hawkins a new trial, which he relocated to Kanawha County because of publicity surrounding the case.

Maryanne Garry, a University of Washington research psychologist at the time the case was heard, testified as an expert witness in the second trial, as reported in the Feb. 7, 1995, edition of The Daily Athenaeum.

Garry, now a psychology lecturer at Victoria University, gave the case to Gerrie and Strange "to see if there was anything we could look at or pick out," Strange said.

Gerrie made clear during the same radio interview that they were not accusing the Morgantown Police Department of purposefully weighting or biasing any evidence or eyewitness accounts.

President cancels trip

By Patrick Timmons
DAILY TEXAN (U. TEXAS-AUSTIN)

(U-WIRE) AUSTIN, Texas - The cancellation of Mexican President Vicente Fox's Texas visit has left some observers questioning whether Fox's actions set a precedent to uphold human rights in Mexico and beyond. The cancellation of the trip followed Texas' execution of Mexican national Javier Suárez Medina.

When Fox won the presidency in 2000, he promised to improve Mexico's human rights record.

But Peter Ward, director of the Mexican Center at the University, said he questioned whether Fox's defense of human rights is motivated by a concern with image or if there has indeed been real change.

Some Mexicans see Fox's motives as political, only advocating change to quell internal opposition. For Enoe Uranga, chair of the human rights committee of the Mexico City Legislature, Fox's defense of human rights has little to do with changing Mexican reality and should be interpreted as just another example of political "double-speak."

"The Fox government has this practice of making declarations about human rights without much to back them up. This is an attitude that has more to do with political marketing than with deep promises," Uranga said.

John Ross, a Mexico City resident and a veteran commentator on Mexican politics and society, disagreed with Uranga.

"Things are not like they were [under the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI]," Ross said.

The PRI ruled Mexico as a one-party state for more than 70 years until the 2000 elections.

Ward agreed with Ross' assertion that there has been political and social change following the 2000 elections. However, Ward said he saw "an element of hyperbole and rhetoric" behind the current government's claims that human rights conditions have improved in Mexico. But, he added, human rights conditions were not good under the PRI.

At the end of its time in office, the PRI government came under heavy criticism for human rights abuses, evinced by the Zapatista uprising of the EZLN in the southern state of Chiapas.

Ward said the situation of human rights in Mexico changed throughout the 1990s, particularly as Amnesty International stepped up its campaign to expose police impunity for extracting confessions under torture. A 1997 United Nations report on human rights in Mexico found evidence that the Mexican police regularly abused human rights.

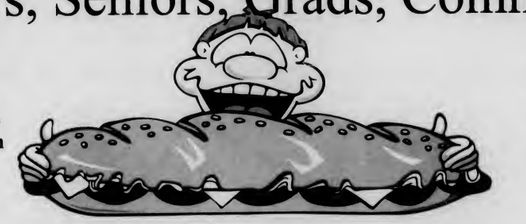
Ward said he interpreted Fox's cancellation of the Texas trip as sending, "a message to lower levels of bureaucracy that he does not control, such as the police."

Ross said the Fox administration has done better than previous administrations by releasing some political prisoners, opening up previously sealed archives of the 1968 Tlatelolco student massacre and canceling the construction of a new airport outside of Mexico City.

"Had the PRI been in power for the protests over the airport, I feel we would have been mourning the loss of many friends," Ross said.

Ross added that he saw Fox's cancellation of the Texas trip as an attempt to increase his moral authority.

Since Fox came into power two years ago, much has been promised but there has been little concrete change, Uranga said.



"With respect to human rights, this has stayed in speeches; in terms of concrete facts there has neither been a reinforcing of the organizations that deal with human rights, nor a [resolution] to the long list of human rights abuses that would reveal a real commitment to human rights [in Mexico]," she said.

Ward said he was more optimistic about the future, given recent developments.

"You have to applaud evidence that [there has been some change in Mexico]."

Juniors, Seniors, Grads, Commuters

This year is the year to leave behind the expense and hassle of cooking and cleaning up with Your Campus Meal Plan

In addition to the extensive array of award winning entrées available at the campus dining commons, YCMP members have daily access to a wide variety of cuisine as fresh, vibrant and diverse as the community it serves

Options include
Sushi Bar, Vegetarian and Vegan entrées and side dishes, complete Kosher meals, The Asian Noodle Bowl, International Station, Grab-n-Go Fresh Express meals, Stir Fry Station, Italian Pasta Bar, Full Service Grill, 40 Item Salad Bars, Bake Shop desert treats and Guest Chefs from local restaurants.

Use your YCMP at any of these conveniently located dining commons
Worcester, Franklin, Hillel, Hampshire and Berkshire

Or select campus retail outlets including
Bluewall, Hatch Food Court, Starbucks Coffee Cart, The MarketPlace Cafe, Earthfoods, Whitmore, Hampden, Physical Plant, Greenough, Sylvan and Sweets-n-More Snack Bars

With so many options to choose from you're never more than a few steps away from an exciting, nutritious and delicious meal.

Continuous Dining from 7:00 am to 2:00 am*

View menus online

www.aux.umass.edu/diningservices

For more information: Visit our Meal Plan Office at Franklin Dining Commons or our table on the Campus Center Concourse
*Hours of operation vary from location to location

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3099

ACTIVITIES | APARTMENT FOR RENT | APARTMENTS FOR RENT | EMPLOYMENT | EMPLOYMENT | FOR SALE | ROOMS FOR RENT | MISC

THE BEST OF UMASS 2002 — the results are in and here is what you voted...

BEST FOOD

Chinese Food
1. Panda East
2. Amherst Chinese
3. Teapot

Italian Food
1. Pasta e Basta
2. La Cucina di Pinocchio
3. Spaghetti Freddies

Pizza
1. Antonio's
2. Bertucci's
3. Pelono's

Best Date Restaurant
1. Carmelina's
2. Judie's
3. Spoleto

Cheap Date Place
1. Burger King
2. Antonio's
3. Wendy's

Ice Cream Parlor
1. Bart's
2. Friendly's
3. Pete's Drive-In

When Parents Pay
1. Judie's
2. Monkey Bar
3. Carmelina's

Indian Restaurant
1. India Palace
2. India House
3. New India

Northampton Restaurant
1. Fitzwilly's
2. Teapot
3. Cha Cha Cha

Best Vegetarian
1. Earthfoods
2. Buenos y Sano
3. Fire and Water

Japanese Restaurant
1. Goten
2. House of Teriyaki
3. Khiban

Bagel Shop
1. Brueggers
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Breakfast Place
1. Newman Center
2. Nancy Jane's
3. Daisy's

Best Wings
1. Hangar
2. Rafters
3. Chili's

Sub Shop
1. The Sub
2. Subway
3. La Cucina di Pinocchio

Mexican Restaurant
1. Bueno y Sano
2. Cha Cha Cha
3. La Vera Cruzana

BEST SHOPS & SERVICES

Grocery Store
1. Big Y
2. Stop & Shop
3. Atkins Farm

Coffee Shop
1. Rao's
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Tanning Salon
1. Oasis
2. Hair East
3. Tan Quick

Florist
1. Atkins Farm
2. Knowles Flower Shop
3. Always in Bloom

Gas Station
1. Mobil
2. Cumberland Farms
3. Exxon

Clothing Store
1. Old Navy
2. H & M
3. Zanna

Car Repair Place
1. North Amherst Motors
2. College Street Motors
3. Kevin's Auto Repair

Hair Salon
1. Regency
2. Amherst Barbers
3. Bucci

Bike Shop
1. Bike Co-op
2. Laughing Dog
3. Competitive Edge

Place to Work Out
1. Boyden Gym
2. Kids Sports/Kinetics
3. Hampshire Fitness

BEST ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Video Store
1. Video to Go
2. BlockBuster
3. DVDen

Music Store
1. Newbury Comics
2. Mystery Train
3. Media Play

Pool Hall
1. Mike's Billiards
2. Upstairs at ABC
3. The Hanger

Place to Hear Live Music
1. McMurphy's
2. Pearl Street
3. Mullins Center

UNIQUE UMASS BEST

Classroom
1. Mahar
2. Thompson 102
3. Bartlett 65

D.C.
1. Worcester
2. Hampshire
3. Berkshire

D.C. Dish
1. Chicken Fingers
2. Breakfast Sandwiches
3. Potato Bar

Spring Break Place
1. Cancun
2. Jamaica
3. Hawaii

Magazine
1. Cosmopolitan
2. Sports Illustrated
3. Maxim

Way to Gain Freshman 15
1. Antonio's
2. D.C. Food
3. No Excercise

Reason to Miss Class
1. Nice Weather
2. Overslept
3. Missed the bus

Reason to Hand in a Paper Late
1. Illness
2. Didn't do it yet
3. Went out the night before

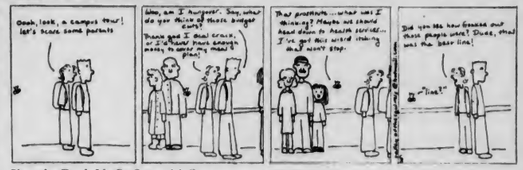
Place to Read Paper
1. Class
2. Bluewall
3. Cape Cod Lounge

Place to Study
1. Library
2. Rao's
3. Bus

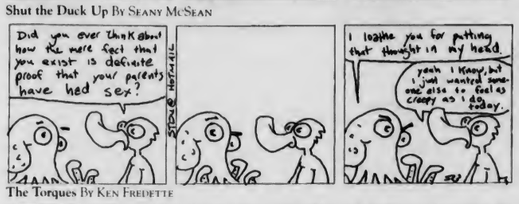
Internet Site
1. google.com
2. candystand.com
3. theonion.com

Apartment Complex
1. Puffton Village
2. Townhouses
3. Brandywine Apartments

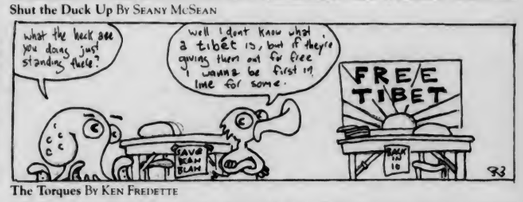
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Quote of the Day

"Let's go commit some journalism."

-Jack Tagger
Basket Case by Carl Hiaasen

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 95 LOW: 75	HIGH: 89 LOW: 82	HIGH: 92 LOW: 85

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You are all around awesome. You will find the person of your dreams. And then live happily ever after. Watch out for shooting stars.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Avoid all professors that quote obscure references from random pieces of literature that no one knows about. Good luck to all you English majors.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Avoid sports. All sports. Even hacky sack and ultimate frisbee. Yes, those are sports, kind of.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – The elevators in the library are scary. Very scary. But then so is DC food.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Beware of Pepsi. And Pepsi products as well. There are none on this campus. Beware.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Saturn has rings. Jupiter has moons. I don't know your horoscope, sorry.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – Southwest. Orchard Hill. Central. Sylvan. Northeast. So many choices, so little knowledge.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Your name is hard to spell. Your horoscope is hard to read. Check back at the beginning of the semester.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – There is a little man. He lives in the paper. He writes the horoscopes. He called in sick today.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Silly freshmen, Trix are for upperclassmen.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Avoid confrontation today. Avoid compromise today. Infact, avoid everything, except TV. TV is your friend.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You will graduate a year early with honors and double major. Venus is high in the tower of Mars.

Frosh By Megan Orosz

"Look! I went through the South West wind tunnel with wet hair ok ?!?"

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Jerk Pork Strips with Vegetables Sandwich

Hungarian Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)

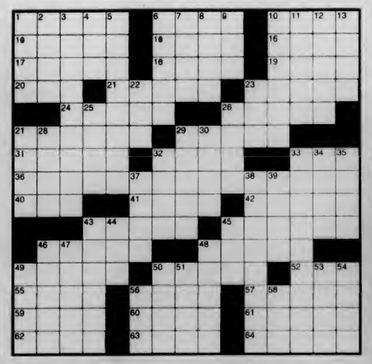
DINNER

Roast Turkey

General Tso's Shrimp

Tai Seitan (vegan)

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com



ACROSS
1 Coffee-chocolate drink
6 Face covering
10 Not odd
14 Ohio city
15 Klein of design
16 "Gladiator" setting
17 Downgrade
18 Raise
19 Popular side dish
20 Owns
21 Tenet
23 Melted out
24 Nobelist Irom Egypt
26 Blender button
27 Red Cross founder
29 Thinks ahead
31 Walking
32 Misfortunes
33 Small swallow
36 Breakfast drink
40 Cover with turf
41 Optical device
42 Passion
43 Drift
45 Conductor Ormandy
46 Pulled the oars
48 Star in Cygnus
49 Dimensnes
50 Vigilant
52 Unseal, to Blake
55 Valhalla host
56 Egg-shaped
57 Violinist Stern
59 Barrel of laughs
60 Soup dish
61 Ground
62 Actor Perkins
63 Quaint hotels
64 Wild West show

DOWN
1 Crush
2 N. Mex. neighbor
3 Junction
4 Bounce
5 Story
6 Type of parking
7 Lady in King Arthur's court
8 Hard facts
9 Allow
10 Mistakes
11 Curtain fabric
12 Quiz show host
13 Prerequisite
22 Went jogging
23 Hound for payment
25 Surmounting
26 Over with 27 Suitcases
28 1960s hairdo
29 Unit of weight
30 Aloha go-withs
32 Birthouse occupant
33 Buffet
34 Computer-screen graphic
35 Mademoiselle's father
37 Hurried away
38 Perkier
39 Strong desire
43 Score
44 Home, in the phone book
45 "Auction" end
46 Deejay's medium
47 Leek cousin
48 Vales
49 Beer starter
50 English river
51 Grassy area
53 Canape topper
54 Reverberate
56 Geisha's sash
58 — Paulo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

L	O	B	S		A	L	A	R	M		M	U	C	H
E	M	I	T		R	O	M	E	O		E	L	L	E
A	N	N	A		S	W	A	R	S		A	N	O	N
F	I	S	T	S		H	E	A	R	S	A	Y
		I	O	N	S		L	I	E	U
R	A	C	C	O	O	N	S		C	A	R	A	T
U	S	A		T	R	A	I	L		M	E	D	A	L
S	H	U	N		M	I	D	A	S		S	O	L	E
H	E	L	E	N		L	E	M	O	N		R	O	N
	S	K	E	E	T		S	E	D	I	M	E	N	T
			D	R	O	P		R	A	G	E
P	I	L	O	T	E	D		H	A	B	I	T
M	A	N	E		A	R	E	A	S		D	O	O	R
A	R	C	S		L	I	M	I	T		O	T	T	O
P	E	A	S		S	L	I	D	E		W	H	A	T

10-24-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Matthew F. Sacco
James Schaffer
Scott Eldridge II
Shannon Farrington
Mike Kulak
Melissa Hammel

Construction work blankets campus

Under progress | widespread construction on campus the semester, as many steam lines are replaced

CAMPUS CONSTRUCTION

A look at some of the projects planned for the UMass campus

Project	Cost	Completion Date	Background Information
Construction of a new Engineering Lab building	$25.9 million	October 2003	The three-story building, to be located on the north end of campus near the Polymer Research Center, will house labs for three kinds of engineering, a 195-person auditorium, and a distance-learning classroom
Construction of a new wing on the Isenberg School of Management	$15 million (funded part by by private funding)	September 2002	This three-story addition will have four large case rooms, breakout rooms, a computer lab, and a student center
Upgrades to the steamline from the Fine Arts Center to the Morrill Science Center with a new extension pipe to the SOM addition	$4.2 million	November 2002	A large trench from the Fine Arts Center to the Morrill buildings will affect both automotive and pedestrian traffic
Repairs to the existing steamline near the Morrill Science Center	$850,000	October 2002	This is one in a series of repairs/replacements of steam lines on campus that need to be done before the new Central Heating Plant comes online in December 2003
Construction of Rudd Field	$3 million (privately funded)	August 2002	The new stadium will house the soccer teams
Deck resurfacing in the Campus Center Garage	$2 million	September 2002	Parts of the garage may be closed until resurfacing is done
Renovations to Benjamin Recital Hall in the Fine Arts Center	$1.1 million	July 2002	Renovations included improvements to the hall and the addition of a new lobby
Remodeling in the physical plant building	$934,000 for heating/ventilation/air conditioning (HVAC) system renovations $2.1 million for building reconstruction	HVAC system repairs, August 2002 Reconstruction, March 2003	The second floor of the building will be rehauled and the HVAC system will be revamped and repaired
Renovations in Goessmann Lab	$1.5 million	November 2002	Four labs will be renovated to provide temporary lab space for chemical, civil, and environmental engineering
Structural repairs at McGuirk Stadium	$680,000	September 2002	The repairs are for preventative maintenence of the football stadium
Dormitory repair/remodeling in Arnold House and Van Meter residence hall	$1.2 million into each building	August 2002	A new fire alarm system, emergency lighting, and electrical work were done in Van Meter. An elevator was installed in Arnold.
Installation of sprinklers in Herter, Tobin, and the Lederle Graduate Research Center	$3.2 million	December 2002	An additional $1.7 million will be spent repairing the roof on Lederle

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A new $80 million central heating plant tops the list of construction projects that the University of Massachusetts currently has in the works for the campus.

"This project is one of the most significant permitting design and construction efforts undertaken in the last 25 years," James Cahill, director of facilities planning at UMass, said.

Cahill hopes to break ground for the plant in the fall of 2003, with construction taking approximately two years. Facilities expect to begin start-up operations by December 2005.

Funded by the University of Massachusetts Building Authority, the heating plant site is next to Route 116 and the Amherst wastewater treatment plant just over the line in the town of Hadley. According to Cahill, the site offers many positives to the campus and its neighboring communities. "By replacing the existing 60-year-old heating plant and co-locating it with the wastewater treatment facility," Cahill said, "The new heating plant will significantly conserve natural resources and reduce greenhouse gas and ozone-producing air emissions while providing steam and electric energy to the campus both reliably and economically."

Three other potential sites were considered for the plant: a location near the existing plant on Campus Center Way, a site on which they would renovate and expand a current heating plant on UMass-Tillson Farm in North Amherst, and a site on Governors Drive across the street from the PVTA bus station. According to Cahill, these choices were eliminated because of cost considerations, traffic, wetland impacts, and conflicts with the campus master plan.

The heating plant will be designed by Vanderweil Engineers Inc. and Cambridge Seven Associates Inc. and will burn both fuel oil and natural gas.

The current plant burns primarily coal, with oil and natural gas used to supplement the coal firing.

The chosen site will be most cost and operations more efficient due to its close proximity to the current campus steam, condensate, and electric distribution systems, Cahill said.

In addition, an existing service road provides convenient access for fuel deliveries and provides a buffer zone between the plant and residential areas in both the community and on campus.

Two new, 20-inch main steam lines will run underground in a trench from the new heating plant to connect with the existing campus steam piping systems. They will connect in a new building near the Campus Center garage that will house a steam connection and condensation return pump.

In the meantime, students can expect many pipes to be dug up and replaced before the power plant goes online. "All of theoretically invisible stuff which is underground — it will be visible," Chancellor John Lombardi said.

"We have a lot of old pipes here, and they have to be dug up and replaced because of two things," he said. "One is because eventually they break, the other is that if you don't start doing it now, when you put a new power plant online the pressure from the new [more efficient] power plant will be greater and... you have old pipes that will blow."

The new plant should have numerous environmental benefits, including a 300,000 pound reduction in nitrogen oxide emissions, said Cahill.

A substantial reduction in air pollutants should result from the elimination of coal burning.

ESTHER DANZIGER/COLLEGIAN

N. Pleasant St. has been shut down during the day due to steam line replacement projects near the Hugo Mall and Orchard Hill

■ chancellor

[continued from page A1]

frustrating to those involved in it. "A lot of times what you do," he said, "Is raise issues for those who come after you."

To Lombardi, though, it's still a positive and necessary thing. "Part of fundraising is an act of faith in the future of the University," he said. "It's a commitment by that we are here for the long haul, that what we're doing matters, and that what we're doing isn't just for ourselves, but for this continuous living thing that is the University."

"There's kind of an enthusiasm that gets developed in this because everyone involved realizes that some of what they do will make a benefit today, but a lot of what they do will make a benefit after they're no longer participating in the institution," he said.

The retirement hug

As many as 512 University employees took early retirement as part of the budget cuts last year. Out of that, 120 of them were teaching staff. Not surprisingly, this is one of the first areas that Lombardi has chosen to address.

"The first task of the provost and the deans has been to identify where they need to put some money right away to make sure that they have good faculty and instructors in every single one of the courses that we need," Lombardi said. "Then students aren't going to be saying, 'Que pasa? Donde esta mi clase?'"

According to Lombardi, the University is on the right track in terms of covering classes. He said that in many cases, professors who retired are the very same people who are coming back to teach classes this fall. Their status has just changed from that of full-time professor to part-time professor.

"We have an advantage in that a lot of the people who retired are in the community," Lombardi said. "This is also an extraordinary community and there are lots of other people who have advanced degrees who can be mobilized on a short term basis to participate in our teaching program at high levels."

Hiring part-timers is necessary because finding full-time staff members is a yearlong job. It takes a search, recruitment, and interviews, and then the new staff shows up for the next fall.

Lombardi sees a positive in the mass exodus in that it gives the University the chance to adjust to new needs quickly. "Normally it takes a long time to move the resources. Early retirement makes that move quicker because it creates a pool, and therefore that pool can be moved," he said.

Physical Plant also got hit hard with retirements, with 15 percent of their workers taking early retirement. "We took a big hit in the staff associated with the physical plant at all levels," Lombardi said.

The upside, he said, is that unlike faculty, there is no yearlong search to find replacements for facilities workers.

That does not mean that they all need to be replaced, though. "In all of the places where there are staff missing, the first question is how do I replace the person who left? The second question is, is there a way to do things better?" Lombardi said.

"The goal is to take the total pot of monies and get the maximum benefit, some of which is replacing the people and some which is enhancing their tools and their ability to work," he said.

Sports in transition

One of the places that money needs to be utilized more carefully is in the athletic department. UMass finds itself in transition this year, with seven fewer sports and a new athletic director.

According to Lombardi, UMass faces unusual challenges for an athletic department. "We have some really good programs in almost all of our sports, but we haven't yet developed the financial base that their quality deserves," he said. "So while our facilities are good, they're not terrific."

He also believes that another problem for UMass athletics is the lack of a significant strong fan base. "We haven't been able to quite build the enthusiasm that you want to have for an institution that has 22 sports with many of them top level performers," Lombardi said.

According to Lombardi, new athletic director Ian McCaw is a good man for the job. "He has a set of experiences and skills that seem ideally suited to the challenges we have in intercollegiate athletics," he said.

"We wanted somebody because we don't have a lot of time, our budget is tight, and we can't afford to take an experiment here who knew what they were doing right off the bat," Lombardi said.

UMass administration thinks they found that man. Lombardi pointed out McCaw's understanding for the Boston sports market (he worked at Northeastern before) and his integrity and intensity as things that they were looking for in their new athletic director.

Another significant change in the athletic department is the loss of seven sports that the University did not feel that it could finance after the budget cuts. While Lombardi does think it's unfortunate that there had to be cuts, he doesn't see the cuts reversing themselves.

"Twenty-two sports is a lot of sports for a school this size," he said. "The thing that justifies what we're doing here is that they're very good and the students are good. You don't feel bad subsidizing that kind of quality, but there's a limit to what you can do."

"That limit at the moment is 22," he said.

This is unfortunate news for the cut sports, especially for men's gymnastics, which was trying to get reinstated for next year by funding themselves. "The first thing is that having enough money for next year is not adequate," Lombardi said that it isn't fair to recruits for the University to attract them if their program isn't going to exist for another four years. "Unless they can come up with a stable financial plan that has legs and real money, not the hope for money, this is not a conversation."

Lombardi said that gymnastics finding an endowment worth ten million dollars to fund them would be one potential way that they could keep themselves afloat. "It doesn't have to be an endowment, but the reason for talking about an endowment is to give everyone a sense of how much money it takes so that we don't confuse ourselves into thinking this can be done for $1.95 and bake sales," he said.

Setting Goals

Above all, there are several things Lombardi hopes to see by next year at this time. He doesn't want to play catch-up forever. "I want the personnel problems stabilized at all levels," he said.

Financially, decision making also needs to improve, according to Lombardi. "I would like to see our ability to make choices about where we invest our money is better than the case today," he said. Today we're scrambling so much with these instabilities that it's hard to know whether we're making the right choice every time because we're always hurrying to deal with some kind of immediate crisis."

This means solving problems like the lack of funding for the library. "We have to do a little work to figure how we're going to sustain library purchases because that's real important to the future of the University," he said.

Bringing more research to the university and improving student life are also priorities. "Anecdotal evidence I have says that it [student life] could do with a little help," Lombardi said. "They tell me its quiet here on weekends. That's not good."

JAMES SCHAPIRO/COLLEGIAN

Chancellor John V. Lombardi speaks with interim Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance and budget director Joyce Hatch.

STEIGER IS OUT OF THIS WORLD PAGE B4.
UMASS ALUMNUS COSBY STILL GETS THE LAUGHS PAGE B2.
SOARING IN STYLE PAGE B10.

SIGNS OF POWERS

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

AUSTIN POWERS IN GOLDMEMBER
Directed by Jay Roach
Starring Mike Myers, Michael Caine and Beyonce Knowles

When the first movie to feature the groovy secret agent known as Austin Powers hit theaters in early 1997, no one expected that the snaggle-toothed, bespectacled spy would grace one of the top-grossing comedy series of all time.

The original film, which grossed only $53 million in its theater run, was a cheeky little spoof of all those ridiculously mod spy films of the '60s. Austin Powers, triumphantly incarnated by the comic dervish Mike Myers, was a free-love espousing swinger, baby, and the joke was that he was the most spectacularly unlikely swinger ever.

Actually, the joke was that he was a '60s swinger frozen in 1967 and thawed out in the safe sex '90s, but Myers and his col-

Turn to POWERS, page B8

COURTESY MELINDA SUE GORDON/PARAMOUNT PICTURES

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SIGNS
Directed by M. Night Shyamalan
Starring Mel Gibson and Joaquin Phoenix
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Signs, the creepy new alien invasion from the young wizard M. Night Shyamalan, doesn't have the big twist endings that his previous films, The Sixth Sense and Unbreakable, had. And that turns out to be a blessing.

In each scene Shyamalan gooses the audience, leading us to expect something is going to happen – and then giving us another scene in which the same tingly thrill is achieved. Moment after moment, Shyamalan avoids a put payoff – What's that sound? Oh, it's just a cat – in favor of tightening the vice on us. Signs is the first movie of the summer in which the tension is pulled as taut as it can go, where the only sound in the theater is the sound of the audience's collective breath being sucked in.

Turn to SIGNS, page B8

COURTESY TOUCHSTONE PICTURES

Aerosmith's pipe dream becomes a reality

The deuces may be wild, but no one out rolls the aces of rock

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

First came Run DMC, then Kid Rock, and finally Aerosmith emerged onstage to the thunderous cries of joy arising from a loyal crowd of New Englanders happy to have their "bad boys" home once again. It was their third and final night at the Tweeter Center in Mansfield, Massachusetts, and as the sun set, the lights came up for Aerosmith.

A sheer white drop revealing only the band members' figures covered the stage. Their ages concealed by the gauze, their music ripped through the Tweeter Center gunning the audience's engine, propelling fists into the air like pistons moving up and down, and sending audience members to their feet to cheer the return of the band originally known, ironically, as "Pipe Dream."

Joe Perry and Tom Hamilton met and bonded in 1965 over a pipe dream of finding fame and fortune in their field of musical dreams. But it wasn't until Perry served a juvenile delinquent named Stephen Victor Tallorico ice cream at The Anchorage in Sunapee New Hampshire in 1969 that their dream found a way into reality. Tallorico, now know as Tyler, recruited drummer Joey Kramer, and as a group they found Brad Whitford.

Through a two and a half hour set, the men of Aerosmith churned away through the old and new. The set paraded through "Lord of the Thighs", "Pink", "Sweet Emotion" (with its original extended introduction), "Draw the Line", and "Crazy" just to begin. After an hour of play Steven stopped his dance announcing that it was time for them (the band) to "take a little walk" so that lead guitarist Joe Perry could "have his toches pinched more." The band, surrounded by guards and Tweeter Center security, made their way through the mass of audience members to a stage that had appeared two-thirds of the way back in the seating section. Facing the lawn Tyler and company jaunted on stage as if their thirty years of experience had only encouraged their juvenile impulses. His vocals in tact, and his figure as lithe as ever Tyler's agile dance began again this time to the rhythm of "Big Ten Inch," an oft forgotten piece from the 1977 Toys in the Attic.

Audience members, especially those who doubted with lawn seating they'd see much of the act, swarmed their mini stage. Never one to disappoint, Aerosmith made sure all of their audience got a piece of the action. At the conclusion of "Big Ten Inch" Tyler whipped out a fire hose spraying those in front of him. Moist fans danced in the spray, as Aerosmith moved on to play "Dream On."

After six songs the band returned to the main stage where Tyler, originally a drummer, took a step back to allow Perry to lead the band in a melody of what he termed "Boston Blues." Perry's south shore accent intact, he explained that when the band traveled he liked to show those outside of his home range how Boston plays the blues. Guitar on hip, recovered from his recent knee surgery and dressed in his usual chest-baring vest Perry led the band with ease and confidence. Tyler standing behind, wailing on his harmonica, watched like a proud brother.

Although Perry did separate from the band for several years in the early 1980's his solo career was limited perhaps by his lack of stylistic vocals. He can sing, but like unlike his brilliant guitar work (which continues to grow stronger, more confident, and more inspired) his voice lacks any attractive or inspiring verve that makes a great vocalist, like his partner in crime, Tyler, appealing to listening to.

Tom Hamilton (bass), Brad Whitford (guitars), and Joey Kramer (drums) continue to keep the beat and make the music great as their lead men make the show tremendous.

Following their act Aerosmith attempted to leave the stage, however rumor had beat them at their own game and the audience knew ahead of time that they would re-emerge with their warm-up acts (Run DMC and Kid Rock) to come together for "Walk this Way." The song that united the three groups, beginning in 1986 with Run DMC's then manager Rick Rubins coupling the two groups for a video remake of the Aerosmith hit. Kid Rock, as a child in Michigan had loved the song first as an Aerosmith hit, and later as a union of black rap and white rock in the 80's. Working his way into the spotlight he first performed the song with Run DMC and Aerosmith at the 2000 MTV Awards and now is touring with them.

The unification of Run DMC, Kid Rock, and Aerosmith brought the concert to a violent and awesome conclusion, with sparks flying onstage, and confetti falling upon the audience. However, Perry and Tyler were not finished. They would have the last word, over their new comrades. Following the song, Perry continued to rip at his guitar, pulling off the red satin shirt he'd changed into, he laid his guitar on the stage. Standing back, Tyler grinned like a boy at his first concert and watched as his idol, brother, and friend swung repeatedly at the guitar strings with his shirt. Hitting the chords at the perfect mark each time, Perry ended by slamming his audience with loud bursts until exhausted he grabbed his shirt, hauled his guitar from the floor and composed himself back into the stance of a Rock n' Roll hall of famer. Tyler introduced first Kid Rock, then Run DMC's members, and finally after the other acts had left the stage, his own group ending with Joe "Fuckin" Perry. Perry then graciously introduced Tyler.

After 32 years in the business, together, apart, and together again, the Bad Boys of Boston, Toxic Twins, Pipe Dream, or whatever else you want to call them, Aerosmith remain America's greatest rock band, and the greatest rock performance available to audiences today.

Plus, it doesn't hurt that Joe Perry remains the most beautiful guitarist in the world.

"...years in the business, together, apart, and together again, the Bad Boys of Boston, Toxic Twins, Pipe Dream, or whatever else you want to call them, Aerosmith remain America's greatest rock band."

Going round with a treasured icon

Honoring the smiley face

Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's a familiar yellow and black image that few go a day without seeing. It graces buttons, t-shirts, Wal-Mart ads, and most recently became an icon of emotional expression on AOL Instant Messenger. It's an international symbol of happiness and peace. It is the smiley face.

The smiley face was designed in Worcester, Massachusetts in 1963 by a man named Harvey Ball. He was paid 45 dollars by State Mutual Life Insurance to create a "morale boosting image" for the company's latest campaign. Ball never copyrighted or trademarked his creation. It is unlikely he realized how huge the yellow face with the huge grin would become. It wasn't until the Spain brothers- Murray and Bernard, wanted to create a fad item to represent the peace, love, and happiness craze of the late 1960's and early 70's. The trend continues, to perhaps a slightly lesser degree, today.

Websites such as www.smilydictionary.com exist and further promote the smiling 70's icon. At Smilys Dictionary you can learn how to type several different types of smiley faces to express all kinds of different emotions via instant messages and email. You can also purchase Smiley Mugs and Smiley "Slammers" which is a Smiling green ball that laughs when you slam it or hit it.

International retailer Wal-Mart selected this symbol of contentment as their spokesperson/logo. It's a seemingly obvious choice, as it portrays Wal-Mart as a welcoming second home for their customers.

"Stores are our second homes (as employees) and we try to welcome customers in the same way," says Sharon Weber, a Wal-Mart Spokesperson.

Wal-Mart also chose the logo because it is a common reaction of their customers to their rollback prices.

"Very simply, our rollback campaign prices back it," Weber said. "When prices come back, it makes people smile. There's no magical theory, it's just what people do.

"Smiley has been a cowboy, Zorro, a graduate, a pirate, or been sporting a sombrero. He's simple, and welcoming."

> "The smiley face was designed in Worcester, Massachusetts in 1963 by a man named Harvey Ball. He was paid 45 dollars by State Mutual Life Insurance to create a 'morale boosting image' for the company's latest campaign."

A simple marketing technique, and a commonly used symbol among people for many different aspects of living, the smiley face isn't something too many UMass students often think about, but when asked, give a variety of answers from the peace and happiness factor to annoying teenage girls.

"Perky, perks and annoying girls," says Ben Legg, a junior Journalism major.

Others took more of a conventional standpoint and admitted to some more common perceptions of a smiley face.

"It's a quick happy, like when you can't smile at someone," Jami Witherell, a sophomore Journalism and Elementary Ed major, who admitted to signing her name with a smiley face."

"Happiness and Wal-Mart," said senior Journalism major Lindsey Elder.

Obviously the initial intentions of the smiley face, from the interpretive peace, love and happiness movement from the late 60's and early 70's, and the morale boosting intentions of Ball's marketing campaign still exist in the minds of some people, even if they don't know exactly where the little yellow sphere came from. Even though Ball died almost a year and a half ago, his smiling mark of peace and happiness will live on forever though people who just want to spread a little love, or through companies trying to reflect the satisfaction of their customers.

Information from the Boston Globe was used in this article.

Cosby gets older; comedy stays in style

By Nikolas P. Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BILL COSBY
Mechanics Hall
Aug. 15

WORCESTER — A comedian is often successful if the audience can relate to his jokes.

At his first show at Worcester's Mechanics Hall on Aug. 15, it was apparent that this is one of the reasons Bill Cosby, who lives in Western Massachusetts and graduated from the University of Massachusetts, is one of the best stand up comedians. As an actor and comedian, Cosby has touched millions of lives through television shows such as "The Cosby Show" and "Kids Say the Darndest Things" as well as his comedy albums.

Though he is most well known for his hit TV shows and films, Cosby actually began his career as a stand-up comic in nightclubs and has won several Grammy awards for his comedy recordings. His two-hour show displayed his unique talent of the genre.

Wearing a Morris Brown shirt, white Adidas sweatpants and sandals, Cosby based much of the show on old age. At 65, he comes off as an even warmer, cuddlier and altogether funnier person. He's facing maturity with the wit and charm he's used on other angles of life. When talking about ripened status, his darts are aimed squarely at himself.

"I have a face that I couldn't look at when I was a kid," he joked.

"Then say old people fall down. It's not because of our legs, it's because of our trifocals," he cracked.

As a child, Cosby asked all sorts of questions about the elderly.

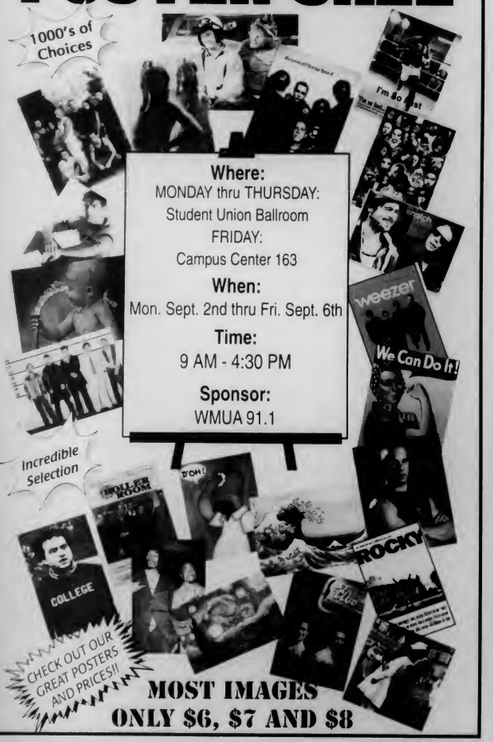
"Are the eyebrows holding the lids open? Why is the white part of his eyes turning brown? Why is hair coming out of his nose? Why does he have bushes coming out of his ears?" Cosby said.

Many of Cosby's funniest jokes centered on his wife who he mocked throughout much of the show. This routine turned out to be terrific, mostly because he made the audience believe in the character they were watching. He does an amazing job of alternating his voice, making hand gestures and overall acting. He said that a man's wife will eventually start being rude to him and will tell him one of four things: "Shut up," "Oh Bill," "Listen" or "Look."

"Now when I fell in love with her, these words didn't come out," Cosby snipped.

In one routine, Cosby lied down on the stage acting as if he was in bed next to his wife. One morning, he said, the alarm clock went off and it wasn't for his wife. Turned out that was the last time he saw an alarm clock on his bed stand. He also said he leaves the remote control on her pillow, because even if he's enjoying a show he'll have to change it when his wife enters the room.

Cosby ended his show with his now classic routine about his hilarious trip to the dentist and his encounter with a drill and needle.



While on stage, Cosby adjusted his pace and timing to the audience. In one instance, a young woman working at the hall quietly snuck behind him and left him a cup of coffee and began walking off the stage. But just as she had almost stepped off, Cosby stopped her dead in her tracks and poked some fun at her.

"Do you notice how we always walk into the room when you finish the joint?" he cracked.

Cosby's presence as one of the most pure celebrities certainly helps his cause as a great comedian. How many other stars can you think of that have as clean an image as Cosby, despite being in the spotlight for several decades? With his soft teddy bear image and spot-on jokes about the rigors of daily life, it's no wonder he is America's most loved comedian.

Unlike most young comedians, Cosby avoids gimmickry, cursing or lowbrow humor. Instead, he relies solely on funny jokes and stories. Cosby is only getting better with old age.

THE BIGGEST BACK TO SCHOOL
POSTER SALE

Where:
MONDAY thru THURSDAY:
Student Union Ballroom
FRIDAY:
Campus Center 163
When:
Mon. Sept. 2nd thru Fri. Sept. 6th
Time:
9 AM - 4:30 PM
Sponsor:
WMUA 91.1

MOST IMAGES
ONLY $6, $7 AND $8

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

TICKETS ONLY $7, $10, & $15
FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3
BLAST II SHOCKWAVE
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
BLAST II SHOCKWAVE is the next generation of the 2001 Tony Award winning theatrical spectacular, BLAST!. Exploding with color, light, movement and music, this new production explores this contemporary genre with new cutting edge artistry. Part precision marching band, part spectacular pageant and 100% excitement; it is a soaring take-off to new frontiers of sight and sound.
SPONSORED BY PEOPLES BANK AND WRNX

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10
JON NAKAMATSU, PIANO
Bowker Auditorium at 7:30pm
The Gold Medallist of the Tenth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, Nakamatsu takes a showman's delight with his big keyboard style. He performs with innate phrasing, spontaneous musicianship and joyous abandon. He'll pull you right on stage with him.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17
MARK MORRIS DANCE GROUP
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
Liking his dances is the easiest thing in the world. His dancers make you fall in love again with dancing, dancing with music, dancing so whole hearted; it transmits an overflow of joy. And the experience - preforming to live music - is rare today.
SPONSORED BY WFCR

Catch the beat
Share the Joy

545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS FOR TICKETS
online at www.fineartscenter.com

WRNX 100.9FM · PeoplesBank · 88.5FM WFCR

The good, the bad and the artsy; Summers wonders and louses

By Nikolas P. Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Nelly's no. 1 hit "Hot in Herre," served its purpose as this year's summer anthem in more ways than one. The album Nellyville became the biggest album of the summer; Martha Stewart experienced a meltdown; and several blistering blockbusters cropped up—all while the mercury hit meteoric heights. Here, the last word on everything hot and not.

COURTESY PARAMOUNT

COURTESY COLUMBIA/TRISTAR FILMS/NEW LINE CINEMA

WINNERS

Eminem – Bootlegging didn't seem to hurt sales of The Eminem Show or his position as the king of controversy

Spider-Man – Spidey spun his web to over $400 million at the box office, helping the movie become the biggest film of the summer and the fifth biggest movie of all time.

Ashanti – With a top ten album, three top 10 singles, a book deal (with Hyperion), and ad contract (with Candie's), this girl's anything but foolish.

"American Idol" – Pulling in more than 10 million viewers and becoming a critic's fave, "American Idol" became this summer's "Survivor."

Beyonce Knowles – The giant afro and knee-high boot kicks of Foxxy Cleopatra in Goldmember sure didn't hurt.

XXX – Powered by the fast and the furious rise of Vin Diesel, XXX opened to a $40 million opening weekend.

Austin Powers – Yeah, baby! Austin Powers in Goldmember shagged its way to a $200 million-plus gross at the box office.

Nelly – With no. 1 hits "Hot in Herre" and "Dilemma" (a duet with Destiny's Child's Kelly Rowland), we're living in Nellyville.

My Big Fat Greek Wedding – Opa! This indie film, backed by Hollywood heavyweight Tom Hanks (and wife Rita Wilson), has grossed an impressive $40 million (and counting).

Pink – An accompanying act on the Lenny Kravitz tour, a headlining tour of her own and continued success with her already triple platinum M!ssundaztood more than got the party started this summer.

Star Wars – A $300 million box office take for Star Wars: Episode II — Attack of the Clones ain't bad, but since Star Wars: Episode I — The Phantom Menace grossed $431 million, the franchise may be losing steam. Mee-sah think Star Wars has a problem.

The Osbournes – White-hot after a wildly successful hit show on MTV, overexposure led to lawsuits, other unsuccessful copycats and criticism from top stars (Bill Cosby, David Bowie). The prince of f___ing darkness had better hope this drama helps maintain last year's ratings.

SPLIT DECISION

Angelina Jolie and Billy Bob Thornton – The once blissful bride and groom, who used to carry each other's blood in a vial around their necks, ended up filing for divorce.

Will Smith – The King of the July 4 movie weekend still showed he hasn't lost his touch as Men in Black II took a huge bite out of the box office, but his album, Born to Reign, barely made good on its name.

LOSERS

Martha Stewart – The woman who put the "P" in perfect was found to be not so er...perfect.

R. Kelly – Endless sex scandals and child molestation charges made sure he wasn't the "world's greatest."

Julia Roberts – She may have gotten hitched over the summer, but the marriage seemed to be a jibe to get back at her ex Benjamin Bratt who also eloped weeks earlier. To add insult to injury, the box office diva failed to draw enough viewers to help Full Frontal gross even $1 million its opening weekend.

A note from the Arts and Living staff:

Dear reader:

Perhaps you have already noticed that the Arts & Living section offers a plethora of goodies, ranging from entertainment news, movie and album reviews, to aspects of our daily lifestyle and so much more – all designed with a sharp eye for cutting-edge graphics.

A team of students work to help put together the newspaper you are holding in your hands, but we need your help.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, the largest college daily newspaper in New England, offers a wealth of opportunity for all students – not just journalism majors. Here in the Arts & Living section you can choose to write news, movie reviews, album reviews, concert reviews, lifestyle and fashion stories or even start your own column. We would love to have more writers and reviewers for on-campus events, such as theater shows at the Fine Arts Center. We are also looking for artists who are willing to draw pictures for our pages.

In short, we are looking for complete coverage of arts and living to satisfy our large readership. So what are you waiting for? Improve your writing or art skills, meet new people and have some fun by coming down to the Campus Center Basement (take the escalators, make a complete 180 and walk straight until you see the "Collegian" sign). Ask to speak to the friendly team of Arts & Living editors: Jen Eastwood, Nikolas Markantonatos or Lizzy Nielsen.

Hope to see you soon.

Very truly yours,
Jen, Nick and Lizzy

September '02

ARTS ON CAMPUS...
A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Friday, Sept. 20
THEATRE: Noh Theatre Workshop. Workshop participants will be initiated into the stylistically refined theater techniques of Noh. 1:30-3:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ for general public, free for students. 545-2511.

Saturday, Sept. 21
THEATER: Al the Hawk's Well and Re-Shaban by Theatre at Yugen & Theatre Nohgaku 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.

Wednesday, Sept. 25
MUSIC : Solos and Duos Series. Duet performance by two of the most accomplished double-bass players working today. Mark Helias has been involved with innovative music making since beginning his career in the mid-70s. Mark Dresser, a virtuosa contrabass player, has performed and recorded with many of the luminaries of the "new" jazz composition and improvisation. 8 p.m. in the Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.
MUSIC : Solos and Duos: Conversations in the Gallery interview with bassists Mark Helias and Mark Dresser (see above) to be broadcast on WMUA radio. 4 p.m. in Augusta Savage Gallery. 545-5177.
THEATRE: Project 2050-2002 Theater performance that explores the topic "How Do We Disagree? Nation/Conflict/Freedom," which is prompted not only by the events of September 11th, but also by the broader questions these tragic events have raised. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511. Through 9/26.
Saturday, Sept. 28
DANCE: Asunder. Dance performance by Yin Mei, and dancer and choreographer from China, now residing in the U.S. Mei blends traditional forms with contemporary impulse. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.
DANCE: Master Class with Yin Mei. Dancer Yin Mei will conduct a master class demonstrating her unique and contradictory style of traditional and contemporary dance. 3-4:30 p.m. Call 545-1900 for location and other details.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House · 545-5177
M-TU 1-7 pm; W-F 1-5 pm

YOUNG ARTISTS:
Images from Israel
Sept. 24-Oct. 18
Reception: Sept. 24, 5-7 p.m.

CENTRAL GALLERY
Central Residential Area
Infirmary Way-Wheeler House
545-0680
M-TH 3-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm

Garden Party
by Bonnie Druschel
Sept. 10-Oct. 6
Reception: Sept. 22, 2-5 p.m.

HAMPDEN GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area · 545-0680
M-TH 12-5; SU 2-5 pm

Omens in Nature
by Oriole Feshbach
Sept. 8-Oct. 6
Reception: Sept. 8, 2-5 p.m.

In the Hampden Lobby:
Incubator Project
Hair Trigger: Sally Curcio
Baggage Claimed: Amy Corey
Sept. 8 -Dec. 8

HERTER ART GALLERY
125A Herter Hall · 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm; SA-SU 1-4 pm

Foundations: Prelude
Sept. 4-18
Reception: Sept. 18, 3-5 p.m.

STUDENT UNION GALLERY
Student Union Building · 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm; F 10-3 pm

Jon Stauber: Sculpture
Sept. 9-27
Artist Lecture: Sept. 10, 4 p.m.

Interior Design
Curated by Alber Bastok
Sept. 30-Oct. 11

UNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center · 545-3670
TU-F 11-4:30 pm; SA-SU 2-5 pm

Liz Rideal: Works 1992-2002
Sept. 14-Oct. 25
Reception: Sept. 13, 5-7 p.m.

Private Eyes: Image and Identity
Works by John Copkins, Barbara Eig, Ann Hamilton, Daniel Joyman, Karin Sander, Mel Segal, Bill Viola
Sept. 14-Dec. 13
Reception: Sept. 13, 5-7 p.m.

GRANT DEADLINE!

UMass Arts Council's first Single Projects/ Events grant deadline is Wed., Sept. 25 at noon. Please call the Council at 545-0202 for more information. We support the arts on campus!

Five College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events.

Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

9/02

UMass Arts Council·101 Hasbrouck Lab·545-0202

ON SALE TOMORROW!
413-788-7033
Special Engagement! Sept 19 @ Symphony Hall
Ticketmaster 413-733-2500
www.rentthetour.com

Star Wars Episode 2: Retreat of the Clones

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

STAR WARS EPISODE 2: ATTACK OF THE CLONES
Directed by George Lucas
Starring Hayden Christensen, Natalie Portman, Ewan McGregor and Samuel L. Jackson

Watching Star Wars Episode 2: Attack of the Clones is alarming and oddly reason enough to like Star Wars all over again. I didn't get the sensation of being trapped inside another world. No, I got the feeling I was watching a computer-generated software program working to create a series of rubbery, static images. Much of the movie is so breathtakingly unconvincing, any expensive production values that underlie all the motion and awe are lost forever in a digital void.

The Star Wars universe lives both in myth and unbridled fantasy, but Episode 2 is neither. It's a computer-generated void that is only as real as the technology that created it. Sure, it's impressive, but it's the same old recycling of tired old tricks. It's the same old gimmicks that have come and gone since the days of Buck Rogers. Wrong era, the movie is a throwback to the '50s serial that has outlived its usefulness.

The success of the original trilogy has spoiled us, and now it has us by the throat. The original trilogy has become the standard by which all other sci-fi films are judged. It's not surprising that so many amazing movies have come and gone since it was because George Lucas created a fully realized vision – a breathtakingly real universe that you could practically imagine visiting. Tatooine. Lucas rumbly sheated a brand new universe building a grand mythology from the ground up; the gods and monsters were fully fleshed out creations. Sure Mark Hamill's Luke Skywalker was a bit too callow, and the plot was really an update of those old B-serials that Lucas grew up with. But the true, honest spirit of imagination was alive coursing through the movies like an electrical current and gassing the audience with a new form of communal movie-going excitement.

But now, Lucas has become too hardwired into the technology he helped pioneer – the magician has become a technician. Always a wizard of the state of the art, Lucas weaves together breathtaking vistas, gourmet eye candy that dazzles and glitters and shines. Yet there's a sterility at work here, a sense that Lucas has let the magic grow impotent so he can display his newest breakthroughs. It's the summer movie as computer expo propaganda.

The movie takes place about ten years after the action of Phantom Menace. Anakin Skywalker (Hayden Christensen), the one destined to be Darth Vader, is now a petulant teenaged brat chafing under the mentorship of Obi-Wan Kenobi (a dull Ewan McGregor) and the strict rules of being a Jedi. He's forbidden to love, but when he is reunited with the former queen, now Senator, Padme Amidala (Natalie Portman, displaying all the dexterity of oak), he falls instantly in... puppy lust. The romance between Anakin and Padme is wan and seems destined to be one of the least exciting romances of the year. Christensen, who plays Anakin as a whiny ninth grader, and Portman have zero chemistry. Their awkward "love" scenes consist of one painfully outmoded howler after another. It doesn't help that neither actor comes off all that particularly good; these two talented young actors seem like pretty young mannequins dragged in off the street.

The conspiratorial plotline that will launch the story of the battles between the Federation and the rebel forces doesn't resound any better. Unlike the other installments, there is no eminently quotable dialogue; every line of dialogue is perfunctory – a conduit to pass exposition and information, but not emotion. The results are akin to watching C-SPAN guessed up with the best of special effects.

Attack of the Clones manages to engage toward the end. Yoda, the syntax-challenged Zen-Buddhist gnome gets to engage in a magnificent lightsaber duel with the great Christopher Lee, as the villainous Count Dooku. Lee, with his heavy, regal presence, could teach the young'uns a thing or two. There is also a great chase through a robot factory, a duel in the rain on a planet of water and an epic fight in a coliseum. Lucas, at least, still knows how to stage an action scene without resorting to MTV fed bells and whistles. Too bad that all the rah-rah spectacle gets weighed down by the plodding dialogue and the fact that anything remotely human gets shut out for Lucas's obsession with pushing the effects envelope.

Big boom: creature attack in Star Wars Episode 2

Stitch holds it together

By Dan Paladino
COLLEGIAN STAFF

LILO AND STITCH
Directed by Dean Deblois and Chris Sanders III
With voices: Daveigh Chase, Chris Sanders III and Tia Carrere

Let Timon and Pumbaa sing "Hakuna Matata" and dance little pigs in the forest. Disney's new six-armed and floppy eared genetic experiment, Stitch, takes care of the rest. Stitch can stick its feet into its own mouth, roll into a ruley poley ball and crash through anything it sees in splendid Godzilla fashion. How many Disney creatures cause all this havoc, and still win over a new family and audiences alike?

Undoubtedly one of the most entertaining and surprisingly hilarious of Disney's creations, Lilo and Stitch sets itself apart from other animated Disney films with a refreshing sense of humor. To boot, Lilo and Stitch contains a slick character design in the form of a tiny evil creature named Stitch, who is capable of mass destruction and picking his nose with his tongue. Whether it can do both simultaneously remains to be seen.

Directed by Dean Deblois and Chris Sanders III (also the voice of Stitch), Lilo and Stitch plays out the story of a genetic experiment "Project 626," an alien creature that, after crash landing on Earth and encountering the one person in the world who shows it unconditional love, discovers the importance of family.

Of course, this is Disney, and it goes without saying that things get sappy quick – however, the film's success is that it does a good job of balancing humor and a moral lesson. Along with rich water-colored backgrounds and a main creature that is both unique and charmingly destructive, Lilo and Stitch has enough going for it to place it among the better American animated films in recent years.

Sentenced by the Galactic Federation to life imprisonment on an asteroid, the wily Project 626 escapes in a space cruiser, crash lands in Hawaii and befriends a young Hawaiian girl, Lilo. Alienated from her peers and in need of a friend to understand her, Lilo adopts Project 626 (who has conveniently hidden two of his six arms) to be her new dog. Chaved throughout the film by his mad alien scientist creator and a Galactic mosquito conservationist (yes, mosquitoes), Stitch uses Lilo to avoid his pursuers. Given the new name "Stitch," Lilo's hyperactive companion chugs coffee and rampages through as much of the small Hawaiian town that it can in 85 minutes, making for some great laughs. Lilo's sister Nani (voice by Tia Carrere), however, has her own problems as she is trying to maintain custody over Lilo in the midst of losing her job and having her house torn to shreds by the incorrigible furry-alien thing, Stitch.

The animation in Lilo and Stitch is colorful, vivid and impressive to say the least. Lush water-colored backgrounds give the film an original and fresh feel – one even distinguishable from Dreamworks' Shrek. The film's action flows smoothly alongside beautiful depictions of the Hawaiian landscape and beaches. Hawaii is a perfect locale to feature an animated film like this because it lends itself to the use of picturesque images and traditional island music. Besides Hawaiian music, Lilo and Stitch is essentially a "Greatest Hits"

Turn to LILO AND STITCH, page B9

Like Movies? Like Free Stuff?

Tune into channel 7 on campus to see all these blockbusters!
AND EVEN MORE!

HSCN will be in the campus center with:

» FREE giveaways!
» a GRAND PRIZE drawing!

Sunday Sep. 1st 10am to 4pm
Monday Sep. 2nd 10am to 4pm

MTV|2
CCTV New Channels!

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

It's High Tide with Blue Crush

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BLUE CRUSH
Directed by John Stockwell
Starring Kate Bosworth, Michelle Rodriguez and Matthew Davis
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Most surf movies just want us to wallow in the spectacular glory of the sport, but Blue Crush, a surf movie of unusual power, puts us right there – right in the roiling, raging waters.

We see waves rise up out of the ocean, great aqua walls towering 30 feet in the air, and then we see them collapse into curling pipelines, a lone surfer threading her way through the eye to avoid being crushed by that crashing pile. When the inevitable happens – the ocean swallows that surfer – the camera plunges right into the undertow, into another alien world. Thunderous rumbles roar past our ears, foam envelops our sight, and we get thrust into a liquid vortex as beautiful as it is deadly.

The surf scenes in Blue Crush are both terrifying and spectacular, both seductive and frightening. They invite us not only to experience the thrill of surfing, but to live in the moment – to know, firsthand, the adrenaline-rush kick and the awesome danger. And the scenes add juice to a teen sports film that is already smarter than the "chicks-on-boards" ads suggest it is.

The plot of Blue Crush is pure formula – an end-of-summer revel in sun, surf and hot bods. It's "will-she-overcome-her-fears" drama, complete with a tormented heroine and big game finish, the kind of sports film that started growing moldy in the '60s. What keeps it from sinking under the many dusty clichés of the genre is director John Stockwell's restraint and ability to breathe fresh new life into those dusty cliches.

Hawaiian surfer chick Anne Marie (Kate Bosworth, Remember The Titans) was a junior competitor before a wave nearly killed her, pushing her underwater and headfirst into a coral reef. Three years later, she's a wild card entry in a woman's only pipeline competition. But that nearly fatal accident still haunts her, and she can barely bring herself to take on the waves, to conquer those fluid behemoths. Can she surmount her uncertainties and do what she was born to do?

Wisely the movie doesn't suggest that the surfing life consists of nothing but endless days (and endless summers) of hanging out at the beach and paddling into the ominous sapphire carpet. Anne Marie and her friends, laidback Lena (newcomer Sanoe Lake) and tough girl Eden (Michelle Rodriguez) eke out a living as maids in a posh hotel, living in a crumbling beach shack and raising Anne Marie's rebellious 14-year-old sister Penny. Stockwell, who co-wrote the script (based on Susan Orlean's magazine article "Surf Girls of Maui"), deftly sketches in the lives of these girls and knows enough about the art form to avoid emotionally manipulating the audience (Anne Marie's mother, for example, ran away to Las Vegas, but we are spared a teary reunion).

With a week until the competition, Anne Marie meets and falls for Matt, a hunky, nice-guy NFL star (Matthew Davis of Legally Blonde). Blue Crush trumps up the romance a tad too much – is Matt really such a nice guy? – but it has a sweetness most modern romances have long ago lost. The smartest move the movie makes is to not turn into a guys versus girls, or even girls versus girls melodrama. Instead, it portrays the inner turmoil of Anne Marie, the competition with herself, and it makes for far richer drama.

Bosworth is a find. She's got the looks of a typical blonde girl actress – the generically pretty all-American cover girl – but she has real talent. She turns Anne Marie from a string-bikinied Barbie doll into a real human being. She's a standout in an excellent cast, though Rodriguez is in danger of becoming a presence rather than an actress – this generation's sexy tough chick.

But it's the waves, those looming, mountainous, cascading walls of water that make Blue Crush. Stockwell, working with the panoramic cinematography of David Hennings, puts us right there, with shots so tactile that it seemed like I could reach out and skim my fingers against the rippling waves. The stunts and scenery in Blue Crush are truly glorious. They have that vital element of connection, of actually becoming one with the audience. After a summer that consisted of one hollow, big-budget vehicle after another – from Men in Black 2 to the ludicrous XXX – that may be the most special effect of them all.

Awesome waves make Blue Crush a visual marvel.

Powers

...continued from page B1

Mike Meyers shines in Austin Powers in Goldmember, but for how much longer?

laborator, director Jay Roach, understood that hanging a comedy on just that one lonely joke wouldn't have worked, so they created further layered jokes on which to build their movie on. In the process, they created one of moviedom's all time great comic characters – a grotesque, hedonistic secret agent man in crushed velvet and a carpet of chest hair.

Austin Powers is no longer a quirky comedic character; he's a full-fledged phenomenon, gracing everything from backpacks to lunchboxes. He's a brand name and with the promotion to brand name, he's lost something: surprise. Powers and his nemesis, Dr. Evil, a bald Belgian Blofeld-inspired villain, (both played by Myers) have now become as comfortable and familiar as old tennis shoes.

Myers, co-writer Michael McCullers and Roach pull out all the old, quoted-unto-death routines with minor new variations. Dr. Evil reprises his famous "shhh" scene with his surly teen son Scott (the great Seth Green). Powers, the Burnaby Street rascal, casually comes on to the girls who cross his path and opens the movie with a candy-colored dance that pays homage to Singin' In The Rain. These scenes lack any kind of crucial spark, and the characters have lost that spark along with them; they have become cartoon machines, assembled from familiar bits and pieces and designed to spit out the jokes we've come to know all too well – it's no longer all that humorous when everyone can recite the punch lines.

Austin Powers in Goldmember is a funny, still audacious spoof, but it can no longer be called shagadelic. It kicks off on a merry note, with an opening scene packed with big star cameos (any reviewer who spoils the surprise should have their license revoked), and we sit back expecting another jolly good time. Then the movie settles in and grows stagnant.

For about 45 minutes, Austin Powers drags, as Austin, Evil and the entire supporting cast are trotted out to perform their bits. These bits are still worthy for a chuckle or two, but they have long past their expiration dates. Is it any wonder that as the movie goes along characters like No. 2 and Frau Farbissina are given nothing to do?

The story of Goldmember is both complex and simple-minded. Austin's father, top spy Nigel Powers (played by Michael Caine, who's Harry Palmer characters helped to inspire Austin Powers), is kidnapped and brought back to 1975 by Johann Van Der Smut (once again, Myers), a gold-obsessed disco owner with the apropos nickname of Goldmember.

Austin hooks up with old flame Foxxy Cleopatra (Destiny Child's Beyonce Knowles), a Pam Grier-inspired secret agent with an afro and bell-bottoms. They travel back to the '90s to battle Goldmember and Dr. Evil, who are conspiring on "Preparation H," a plan to use a laser beam to pull an asteroid made entirely of gold into the Northern Ice caps, therefore melting them and drowning the world – unless world leaders pay them "one billion gajillion ... yen." Oh, and before I forget – the laser beam comes out of the rear end of Dr. Evil's submarine.

Yes, out of the rear end. If the original Austin Powers was a sly, winking satire, and the sequel a cruder effort, then the third time around is a scatological smorgasbord. Myers has a Mel Brooks-ian approach to gross out humor. Urine and defecation jokes have now become the norm for movie comedy, and the films best-suited to tackle such humor have always acknowledged that it is not the gross-outs themselves that are funny, but what you do with them that is.

And Goldmember, as plastic as it is, has several big laugh moments – moments where you long past their expiration dates. Is it any wonder that as the movie goes along characters like No. 2 and Frau Farbissina are given nothing to do?

The story of Goldmember is both complex and simple-minded. Austin's father, top spy Nigel Powers (played by Michael Caine, who's Harry Palmer characters helped to inspire Austin Powers), is kidnapped and brought back to 1975 by Johann Van Der Smut (once again, Myers), a gold-obsessed disco owner with the apropos nickname of Goldmember.

Austin hooks up with old flame Foxxy Cleopatra (Destiny Child's Beyonce Knowles), a Pam Grier-inspired secret agent with an afro and bell-bottoms. They travel back to the '90s to battle Goldmember and Dr. Evil, who are conspiring on "Preparation H," a plan to use a laser beam to pull an asteroid made entirely of gold into the Northern Ice caps, therefore melting them and drowning the world – unless world leaders pay them "one billion gajillion ... yen." Oh, and before I forget – the laser beam comes out of the rear end of Dr. Evil's submarine.

Yes, out of the rear end. If the original Austin Powers was a sly, winking satire, and the sequel

It may be time to retire Austin Powers. Dr. Evil, and the gang. They were funny, and are still kind of funny, but in no time they will pass the line into unexciting and lackluster. They are going through the motions, providing the audience with what they want but not expanding any further. And that's not groovy, baby.

– Michael Caine

WELCOME BACK!

Have YOU registered for online Career Services?

Is this your last year?

Interested in an internship?

Need resume help?

Go to www-ccn.acad.umass.edu !

CAREER SERVICES

For more information, call 545-2224 or see our website www-ccn.acad.umass.edu

Nelly crafts idyllic city in Nellyville

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

NELLY
Nellyville
Universal

With his one-two punch of "Hot in Herre" and "Dilemma" (a duet with Destiny's Child's Kelly Rowland) riding high on the charts, Nelly's sophomore album Nellyville made good on its name this summer.

Growing up in St. Louis, Nelly experienced first-hand the dangers and temptations of life on the street. Assisted by his St. Louis style and slang, he depicts those hard times in his impressive rhyming skills. He rose to fame on the title-track single "Country Grammar" from his debut album of the same name and hasn't fallen off the pop culture scene since. On his fellow rap hero-hits his own utopia and hopes we go along for the journey.

So welcome to Nellyville, an idyllic, if not perfect, city where crack dealing don't exist and even downtrodden looks like the suburb. Nelly's hyper-average everybody jang-a-lang/ Nobody livin' savage, everybody got change/ Even the paperboy deliver out the back of a Range," he raps on "Nellyville."

By sticking to his main producer of old Jason "Jay E" Epperson, the sound on Nellyville remains fresh. A hypnotic bass complements the lyrics on "Dem Boyz" and "Oh Nelly," as the rapper fires off his lyrics like bullets out of a rifle – quickly and consistently. A duet with King Jacob, "On the Grind," is a straight-up dance song. A grunting Nelly nicely complements the hollering Jacob helping the song spark a hyah.

Even the tracks that weren't produced by Jay E, such as "Air Force Ones" produced by Trackboyz, fly on take-off – even if the song is about such a trivial thing as sneakers. The hard funk of "Pimp Juice," which matches a funky bass groove to his smooth flow gives it enough juice to make it a standout number.

To' Reel Entertainment's "Wally" Yaghnam adds some real entertainment to "The Gank," a rock meets hip-hop number that recounts a tale of heartbreak. But it's not the heartbreak you might be thinking of. Nelly's talking about his separation from a stash of weed. Indeed, that's his unequivocal talent – his use of a smooth midwestern drawl and a harmonious musical flow balanced by comedy and wit. He tops this off on Nellyville by enlisting Cedric the Entertainer to inject some hilarious bouts of comedy between the tracks.

After Nelly guest starred on 'N Sync's "Girlfriend," Justin Timberlake returned the favor by appearing on "Work It." But with a screeching and high-pitched Timberlake singing the chorus and Nelly rapping aimlessly, the track would have been better left out.

By now you can probably tell if you're looking for something serious, Nellyville ain't the hood for ya. Moreover, Nelly, like la Rule, saw the next big thing in music all before it happened: hip-hop was the new pop and street cred was irrelevant – the hook, that catchy catch phrase, was everything. And if that bothers you, stay away from Nellyville. Still, Nelly uses his music as a means to rise above the mean streets of St. Louis – and that's music's highest power.

It's all about the good life in Nelly's fictitious world, so relax and enjoy the ride. All's well in Nellyville.

Behind the Baudelaires' blight

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

LEMONY SNICKET: THE UNAUTHORIZED AUTOBIOGRAPHY
Lemony Snicket
Harper Collins Publishers

If you prefer newspaper articles that fill you with a warm, fuzzy feeling of happiness then you would fair better reading another story in this paper—for contained in these paragraphs resides nothing but an account of thankless despair. Turn back now, dear reader, before it is too late... or at least that is the most appropriate way to begin a review on the elusive Lemony Snicket and his tales contained in A Series of Unfortunate Events.

Since the first book hit shelves in 1999 the series has evolved into a New York Times best-selling staple (books one through eight have all made their way onto the coveted list), depicting the miserable lives of Violet, 14 Klaus, 11, and Sunny Baudelaire, a baby from the first chapter of the first book (The Bad Beginning) onward, the three siblings are met with bad news and unlucky circumstances.

The story begins as a nice, normal day but quickly heads downhill as the Baudelaires receive word from a family acquaintance Mr. Poe that their parents have just perished in a fire that has also consumed their entire mansion and all their belongings. This of course does not leave the now-orphans penniless. On the contrary, the Baudelaire fortune rests comfortably in a bank account frozen from inheritance until Violet reaches age 18. However, the children are left homeless and without a legal guardian.

Set the stage for trouble, folks, for things go from bad to worse to unbelievably depressing to unfathomably horrific as various relatives adopt the orphans. The cause for such turmoil? The villainous Count Olaf, a greedy uni-browed man whose signature is a tattoo of an eye on his ankle, who longs for the children's inheritance. Regardless of where the Baudelaires journey, Olaf is close behind at all times, making for quite an adventure.

Perhaps the best aspect about this series, however, are the hidden treasures that can be found upon closer inspection, most especially when dealing with the series' author, Mr. Lemony Snicket. You see, Lemony, we are told, is forced to write down these "real-as-he-is" tales about the children's plight. Readers often get short snippets about his life (usually found at the start of a chapter), only to have him cut short his train of thought just when coming to the best part and

Turn to LEMONY, page 8b

Smart. Attractive. Available.

(We mean the computer.)

Dell University Program and The University of Massachusetts Amherst

Improve your image with a Dell notebook or desktop system. They're ready to go, right out of the box, with 24/7 telephone and online hardware support. Just visit the link below for special student pricing. You won't find a better-looking deal in college.

Go to www.dell.com/sdu/UMASSoffer or call 1-877-246-2889 to learn more.

Visit www.dell.com/sdu/umass/sweepstakes to see what Dell is giving away every day!

Easy as DELL

Dell and the Dell logo are trademarks of Dell Computer Corporation. Dell disclaims proprietary interest in the marks and names of others. Dell cannot be responsible for errors in typography or photography. © Copyright 2002 Dell Computer Corporation. All rights reserved

Britney Bounces Into Boston

By Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BRITNEY SPEARS
FleetCenter
June 29

BOSTON – Watching the hordes of screaming pre-pubescent girls in hot pink tube tops and pigtails sprinkled with spray-on glitter running around outside the FleetCenter on a hot Saturday afternoon, it was obvious who would be performing later that evening – none other than the reigning princess of pop music, Miss Britney Spears.

With the audience being primarily girls under the age of 16, the obvious choice for an opening act would be a wannabe boy band, and that's exactly what it was. LMNT, comprised of two rejects from the series "Making the Band," Bryan Chan and Mike Miller, along with Ikaika Kahoano (who was actually selected to participate in "Making the Band" but opted to leave before O-Town recorded their freshman release) and Jonas Persch (who auditioned for the group at a later date), LMNT served their purpose with their textbook pelvic thrusts and sappy lyrics to drive the young audience into hysterics, and they closed with their first single "Juliet," which they sang to two lucky audience members selected to sit on stage for the performance.

It was a full half hour before Spears took the stage, but it was well worth the wait. The teen queen ascended the stage strapped to a rotating circular wall singing (yes, singing live!) the title track from her sophomore release, Oops... I Did It Again. The pyrotechnics on the stage were reminiscent of the video for "Oops...I Did It Again" with flames shooting out all corners of the massive, t-shaped stage. However, it was the remix of the song from her infamous MTV Video Music Awards performance from 2000. This would be the first of three major remixes over the course of the evening.

The show was a crazy and colorful spectacle and showcased every imaginable side of Spears. There was sexy and powerful Spears during "Stronger," a song that dictates how she doesn't need her ex-boyfriend and how she's better off without him (which probably hits a little closer to home after her recent split with N'Sync hottie Justin Timberlake). A sensitive and unsure Spears emerged during the acoustic version of "Not a Girl, Not Yet a Woman." We saw girlfriend Spears during "Anticipating," which showcased Britney driving around in colorful, crayon-drawn cars with her dancers. And there was even plenty of sex kitten Spears in numbers such as "I'm a Slave 4 U," "Boys," (the Coed Remix) and finally during the finale, the bizarre remix of her first hit single, "Baby...One More Time." The finale involved Spears in her official uniform of a belly baring top and hip hugger pants dancing on a platform suspended from the ceiling of the arena while being drenched with water – quite obviously a reward for the dads in the audience for attending the 120-minute spectacle with their young children.

It was basically what you'd expect at a Britney Spears concert. Lots of visuals to mask the mediocre, but live, singing, lots of the backup singers singing in unison with Spears being the sexy pop goddess that she is. Love her or hate her (because there is no in-between), Britney is an unbelievable performer. She commands the attention of all in the arena for the full 85 minutes that she graced the stage and drove the audience nuts with her spectacular showmanship and mesmerizing dance moves. Whether or not Britney lives up to the comparisons to Madonna, I think she has the potential to haunt the world for many years to come. Whether or not she wants to is another story. If the drive is there, Britney Spears will be an entertainment icon that will be gracing movie screens, stages and televisions everywhere for many years to come.

ASIAN dance and music PROGRAM

FALL 2002

Friday, September 20
WORKSHOP
Noh Theatre Workshop
1:30 to 3:30PM, Bowker Auditorium

Saturday, September 21
PERFORMANCE
At the Hawk's Well and Bo Shibari
Japanese Noh Theatre
8:00PM, Bowker Auditorium

Saturday, September 28
WORKSHOP
Master Class with Yin Mei
3:00 to 4:30PM, Main Studio
Hampshire College

Saturday, September 28
PERFORMANCE
/Asunder. Yin Mei Dance
8:00PM, Bowker Auditorium

Saturday, October 12
PERFORMANCE
Master Dancers of Bali
8:00PM, Bowker Auditorium

Spirit and Soul Series

Wednesday, October 23
WORKSHOP/PERFORMANCE
Japanese Classical Dance
Mineko Iguchi
7:30PM, Karuna Yoga Center
Northampton

Sunday, November 17
INTERACTIVE TALK
Kriya Yoga. Dr. Bal Ram Singh
3PM, Memorial Hall, UMass

Catch the Excitement!

www.fineartscenter.com/asian or 577-2486 for inform 1-800-999-umas or 545-2511 for tickets

New Asia Cinema

Thursday, October 17
Tears of the Black Tiger
7:30PM, Herter Hall 231

Sunday, October 27
Hum Dil De Chuke Sanam
3:00PM, Herter Hall 231

Thursday, November 7
Chunhuang
7:30PM, Herter Hall 231

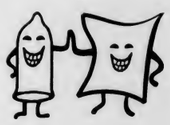
Thursday, November 21
Suzhou River
7:30PM, Herter Hall 231

HEALTH EDUCATION WANTS YOU!

GET INVOLVED! MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

CALL 577-5181 FOR MORE INFORMATION ON ANY OF THESE PROGRAMS.

SEEKING VOLUNTEERS:



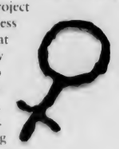
1. Not Ready for Bedtime Players

Students perform on campus on Wednesday evenings. Our lively and entertaining skits address sex, masturbation, coming out, relationship violence and much, much more. Come and Audition on September 18, 7-10 pm. Call Tom or Matthew (577-5181) for details. Theatre experience not required.

2. PeeR Health educatoRS

You've seen Sex Pictionary, Drug Jeopardy, Getting More than Lucky and Life is Not a Stress Rehearsal– now learn how to be a peer health educator! Earn 6 credits in this year long course while learning a ton about yourself and educating others at the same time. Call to set up an interview for a class that will change you life! Call Amanda or Helen (577-5181) for details.

3. The Student Health Advisory Board (SHAB)



SHAB is the officially recognized voice of the student body in matters pertaining to UHS, and participates in the planning, financing, implementation and evaluation of student health programs. SHAB provides input into the recruiting of health professionals, reviews and makes recommendations regarding the Student Health Trust Fund and the Supplemental Health Benefits Program, and serves as a liaison to other student organizations. Call Tom (577-5181) for details.

4. ALANA Health Education and Outreach

The ALANA Health Project is designed to help ALANA students access health care at UHS by providing information, organizing and presenting workshops on health related topics, and networking and collaborating with other organizations to address the concerns of ALANA students. Call Tom or Rani (577-5068 or 577-5181) for details.

5. The Women's Health Project

Come and be a part of a group that educates students at UMASS and the surrounding communities on issues that affect women! The Women's Health Project conducts weekly workshops on contraception in the residence halls, sponsors the clothesline project and eating disorders awareness week, all while having a great time! Independent study credits available. Come to our first meeting for New Volunteers on Thursday, Sept. 5 from 7-8pm. Returning Volunteers meeting 8-9pm. Call Amanda or Helen at (577-5181) for details.

6. Queer Peer Education

Educate yourself and others about issues that have an effect on GLBT people! We are looking for committed, fun and excited people to learn and teach. Independent study credits are available. Call Amanda or Diane (577-5181) for more information!

7. Health Reach International (HRI)

HRI helps international students, scholars and their families to stay healthy while facilitating easier access to the health services offered at UMass by providing information, organizing and presenting workshops on health related topics, and networking and collaborating with other organizations to address the concerns of international students. For more information, call 577-5168 or 577-5181.

Health Reach International Education • Support • Service

8. HEALTHY EATING/ HEALTHY BODIES

Nutritionists are seeking students interested in supporting others on ways to eat healthy while on campus and feel good about their bodies. Students majoring in Nutrition, Exercise Science and Public Health, or those with a strong interest in these fields are encouraged to call or e-mail Caren Weiner 577-5174 cweiner@uhs.umass.edu or Arleen Thomson 577-5171 athomson@uhs.umass.edu.

OTHER SERVICES:

Health Education will be happy to meet with individuals or groups to discuss any health related topic. Come to our new offices on the 3rd floor of UHS to obtain information on contraception, safer sex, alcohol, drugs, stress or any health topic.

Call 577-5181 for more information about these topics or any of the services listed below:

AHEP (THE ATHLETIC HEALTH ENHANCEMENT PROGRAM)

Provides information and education to student athletes.

ANONYMOUS HIV ANTIBODY TESTING

Call 577-5126 to make an appointment for anonymous testing.

CONTRACEPTION EDUCATION

Classes are offered Wednesday evenings in room 302 of UHS and Monday evenings in the residence halls. Contact Health Ed. for additional dates and times.

MEN'S HEALTH PROGRAMS

Workshops on topics such as Testicular Health, Body Image, Masculinity, and more.

MENTORS IN VIOLENCE PREVENTION PROGRAM (MVP)

Our workshops provide men the opportunity to have an open and honest discussion about violence and the issues that face men. Student learn how as bystanders they can confront abusive/violent peers.

NUTRITION SERVICES

Nutritionist are on staff to meet with students individually to discuss concerns about eating, proper diet and weight loss. Please call to schedule an appointment.

TOBACCO TREATMENT SERVICES

Assistance to quit smoking. Individual and Group Sessions. Presentations.

University Health Services • Health Education Division •
150 Infirmary Way (third floor) • 577-5181• www.umass.edu/uhs

The summer's hottest brain teasers: Burning Questions

By Nicolas P. Markantonatos

Is there any way we can say bye, bye, bye to Lance Bass by keeping him in space...forever?

Can the egos of Russell Crowe and Eminem be contained?

Why did it take so long for the Academy of Motion Pictures Arts & Sciences to realize the annual Oscar ceremony at the end of March was held too late?

Why didn't Michael Jackson stand up against the "racist" music business 10 years ago when he was at the height of his career?

Will Mariah Carey spread her wings and fly to no. 1, or will she fail with another not-so-Glitter-y album?

Will the next The Lord of the Rings: The Two Towers be as good as the first?

Does Vin Diesel have enough fuel to become the next Arnold Schwarzenegger?

How does the legally embattled domestic diva Martha Stewart feel now that she's not so perfect?

How does P. Diddy, whose "I Need a Girl" (Parts I and II) were probably aimed at ex-Jennifer Lopez, feel now that J. Lo is dating Ben Affleck?

Speaking of P. Diddy, what makes him think he "invented the remix?"

Doesn't every latest Britney Spears headline (BRITNEY CAUGHT SMOKING!) seem like a calculated marketing ploy?

Will the recording industry's woes end by the close of the decade?

After a drought of huge new artists, who will be the next Britney or 'N Sync?

Is "Celebrity Boxing" the nadir of reality television?

Will controversy-filled Gangs of New York resuscitate Leonardo DiCaprio's once Titanic career?

Will the second season of "The Osbournes" see sky-high ratings, or will a f___ing backlash ensue?

With Baby Girl's influence everywhere, doesn't the music world feel so empty without the sensuous grooves of the late Aaliyah?

■ Signs

continued from page B1

breakthrough film, The Sixth Sense, crashed parlor trick. It was creepy and surprisingly powerful especially by the gifted Haley Joel Osment, and emotionally affecting. Yet Shyamalan followed by working towards his now famous twist ending rather than towards building a fully realized narrative. Luckily for him, the house of cards didn't collapse. The movie would've turned into its own implosion of the all flash, no substance sector of Eric Rohmer, and the movie continued to be appealing on subsequent viewings.

The same can be said for the glum and morose Unbreakable, a dour meditation on superheroes that wasn't very rewarding on the first go round. It too had a twist ending (one that was all too predictable), but it was a slog through pretentious misery to get there.

Signs continues in the apotheosis of Shyamalan's tailor-made Hitchcock talent. It's a superbly tailored thriller in which every element clicks into place. The movie at times funny, poignant and scary, is a consummate entertainment – a thriller that actually thrills.

When Graham Hess (Mel Gibson) wakes early one morning amidst the sound of buzzing beetles and chirping birds, he can sense that something is wrong. And something is. When he finds his children, asthmatic son Morgan (Rory Culkin) and young daughter Bo (Abigail Breslin) in the cornfields behind his home, he finds something ominous: a large crop circle the size of a football field, crushed into the emerald stalks. There is no explanation for why the stalks are bent, all too flawlessly, into a perfect geometric shape.

Graham, a former reverend who lost his faith after losing his wife in a car accident, thinks that the culprits are practical jokers, but then crop circles begin appearing all over the world. Graham's brother, Merrill (Joaquin Phoenix), a former pro baseball star, and his children begin to suspect that the crop circles are the work of alien visitors and that they are place markers, landmarks the extraterrestrials use to navigate their way to Earth. To say any more would be to spoil the surprise (all I can say is that, yes, aliens do invade).

As entertaining as movies like Independence Day are, they presented an invasion of aliens as a bombastic cheap-thrill diversion – gape in awe and excitement as humans and rubber-tentacled aliens engage in dogfights! Signs, on the other hand, presents an invasion as a human experience. We see the story almost entirely through the eyes of Graham and his family. We experience, as the Hess family does, the mounting horror of an invasion – not a crackerjack, jingoistic us-against-them adrenaline rush of fighter planes blasting away at a new mortal enemy.

Gibson's performance as the tormented Graham Hess, a good man undone by tragedy, adds emotional ballast to the movie. Hess is a man grappling with issues of faith and spirituality, and Gibson is capable of portraying that turmoil internally rather than outwardly. Shyamalan once again gets terrific performances out of young actors, particularly the preternaturally mature Culkin, and Phoenix delivers one of his best ever acting jobs as a once-promising young man cut down by his own youthful confidence.

Shyamalan grounds his movie in human emotion. The major theme of most summer movies is how big can explosions get? Shyamalan likes to layer on themes of spiritual loss and redemption – and of coincidence. He subtly toys with the audience and gets them to think about their place in life. How many summer films do that?

Crop circles were debunked early in the '90s, but they still carry a shivery portentous force. And when Shyamalan uses special effects, he uses them sparingly and all the more effectively. He uses them to rile up goosebumps on the skin, to lodge a lump in the throat. Signs, a subdued take on sci-fi horror of years past, is what suspense should ideally be.

■ Lemony

continued from page B6

digressing back into the Baudelaire's story.

The mystery delves another step deeper when one examines his brief biography and picture at the end of each book. The bio leaves the reader with dozens of questions about this interesting figure, with random phrases such as "Recently, he had to give up on his hobbies due to laws regarding musical performances in mountainous terrain." The picture next to each bio is always of a shadowy silhouette or a blurred back shot of a male wearing a Fedora. We never see what he really looks like, carrying the intrigue that much further. In addition, each book in the series is dedicated to Beatrice, and if the character of Lemony seems elusive, then Beatrice is down right indefinable. All we as readers know is that Lemony loved this now-deceased woman very much.

Lemony Snicket: The Unauthorized Autobiography does a few things for loyal readers to this dismal series: it sheds light on some of the ongoing mysteries about Lemony; it brings he and Beatrice in as definite characters in the Baudelaire story; and it drudges up more questions than one could ever imagine. In short, it is there to keep readers' interests locked on the series for the books to come, and with books nine through 13 on the reported planning table, that's not a bad idea.

The biography is fun from the very beginning, with more hidden treasures and strict attention to detail than any of the tales in A Series of Unfortunate Events combined. On the inside of its dust jacket, it reads, "The book you are holding in your hands is extremely dangerous" ... "Please make use of this book's reversible jacket immediately. Disguising this book, and yourself if necessary, may be your only hope." And with that, curious folk turn the jacket inside out to reveal the cover of The Luckiest Kids in the World! by Loney. M. Setnick, a parody to Lemony's own series.

It then begins with an introduction by Daniel Handler, Lemony's official representative, who explains that this book is a mish-mash of newspaper clippings, documents, photographs, drawings, and personal letters all combined to solving the mysteries surrounding the life of both Lemony and the Baudelaire orphans. Indeed it is, and as such, the book can be examined in any order and is probably best read alongside one's rereading of the A Series of Unfortunate Event books.

So for those already hooked on the series, you need this book to carry the story into a multi-layer mystery in which you become the leading detective. For those unfamiliar with the Baudelaires but who are seeking a fresh new take in children's literature, this series may be just right for you.

Tellin' it my way:

AIM on the brain

I have a problem. It's actually more like an addiction. I spend at least three to four hours of my day doing this. I do it while I'm working, while I'm watching TV or doing homework, and even while I'm in a class that has access to it. If I'm near a computer, it is the first thing I think of. My name is Lizzy, and I am an "AOL Instant Messenger-aholic."

I leave the AIM program on all day when I'm out. I come home excited to see what messages people have left me. I have a second screen name that only my closest friends know. Sadly, I am not alone.

As a three-year resident on this campus, I recall walking down the hallways in the dorms to see tons of open rooms containing students clicking away on their keyboards, often talking to others who live in the next room. In fact, there have been instances where I have been sitting at a computer right next to one of my best friends, who also are sitting at their own screen, and instead of speaking like civilized human beings, we click monotonously on keyboards. Instead of laughing or expressing emotion directed at the other person, we simply type "LOL" followed by the toothy AOL smiley face.

Now, I think AIM is great for things such as keeping in touch with friends from other schools, or during the summer when everyone's at home doing his or her own thing. However, there is little excuse for talking to your roommate on AIM when you're both sitting in earshot.

The blasphemy of AIM doesn't end there either. As we all know, everyone on AIM is allowed a profile to place quotes or funny anecdotes or even the phrase "hot, sexy 21/F." But recently, AOL users haven't had to stop there. Users can visit the Web page Subprofile.com and create a sub-profile (duh!) to place as much material as they want for the reading pleasure of all those on their buddy list. A user can create quizzes, polls or even have a guest book for people to sign. More often than not, these guest books become forums for people to bash other users under alias names. (Such was the case with my high-school age siblings.) I ask, what happened to the days when people could just duke it out in the parking lot after class?

Even more ridiculous than the creation of a sub-profile is the existence of awaymessage.com. Here, if one isn't clever enough to create a unique away message on his own, awaymessage.com allows the user to choose from one of many categories of away messages – including humorous, silly, laundry cleaning and "makes you think." I'd definitely be curious about that last one. Apparently, there can't be much of a brain in one's head if he/she has to go to a Web site to find an away message that "makes you think."

Lizzy Nielsen There are also programs that exist such as everybuddy.com that can combine all the wannabe chat programs like Yahoo! and MSN with AIM. Like there isn't enough people staring mindlessly at computers and letting their communication skills go to complete waste – this is EXACTLY what we need.

Underneath all this sarcasm and these lackluster attempts at jokes, I'm really trying to ask what is happening to interpersonal communication when we spend all of our time talking to each other on Instant Messenger. I would rather see the glow of satisfaction and joy in my friends' eyes when they are happy rather than some yellow, toothy icon that is suppose to express contentment. The ring of laughter is so much more satisfying than seeing "LOL" on a computer screen, and virtual hugs could never replace a heartfelt bear hug. While my addiction – and the addictions of many out there like me – may not be overthrown anytime soon, it's a good idea to keep remembering how the company of another human being can never truly be replaced by a machine.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian Columnist.

Testino's Portraits worth a thousand words

By Nikolas P. Markantonatos

MARIO TESTINO: PORTRAITS
Mario Testino
Bulfinch

Mario Testino is one of fashion's most elegant photographers – and that's saying a lot, given his sense of style is second to none for great personalities. He has helped chisel some of the most recognizable images in our collective consciousness. Countless photos for countless magazines, French and Italian Vogue, Tim Testino, born Peru, has become nearly as famous as the legendary models he photographs.

Many of these photos can be found in Mario Testino: Portraits, a book that delves into the mega-A list celebrity of our age – those whose faces (and bodies) are unmistakable. Instantly recognizable features of celebs are due in large part to the craftsmanship of seasoned photographers, such as Testino, who labor over each shot with utter precision.

Portraits features more than 130 color and black-and-white photographs taken from Hollywood to London, including many of Testino's trademark Vanity Fair covers and unpublished portraits from his personal collection.

Although most of the book features single portraits of celebrities, there are several sections devoted to individual artists. One section on Madonna, a close friend of Testino, features several pictures taken over many years including the first photograph of the icon with her baby, Lourdes. In 1995, Madonna, ever the trendsetter, became the first major star to specify Testino as her photographer of choice for a Gianni Versace clothing shoot. This not only marked the first time he shot a mega-superstar, but also signified his nearly overnight rise to the top.

The tenderest section of the book is the portion on the late Princess Diana that also served as her last official photographs. Taken in 1997, the pictures show a relaxed and confident woman at the peak of her beauty. The most astonishing aspect of the 16-page spread is that Diana seems carefree, a characteristic the public rarely saw.

Unearthing the person behind the shining star is Testino's gift, and he delivers that talent like few others can. Testino accomplishes this task in part by capturing celebrities in ruffled up looks bereft of showy ensembles of an unrealistic and flawless doll.

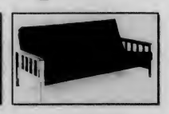
Judging from the relaxed and cheerful faces in Portraits, Testino must be one friendly guy. Stunning photos of models and celebs ranging from Gisele Bundchen to Catherine Zeta-Jones are sure to please any photo enthusiast. And a sprawling 20-page spread of Kate Moss, who is one of Testino's most frequent subjects, is sure to please the eyes.

This book is a must for any photo buff or celebrity obsessed fan. Lacking in Testino's pictures, however, are moods of vulnerability, worry and conflict – presenting an inaccurate world that is free of trouble. And big enough to crush a coffee table and priced at a hefty $75, you may be better off browsing Portraits at a bookstore or library.

BE A PART OF THE ACTION!

HAVE THE BEST JOB ON CAMPUS!
EVENT STAFF, OPERATIONS, ICE RINK,
POST-EVENT, BOX OFFICE, CONCESSIONS

APPLY AT THE
MULLINS CENTER JOB FAIR
TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 2002
5-8PM, MAIN LOBBY



FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL
(413) 545-3001
OR VISIT WWW.MULLINSCENTER.COM

MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Futon Special

Black Metal Arm
6" Black or Natural
(Foam & Cotton)
$159.95

Wood Arm
6" Black or Natural
(Foam & Cotton)
$229.95

Yankee Mattress Factory

FREE DELIVERY

Or Stop In At:
Yankee Mattress Factory Outlet
455a Breckwood Blvd.
Springfield, MA 01119

Order Yours Today By Calling:
413.426.9741 or
Toll Free 888.980.9741

(Across from Western New England College)

Firm Quilted
Twin Set $169
Full Set $239
Luxury Firm
Twin Set $199
Full Set $299

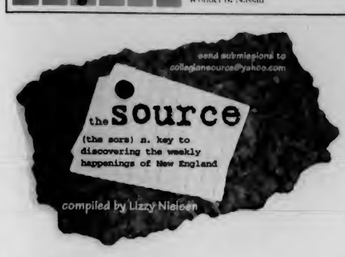
BACK PAGE
1. Port Lucaya, Bahamas 2. Dolphin Encounter at Port Lucaya 3. Nassau, Bahamas 4. Nassau 5. Castaway Cay, Bahamas 6. Mickey pool aboard Disney Wonder 7. Smoke stack aboard Disney Wonder 8. Nassau

ABOVE
1. Atlantis Hotel and Casino at Paradise Island, Bahamas 2. "The Main Event" stage show, the Disney Wonder's initial sail-away party 3. Disney Wonder docked at Disney-owned Castaway Cay, Bahamas 4. Disney Wonder Aft

■ cruise

continued from page B10

Upon boarding the ship, one entered the atrium. This was the main room of the vessel and by far the most elegant. It was three decks high, and in the center of the ceiling appeared an amazing chandelier. And this was not just any old chandelier. On the contrary, it was made of brightly colored blown glass to create a picturesque mass of what looked like dozens of flowers growing upside down. In my travels, only the lobby ceiling of the Bellagio Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas has created a masterpiece to rival its beauty and technique.



"I had seen it in dozens of pictures, of course, and on countless television commercials—even on billboards and in models around Disney World. But my awe lingered on anyway. There it was floating in front of me, so plainly and yet so wondrous. And its name suited it well. That's for sure. It was the Disney Wonder."

Nightly, I would soon realize, this would be the room where families would line up to have professional portraits taken, either with varied back drops lining the area or with Disney characters that stood in front of each of the two royal blue carpeted stair cases that became another one of the room's focus points.

The ship had everything one could ask for on a vacation. Three pools lined its ninth floor. The Walt Disney Theater brought in live entertainment nightly. Route 66 consisted of three various themed nightclubs. A spa headed the front of the ship. And areas for child care seemed to be everywhere to provide parents with a way to escape for a little alone time of their own.

If the ship itself was beyond amazing in detail and luxury, then the ports of call were astounding places that venues in the States long to recreate at every given chance. The Atlantis Hotel and Casino on Paradise Island (right across from Nassau) was breathtaking in every way a multi-million dollar investment can be. Its gardens created an exotic paradise where troubles in the rest of the world truly evaporated from consciousness. The white sandy beaches and picture perfect turquoise waters of Disney's own island, Castaway Cay, created possibly the prettiest place on earth I have yet to see. And the chance to step into a pool alongside dolphin, petting him on the spot and even receiving a trained "kiss," made for a life memory not easily forgotten.

Trips to cities provide endless days of action. Theme parks give us each thrills we cannot experience in many other places. Beaches in the States remind us of those comfortable family trips that are so idealized in the American culture. The Disney Cruise Line obviously realizes this and knows how to bring it all together in one, amazing package. Yes, my readers. Once again, Disney keeps its promise.

send submissions to collegianecource@yahoo.com

the source
(the sors) n. key to discovering the weekly happenings of New England compiled by Lizzy Nielsen

Concerts

SPRINGFIELD – Talented trio City High will perform on Sept. 14 at the Big E in West Springfield at 8 p.m. This hot, young hip-hop and R&B group released their first album on the Booga Basement/Interscope Records label last year. Although the group is a hit with teens across the U.S., City High's rap talents are known internationally.

SPRINGFIELD – Charlie Daniels will also be performing on Sept. 15 at the Big E in West Springfield at 8 p.m. This guitar strumming, fiddle picking, soulful crooning, country music legend mixes western with southern and gospel with patriotic music. In his 35th year of record making and coast-to-coast touring, Daniels has amassed dozens of pop awards including Grammys, Cashbox Year-End awards, and Country Music Association awards.

HARTFORD, CONN – The Hartford Jazz Society begins its 41st Annual Jazz Cruise Down the Connecticut River on Sept. 15 at noon. Featured performers include the Nat Reeves-Steve Davis Quintet featuring jazz legend Harold Mabern and the Afro-Cuban world music band, Insight. Tickets are $55. Call the Hartford Jazz Society at (860) 242-6688 for more details.

HARTFORD, CONN. – Luciano Pavarotti will perform at the Hartford Civic Center on Sept. 28 at 7 p.m. The Connecticut Opera will host a gala immediately following the concert honoring Maestro Pavarotti. For ticket information, contact Jon Fichtel at (860) 527-0713.

Art Exhibits

AMHERST – The Burnett Gallery at the Jones Library in Amherst presents Charlotte Von Glasersfeld, "50 Years of Ceramics," and Carol Bajen-Gahm, "Inner Landscapes," from Sept. 4-29. Gallery Hours are Mon. to Sat. 9 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Tuesdays from 9 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. For more information, call (413) 256-4090.

NORTHAMPTON – The Forbes Library in Northampton presents color photography by Ellen Kotten and photographs by Michael C. Morton until Sept. 7. "Up Close and Personal: An Hour with a Flower" is Ellen Kotten's homage to flowers through the rich colors and intense focus of macro photography. "East Coast, West Coast" is an exhibition of photographs representing eight years and thousands of miles of travel. Gallery hours are Mondays 1 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Tuesdays 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Wednesdays 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Thursdays 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, visit http://forbeslibrary.org.

Shows

SPRINGFIELD – Springfield Preservations Trust presents "Designer Show House 2002" from Sept. 14 through Oct. 13 at 75 Mulberry St. in Springfield. A Queen Anne-style Victorian will be restored to glory by some of the Valley's finest interior designers. Tickets are $15 and may be purchased at the door. For more information, call the Forest Park Zoological Society at (413) 733-2251.

Conferences

ROWE – The Rowe Camp and Conference Center presents "Love or Fear: The Choice is Yours," from Sept. 13-15 at the Rowe Conference Center in Rowe. This retreat features the mind-altering presence of Emmanuel, a being channeled by Pat Rodegast for 29 years. For more information, contact The Rowe Camp and Conference Center at (413) 339-4954 or visit www.rowe-center.org.

Auditions Contests

OWINGS MILLS, MD. – The International Library of Photography is pleased to announce that over $60,000 in prizes will be awarded this year in the International Open Amateur Photography Contest. The deadline is Sept. 30. For more information, contact Christina Baylon at (410) 363-4800 or visit www.picture.com.

■ Lilo and Stitch

continued from page B4

album of Elvis Presley tunes, which may or may not be good news for viewers. Musically, Lilo and Stitch does a fine job of adding depth to the already rich atmosphere of the film.

The animation and playful tunes keep the mood of the film lighthearted while enhancing certain scenes, such as the one that has Stitch dressed up and dancing around like Elvis.

Sound and animation aside Lilo and Stitch is absolutely hilarious, mostly because of its slapstick humor and stark contrasts. A good contrast occurs when a distraught Lilo says that all she wants is to have a nice friend to understand her. The next scene shows a purely demonic looking big-eared Stitch, standing in front of a fiery explosion in the woods – not exactly the cuddly buddy Lilo had in mind. As the movie progresses, it becomes more and more obvious that it is funny mostly because of its sheer randomness. Using books and toys, Stitch builds an impressive replica of the city of San Francisco, only to obliterate his own creation seconds later while trudging around like Godzilla. In another scene, a bulky Ving Rhames-voiced social worker comes to Nani and Lilo's home, and Stitch randomly hurls a book at his face. Something this simple can't be funny, can it? Well it is – this movie pulls it off, as the whole theater burst into a fit of laughter at that point. The kind of laughter that makes you clear the tears from your eyes so you can watch the next scene.

Underneath all the humor and Elvis tunes is a moral about the importance of family and unconditional love, which is ultimately what Lilo and Stitch discover in one another as other characters threaten to separate them for good. Perhaps this is the film's greatest success – pulling off a heartfelt, if sappy, with so much random humor and good times. While Disney/Pixar and Dreamworks are usually tops in the animation world (in this country at least), it's great to see a Disney movie that feels mostly original for once. As far as American animation goes, Lilo and Stitch is one of the best recent animated films made, a film whose morals and playfulness are for the kids, but whose hilarious nature caters to viewers of all ages.

Bring this ad in for a
FREE
Medium cup of Rao's coffee.

Rao's Coffee Roasting Company
17 Kellogg Avenue
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-9441
www.raoscoffee.com

DEPARTMENT OF GERMANIC LANGUAGES & LITERATURES

510 Herter Hall 545-2350
www.umass.edu/germanic

OPEN CLASSES

*All German Language Courses, Elementary To Advanced

*All German Literature and Culture Courses Taught in German

*The Following General-Interest Courses (Taught in English)

-German 297A Crusades and The Image of Islam MWF 11:15
Cross listed with History 297A & Middle Eastern Studies 297A

-German 304 From Berlin to Hollywood (AT)
TUTH 1:00 - 2:15 W 6-9 PM, Screening

-German 365 Scandinavian Myth (AL) MWF 1:25

-German 372 Vienna 1890 - 1914 TUTH 11:15 - 12:30

-German 497A Women in the Cold War TUTH 11:15 - 12:30

-Swedish 110 Elementary Swedish MWF 11:15

flip hamburgers or help produce world-class theater?

interested? come to the Fine Arts Center Job Fair 2002!
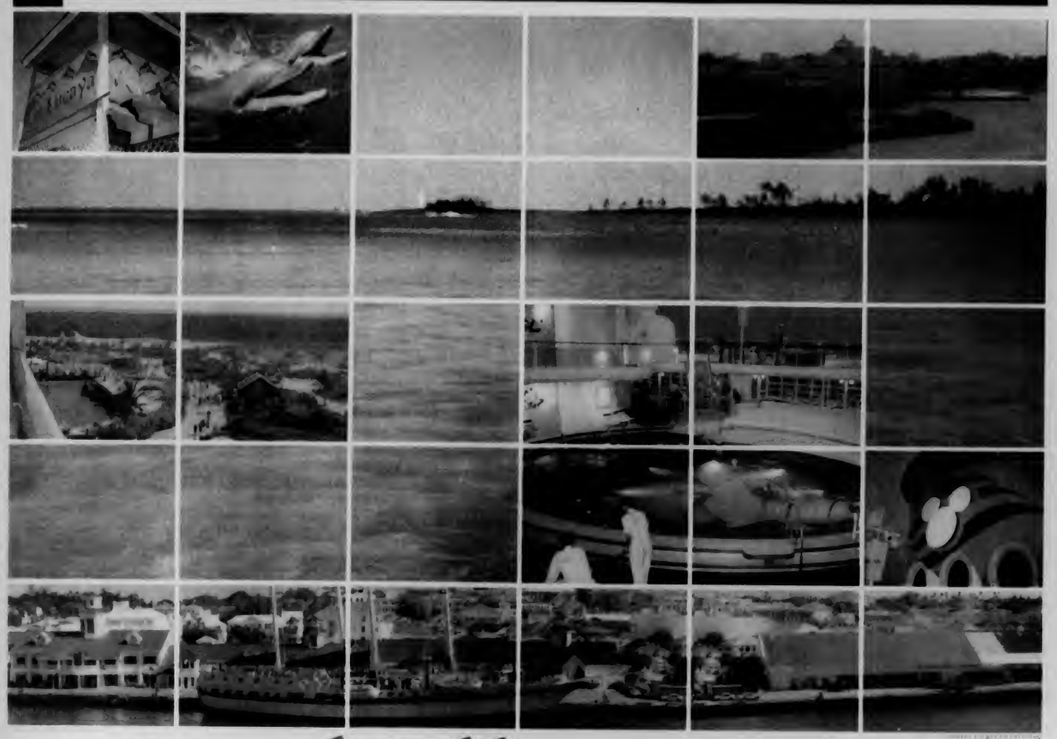
SEPTEMBER 9-11, 9AM - 3PM, FAC LOBBY

The UMass Fine Arts Center employs nearly 150 students annually in all facets of arts and performance management. We need production help, office assistants, ushers, art gallery attendants- the list goes on! If you want to get your foot in the door, or you just want a great campus job, come to the FAC Job Fair and find the job that's right for you! Questions? Call Cheryl at 545-0192.

On the other hand, you may actually enjoy spending your day staring into the depths of a fryolator...



www.fineartscenter.com/students

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

MERCYhouse
it's a church

www.knowmercy.org

travel talk

HIDDEN TREASURES OF THE DISNEY CRUISE LINE

By Jennifer Eastwood

I [illegible] Disney and traveling rank up [illegible] ... Such when I first heard I was going to set sail on the [illegible] approaching summer and travel by three days' on the Mediterranean, I was excited!

The next month and its head to write a feature on this experience. It's a [illegible] ... but of interesting reading for a curious onlooker, I [illegible] ... It's such a piece. I'd have to be analytical to [illegible] ... about cost to get to Disney's. Otherwise no one would end up [illegible] ...

I [illegible] mentally prepare myself to be critical and objective [illegible] ... I [illegible] ... the past July. I was not going to gawk at some [illegible] ... the Disney ... or just a cruise ... or just my first impression [illegible] ... I would reserve my praise for the extensive special [illegible] ... I was going to pick when I was the chance and address my criticisms [illegible] ...

Only trouble was, even with this mentality consuming my consciousness, it seemed I was still constantly finding things worth gawking at—the things that make one gasp or smile in all the appropriate places and times. Furthermore, my hope for a long list of complaints turned out to be a few ultra picky items hardly worth mentioning. It had happened. Disney had got me once again. They had taken me into a picture that practically defied reality. It was a four-day excursion aboard a fantasy world that brought me to ports of call so beautiful that their memories are worth treasuring for all time. I only hope I can do justice in repainting that picture.

ALL ABOARD! WE'RE SETTING SAIL

We drove up to Port Canaveral around noon that bright Sunday in July. The Florida heat was intense as we pulled alongside the tall glass building that stood reflecting the sun's light. Red block letters adorned the building's front, resting comfortably on a aquamine and slating: "Disney Cruise Line."

I stepped out of the car and began unloading some of the bags onto the sidewalk where other cruise guests and baggage personal scurried about in every chaotic direction. I paused at that moment, for there it was towering only a few yards in front of me. It began with its black base and yellow strip. Level by level, white decks rose higher and higher like the layers of an enormous birthday cake. Out of the top, looming over my head, there were two bright red smoke stacks proudly standing. Their white Mickey Mouse emblems shown in bright contrast, making them easily one of the first images to jump out at a beholder. Its overall color scheme seemed so simple and yet so striking and as I found out later aboard the ship, intentionally in tune with the traditional color scheme of Disney's leading mouse.

I had seen a m dozens of pictures, of course, and on countless television commercials—even on billboards and in models around Disnes World. But my awe lingered on anyway. There a was floating in front of me, so plainly and yet so wondrous. And its name suited it well. That's for sure. It was the Disney Wonder.

Inside the Port Canaveral building was everything one would expect from Disney. One mammoth room accommodated everything and everyone. From an elongated row of check in desks to cozy waiting areas with television sets playing old Disney classics, there was space enough for everyone and then some. To board the ship, one had to walk through a circular cutout in the wall. On each side of this cutout stood a large metal pipe, which curved forward and presented another perfect Mickey symbol, if viewed from a distance. It would not be the last one found during my journey.

Turn to CRUISE page B9

UMass icon takes flight over the Pioneer Valley

Adventure seekers look toward the clear blue sky

By Jennifer Eastwood

[illegible] ... the ... of those ... [illegible] ... at the Easthorn ... at Massachusetts. With ... minutes ... [illegible] ... the ... [illegible] ... the ... [illegible] ... [illegible] ... [illegible]

Mangan leaves UMass

Assistant hired at Lafayette

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Minutemen, over which time they went 24-6 and reached the quarterfinals of the NCAA Tournament. Mangan has moved on to the vacant head coaching position at Lafayette College in Easton, Penn.

With his hiring, Mangan becomes the 18th head coach in the program's 76-year history.

The Leopards compete in the Patriot League with the likes of playoff team Hobart, Army and Lehigh, a far cry from the Georgetowns and Navys of the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

"It's the Patriot League," Mangan said. "We don't offer athletic scholarships and the level of commitment isn't as high. That's something I'm trying to change, but we can't make it another UMass. We just have to be the best Lafayette we can be."

Still, he understands that despite its lack of academic scholarships, the Patriot League is still a hotly competitive conference.

"It's all relative," Mangan said. "As good as UMass has been the last two years, a couple one-goal games go the other way and they're out of the tournament. It's the same way here and I guess it's similar to the ECAC in that the schools really don't like each other."

Mangan replaces Bill Lawson, who retired after 31 seasons as Lafayette's men's lacrosse coach.

"I'm excited to be able to hire a dynamic coach who has championship-caliber experience to take over the men's lacrosse program," said Lafayette Director of Athletics Bruce McCutcheon. "Terry brings significant coaching experience and a heightened measure of energy to the position. His hiring is a positive move as we build a competitive-based lacrosse program."

Mangan inherits a team that went 4-10 last season, but returns four of its top five scorers and its best statistical goalie from 2002.

Still, there is a lot of work to be done to bring the Leopard program up to speed with the rest of the league. That starts with recruiting.

"There isn't a lot of lacrosse in the immediate area," Mangan said. "But it is a pretty central location. We're only a few hours from Philadelphia, Long Island and upstate New York. It's just a matter of going out and convincing kids that Lafayette is a good place for them to be."

Lafayette is Mangan's first Division I college head coaching position after two seasons assisting with the offense and coordinating face-offs and goaltending at UMass.

During his tenure, Mangan coached goalie Chris Campolettano and draw ace Jeff Seals to All-America status while guiding freshman netminder Bill Schell to 11 starts and a tournament win last season.

Prior to UMass, Mangan served as the top assistant at Hobart College for four seasons where he coordinated the defense and coached the goaltenders.

He also spent a year at the University of Pennsylvania and two years at Maryland-Baltimore County, both as an assistant.

Mangan graduated from Roanoke College in Salem, Va. in 1988 and was a four-year letter winner as a goalie and captain of the lacrosse team his senior season.

Virginia Lafayette men's lacrosse coach Terry Mangan (center) played an instructional session yesterday at Hurd Coach Greg Cannella's (right) program

Women's lax coach changes shade of red

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

For the past three years there has been a calm, cool voice guiding a team that calls Richard F. Garber Field its home. That monotonic voice will no longer be heard from the bench because when the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team opens up its 2003 campaign this spring there will be a new voice echoing from the sidelines – just what kind of voice it's yet to be determined.

After three successful years as head coach of the Minutewomen, Phil Barnes resigned from the position Aug. 19 to become an assistant coach at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

A nationwide search has begun to find his successor.

Upon departure from Amherst, Barnes released a statement saying, "I would like to thank everyone at UMass for a wonderful experience over the past six years."

"I believe the UMass women's lacrosse program is in good position to be successful in the coming years," he added.

In Barnes' three seasons as head coach from 2000-02 and two as assistant coach under Francesca McClellan from 1997-99, he orchestrated a winning pattern in the UMass women's lacrosse program.

In his first season at the helm in 2000, Barnes guided the Minutewomen to a share of the Atlantic 10's regular season title, the A-10 Championship and a respectful 10-7 record. He received the regional coach of the year honors for his efforts.

In his second year, his squad endured a bumpy season, ending the year 6-10. However, he was able to turn the season around toward the end of the year as the Minutewomen made it to the semifinals of the A-10 Tournament.

In what turned out to be his final season as skipper of the Maroon and White, he led the ladies to a roller-

Turn to BARNES, page C9

The women's lacrosse team will have a new face leading it in the spring as Coach Phil Barnes accepted a position at Cornell University

Best! 2002 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Voted BEST Fitness Center
THREE Years Running!
Student memberships from $95

FREE WORKOUT
Weekend
Check us out for FREE
9/7 & 9/8

Free Weights • Circuit Training • Cardio Equipment • Aerobics • Kickboxing • Cycle Reebok • Step Reebok and So Much More!
All Classes Included in Membership!

Kinetics ADULT FITNESS at WOODSPORTS FAMILY FUN & FITNESS
413-586-0633
317 Russell St. (Rt. 9), Hadley
www.KineticsAF.com

17th annual tent sale
at all 3 locations inventory clearance on all bikes thursday-sunday
sept. 5-8
thursday & friday 12-8 saturday 10-7 • sunday 11-6
30-70% OFF
ski equipment & ski clothing
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS' POLL 2002
BEST SKI SHOP
5 years in a row!
COMPETITIVE EDGE SKI & BIKE
www.compedgeskibike.com
Russell Rd., Rt. 9, Hadley 585-8833
Northampton Rd., Rt. 5, Holyoke 538-7662
Rt. 83, E. Longmeadow 737-7495

12th annual footloose tent/consignment sale
ADVOCATE BEST OF THE VALLEY READERS' POLL 2002
BEST SNOWBOARD SHOP
5 years in a row!
save 30-75%
on snowboard equipment & clothing
friday sept. 6
3-8
saturday sept. 7 10-7 sunday sept. 8
11-5
BRING YOUR USED EQUIPMENT TO EITHER LOCATION TO SELL ON CONSIGNMENT
August 26-31 • from 11am-6pm
13 North St., Easthampton 586-8766
612 North Main St., Leominster 781-5142

Avoiding another nightmare

After 2001 collapse, Rudy eyes resurgence

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Since Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy began leading his troops into battle at the collegiate level 21 years ago, he has lived, breathed and ate the sport. You can now add "slept" to that list.

"I spend almost all of my waking hours and some of my sleeping hours thinking and dreaming about where are we, how things work, what do we need to do," Rudy said of the upcoming season.

But it's not shocking at all to learn that the sideline leader of the Minutewomen, now in his 15th season in Amherst, had already invested so much mental energy into a campaign over a week before the team kicked off at Boston College on Aug. 30. There's quite a bit of uncertainty going into the fall, with a team full of newcomers playing a brand-new system of soccer. Then again, there's more than a bit of promise for this young, talented squad.

"It's such a fresh team, a young team, it's like starting over again," said junior Erin Lilly, who tallied 14 points for the Minutewomen last season, second most among returnees. "We kind of got knocked down this summer. [but it's a] brand new start this year."

"I've never quite been in such a massive rebuilding situation as we are this year. I'm enjoying it very much because it's a brand new situation," Rudy said.

"I've been coaching since 1970, so with that in mind having something brand new is energizing," he added.

Rudy and the Minutewomen, ranked third in the Atlantic 10 preseason coaches' poll, suffered considerable losses with the departure of two first-team and three second-team All-Conference selections due to graduation, and leading scorer Stephanie Santos, who died in a tragic accident in June. With a team overhaul that includes eight freshmen, the Maroon and White's leader has now implemented a soccer style not seen on UMass soccer fields in quite some time.

"I haven't tried this since [former Minutewoman All-American/current assistant coach] Rebecca Myers' freshman year," Rudy said. "It fits what we have; it's a bit of a gamble because it'll require our people to think outside the box a little bit, their box of experience."

He added that the new system is "more of an international way than the standard, clone-like systems of play."

The offensive minded system has already begun to blossom as the Minutewomen exploded for six goals in an exhibition win over Northeastern (6-3) on Aug. 23, and followed it up with a solid performance against Holy Cross (2-1) on Aug. 25.

"Our game this year is better," senior captain Martha Conover said. "We're more possession-oriented, we play with each other more. It's a better balance."

"It's working better...[Lilly] had a hat trick [against Northeastern], we're getting our forwards balls and they're scoring," sophomore midfielder Carly Furman added.

Lilly will lead the scoring punch for the Maroon and White at attack, where Rudy says his team is "a little short on frontrunners although the quality is good." Joining the junior sniper up front will be Alex Rudd, who moves up from her former position at defense for UMass.

Conover and Furman will anchor the midfield in the center, but Rudy says they will have a "lot of flexibility" on the outside. Sophomores Erica Wideberg and Rayney Meisel, and freshmen Tiffany Hamill, Adair Bilich and Preseason All-Rookie selection Lindsey Bellini will all be competing for time in the middle.

The defensive end for the Minutewomen will have new faces all around, as freshmen Sarah Davis, Amy Mafucci, Hamill, and junior transfer Erin Muir will all see action in the back this season.

"We're brand new in the back, but I like what we're doing so far," Rudy said.

But the most interesting battle for playing time could come in the crease, as junior co-captain Kelly Nigh will compete with incoming Georgia high school standout Kristen Rutland for the starting job. The two netminders will have tough shoes to fill from the departure of current WUSA keeper Julie Podhrasky. Nigh played well in her five games of action last season, posting a 2-1-0 record with a 1.14 GAA.

"It'll be an interesting duel," Rudy said, adding that both his goalkeepers have been dealing with minor injuries in the preseason.

The success of the Minutewomen will largely rest on the play of its newcomers, but the sting of last season's late collapse remains in the heads of the team. The Maroon and White were ready to charge into the A-10 Tournament, starting off conference play with a 7-0 record, but four straight losses to end the year plummeted the squad all the way to fifth and out of postseason contention.

"I'm not convinced there was a complacency; I know they went down intense about Richmond (the first of the four losses), and we could have won that game by two or three goals just as easily as we lost it," Rudy said. "That team deserved better because we were better."

"I think especially because we had a very rough end of the season last year and didn't make it into the tournament, the older kids have a lot

Turn to NIGHTMARE, page C5

UMass Women's Soccer Schedule

*Denotes A-10 Conference game

August 30	at Boston College
Sept. 6	Rhode Island*
Sept. 8	Boston University
(UAB Nike Classic – Birmingham, Ala.)
Sept. 13	vs. Michigan
Sept. 15	at Alabama-Birmingham
(UMass Classic – Amherst, Mass.)
Sept. 20	Iowa State
Sept. 22	Auburn
Sept. 27	at Syracuse*
Oct. 4	at Xavier*
Oct. 6	at Dayton*
Oct. 11	LaSalle*
Oct. 13	Fordham*
Oct. 18	at Duquesne*
Oct. 20	at St. Bonaventure*
Oct. 25	Temple*
Oct. 27	Saint Joseph's*
Nov. 1	George Washington*
Nov. 3	Richmond*
(2002 Atlantic 10 Championship – Dayton, Ohio) Nov. 8 – Nov. 10

Erin Lilly placed second on the A-10 last year with eight assists in 14 games

■ Santos

continued from page C1

former players came from across the nation to attend her funeral in her hometown of Ludlow, Mass., attended by hundreds of those who not only knew her because of her talents but were privileged enough to know her outside of competition.

Santos' effect on the community was evident well after her death as well, as over 1,000 people showed up at an Aug. 18 exhibition game to pay tribute to one of the most talented players to ever come out of Western Mass. A plaque was unveiled on the Lusitano Stadium in remembrance, and a ball, signed by all of Santos' teammates, was presented to her parents during half time.

And even through the time of overwhelming grief that enveloped the Ludlow and UMass communities following Santos' death, her passing brought her teammates much closer during the time spent together in mid-June.

"When I came back for those four or five days, I felt like I became closer to people on our team," Lilly said. "People didn't have to say anything, you just knew that something had happened."

"We just formed a brand new bond."

The solid union formed by the team in the midst of the tragedy has not gone unnoticed by Rudy.

"I like what they've done here, helping out, accommodating each other," he said. "A key area, particularly in women's athletics, is accepting the differences in your teammates."

Not since the 1999 death of lacrosse player Eric Sopracasa has the UMass athletic family faced such a horrible setback, and Rudy knows it is extremely important for his players to remain focused on the upcoming season.

"I believe the players need to understand that we are in a tough situation and they have to make it work from the beginning," Rudy said.

The Minutewomen plan to honor Santos as well in a ceremony at the opening of Rudd Field, but the members of the UMass women's soccer team will remember their former teammate long after the lights go down at the complex.

"Everyone loved Stephanie, everyone except the opposing goalkeepers," Rudy said.

"If only they had been able to know her as well."

Information from the Springfield Union-News was used in this article.

For those who would like to send a donation to the Santos Family, please contact:
The Stephanie Santos Memorial Fund
Woronoco Savings Bank
431 Center Street
Ludlow, MA 01056

THE PRINT SHACK

available for all your printing needs

• Stadium Cups
• t-shirts for:
fraternities/sororities intramurals
bar crawls
special events
• Business Cards

586-7133
322 RUSSEL STREET
HADLEY, MA 01035
On Route 9
(Across from Wal-Mart)

The Mullins Center rink was certainly drawing rave reviews from Coach Toot Cahoon - ability to land one of the best recruiting classes in the nation recruits

continued from page C1

Another potential NHL prospect is Steve Iacobs from Cushing Academy. Iacobs, who was ranked among the top 300 North American Skaters by the league's central scouting service before last year's draft, is a load at 6-foot-2, 200 pounds.

His talents are raw but his hands are adept and could land him a spot on the wing of a scoring line.

Iacobs' polar opposite, high school teammate James Solon, signed a national letter of intent last fall. Cahoon calls him the prototypical college hockey player, with the lightning speed that he possesses. Solon's quickness more than makes up for his smallish 5-foot-7, 175-pound frame and could see him contribute as a freshman.

Topping off the list of Mass. forwards is Tilton Prep product Mike Mullen. Mullen is the son of former NHL 500-goal scorer and Boston College standout Joe Mullen.

Mike exhibited many of his father's hockey senses in prep hockey and Cahoon is sure some refinement and time in the weight room will make him a dangerous player.

"We like Mullen's upside," Cahoon says. "We think he has a big, big upside."

Completing the small army of incoming forwards Cahoon has assembled are a pair of forwards from the touted Eastern Junior Hockey League.

Matt Anderson ot the New England Junior Coyotes and Peter Alden of the Capital District Selects have a chance to make an impact from the moment they set skate to Mullins Center ice.

Alden and his 6-foot-2, 215-pound wrecking ball frame potted 38 goals and 47 helpers en route to an all-star appearance for the Selects last season. He'll see time on the wing.

Anderson has the skills of a natural center. He tallied over 90 points in just over 70 games for Gary Dineen's Coyotes last year, good for tops on the team in both scoring and assists. Anderson has the potential to be a dangerous player on special teams as well, especially on the wall or at the point while feeding the puck to the shooters.

Fans can almost expect improvement from the sophomore forwards, most notably leading scorer and Columbus Blue Jacket draftee Greg Mauldin, and fleet-footed Tim Vitek, who added 15 pounds of muscle in the offseason.

To this crop Cahoon has also added three transfers. Brendon Donovan, formerly of the University of Maine, brings with him a package of speed and strength, and should be eligible for the second semester.

Two former Providence players, forward John Luszcz and blueliner Dominic Toretti, will be eligible next season.

On the blueline, Cahoon has recruited an offensive punch that UMass fans have not seen in the past.

Marvin Degon, one of three legitimate pro prospects in the class, can carry the puck with quickness and control. He topped the 40-point mark at Cushing last year, including 15 goals. He was named both Hockey Night in Boston Player of the Year and Most Valuable Defenceman in 2002 and is expected to make an immediate impact.

Joining Degon in United States Hockey League product Matthew Fetzer. The Chicago, Ill. native was a double threat on defence for the Sioux City Musketeers last season and he, like Degon, has the potential to make his presence felt early on.

If Degon and Fetzer are the skill, then Ryan Palmer is certainly the muscle. The 6-foot-3 200-pound Groton native is a horse along the boards and in the corners but also showed a scorer's touch in high school, as he netted 19 goals for Groton-Dunstable during his senior year.

Matignon High product Fernando Fernandez will certainly provide depth on the blueline.

Add this four-man class to last year's trio of Jeff Lang, Sean Regan and Dusty Demaniuk and UMass fans can expect a diverse blueline that will employ both skill and hard-nosed play.

With departure of senior stalwart Mike Johnson, Cahoon has brought in two goalies to supplement the growth of sophomore Tim Warner.

Gabe Winer is the blue chipper of that pair, as he captured a mantle's worth of hardware for Governor Dummer last year, including the prestigious John Carlton Award for scholastic and athletic achievement, which is presented by the Boston Bruins each year.

Also in the hunt for playing time is Williston product Michael Waidlich.

To help with the development of three netminders with a total of one year of experience, Cahoon brought in goalie coach Jimmy Stewart over the summer.

Stewart has a wealth of experience including tenure as Darren Puppa's instructor during Rensselaer's national championship run. Stewart is involved in hockey throughout the Bay State, especially near Worcester, where he spent time as a coach for Holy Cross.

Although not a member of the hockey staff, Cahoon and his associates welcome the hiring of new athletic director Ian McCaw.

"I think Ian McCaw will continue to be involved and passionate about hockey," Cahoon said. "While directing that same passion and attention toward everyone else in the [athletic program].

"He is a fresh, young face that will certainly provide energy."

Lucky for McCaw, his fresh face is accompanied by a fresh, young hockey team.

With only five upperclassmen on the roster and a sophomore class that contributed over 40 percent of the scoring, the road ahead is bright.

What a change from the dark days of yesteryear when the neautral zone trap sapped the energy from the so-called "coolest game on earth."

Still, there is work to do. Last year was another struggle as the Minutemen finished last in Hockey East and attendance figures dwindled. But with this young, explosive team and a coach committed to representing the whole of the Commonwealth, that should change.

And change is good.

Use your UMASS ACUS Service from the convenience of your room on campus and save even more with new lower rates.

- You pay only 5 cents a minute when calling locations within the 413 area code.
- You pay only 12 cents a minute when calling other locations within the state.
- You pay only 15 cents a minute on all state-to-state calls.
- Make International calls? Get the one low rate international plan and pay one flat per minute rate to countries you can direct dial for a $3.00 monthly fee. Flat rate varies by country.
- Along with quality AT&T service, you get customer care at your fingertips 24/7 at www.acus.com. Access your account balance, current calls, rate and service information and much more. You can also view and pay your bills on-line with a credit card or you can pay using your UCard by visiting the UCard office located in the Franklin Dining Commons. Check it out today.

If you need a code to make calls from campus, call 1 800 445-6063.

UMASS AT&T

Junior Michelle Luttati ranked third on the team in scoring last season with 15 points in 16 games.

nightmare

continued from page C3

more drive this year for a bunch of reasons," Lilly said. "Our seniors, they deserve a tournament."

Mentally, the team is prepared to make strides toward a postseason berth. Despite all the injuries and adversity that the Minutewomen have struggled with over the past few months, they are focused on the task of a Nov. 8 playoff date in Dayton, Ohio.

"I think this team has so much more heart," Turman said. "It's a team where everyone works hard for each other."

"Everyone just has that passion this year, and at the end of the season that's what you go with, when everyone's dead and tired like all the teams are," Lilly added.

With that sustained passion from his team, coach Rudy won't just be sleeping soccer, he'll be pleasantly dreaming.

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

MLB caught looking regardless of strike

MATT BRADY

Here in the East, despite the lack of a pennant race, fans are getting to watch the blossoming of one of the best all-around second basemen in the history of the game. Out West there is one of the closest pennant races in recent memory, as we watch a young, underpaid pitching staff lead its team to 14 and counting consecutive victories.

But nobody cares.

Strike or no strike, Major League Baseball has lost the joy and passion of some of its most die-hard fans. It's all well and good to take joy in watching the A's beat anyone and everyone who stands in their way, but somehow, the looming question as to whether a strike will happen or not takes away so much from the games.

It's just not cool to see the guys on Baseball Tonight show me all the highlights from today's games and then hear them say, "unless a strike ensues" every three seconds.

Last week, fans across America got to see a game that they were raised on. While the inpurities of the professional game rang loud and clear from coast to coast, the simple love of the game that was portrayed in the Little League World Series was a sight for sore eyes. From the heartbreak on the faces of the youngsters from Japan following the final out to its polar opposite, the unadulterated joy and innocent laughter on the faces of the youth from a small town in Kentucky, the LLWS reminded us all of why we still love baseball.

Some people do go to games to watch the superstars of today. To me, there are very few things more enjoyable than watching Alex Rodriguez, Alfonso Soriano, Miguel Tejada or Nomar Garciaparra show a combination of middle infield defense and offensive prowess that has never been seen in such volumes.

But still the joy of the game is in the little things, the beautiful orchestration of a double play, no matter how artistic it may be. The domination of a pitcher over his adversary. And of course, the parallel of the exuberance of victory and the agony of defeat.

The beauty in baseball lies in the fact that it is, in essence, the same game that most American youngsters played when they were young. Millions of young boys and girls can remember their first time in the backyard playing catch with their parents.

It is times like these, watching Aaron Alvey completely dominate his peers and then seeing a cut to the audience where a proud mother is beaming, nervous to the point of bursting. Seeing a shot of a father draped in the Japanese flag, obviously half a world away from home, watch his son play a simple game that he probably played when he was younger. It is times like these that we remember why we loved baseball and how it connects us to our parents and to our youth. That youthful innocence is something we all yearn for, and it is exactly why we are drawn to watch the Little League World Series.

While I do see the fact that 12-year-olds are being somewhat commercialized on a major network like ESPN as disturbing, it is nice for us as a society to enjoy for a few weeks a sport that is relatively untarnished by the capitalist society that we live in. It is a breath of fresh air for a long-time and old-time baseball fan to watch people play the game like it is their greatest passion, not a job like any other.

But now that the series is over and the U.S. is back on top after being defeated by another nation for the last three years, it's back to reality for baseball fans. The baseball that we will be spoon-fed on "Sportscenter" and other sports news shows will feature players who are stuck inside a union that has no idea of what reality is like. Donald Fehr? Give me a break. Listen to what the players are saying. Do they really sound like they are that adamant about any of the issues that have been snags in the negotiation process?

This is a union that still holds a grudge against former replacement players from 1994 who have become prominent figures in the majors, Damian Miller, Rick Reed and Brian Daubach have all been excluded from the players union despite their leadership qualities and the fact that they would be a good influence on the rest of the players in the union. The powers that be in baseball are completely out of touch with what is going on in the real world. And it being the only major sport with an anti-trust exemption – that is, it is not a business despite the fact that it is a business – baseball seems to find itself in more horrible situations than the rest of the major sports combined.

There is some reason for hope though, baseball fans. In 1985, the sides negotiated very quickly and were only on strike for two days, and no games were missed. If the players do go on strike again, most baseball fans, especially those within our generation, have made it clear that they will not have the patience to deal with Major League Baseball if another strike occurs.

If games are missed, it will be the third time within our generation's lifetime that we will see bickering between players and owners result in a slighting of the fans.

Baseball should take advice from one of its oldest adages: It's one, two, three strikes you're out, baseball – and this time it could be for good.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

WRITE FOR Collegian Sports.

PENTHOUSE PET Performed at Club Castaway DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX

Castaway Lounge

I-91 to exit 24, south on Rte. 5
Whately, Mass., (413) 665-8733

ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1998

ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1999

Proudly will allow all students over 21 years old

No entertainment charge for students with college I.D. Legal picture I.D. must be 21 years old

Open Tuesday through Saturday 11am - 1am

We are open Mondays for football night at 2pm

10 Dancers • Food • Prizes Given

Apply in person for

Amateur Night

(18 years and older) Coming Soon

•1st Prize $300.00
•2nd Prize $200.00
•3rd Prize $100.00

$$$$$ We're now hiring NEW entertainers $$$$$ make big money

V.I.P. Room Always Available for Private Parties

From 91 North: Exit 22, Make a right, 2 miles on the right
From 91 South: Exit 24, Make a right, 1 mile on the left
From Route 116 North, Make left at the end, 1 mile on left

Atlantis
ENTERTAINMENT
TUE UMASS GREEK NIGHT
WED AMHERST COLLEGE SENIOR NIGHT
THU HIP HOP with DJ PLAYTIME
FRI GROW ROOM RECORDS presents HOUSE ON THE ROCKS
SAT HIP HOP, REGGAE, R&B with DJ TRENDZ
SUN DRUM & BASS with DJ'S COMPLEX & CHILDAN
DOWN THE ALLEY FROM ANTONIO'S

SURVIVAL 101

FOURTH EDITION

Locke Business and Administrative Communication FIFTH Edition

USED SAVES

Textbooks from YOUR BOOKSTORE

Papalia · Olds · Feldman

TIP: Fortunately, you're not the first person to take these courses.

FACT: You'll need stuff.

USED BOOKS SAVE YOU 25%*

LOW PRICE GUARANTEE Ask Me Today!

Look for the Low Price Guarantee and the Guaranteed Buyback sticker to save even more money!

guaranteed buyback this book is worth 50% of the purchase price at buyback, guaranteed!

Ask us about the efollett.com

And how you could win a trip to PUERTO VALLARTA

UMASS University of Massachusetts UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545 2619

www.umass.bkstr.com

Visit us at efollett.com

*over the cost of new

BLUE HENS

2001 record: 4-6 (4-5 A-10 – tie, 6th)
Head coach: K.C. Keeler (1st season)
Starters returning: 9
Starters lost: 13
Preseason rank: 5th

It was a tough season for Delaware without Tubby Raymond at the helm. Head coach K.C. Keeler had an impressive 69-21-1 record at D-III Rowan University, and is a former Blue Hen player, so will have enough act to follow, with Raymond departing after 35 years patrolling the sidelines and leaving behind a legacy with the wing-T offense that was such a staple of Delaware football for years.

But not to fret as concerning for the Blue Hens as they return only two offensive starters from a unit that was just 10th in the A-10 in yards per game last season, especially painful is the loss at receiver, where five of the top six are gone, including A-10 second-teamer Jamin Elliott, number two man Brett Veach and the ever-versatile Buster Prassov. Returning are leading rusher Antawn Jenkins and quarterback Mike Connor, who, as a true freshman last season, was solid in four games last season.

The strength of UDel should be its defense, as the third-ranked defense in the conference returns seven starters, including leading tackler Dan Mulhern and A-10 Rookie of the Year Sidney Haughbrook, who made 68 tackles last season and picked off six passes in his freshman campaign.

Overall, it should be a tough season for the Blue Hens as they try to adjust to a new coach who has not been at the school since he played there. If Connor is solid as the starting role and the team adjusts quickly to Keeler though, Delaware could make a push at the postseason.

DUKES

2001 record: 2-9 (0-9 A-10 – 11th)
Head coach: Mickey Matthews (4th season)
Starters returning: 14
Starters lost: 8
Preseason rank: 11th

Dismal is not a strong enough word to describe the performance of the Dukes last season, as they bookended nine conference losses with a season-opening win against Kent and a schedule-finishing triumph at Liberty. The Dukes were last in the conference in offense (291 yards), second to last in turnover margin, and 11th in scoring offense.

The bright spot for JMU was certainly the defense, which was tops in pass defending and fifth in yards allowed despite being overworked by an incredibly anemic offense.

The offense returns six starters this season, including sophomore quarterback Matt LeGrette, who played in eight games in his first year, throwing for seven scores but tossing 12 interceptions as well. The Dukes also return their top rusher, in senior Brandon Goins (293 yards, 1 TD), and top receiver, junior Alan Harrison (34 catches, 510 yards).

The Dukes return eight defensive starters from last season and are led by senior free safety Justin Rubin, who made 91 tackles last season. Also back is senior defensive end Richard Hicks, who was second on the team with six sacks last year.

This will likely be another ugly year for the Dukes as they have some solid talent, but not a lot of experience with only five seniors and five juniors on the roster late in the preseason.

WILDCATS

2001 record: 4-7 (2-7 A-10 – 10th)
Head coach: Sean McDermott (4th season)
Starters returning: 12
Starters lost: 9
Preseason rank: 10th

The Wildcats were quite unimpressive last year and few expect any more from them this season.

The offense consists of two quality playmakers in running back Stephan Lewis, who rushed for 1,390 yards and 14 touchdowns last year, and receiver Michael Taylor, who caught 57 balls for 780 yards and five scores last year.

Lewis was named as one of the 16 players on the "Payton Watch" list. He is now a candidate for the 2002 Walter Payton Award, given to the top offensive player in I-AA.

Quarterback Mike Granieri saw limited action last year, but did complete five out of six passes for 105 yards and a touchdown in a 35-24 win over Massachusetts last year. No. 15 was named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week for his efforts.

The New Hampshire defense struggled last year. The squad finished 11th in the conference in pass defense (261 ypg). The lone bright spot in the unit last year was the play of defensive back Aaron Thomas. The freshman ranked sixth in the A-10 with four interceptions – the highest total for a UNH player since 1998.

ATLANTIC 10 FOOTBALL

Preseason poll results:

William & Mary
Maine
Massachusetts
Hofstra
Delaware
Villanova
Richmond
New Hampshire
Rhode Island
Northeastern
James Madison

MAINE

2001 record: 9-3 (7-2 A-10 – tie, 1st)
Head coach: Jack Cosgrove (10th season)
Starters returning: 15
Starters lost: 7
Preseason rank:

Last [illegible] offense, defense, ranked [illegible] one of 19 [illegible] first [illegible] Northern Iowa.

The Black [illegible] almost part, as its top two receiv[illegible]downs) and Paris Minor (58 catches, [illegible] junior seasons. Also returning in senior qu[illegible] an impressive 23-10 touchdown to intercep[illegible] Bears will greatly miss A-10 second-teamer R[illegible] nearly 120 yards per game last season. That [illegible] Henry as the team's top returning running back, [illegible] limited action last year.

The defense returns seve[illegible]10 Defensive Co-Player of the Year Stephen Cooper, w[illegible], three interceptions and six sacks last season from the linel[illegible] A big loss for the team will be Lofa Tatupu, who left the team [illegible], making 67 tackles, three picks and four sacks with him.

If Maine can bolster a running attack, the offense should be solid enough to be one of the top teams in the conference, and Cooper will make sure that the defense is solid once again. It will be a shock if the Bears are not competing for the A-10 championship toward the end of the year.

RHODE ISLAND

2001 record: 5-6 (4-5 A-10 – 6th)
Head coach: Don Brown (3rd season)
Starters returning: 14
Starters lost: 8
Preseason rank:

Coach D[illegible] while the young offe[illegible] leading rusher, L.J. McKanas has graduated, [illegible] Gaulli and Adam Browne. Under[illegible] will be tasked to fill those roles. Expect sophomore Mike Gentner to [illegible] and freshman Anthony Riley to become the [illegible].

A strong offe[illegible] serve for the young backfield. The [illegible] year, fewest in the Atlantic 10.

Northeastern may [illegible] the Atlantic 10 this season. Sophomore [illegible] had a tremendous freshman season, posting [illegible] second on the team), nine tackles for loss and forced two fumbles.

Senior Adam Walter, [illegible] tackles in tackles last year (87) and Joe Gazzola, who missed seven games due to injury in 2001, but led the team with 104 tackles in 2000, will [illegible] at linebacker. This trio will keep offensive coordinators up late looking for ways to run against Northeastern.

HOFSTRA

2001 record: 9-3 (7-2 A-10 – tie, 1st)
Head coach: Joe Gardi (13th season)
Starters returning: 6
Starters lost: 16
Preseason rank: 4th

Hofstra will have a tough act to follow after a season where it cruised into the I-AA playoffs, posting the best offensive juggernaut that was seen in the A-10 in both scoring and yardage and scored less than 10 points twice all year.

However, coach Joe Gardi will have a tough time repeating that performance as he lost eight offensive starters in the off-season, including the key parts of a passing attack that was best in the conference. Gone are first-team A-10 quarterback Ricky Butler and his dynamic duo of Rahmal Ray (first team) and Charlie Adams (second team), who hooked up for 120 catches, 2,158 yards and 24 touchdowns last year.

That means that the pressure will be on the backfield tandem of Trevor Dimmie and Vemba Bukula, who were inconsistent by combining for 838 yards and 13 scores last season. However, they had the benefit of a strong passing game to distract attention from them, and chances are that teams will not be as worried about junior Ryan Connelly, who, despite experience his freshman year, only attempted one pass last season.

On defense, eight starters return from a team that was second-worst in the A-10 in terms of yardage. Tyrell Johnson led [illegible] 66 tackles and two sacks are back, but losing so many experienced bodies on a defense that struggled anyway could be quite an issue.

The key to this season is whether Gardi can get his troops to put together another solid season on offense while improving the defense as well. If that happens, Hofstra could easily be contending for the A-10 title again.

MASS

2001 record: 3-8 (3-6 A-10 – tie 8th)
Head coach: [illegible] (5th season)
Pre[illegible]

[illegible] Mark [illegible] losing [illegible] 1884 season.

[illegible] QB Jeff Krohn will be under center this year. The [illegible] the Pac-10 in passing efficiency last year.

[illegible] receiver Adrian Zullo, who sat out last year with a knee injury, is returning to the Minutemen in 2002. He should join senior DeShon Hardy to form one of the top receiving duos in the conference.

New defensive coordinator Tom Masella has changed the Maroon and White defense from a 4-4 to a 3-4. The former Boston University head coach has instituted a defense that will blitz the quarterback from every angle and should create turnovers. Last year, as Louisiana Tech's defensive coordinator, Masella's squad ranked 13th nationally in Division I-A in forced turnovers and 11th in interceptions.

Defensive tackle Valdamar "T" Brower led the conference in sacks last season with 10. He was named as one of the 16 candidates for the 2002 Buck Buchanan Award, given to the best defensive player in I-AA. Co-captain Corey Potter will provide most of the leadership on defense from the linebacker position.

RHODE ISLAND

2001 record: 8-3 (6-3 A-10 – [illegible])
Head coach: Tim Stowers ([illegible] season)
Starters returning: [illegible]
Starters lost: 11
Preseason rank: 8th

Rhody graduated [illegible] All-Am[illegible] and the preseason rank above should [illegible] them to the national championship in 2000. [illegible] 3-8 first season in 2000, to an [illegible] coach of the year guided his team to a [illegible] record in games [illegible] points or less. The team started out [illegible] year, but lost the [illegible] to Richmond, Maine and Mass.

Defensive lineman Marc Hayes, a 2001 [illegible] will Conference selection, will [illegible] should be a [illegible] Hayes made 42 tackles last season, [illegible] Eric Gray recorded 55 tackles in 20[illegible] Gray [illegible] ranked 2nd to the No. 4 rank in rushing defense [illegible].

Running back Luther Green should [illegible] one of the conference's top rushers this season. He had just 28 [illegible] year, but No. 25 showed what he is capable of [illegible] Hofstra last season. Green rushed for 83 yards and [illegible] five [illegible]. Expect him to be the featured back in Stowers' offense and to make a run at an All-Conference selection.

RICHMOND

2001 record: 3-8 (3-6 A-10 – tie, 8th)
Head coach: Jim Reid (8th season)
Starters returning: [redacted]
Starters lost: [illegible]
Preseason rank: 7th

The Spiders are a pure running team, a steady characteristic of Coach Jim Reid's squads. Last season, the Spiders led the A-10 in rushing yardage at nearly 250 per game, but came in last in the conference in passing at under 90 per game. This is because the team's main strength is certainly its defense, which led the conference in both yards and points allowed, which is why a ball control style of the game was more of Richmond's offense.

Five starters are back on the Spiders' defense, led by Cordell Roane at quarterback, who led Richmond in rushing last season and played under center in every game. Also back is leading receiver Dan McNair, who led the team with 17 receptions last season. The offense is led up front by a pair of first-team All-Atlantic 10 linemen in senior Justin McElfish and junior Joe Wilson, who core the driving force behind Richmond's running game.

On defense, Richmond has two first-team linebackers in seniors Adrian Archie and Mark Thompson. Those two were first and second on the team in tackles last season, with 92 and 85, respectively, and two sacks apiece. Also back are Maurice Newbill and Ramon Richeson, a pair of senior defensive backs who combined for 150 tackles of their own last season.

The Spiders need to avoid the 0-4 start they had last year, as they dropped the four contests by a combined 19 points. If they can win the close games, they have an outside shot at the postseason.

VILLANOVA

2001 record: 9-3 (7-2 A-10 – tie, 1st)
Head coach: Andy Talley (13th season)
Starters returning: 12
Starters lost: 10
Preseason rank: 6th

Senior [illegible] Gordon is one of the top two or three quarterbacks in the Atlantic 10. Following a 2001 year, [illegible] 2001 campaign, Gordon was chosen as an All-Atlantic 10 [illegible].

Gordon will have to [illegible] offensive [illegible] the Philadelphia Eagles drafted [illegible] Wentz in the third round. Sophomore [illegible] Hedley will have huge shoes to fill in taking over the [illegible] tailback position.

Six players will return to [illegible] season, [illegible] ranked 8th in the A-10 last year (379.5 ypg). [illegible] against the pass, giving up 242 yards in the air [illegible].

Senior linebacker [illegible] the squad. Young, a third team All-Atlantic [illegible], recorded 77 tackles last year, including seven sacks.

The secondary [illegible] group returns six letterwinners from a [illegible] Senior Chris Johnson. The 5-foot-8 safety led the A-10 [illegible] pass breakups. Healy also recorded 50 tackles and two interceptions.

WILLIAM & MARY

2001 record: 8-3 (7-2 A-10 – tie, 1st)
Head coach: Jimmy Laycock (23rd season)
Starters returning: 16
Starters lost: 6
Preseason rank:

The Tribe [illegible] Tribe, as they will look to follow [illegible] for [illegible] ranking the [illegible] and running first [illegible] one in the [illegible] personnel on the roster, that [illegible] is well [illegible] selected to the Atlantic 10[illegible].

The [illegible] with best in the conference [illegible] season, and with [illegible] the will likely improve for the Tribe. [illegible] has emerged as a candidate for the 2002 Walter [illegible] player to play I-AA's top offensive player. Last year [illegible] scores, surpassed by just 10 picks.

Also back [illegible] Musinski, who amassed 1,393 yards and 12 touchdowns [illegible] backfield, Jonathan Smith, who ran for 712 yards [illegible] players were also selected to the A-10 first team.

On defense, [illegible] five passes, returning them for 157 yards [illegible] first team member as well. Also back [illegible] backs, Paul Carpenter, who will provide [illegible] for the [illegible].

Unless this team falls apart [illegible] season, the postseason is a near certainty for the Tribe, who is the odds-on favorite to take the A-10 Conference.

Signature Service
More Than An Oil Change

The Pub

MASS. OLDEST 31 Years

282 Dwight St., Springfield, MA 01103

413-734-9152

Experience the [illegible] and oldest gay complex in the valley.

The Pub has been a [illegible] gathering place for friends and a place to meet new friends for over 31 years.

The Quarry Saloon is the valley's oldest [illegible] bar.

The Krypt [illegible] is the Quarry Saloon's 4th Saturday (covers).

Satan's Lair is the [illegible] bar around [illegible] Thursday on Friday's, house music on Saturday and [illegible] famous Naked Dance at Midnight.

Underground

The Quarry Saloon
Upstairs Bar
Thur. - Sat. 9PM - 2AM

Satan's Lair
Dance Bar
Fri. & Sat. 9PM - 2AM

Krohn

continued from page 1

in this one. Krohn was unhappy with the coaching change at ASU following his freshman year and decided to transfer early in his sophomore year.

"I played for [new coach Dirk Koetter] for one season and it just didn't work out," Krohn said.

Krohn doesn't like to discuss the specifics of last season's problems, but would admit that it was a tough season, especially since he suffered through some health issues.

"It was frustrating because I was dealing with injuries," Krohn said. "I started off the season really well and I was playing really good. Then I broke my foot against UNL and things just started rolling downhill from there. Then it all happened at the end of the season with me and the coach and leaving and everything. It was a pretty frustrating year."

He ended up throwing for 1,942 yards and 19 touchdowns while leading the conference in passing efficiency.

Imagine what he could do in a relaxed system.

Because Koetter redshirted as a walk-on in his first year with the Sun Devils, he couldn't sit out another season with out losing a year of eligibility. Therefore, he had to transfer to Division I-AA, where he could play right away. He knew Coach Whipple because of a connection between UMass' boss and Krohn's high school coaches. Coach had recruited the QB out of high school, but Krohn declined because he wanted to prove that he could make it at ASU.

According to Krohn, it didn't take much convincing from Whipple to get him to UMass the second time around.

"I decided to come here because Coach Whipple's from Arizona and knew my high school coaches and everything," Krohn said. "I really liked him and I decided to take a trip out here and really liked it, so I decided to come."

Krohn needed to go under the knife, so he didn't waste any time mulling things over.

"I was having shoulder surgery right after last season so I just made my decision quick," he said. "I just decided to come here right away."

The injury occurred last season in a game against Washington St. Don't ask Krohn how it happened, because he doesn't remember. He was unable to throw for about four months after having surgery on his labrum and rotator cuff.

Not that Maroon and White fans should worry about their newest savior's arm.

"I'm better than I was before," Krohn said. "I throw better now than I did before."

***

Krohn is making his way to the stands, where he'll give interviews to the press. Nearly every single journalist present at media day follows him up the stairs. The team's new QB is first on each of their must-interview lists.

Krohn turns around and leans against the railing. A herd of large men would scare most people, but, hey, it happens to him every gameday. He smiles and shakes hands with each member of the press. The writers introduce themselves to him. He introduces himself to each one, as if any of them were unaware of to whom they were talking.

He begins comparing the weather in Massachusetts to the weather in Arizona.

"I don't like the humidity as much," Krohn said. "I'm used to the dry heat in Arizona. It's beautiful right now and I can't wait to see leaves actually change colors. I've never seen that before."

Krohn is grinning as he answers each question posed to him. Many players aren't comfortable being around the press. Some are worried they may be taken out of context; others are embarrassed by the attention and certain razzing from teammates that comes with it. Not only does Krohn not seem to mind answering the questions, it looks like he actually enjoys the banter.

When talking about the decision to transfer, Krohn mentions that he switched high schools three different times.

"I kind of mix it up every couple years," he said.

The writers eat this up.

He admits that the decision to transfer to a I-AA school wasn't very popular with his friends and teammates.

"A lot of the guys on the team didn't want me to leave," Krohn said, serious for a moment. "It was a decision I had to make and they all supported it. I'm going to miss playing with them because I love those guys. We all respected each other and everything, but it's fun here too."

He also doesn't believe that the change will hurt his chances of moving on to the NFL.

"I think that I'll be able to," Krohn said. "Barring any injuries and I've got to have a couple good seasons. I think I have the ability to do it."

Krohn is asked about his family and points out that his parents weren't thrilled about the idea to transfer either.

"My parents were kind of against it at first," Krohn said. "They supported me 100 percent once I made my decision. I think now they see it's a real good situation for me so they're happy that I did make it."

Not that any of this wavered his decision at all.

"I kind of make decisions on my own," he said. "I don't really take advice. Maybe it's just my stubbornness."

He mentions that he was born in Canada because his father played quarterback in the CFL and then figures he should point out that his father quarterbacked at ASU's rival, University of Arizona. An interesting tidbit only improved by his follow up.

"I beat his career statistics for passing (at U of A) in two years," beamed Krohn, who admitted that his dad, Jim, was more of a running QB. Son also admits that his parents probably miss him now. Well, his mom at least.

"I know my mom misses me a lot," Krohn said. "I think my dad was ready to get me out of there. I spent too much of his money."

"They're going to come out for every game still."

Krohn's closeness to his father is obvious. He has always played QB, just like his dad, clearly enjoys busting his pop's chops, and remains in constant contact with him.

"I talk to [my dad] just about every day," Krohn said. "After every practice, really."

He's up for talking about anything, but Krohn's favorite topic for discussion is the 2002 Minutemen.

"I've got a chance to play with some awesome talent at this school," Krohn said. "It's comparative to any D1 school that I've seen or played against. I don't expect much change, other than crowd sizes."

Such a change, in fact, that the season's total attendance numbers at McGuirk (the year may not match one game at ASU's Sun Devil Stadium 173,656).

Krohn doesn't expect to detect the difference.

"I never even noticed crowds before," he said. "You really don't hear them when you are playing. I don't know if that will be an adjustment."

One adjustment Krohn eased into right away was a leadership role with the Minutemen.

"I think I've [adjusted to the role] pretty quickly," he said. "I'm not trying to come in here and be a hotshot guy. I'm just a down to earth guy. I don't really think of myself as high at all. I just try to mess around with everybody and have fun with guys and just show them that I'm the same as everyone else."

"The guys look him in the eye and it's his huddle," Coach Whipple said. "He steps in and there is no B.S. He gives everybody confidence. He makes throws that we haven't had anybody here make and that makes the receivers better."

He's also sparked interest in the UMass fan base. There is even a billboard announcing his arrival on I-91 in Springfield. Krohn accepts the expectations.

"There are a lot of expectations. Everyone is looking for us to do great things. I don't really worry about it. I'm just going to have fun. I think we'll win games, so I'm just going to have fun with it."

Whipple doesn't expect the attention to become a distraction for his QB mostly because he's dealt with it before.

"You guys were all over him and that's good," Whipple told the press. "He's been there; he's done it before so [he's got] experience with the media. He's having fun and he's ready to go."

The excitement over Krohn's arrival is compounded by the return of wide receiver Adrian Zullo, the school's all-time record holder in career receptions (135), career receiving yards (2,130), and career touchdown receptions (23), from a knee injury that kept him sidelined for the 2001 season.

Whipple has high expectations for the duo.

"Catches, yards, and touchdowns."

The duo has set the bar high for this season, as evidenced by Krohn's only goal for the season.

"Just to win a national championship," he said. "I don't really set any goals other than that. If you just focus on that, everything will take care of itself."

Krohn and Zullo sing each other's praises.

"We know that if we both execute it will be a fun season," Krohn said of Zullo.

Zullo admitted that he was thrilled when Coach Whipple informed him of Krohn's decision to transfer.

"[I'm] very excited," Zullo said. "[Coach] showed me the film and told me the stats and I just started thinking, 'maybe we have another Bankhead here.'"

A comparison to the QB who led the Minutemen to a National Championship is high praise around these parts, but even Bankhead never excelled against the kind of competition that Krohn cut his teeth on as an underclassman.

He's not from around here. He has never seen leaves change colors before. But don't be surprised if, some day, a UMass player says, "Maybe we have another Jeff Krohn here."

Jeff Krohn has the potential to become one of the top QBs in UMass history.

Adrian Zullo's return from injury gives Krohn one of the best receiving cores in I-AA to throw to.

Warehouse Sale
Discounted up to 70%

September 9 through September 13, 2002
Monday - Thursday 9am - 9pm
Friday 9am - 5pm

free admission open to the public

Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
200 Commonwealth Avenue
Amherst, MA 01003

We accept VISA, MasterCard, American Express®, J.Crew credit cards, cash, and personal checks (with proper identification)

Directions: Route 9 to Route 116 North. Head North on Route 116 for approximately one mile to first exit (University of Massachusetts). Turn right onto Massachusetts Avenue, then left onto Commonwealth Avenue. The Mullins Center will be on the left.

J.CREW

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club

The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446

Semester Special $179

Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special
($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt

- FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
- AQUA AEROBICS
- CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
- CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
- FULL COURT BASKETBALL
- VOLLEYBALL
- INDOOR TENNIS
- YOGA
- AEROBICS • STEP
- JACUZZI • SAUNAS
- CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT

MasterCard VISA

'T' up for Buchanan

Brower seeks I-AA's top defensive prize

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

He allows his play to do all the talking.

Junior Valdamar "T" Brower doesn't seem to like all the attention he has been getting lately. When asked what he thought of all the attention he received at UMass' Football Media Day, Brower simply shrugged his shoulders. He honestly doesn't seem to enjoy being singled out.

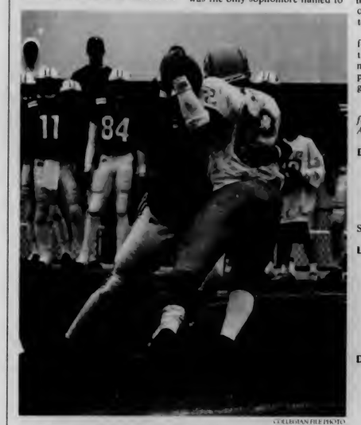
Bad news, T:

You've been chosen as one of the 16 candidates for the 2002 Buck Buchanan Award, presented every year by The Sporting Network to the best Division I-AA defensive player in the nation.

Brower is no stranger to awards. He was named a preseason first team All-American by Street & Smith's, Lindy's and The Sports Network in early August. T also received All-Atlantic 10 Conference Honors.

The 6-foot-5 defensive lineman led the Minutemen in both tackles for loss (24 for 97 yards) and quarterback sacks (10 for 70 yards). He led the A-10 in each category and his 10 sacks were the sixth-best total in school history. He ended the season with 57 tackles, seven QB hurries, three pass breakups, two blocked field goals, an interception, and a partridge in a pear tree en route to more awards.

Brower was named a 2001 All-American by The Sports Network (second team), the Associated Press (third team), and Don Hansen's National Weekly Football Gazette (first team). He was the only sophomore named to the first team defensive All-Atlantic 10 Team and was an All-New England and All-ECAC selection.



T's career numbers are impressive for a junior. The Florence, Mass. native, who walked onto the team, has 114 total tackles, 15 sacks, and 35 tackles for loss.

New defensive coordinator Tom Masella calls Brower the key to his renowned defensive system.

"When you start off with our defense, you need to start off with T Brower, who is an All-American," Masella said. "He's one guy who can beat people by himself. He'll be the guy who sets the tone on defense. The other guys on the line will fall into place, they're all hard workers that make up the core of any defense."

Brower doesn't see himself as any more important than anyone else. The only positive he takes from his growing fame is the fact that other teams are likely to key on him and allow his teammates to make plays.

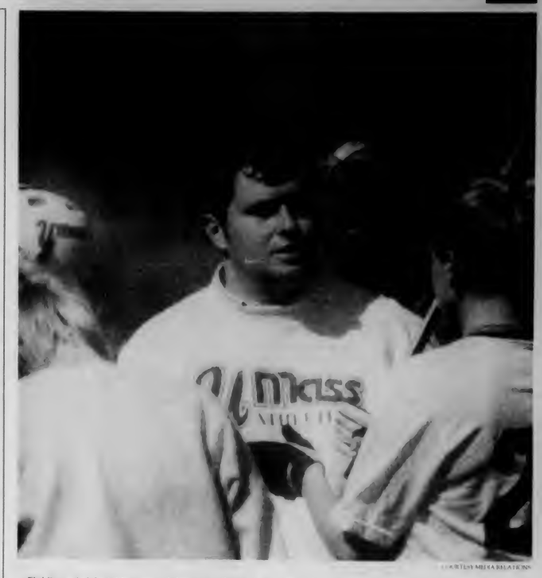
"I think teams are going to focus on me in the beginning of the season and not realize how much depth we have at other positions," said Brower, shrugging off the limelight.

Valdamar "T" Brower (making the tackle) led the A-10 with 10 sacks in 2001.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The complete list of candidates for the 2002 Buck Buchanan Award:

Defensive Line



D.J. Bleisath – Tennessee Tech
T Brower– Massachusetts
Josh Jeffries – Appalachian St.
F. Pesqueira–Georgia Southern Ahmad Willis – Northwestern St.

Linebacker

Dante Balestracci – Harvard
Stephen Cooper – Maine
Erik Dandy – W. Kentucky
Dan Mulhern – Delaware
Greg Pitts – Southwest Texas
Nick Ricks – Eastern Illinois
Tracy White – Howard

Defensive Backs

Chris Brown – Grambling St.
Jon Ambrose – St. Peter's
Hadley Prince – McNeese St.
Tony Tiller – E. Tennessee St.

Phil Barnes led the UMass women's lacrosse to three consecutive A-10 tournaments.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Barnes

continued from page C2

coaster year as they finished up the 2002 campaign with a 300 record at 8-8 and another spot in the A-10 semifinals.

With the Barnes resignation, new Athletic Director Ian McCaw has been thrown right into the fire, as he must find a new commander-in-chief before preseason practices start in February.

"We appreciate Coach Barnes' contributions to our women's lacrosse program over the last six years, and wish him the best as he pursues his professional and academic goals at Cornell," McCaw said. "I know he was very committed to attaining a graduate degree and Cornell is a fine institution where he can achieve that goal."

McCaw and assistant athletic director Bill Strickland have started to look around the country for a viable replacement for Barnes. Two student-athletes on the team, yet to be named, will take part in the search as well.

"I have had some contact with the players and they seem good-spirited and ready to find a new leader," McCaw said.

Barnes came to UMass in 1997 after controlling the sidelines of the Holy Cross women's lacrosse team from 1996-97. At Holy Cross, he guided the Crusaders to a 5-9 record, resulting in a Patriot League Coach of the Year award.

Barnes is the current chairman of the NCAA Northeast Regional Ranking Committee and was a member of the 2002 Northeast Regional All-America Committee, so his relations with UMass will surely not diminish.

"He is a great person and he is leaving our women's lacrosse program in a great position, so we wish him very well," McCaw said. "We hope he is as successful at Cornell as he was here in Amherst."

Unisex Hair Styling
Amherst Barbers
NEW LOCATION
TEL. 253-1722
69 MAIN STREET
Across the street from Newbury Comics
Hours:
Mon-Fri. 8 - 5:15 Sat 8 - 3:45
6 BARBERS
Salon Products:
AMERICAN CREW
KMS
$10 and up
Appointments Not Necessary
Proprietors Jim Reed and Terri Loncrini

J.CREW
HELP WANTED
for WAREHOUSE SALE
Sept. 9 - Sept. 13
Mullins Center
UMASS
200 Commonwealth Ave.
MOTIVATED WORKERS NEEDED
AM/PM SHIFTS AVAILABLE
$7.50 pr hr - 4 HOUR SHIFTS
CALL (732) 974 - 4174

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!
PLEASE PARK SMART.

The University community appreciates your parking cooperation.

Valid UMass parking permits are required in all parking lots Monday through Friday between the hours of 7 am and 5 pm (unless otherwise designated as a reserved space or 24-hour enforced lot). Parking meters are enforced for payment Monday through Friday between the hours of 9 am and 5 pm.

Please visit Parking Services' website at www-parking.admin.umass.edu for further parking information.

"THE BEST BAR ON THE WESTERN SIDE OF NORTH PLEASANT STREET"
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
OPEN DAILY 11:30 AM - 1AM
LATE NIGHT MENU TIL' MIDNIGHT
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
LIVE MUSIC
THURSDAYS- BANDS/KARAOKE
SATURDAYS- BANDS
SUNDAYS- JAZZ
1ST & 3RD MONDAYS—AMHERST JAZZ ORCHESTRA
24-26 N. PLEASANT ST
AMHERST, MA
(413) 253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM
THE "UPSTAIRS" @ THE A.B.C.
POOL-DARTS-PING PONG
FULL BAR-A.B.C. DRAFTS-UNIQUE BOTTLED IMPORTS football

continued from page C1

201 pound transfer from Pac 10 member Arizona State, where he led the conference and was ninth nationally with a 153.4 quarterback rating last year.

"He knows the game, he understands it and he knows coverages," Whipple said. "The guys look him in the eye and it's his huddle. He makes throws we haven't had anybody here make."

Another cause for optimism is the arrival of defensive coordinator Tom Masella, who comes to the Minutemen from the Louisiana Tech East-season under his direction, the Bulldogs went 5-6, especially in turnovers forced – they were the Western Athletic Conference's second-best in the nation with 36.

"We have moved to have someone with a more aggressive point on staff. He has all kinds of tremendous enthusiasm and he's going to our defense," Whipple said.

OFFENSE

With the addition of Krohn and the returning Zullo, the offense should be much improved over last year's squad, which averaged just 305 yards per game, eighth in the Atlantic 10. Another area pushing up the offense was the turnover battle, where the Minutemen ranked 9th in limited marks 14 last in the conference with 22 interceptions tossed down by the Maroon and White offense.

Krohn should be a significant upgrade over last year's tandem of Matt Guice and Kelly Seibert. His 31-to-13 touchdown to interception ratio in two years shows his effectiveness, and he will likely improve the efficiency of the offense this season. Behind Krohn stands three freshmen; two redshirts – Greg Scott and Scott Ratliff – and true freshman Tim Day, who is likely to be redshirted this year.

Running Back

The backfield is likely to be the team's biggest offensive weakness this season, as UMass lost both starters at tailback – Kevin Quinlan and Omari Howard – and fullback Pete Cariello to graduation in the offseason. Stepping into the role of starter at tailback will be sophomore Jason Peebler, who slides over from wide receiver, where he caught 17 balls for 231 yards and a touchdown last year. Backing him up will be redshirt freshman Raunny Rosario, who put together an impressive prep career at Lowell (Mass.), and junior transfer Calvin Hunter, who comes to the Minutemen from UMaine. Also added to the mix will be redshirt freshman R.J. Cobbs, who moves to the backfield from cornerback, and is a player that Whipple says has "game-breaking speed and ability."

"Peebler's played really well, I think he's made another step from spring," Whipple said. "Raunny Rosario has kept going on from spring and done some good things."

At fullback, junior Terrence Glover and sophomore Steve Wysocki are the contenders to win the starting spot. Glover, a transfer from Penn State, never saw game action as a Nittany Lion, but ran for 1,132 yards and 15 scores in his senior season at Hamilton West High in Trenton, N.J. Wysocki played in seven games last year, including three starts.

Receiver

Easily the team's strongest and deepest position, the wide receiving core should be a highlight of this season. Zullo will be flanked by last year's top receiver DeShon Hardy, who had a breakout season with 47 catches for 692 yards and three touchdowns, including several gravity-defying grabs. Adding to the experience at the position will be three more seniors – Jimmie Howard, Neal Brown and Adonis Kinsey – all of whom have made key receptions in the past.

"It's one of our strengths – it's probably the strength of the offense," Whipple said.

Also added to the mix will be quite a lot of youth, including sophomore Joe Bruce, younger brother of the NFL's Isaac, who should get a significant amount of playing time this season.

"Joe Bruce is probably as talented a receiver as a [first-year player] as we've had here, and that includes Adrian [Zullo]," Whipple added.

At tight end, the Minutemen will be led by their three returning lettermen – sophomores Sean Young and Eugene Sigmund and senior Greg Ward.

Offensive Line

Senior Maikel Miret leads an experienced core at line of which four members are returning starters. Senior Matt Coffe, junior Carmen Collins and sophomore Rob Kane are all back for another year and will be joined by sophomore O.J. McBride to make up a starting five that will be looked to improve on what was at times a struggle to keep opponents out of the backfield last season.

DEFENSE

Masella's new defensive system should be the kick the UMass defense needs to move back to the top of the A-10. Last season, the Minutemen were ninth in yards allowed per game (401.4) and 10th in scoring against per game (31.1). Masella's 3-4 defense is one that is designed to confuse the opposing team and catch them off guard.

"The one thing that's different this year is that we're going to give you a whole lot of different looks," the first-year coach said. "People are going to be all over the place and we can come from any position. In the scheme of things it's not only man coverage, it's zone coverage as well."

In addition to a more effective defense, many players feel it fits the team much better than the 4-4 front ran last year.

"This system's great. I like the three-four, the way he has the safeties and corners relating to the defense, it's going to work out for our athletic ability," McKenzie said. "We have a lot of young guys back there but the way he sets the positions, it's more how good of an athlete you have to play that position than how much experience you have."

McKenzie is one of two starters from last year who will be playing a different position this year. After spending one year at linebacker, McKenzie will be shifted back to his natural position of strong safety, a place that he is happy to be returning to.

The other relocated starter is sophomore K.A. Love, who wowed fans last year by making 50 tackles, nine for loss, at defensive end as a true freshman. Now he will return to his more natural position of inside linebacker.

The centerpiece of the defense is certainly All-American and Buck Buchanan award candidate Valdamar Brower, who posted career highs in nearly every category, including a conference-leading 10 sacks and 24 tackles for loss, the second best total in I-AA.

Defensive Line

There is plenty of experience behind Brower on the D-line. Junior Ian Dyche will be the starter at nose guard after notching 70 tackles, 17 for loss, last season. On the other side will be junior Doran Davis, who has been incredibly impressive in the past, but was ravaged by injuries last season and only appeared in two contests.

Backing them up will be junior Mike Haynes and senior Khalil Blakey, both of whom have provided a significant amount of playing time in their time in Amherst. Sophomore Courtney Holmes, who started much of last season, could be lost for 2002 after tearing his ACL in spring practices.

Much to the dismay of his opponents, Adrian Zullo will walk back onto the field this season.

Andrew Ubaldi (No. 42) and Corey Potter (No. 6) will lead the new look UMass defense when the Minutemen hit the field this season.

Linebacker

The leader in the defensive huddle will likely be senior co-captain Corey Potter, who has been a standout on his side of the ball since arriving with the Minutemen in 1999. Last season, he posted a career-best 68 tackles while breaking up three passes. He and Love will man the inside, but will be supported by junior Mark Kimener, who was second on the team with 83 tackles last season.

"Our linebacker core is led by Corey Potter, our captain, who plays with great emotion and is a real physical player for his size," Masella said. "The other one who has played extremely well is Jeremy Cain at the outside position."

Cain was superb while playing on the inside last season, making 78 tackles, 11 for loss, despite the fact that he missed nearly four full games after spraining his knee in the season opener against William & Mary. Beside him will likely be junior Leron Ancle or junior Mike Ziccardi. Ancle started the last three games of 2001, while Ziccardi started four times and make 35 tackles.

Secondary

McKenzie will be the clear leader of an incredibly young but very talented defensive backfield. The expected starter at free safety will be redshirt freshman Shannon James, who has impressed his coaches immensely since spring workouts. Gerard Washington may also make a case for playing time.

One corner will be manned by sophomore Leroy Brooks, who showed promise last season by breaking up three passes and making 44 tackles. Opposite him will be a battle featuring sophomore Steve Costello, who played mostly on special teams last year, and redshirt freshman Lamarr Monterio.

"I know I need to be a leader," McKenzie said. "When I'm off the field I can see the nerves in the young guys, so when I'm on the field I speak up more."

Special Teams

Largely overlooked in terms of importance, special teams is one of the Maroon and White's greatest strengths for 2002. Senior All-American punter David Sanger is back after averaging 41.4 yards per boot and placing 20 kicks inside his opponents' 20-yard line. Doug White returns as the placekicker, and is UMass' all-time leader in field goal percentage at 84.0. Hardy, Zullo, Howard and Peebler will likely all see time returning kicks this year.

Overall, the Minutemen have made strides to improve on last season's abysmal performance, and there is much reason to believe that the personnel that Coach Whipple has added and developed will be within reach of an Atlantic 10 title. Of course, the last time UMass had a losing season, they followed that up with a National Championship.

THE WELCOME BACK AND KEEP-THAT-SUMMER-BODY LOOKING GOOD

BODY SHOP DISCOUNT MEMBERSHIP SPECIAL

OME TO THE BODY SHOP IN TOTMAN
RM. 8
FROM SEPTEMBER 4TH TO 13TH
OR VIEWING & MEMBERSHIP SIGN UPS

PAY ONLY
$65 FOR A FULL FALL SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP
$110 FOR A FULL FALL & SPRING MEMBERSHIP

FULL WORKOUTS CAN BEGIN ON SEPTEMBER 16
TO WORK EVERY MUSCLE IN YOUR BODY WITH

POWERLINE® WEIGHT TRAINING MACHINES
LIFEFITNESS® STATIONARY BICYCLES
& STAIR CLIMBERS
CONCEPT II® ROWING MACHINES NORDIC TRACK® SKI MACHINES
LANDICE® TREADMILLS
PRECOR® EFX ELLIPTICAL TRAINER
AND
FREE WEIGHTS

THE BODY SHOP FITNESS CENTER
DISCOUNT
Expires 9/13/02

FULL REFUND AVAILABLE FOR 14 DAYS AFTER DATE OF PURCHASE
WITH ORIGINAL RECEIPT AND YOUR UNIVERSITY IDENTIFICATION CARD

2002 UMass Football Schedule

*Denotes A-10 Conference Game

SEPT. 7	CENTRAL CONNECTICUT STATE
SEPT. 14	AMERICAN INTERNATIONAL COLLEGE
SEPT. 21	AT NORTHEASTERN*
SEPT. 28	AT NORTH CAROLINA STATE
OCT. 5	AT RICHMOND*
OCT. 12	MAINE* (HOMECOMING)
OCT. 19	VILLANOVA* (BAND DAY)
OCT. 26	AT JAMES MADISON*
NOV. 2	DELAWARE* (FAMILY DAY)
NOV. 9	AT NEW HAMPSHIRE*
NOV. 16	HOFSTRA*
NOV. 23	AT RHODE ISLAND*

NEED EXTRA
CASH?

Sign up to receive emails about upcoming decision making experiments from the Department of Resource Economics!

To sign up go to:
http://www.umass.edu/resec/expecon

$100 Bonus Opportunity

If you participate in one decision making experiment during the all semester your name will be entered in a drawing for $100. (drawing to be held at the end of the fall semester)

field hockey

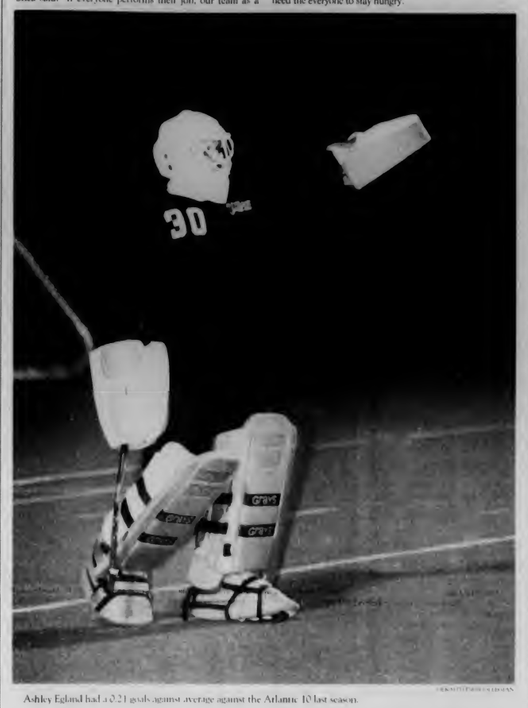
continued from page C12

can play either backfield or mid, which will help the UMass coaching staff make easy adjustments.

Senior Sue Jackson and sophomore Heather Kenney anchor the backfield.

"We want to push forward from the back, so they will be very important to our success," Shea said.

Ashley Egland returns as the goalkeeper. Last season she was ranked 19th in the nation among net minders with 144 saves while holding conference opponents to 0.21 goals per game.



"We have some real strong presences in different places," Shea said. "If everyone performs their job, our team as a whole can be incredible."

This year's squad hopes to run right past their foes and Shea believes she has the right group of players for it.

"We have a great core group of athletes," she said. "We are more athletic than we have been in the past and that is a plus because this is a game of speed and finesse."

The Minutewomen have proven that they can dominate in conference play but the next step is striving for a national semifinal birth.

"You cannot be satisfied with just winning the A-10s," Shea said. "They know what it takes to get there. Now we need the everyone to stay hungry."

Ashley Egland had a 0.21 goals against average against the Atlantic 10 last season.

Whiston

continued from page C12

on the Massachusetts field hockey team and her mourning was so intense that she was forced to miss her team's postseason last year and the team sorely missed her.

Turning her despairing emotions into positive motivation, Whiston has returned to the playing field this season, as she looks to lead the Minutewomen to the promise land. This time she will be looked upon for support and guidance by her teammates as she was named co-captain of the squad by her head coach Patty Shea in her senior year.

"I have to try to be a leader for everyone," Whiston said. "But I am not going to change who I am. I am not a loud and boisterous person. I will go out there and play my game and hopefully everything works out."

Whiston may not fit the prototype team captain of being loud and an on-the-field coach, but her coaching staff awarded her the position because her stray-from-the-familiar style of collegiate student-athletes has led her to success.

You see, Whiston was a walk-on her freshman year at UMass in 1999. In fact, she was not even sure if she wanted to play collegiate field hockey until two days before open tryouts were held on the Amherst campus.

"I didn't think I had what it takes to play Division I field hockey," Whiston proclaimed. "I was kind of nervous because it would be a big change from high school to college."

After a meeting with her high school coach, Kathy Horrigan at Athol High, and her parents, the consensus was that someone should give Coach Shea at UMass a call. Two days before tryouts Horrigan placed a call to Shea.

"I heard such great things about [Erika] from her high school coach," Shea said. "I knew she would fit into our system."

When Whiston stepped into the locker room for the first time at Boyden Gym, she knew she found a safe haven where she would not be nervous about playing college field hockey. Before she even arrived, her name was placed on a locker.

"I arrived to preseason freshman year not knowing what to expect but when I saw my name on the locker, it just picked up from there," she said.

It has surely picked up for Whiston throughout her collegiate career. In her freshman year she started four games, unusual for a walk-on, non-scholarship player. Last season, her junior campaign, she was ranked second on the team and seventh in the Atlantic 10 in points with 15.

"It's just a wonderful scenario to watch her and watch her grow in so many different areas," Shea said of her speedy forward.

"Throughout high school I played on grass and the transition to play on turf in college was a big step, but I believe I have overcome those obstacles and have used the turf to my advantage for speed," Whistin said.

Despite missing the later part of the 2001 season, Erika Whiston finished second on the team in scoring.

According to Whiston, she has recovered from the loss of her friend and is ready to play in her final season here at UMass. She is focused, determined and ready to face the challenge of repeating the consistent success of the UMass field hockey program.

"I just want to improve and be consistent this season," she said. "When I get down and out of my good play, I become frustrated and very inconsistent so I want to change that."

As the tattoo that lies on her neck blazes in the brutal August sun, it is clear in watching the preseason workouts that she is focused and her focus is coming from a now unattainable source – her lost friend, Ashley. She has a new motivation to succeed. She is dedicating this season to Ashley.

When she started her college experience, like any other freshman on a big campus, she was unsure of what she could do and where she stood in the community. However, she overcame all her fears and has exceeded all expectations placed on her.

That is why she is a perfect example of what a great captain should be. Coach Shea recognized this and hopes that Whiston's mentality trickles down to every single member of the team – especially the incoming walk-ons, as the squad will be holding tryouts the first week of school.

"She is just a classic case of 'you have to follow your dreams,'" Shea said.

Freshman year, Erika Whiston was following her dreams. In her senior year she will be following her heart.

soccer

continued from page C12

However, what the departure of O'Quinn also provides is an intriguing goaltender race that may not be shored up even before midseason. Seniors Enzo Altomare and Dave Doucette, as well as junior Colin Burns will all vie for the position, despite having just 40 minutes of experience last year, all from Altomare. Freshman Lester Melendez should also show why he earned a position on the Nicaraguan Under-23 National Team.

In its early test with Rutgers, the defense looked solid throughout the first half, but two costly mistakes in the second half resulted in consecutive goals on penalty kicks. Coach Koch was disappointed by the way the game progressed in that vein.

"We can't be winning games 4-3," Koch said. "We've got to make sure we're not giving up goals that we've been giving up. We lost five premier defensive players from last year's team, so that's our goal, to make sure that we rebuild the defense."

Part of the package that comes with last year's many accolades is a stronger schedule. The Minutemen will see such non-conference luminaries as Navy and Towson this season, but the real challenge will be an A-10 schedule that could bring more headaches to Koch and his squad.

"I tell you, the Atlantic 10 is going to be tough," he said. "You've got Dayton, Richmond and Rhode Island that are three excellent teams, that you've got to expect to be in the Atlantic 10 Tournament. You've got George Washington, that's a very good team. I think we're in that top five. I know La Salle has been recruiting really hard. Temple has been recruiting really hard, so they'll start to climb. You've got St. Joe's, that's a senior team, so they're going to be a team to compete with."

2002 should be an exciting year for UMass soccer, and if Koch and his charges can find a way to build on the fortunes of 2001, a first-ever trip to the College Cup tournament in Dallas is not out of the realm of possibility.

ARE YOU INTERESTED IN LEARNING
KARATE
OR
KICKBOXING?
CLASSES COMMENCING
MONDAY NIGHTS at Munson Memorial Library
South East Street Amherst
SEPTEMBER 9th through 30th
KARATE 7-8 pm
KICKBOXING &15-9:15
Information:
baskka@hotmail.com
or call Andrew 2560105
CERTIFIED BLACK BELT INSTRUCTION

UMass CAMPUS RECREATION
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY

Flag Football (M/W/C)	9/9
Soccer (M/W)	9/9
Co-ed Softball	9/10
Field Hockey (W)	9/10
Cross Country (M/W)	9/17
Ice Hockey (M/W)	9/19

On the web www.umass.edu/umum

LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215.

COWLS

BACK TO SCHOOL
Great Ideas!
Organize your study space!
• Install shelving
• Build a bookcase
• Design a computer station
Choose shelving of Melamine, Plywood, COWLS pine or COWLS oak. Select from a variety of fastening systems using clips, standards or brackets.
NOTE: We cut shelving to your specifications!
Customize a school tool box!
Be the HANDY PERSON in your dorm!
Tool boxes, tools, fasteners, supplies and the expertise you need ...
ALL AT COWLS!
COWLS For All Your Building and Remodeling Needs
BUILDING SUPPLY
125 Sunderland Road, North Amherst
7-5 M-F • 8-3 Sat. • FREE local delivery
413-549-0001 • www.cowls.com

UHS EYE CARE SERVICES
Convenient Hours and Campus Location CALL 577-5244

"I invite you to use the Eye Care Services at UHS."
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye Care Services
My name is Frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the University Health Service Eye Care Services and the high quality of eye care delivered to more than 90,000 individuals over the last 26 years.
I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry and co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. In addition, I am credentialed in diagnostic and therapeutic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.
EYE CARE SERVICES INCLUDE:
• Routine eye examinations
• A new onsite eye glass service
• Emergency eye care
• Full service contact lens care
• Co-management of laser refractive surgery
Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Services over the years has been consistently excellent.
UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA 01003
577-5000 (main), 577-5244 (eye care)
UMASS.

Re-cycling the dominance

Minutemen eager to build on last season's postseason success

By Andrew Merritt
Collegian Staff

Ask the members of the Massachusetts men's soccer team how proud they of last year's achievements – a 15-6-1 record, the school record for single season victories, winning the Atlantic 10, earning a berth in the NCAA tournament and defeating their first round opponent Creighton – and they will no doubt say that it was a great year.

Which it was.

In fact, it was the best in school history. However, the team realizes that there is room for improvement. In the words of senior captain Jeff Deren, "I want a repeat performance [of last year]. I want to win the A-10 regular season [title]. I want to win the A-10 tournament. I want to go to at least the Sweet 16, and hopefully the final four."

And while some things remain the same from last year, like the uphill battle any northeastern team faces against the North Carolinas and Virginias of the collegiate soccer universe, there are some new aspects – namely a brand new home field, that should give the 2002 edition of UMass soccer quite a boost.

The Minutemen began the season on the right foot, taking four out of five games on their recent trip to Canada, as well as an impressive, if less-than-flawless victory over preseason No. 7 Rutgers in the final tune-up before the matches count.

In that exhibition with Rutgers, Deren was the story, notching a hat trick to lead the Minutemen to a 4-3 victory over the Scarlet Knights in Deren's hometown of Chicopee. Senior Yuri Morales also scored a goal, and senior Derek Rhodes and junior Prah Myers each contributed two assists to the effort.

The momentum from the successful preseason could loom large, as the Minutemen will not play in front of an Amherst crowd until they face Iona on Sept. 13, the first game of the annual UMass Classic.

When they do return home to square off against the Gaels, they'll do it at the brand new Rudd Soccer Complex, the newest athletic facility at UMass. Located adjacent to the UMass Softball Complex, Rudd field will house the men's and women's soccer programs beginning with its dedication on Sunday, Sept. 8, and the Minutemen are already looking forward to playing on the new pitch.

"We're all excited, very excited about that," said head coach Sam Koch. "The field is beautiful, it's got great width, it's just a great place to play…it's the best thing that's ever happened to our program since I've been here, so we're very excited and grateful to the Rudd family for making that happen."

The players, of course, concur.

"It's unbelievable," said Deren. "It's kind of a reward for what we've put in for the last three years. They told us we'd be getting it, and we never really thought of it, but now it's here, and it's an absolutely gorgeous field. It's going to be awesome to play on."

At forward, Deren is expected to dominate the A-10 in the same fashion (16 goals, 6 assists) that brought him Player of the Year honors last season. Morales will also be looked upon to provide some scoring, and the two should combine for enough goals to make the Minutemen an offensive powerhouse in the Atlantic 10.

Morales recorded the second most assists in school history last year with 12. Myers, who was second on the team in scoring last year with 21 points (9 goals, 3 assists) should continue to provide more offensive firepower, possibly even enough to give Deren room to breathe every once in a while.

Look for freshmen Tim Kitchell, Ernie Billittier, Marco Tuesta and Jason Scudamore to chip in on offense, possibly seeing some significant playing time this season. Scudamore proved in the Rutgers exhibition that he can play, assisting on the Minutemen's first goal.

Of course, balance is a key factor in soccer, and not all of the scoring came from the forwards last year. Rhodes provided some offensive fireworks at midfield last season with three goals and seven assists, and also carved himself a piece of the UMass history books when he scored the only goal in UMass' victory over Creighton in the first round of the NCAA Tournament, the team's first-ever NCAA Tournament goal.

The midfield will have a hole to fill this year due to the graduation of J.R. Pouncey. Pouncey led a defense that allowed just 27 goals in 22 games last season, and earned three-straight All-Atlantic 10 accolades during his tenure here.

UMass might find that replacement in the combined efforts of returning seniors Tiago Moriera, Andrew Eicher and Dan Colwell. Eicher and Colwell combined for 15 points last season, including six goals and Moriera had assists in 10 games for the Minutemen. However, UMass will also need to see an increase in contributions from sophomores Martin Burwell, Travis Cooke and Gabe Barnard, as well as junior Devlin Barnes.

The backs are a rebuilding squad, due to the departure of four solid performers from last year, including Cooke, who moved over to midfield for the 2002 campaign. All told, the Minutemen will have just seven games of collegiate experience represented in the back position. Sophomores Zach Barnard, Rich Falkowski and Chris Camerota are expected to spearhead the reloading of the UMass defense. Barnard was the only back returning this year who saw significant playing time in 2001, so inexperience is expected to factor in any struggles the young defense has early on.

The cage is another spot on the field where the Minutemen find themselves with question marks. The graduation of Bryan O'Quinn means the departure of UMass' all-time shutout leader (16), the fourth best man in saves (210), and second best on the all-time single season shutout list (seven).

Turn to SOCCER, page C11

The trio of seniors Jeff Deren (top), Yuri Morales (bottom left) and Derek Rhodes (bottom right) will provide a major scoring punch for the 2002 Minutemen as they try to repeat as A-10 Champs.

The mark of a true captain

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

Trailing down the back of Erika Whiston's neck are three Chinese characters tattooed on to her skin – forever. They will be on her skin forever because what the symbol represents will live with her eternally.

The characters spell out the name "Ashley".

Ashley Softic was a junior here at UMass and Erika's lifelong best friend. They shared an apartment together on Main Street in Amherst and were looking forward to having a great year at school together.

They never had a chance to finish it out together.

Ashley died in a tragic car accident on her way to their hometown of Athol from New Hampshire in October of last year.

Whiston endured through a total breakdown as she lost a person incredibly close to her. Whiston is a forward

Turn to WHISTON, page C11

Cohesion vital for Shea's squad

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

In recent years, the other six teams of the Atlantic 10 have asked themselves a very difficult question. How do we defeat the conference juggernaut, Massachusetts?

In the last three years, the UMass field hockey team has gone an unprecedented 22-0 in A-10 play. Pure dominance.

The 2002 squad will look to continue the dominance as they bring a new look and new attitude to this new season.

The Minutewomen have witnessed one of the best classes in UMass field hockey history come and go, as the 2002 class, led by three-time All-America Anke Bruemmer, graduated this past spring. Now it is time for fresh new faces to step into the spotlight, and according to Head Coach Patty Shea, the spotlight will be on the team as a whole rather than on individuals.

"Subconsciously our team deferred so much to [Anke] last year," she said. "Now there is the opportunity for everyone to play and contribute and it makes the game a lot of fun."

"Now everyone can bring their skills to the table," she added.

This year's team is young, and at the moment undermanned, as it must fill four roster spots with open tryouts; however, Coach Shea has been busy preparing her team for the enduring tough road ahead.

"The team must understand that the progress we make is not based on the outcomes, it's based on the process," she said. "If you take care of every step of the process, the end result will take care of itself."

Shea is preaching the rare art of short passing and sharp movement on the turf this season and so far in early practices it is evident that she has the players to accomplish her goals.

"Last year we relied too much on the long ball and now the players know if they make a hard cut and put themselves in the right position they will get a piece of the ball," she said.

Leading the pack at the forward position are senior co-captains Erika Whiston and Stacey Blue. Whiston was able to net five goals and three assists in 2001, despite ending her season early due to the death of her best friend. She has a soft touch – perfect for the style of play that her coach is enforcing. Blue was tied for third in goals on the team last season and her collaboration with Whiston in the front has the potential for many scores.

"They really focused on sharpening their skills for this season and I expect them to be leaders out there," Shea said.

The midfield is led by senior Sarah Bohonowicz and juniors Kristin Hopwood and Beth Percival. All three

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page C11

FERNANDEZ BRINGS LIFE TO MUSIC
ARTS PAGE 5.

COMPLAINING ABOUT PARADISE
ED/OP PAGE 4.

MINUTEWOMEN
SPORTS PAGE 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE TWO ☆☆☆☆☆ 09.05.02

The Minuteman Marching Band combines efforts with the Salvation Army for a 9/11 fund.

Minuteman Band featured on 9/11 compilation album

By Anne-Marie Plain and S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Minuteman Marching Band is featured on a two-volume compilation of patriotic music in memory of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

The Minuteman ensemble is the only collegiate band chosen to appear on both CD's in the "Marching for Freedom: Music of the American Spirit" series. The band performs "God Bless the U.S.A." on Volume 1 and Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" on Volume 2.

The UMass Marching Band, currently under the leadership of George N. Parks, founder of the George N. Parks Drum Major Academy, is comprised of 320 students from 174 Massachusetts communities and 17 other states.

Parks, in a statement on the band's Web site, spoke of his feelings following the events of Sept. 11, and the request to be involved with the creation of the album.

"Rehearsing and performing with a 'marching band' seemed to be such a trivial activity during the days following the tragedy of Sept. 11. Finding the motivation to go to the field and feign enthusiasm during this time (or even worse – to expect enthusiasm from the 300 confused and saddened students in our band) this was one of the biggest challenges I ever faced with the Minuteman Band," wrote Parks.

"But of course, everyone everywhere was struggling…and searching for meaning with what they do in their own lives. Then, in our first performance following the attacks, we performed an arrangement of 'God Bless the U.S.A.' with the University of Delaware Band and 10 area high schools. I will never forget looking into the stands, seeing an older gentleman ever so slowly waving one of the thousands of American flags at Delaware Stadium, with rivers of tears streaming down his face. I had rehearsed the piece many times. We had performed it for President Bush in his Inaugural Parade just months earlier. I would have thought I was imperious to such emotion and yet, as I looked into the stands that evening, seeing the tremendous impact that was so obvious in this man's eyes, I was moved to tears in an indescribable way."

"We are indebted to Emphatic Music for the tackling this wonderful project which will bring the excellent work of so many great bands and drum corps into the living rooms of Americans nationwide. It will help remind us all the importance of bands and band music to our national heritage. Speaking for the Minuteman Marching Band, we are thrilled to be part of 'Marching for Freedom.'"

A photograph of the band, captured by UMass employee and marching band alumnus Keith Paul, is featured on the CD's publicity poster as well as in the Volume 1 liner notes. Accompanying the band's photo in the insert is a letter composed by band director George Parks, in which he said, "American bands have been inspiring our country for two centuries. The magic, the power and class that marching bands and drum corps provide brings us together, helps us remember our heritage, helps us forge ahead, and inspires us to do our very best, even in the most challenging of times."

Emphatic Music, an Internet-based, independent record label based out of Valley Forge, Pa. produced the CD series. The project was the brain-child of Jeff Harvey, head of the label, as an opportunity for small companies like Emphatic Music to raise money for charity at a "critical time in our nation's history." All of the proceeds from the recordings will be donated to The Salvation Army.

The CD's are available for sale online and by mail order; however, there is currently an effort to distribute the series for sale at historical sites around the country. The first volume was released in May and the second on Aug. 1. Each CD goes for $14.50 plus $3.50 for shipping and handling. Orders can be made by contacting Emphatic at 610-935-2575 or info@emphaticmusic.com, or by going to www.MarchingForFreedom.com.

Urso researches antioxidants effect on muscle atrophication

By Christopher Theberge
Collegian Staff

Doctoral student Maria Urso, in the exercise science department, is conducting a study to establish whether antioxidants improve muscle function, strength and volume in older adults. According to Urso, older adults are particularly susceptible to muscle atrophy (loss of muscle mass) either from the normal course of aging, immobilization, or sedentary lifestyles caused from injury or advanced age.

This summer, Urso managed to recruit about 16 men. The study is double-blind involving men, aged 60-75. The group is divided into two groups: antioxidant and control. Subjects in the antioxidant group receive vitamin E and alpha-Lipoic Acid, while the control group gets a placebo. Following 30 days of receiving either the antioxidants or placebo, the subjects are fitted with a brace on the non-dominant hand allowing for immobilization. Two weeks later, subjects are brought to either Yale University or Hartford Hospital where a magnetic resonance image (MRI) is performed on the non-dominant hand. The brace is then removed and followed by another MRI, Urso says.

Urso is specifically looking at the adductor pollicis muscle, which is the large muscle at the base of the thumb in the palm of the hand.

"The adductor pollicis consists of one fiber type [slow twitch muscle]. Muscles and muscle fibers atrophy at different rates, therefore, focusing on one fiber type is easier to make generalizations about," Urso said.

Subjects perform a variety of function tests before the brace is placed, and again after it is removed. The purpose of this is to see whether the antioxidants have an affect on strength, function, and volume during the two weeks the brace is worn.

"Maria's research will tell us more about how muscle responds to a period of inactivity and whether dietary antioxidant supplements can prevent some of the loss in muscle mass we see with age. This is an important research topic because the number of older people is expected to increase dramatically in the next ten years as the baby boomers hit their 60s," Priscilla Clarkson, associate dean for academic affairs at the University's School of Public Health and Health Sciences said.

Of all the antioxidants present, Urso said that she chose to use vitamin E because it is the strongest antioxidant against oxidative damage at the muscle level. The fat-soluble vitamin has been shown to preserve muscle structure and keep it strong and healthy. Urso chose the alpha-Lipoic Acid because it aids in recycling vitamin E back to its natural form. Urso said that it has water-soluble properties that help the whole muscle to combat free radicals, not just at the lipid membrane.

Urso has found the project to be a very rewarding experience.

"On our trips to Connecticut, participants have taught me a lot about themselves, including hobbies, history, family life (the list is endless)", Urso said in a University press release. "The volunteers I have worked with so far have made this experience overwhelmingly positive."

Clarkson spoke positively of Urso.

"Maria is a talented, capable, and committed graduate student. She has set up all testing procedures and has been meticulous in her data collection. This research project is immeasurably enhanced by Maria's enthusiasm, spirit, and knowledge in the area of aging. We are looking forward to seeing the results of this study during this academic year."

The goal of Urso's research is to find a relatively inexpensive way to preserve muscle function and mass in older adults during periods of disuse. "If antioxidants can have a significant impact on this process [atrophy], it could help older people retain their strength through the use of common compounds", said Urso. She doesn't just see this benefitting the older population, rather she hopes that athletes, astronauts, and those suffering from cancer and AIDS can benefit as well because the previous mentioned groups are also susceptible to muscle wasting.

"This study would not have been possible without the strong motivation from my mentors in the exercise science department, especially Priscilla Clarkson," said Urso. "As students, we are encouraged to apply for grants from numerous funding agencies. This has allowed me to gain invaluable insight into the rigors of doing research and has prepared me for pretty much anything".

Urso's research is funded by a series of grants, including a $3,000 summer fellowship from the American Federation of Aging Research; one-year $2,500 grant from the American College of Sports Medicine; one-year $2,500 grant from NASA; one-year $2,500 grant from the Life Fitness Corp; and a

Turn to URSO, page 3

New fraternity a possibility on campus

By Janet Jack
Collegian Staff

Theta Chi Fraternity has announced its arrival to the University of Massachusetts this year, provided that they are able to enlist enough pledges to meet the fraternity's requirements.

Founded at Norwich University in Norwich, Vermont on April 10, 1856, the fraternity has 150,000 initiated members and 136 chapters. The motto of the organization is "The Helping Hand," and the mission of the Grand Chapter is to "promote the brother hood and vision of the Theta Chi frat hy setting policy; providing planning evaluation and leadership; and enhancing the image, solvency and future of the Fraternity."

According to their press releases, the Theta Chi Fraternity enforces academic success as a membership qualification. Over 80,000 scholarships were awarded to members in 2000-2001. Forty-two of those scholarships provided full financial aid to the Undergraduate Inter-fraternity Institute (UII). This was the largest number of scholarships awarded to all of the fraternities and sororities that year.

Theta Chi also has a "scholar of the week" program. Members who achieve notable academic achievement either receive a reduction in membership fees or a donation from an area merchant. Theta Chi encourages chapters to aid those members who do not perform as well as expected academically.

An important policy enforced through Theta Chi chapters is dedication and loyalty to the fraternity. Members, once initiated, are expected to maintain membership throughout their entire undergraduate career, as well as remaining involved for their lives as alumnus, states their pamphlets.

An eight-week-long new member education program is in place for those who plan on being initiated into the fraternity. The first four weeks include several "brotherhood building exercises," and educates new members on the history of the fraternity as well as leadership involvement in the chapter or colony. After the four weeks are over, new members are initiated into the fraternity. Once they become brothers, another four weeks are set aside to educate members on the mindset enforced in the fraternity and the importance of member's loyalty to Theta Chi.

Theta Chi has a strict policy against hazing. "Hazing on trial" is a presentation created by Dave Westol, executive director of Theta Chi, who has spoken at over 360 college campuses and over 100 fraternity and sorority national conventions or leadership schools.

The American Red Cross is the official national philanthropy of Theta Chi Fraternity. Over 70 pints of blood were donated at the 2001 Chapter Leadership Conference and members helped to make 1,500 bagged lunches for donation to local homeless shelters. Each member is required to volunteer at least five hours per semester towards community service projects.

Turn to THETA CHI, page 4

Full Extension
Jeff Graham of the UMASS Zoodisc team dives for a score in a game of Ultimate Frisbee near the Campus Pond

JAMES TOMASELLI/COLLEGIAN

The Pentagon a year after the September 11th attacks.

Pentagon casualties put to rest at Arlington

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The remaining casualties from the Pentagon will be buried in Arlington Cemetery in Virginia one year and one day after the Sept. 11 attack that claimed their lives.

The Department of Defense (DOD) will render full military honors to the 184 people who died in the Pentagon and American Airlines Flight 77. The ceremony will be held in the Memorial Amphitheater, an outdoor arena that DOD has used for memorial services for more than 80 years. The remains of the five hijackers will not be buried in Arlington.

The DOD plans Sept. 12 to bury the remaining victims so family members could attend memorial services in Virginia and Washington, D.C. on Sept. 11.

Chaplains and senior officials will represent the Army, Air Force and Navy at the ceremony. The Navy Band will perform. Brig. Gen. James F. Spivey Jr., former deputy commander of the Pentagon Family Assistance Center, will be the keynote speaker.

Honor guards from all services will participate in the ceremony in the spirit of the "United in Freedom" theme. The Army's 3rd U.S. Infantry (The Old Guard), U.S. Navy Ceremonial Guard, U.S. Air Force Honor Guard, and the Marine Corps Ceremonial and Guard Company will drill in Arlington.

Soldiers will drive a horse-drawn caisson to a section in Arlington Cemeteries that's close to the Pentagon. The caisson is a cargo box attached to a carriage that soldiers used to carry ammunition during the Revolutionary and Civil Wars. Today, soldiers use caissons to transport coffins during military funerals.

Unidentified remains and some identified remains will be carried in the caisson to Section 64. The only identified remains that will be buried in the memorial gravesite belong to family members who volunteered to have their loved ones buried with the unidentified victims of September 11. The remains will be grouped inside an urn inside the casket.

The fifty victims who will be buried in Arlington next week have already been given individual funeral services, the most recent of which was April 9. The victims' gravestones in Section 64 will face the Pentagon's South Parking area, the spot where hijacked flight 77 crashed into DOD Headquarters last year.

DOD will bury the victims next to a Pentagon-shaped monument erected in honor of the casualties from Sept. 11.

The United States government will pay family members' travel expenses to and from the ceremony, including five family members who do not have any retrievable remains of their loved ones.

The military ceremony includes the "21 gun salute" and the presentation of the flag.

Next Thursday marks the first time the Memorial Amphitheater has been used for funeral services in 53 years.

Information for this story was taken from The Washington Times

Campus remembers 9/11 on anniversary

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The bells of the Old Chapel at the University of Massachusetts campus will toll on the morning of Sept. 11 to commemorate the terrorist attacks one-year prior. In the evening, events will be held for students and faculty.

A statement from the University states that although the campus will be open, "it recognizes that the day will be an emotional and difficult one for many in the community."

Fran Deats of the Faculty and Staff Assistance Program released a statement with the University explaining the goals of the campus remembrance events and what the anniversary may mean for some.

"The anniversary of a tragedy may reawaken a wide range of feelings and reactions. For many people the anniversary date is experienced as a powerful reminder of loss. It is normal to rethink the events of the day a year earlier: what happened, who you were with, loved ones who were lost. Feelings of grief, anger, fear, or anxiety may resurface intensely at this time...the anniversary may also be a milestone along the path to recovery. It is a time for reflection, a reassessment of values and beliefs, appreciation for the support, love and courage of friends, family and others who have helped with healing."

The tolling of the Old Chapel bells will be held at specific times to represent the moments in which the attacks took place. The first bell will toll at 8:45 a.m. when American Flight 111 crashed into the North Tower of the World Trade Center. The second bells will ring to remember the victims of United Flight 175 which entered the South tower at 9:02 a.m.; tolling again at 9:45 a.m., the bells will remember those lost in American Flight 77 which crashed into the Pentagon. The final bells will toll at 10:03 a.m. for United Flight 93, which hit outside of Pittsburgh. Following each remembrance, the University has requested that a moment of silence be held.

Evening events will begin with the University string quartet playing at 6:45 p.m. All evening events will be held on the Student Union lawn, or in the case of rain, in the Student Union Ballroom. At 7 p.m. the Old Chapel bells will toll, following which Chancellor John V. Lombardi will address those gathered. Representatives from Buddhist, Christian, Hindu, Jewish and Muslim communities on campus will say words of remembrance, and then a student speaker will speak. Those gathered are then invited to proceed into the Student Union to "honor those who died."

The gathering within the Student Union, beginning at approximately 7:30 p.m., will consist of all those who wish to reflect on the anniversary through poetry, writing, artwork, or discussion, sharing their thoughts. According to the University, refreshments will be provided.

In addition, there will be a memorial mass held at the Newman Center, "Where are we now, a year later?" at 8 p.m.

The University will be remembering the following alumni lost in the attacks: Christopher M. Carstanjen, Geoffrey W. Cloud '87, Tara Shea Creamer '93, Peter Hashem '85, Todd Russell Hill, John C. Jenkins, Thomas N. Pecorelli '92, Sheryl Lynn (Rosner) Rosenbaum '90, David Ellis Rovers '83 and Jessica Sachs '01.

For students, faculty and staff who need counseling at this time, the Faculty and Staff Assistance Program provides confidential assessment, brief counseling and referrals. Call 545-0350 for appointments or information.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January, 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew E. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

THE PRINT SHACK

available for all your printing needs

• Stadium Cups
• t-shirts for:
fraternities/sororities
intramurals
bar crawls
special events
• Business Cards

586-7133 322 RUSSEL STREET HADLEY, MA 01035 On Route 9 (Across from Wal-Mart)

Rumsfeld head-to-head with Meyers

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Donald Rumsfeld, U.S. Secretary of Defense, dismissed rumors of disagreements on Capitol Hill concerning a U.S. invasion of Iraq during a joint press conference with Air Force Gen. Richard Meyers about the continuing war on terrorism.

"There are always differences of perspective, there are differences of...institutional differences from time to time," Rumsfeld said. "But the president is the president. He is the one who ran for that office and was elected to that office. He's the one who makes the decisions and calibrations and guidance, and he does it very well."

Rumsfeld emphasized that the current administration wants arms inspectors back in Iraq.

"It is the Iraqis that ended the inspections. That we all know," said Rumsfeld. "We protested when the Iraqis threw the inspectors out."

Secretary Rumsfeld blamed Iraq for negating their agreement with the United Nations.

"Would it be preferable for inspectors to be able to have any-time, any-place access so that at least some additional knowledge could be gained? Sure it would," Rumsfeld said. "Are the Iraqis...do they have a pattern of denying that? Yes, they do."

Rumsfeld added that he doesn't know if U.N. inspectors will return to Iraq, but it's "unlikely" that Iraq will agree to effective U.N. inspections.

Gen. Meyers' statement concerned the status of troops deployed to Afghanistan.

"While things in Washington have in some respects been somewhat quiet during the traditional summer lull, the war on terrorism has continued," Myers said.

According to Meyers, U.S. forces have uncovered truckloads of mortar rounds, rockets, machine-gun rounds, and small-arms ammunition. Additionally, a "command-detonated mine" attacked a U.S. patrol near Islalabad Aug. 31, but no U.S. personnel were seriously wounded.

Myers closed his statement by acknowledging government contractors who are rebuilding the Pentagon after Sept. 11.

"As we approach the one-year anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks, I'd like to...recognize another outstanding group who have been also very busy here in August and over the past year, and that's the civilian contractors who have been working on renovation of the damaged wedge," said Meyers.

Uno leaves NWT for NYC

After leading the New WORLD Theater (NWT) at the University of Massachusetts for 23 years, founding Artistic Director Roberta Uno is leaving to take a position at the Ford Foundation in New York City.

Uno has taken an extended leave of absence from NWT and her professorship in the UMass Department of Theater to take a position as Program Officer for Arts and Culture at the prestigious philanthropic foundation.

Roberta Uno of the New WORLD Theater

She leaves behind a lengths resume at the University which includes founding the Bright Moments Festival, reviving the annual Black Musicians' Conference, founding and editing the journal "Views on Black Music" and beginning the Solos and Duos music series.

NWT credits her with being a driving force behind their development into a cultural institution with a national and international reputation for dedication to quality works by artists of color.

Uno sees her new job as a chance "to bring what I've learned and attempted to do in this community to a national arena."

The Ford Foundation's self-appointed mission is "to create political, economic, and social systems that promote peace, human welfare, and the sustainability of the environment on which life depends," it said on their website.

Playwright/director Talvin Wilks will take Uno's spot in the NWT for the interim and also will join the Department of Theater as an associate professor.

— Dan Lamothe

Juggling classes and time

John Bullock juggles out by the campus pond between classes

SOM recruits new professor

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Operations management and statistics expert Soren Bisgaard will join the University of Massachusetts, leading a new institute in the Isenberg School of Management (SOM) integrating business, engineering and other sciences.

Bisgaard will be the highest paid professor on campus, at $200,000 a year.

Bisgaard's appointment ends a two-year search to fill a position created when the Isenberg family donated six million dollars to the SOM in 1997. Two million dollars of that donation went towards setting up the institute that Bisgaard now heads.

According to Joseph Goldstein, dean of the School of Engineering, the scope of the projects integrating the different fields has yet to be set up. "It's all a work that hasn't even begun," Goldstein said. "He's going to take it in his own way. It will be up to the professor (Bisgaard) to reach out and interact with our school, whether it's with courses, research, or some sort of outreach project."

While Bisgaard's professorship is in the School of Management, Goldstein is happy to have him on campus. "It pleases me that he has an engineering degree. He has some feel of what working as an engineer is like," he said.

Goldstein added that he has heard good things about Bisgaard's personality. "Everyone seems to like the guy," he said. "He doesn't show a big ego."

The University will fund $170,000 of Bisgaard's salary, with the rest coming from interest accumulating from the two million dollar Isenberg endowment.

The new center will have a budget of about $70,000 a year for staff and programs. The Isenberg money will also fund ten scholarships, providing SOM with research assistants.

Bisgaard spent his last three years in Switzerland. For two of them, he was director of the Institute for Technology Management at the University of St. Gallen. After that, Bisgaard took a professorship at the University of Amsterdam, teaching business and industrial statistics. He has also consulted for many companies, including General Motors, Hewlett-Packard, Bell Labs and several European corporations.

Bisgaard spent 20 years of his earlier life at the University of Wisconsin at Madison, earning a doctorate in statistics and then directing its Center for Quality and Productivity Improvement in the College of Engineering, a research facility.

■ Urso

continued from page 1

$1,000 grant from the Gatorade Sports Science Institute.

Urso is still searching for eight more subjects to complete the project. For the study to be valid she needs a sample size of at least twenty-four. However, only sixteen subjects have currently enrolled. Each research subject receives a $150 stipend. If you are interested, or know anyone who may be, please contact Marta Urso by email at murso@exesci.umass.edu or by phone at (413) 545-4959.

■ Theta Chi

continued from page 1

In addition to alcohol-free housing, the L.E.A.D. program has been developed by Theta Chi Fraternity, enforcing topics of leadership, education, academic development and community outreach.

Information meetings on Theta Chi will be held in the Campus Center at 7 p.m. on Oct. 18 (Room 911-15), Oct. 25 (RM 805-09), Oct. 30, Nov. 1, Nov. 6 (RM 811-15), and Nov. 11 (RM 905-09). For more information, contact Jason Oller, Expansion Coordinator at 413-586-0114 Ext: 118 or Jason@thetachi.org.

Bring this ad in for a
FREE
Medium cup of Rao's coffee.

Rao's Coffee Roasting Company
17 Kellogg Avenue
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 253-9441
www.raoscoffee.com

Pruddy's
IT OPIC IT
D INCEB IP
Welcome Back Friends
$4 Coors Light Pitchers
$1 Draft
"Coolest Place in Amherst"
-Stuff Magazine
Now Hiring
it's Always Spring Break @ Pruddy's
MAIN ST. AMHERST 253-3315 21+
CLOSED MONDAYS AND TUESDAYS

NEED EXTRA CASH?
Sign up to receive emails about upcoming decision making experiments from the Department of Resource Economics!
To sign up go to:
http://www.umass.edu/resec/expecon
$100 Bonus Opportunity
If you participate in one decision making experiment during the Fall semester your name will be entered in a drawing for $100. (drawing to be held at the end of the fall semester)

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9
For more information call 253-7571
• Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-and many more
• Nutritonal Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
• Fitness Testing & Programming
Semester Special $160
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
• Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment
NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Playing it safe:

A return to the weekend

School is officially back in session now. The moving in process is complete, classes have started, and if you haven't already bought your books you might want to bring a few CD's to listen to while you wait in line at the Textbook Annex.

As this is Thursday, it also marks the unofficial start to the weekend. To clue all the freshmen and other newcomers in, the college weekend to many is a four day affair, beginning often with "Thirsty Thursday", a simplistic term for describing the scene that will take place on North Pleasant Street tonight.

Though many students have been anticipating the first weekend back at campus much more than a return to the classroom, there are a few simple rules to keep in mind that will help make things go more smoothly and safely.

If you live in the dorms, remember that you reside in a crowded space full of people who lead very different lifestyles. That means you should respect your neighbors space. Just because you want to throw a party and cram a dozen people into a space designed for two doesn't negate the fact that the person next door might have a 9:05 the next morning. The quiet hours begin at 9 p.m. for a reason. This doesn't mean that you shouldn't have any fun at all, just simply keep it in perspective.

This goes for those of you in apartments as well. Though you don't have designated quiet hours, there's nothing stopping the police from making a visit just to give you a hard time. The bottom line is, by respectful of your neighbors and it will make your living arrangements much simpler throughout the year.

Also, for students living on campus, simply be smart. RA's make rounds throughout the building and some might not be as nice as the one on your floor who has the policy of "If I don't see it, don't hear it, don't smell it, it's fine". Some will be itching at the chance to write you up, so use your head. Whatever you are doing in your room, keep it in there and under control. That way you won't have to explain to your parents why in only your second month of school the University wants to kick you out of housing.

For those of age, the bars are a great place. It's a fun time out with friends and a nice chance to relax, unwind, and socialize with the other locals. Again, just remember moderation. While almost every student here can attest to a fun time when they were plastered, just be observant of the rest of your life around you. On a Friday or Saturday night, getting so drunk you can't talk straight doesn't have too many repercussions. However, the excuse to your Friday morning professor about how you missed class because you were hung over and then had to clean up your own vomit, usually doesn't fly. Uptown is fun, but don't let it cost you anything more than the price of the alcohol you consume that night.

This sounds harsh, like it's your parents laying down the law again, but don't look at it that way. These are just a few reminders that all of us, whether freshmen or seasoned fifth-year veterans, could use. It simply allows everyone to enjoy the weekend, whether they party hard-core John Belushi Animal House Style, or if they're more content to curl up with a good book on a Friday evening. Whatever the case, the first weekend is here. Sit back and enjoy. After all, this is college.

Staff editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Interested in writing for ED/Op? Email us at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

Complain your way to paradise

REGAN MCKENDRY

"I've been to 27 states and I can assure you M. Donald's is still the same old boring food everywhere you go."

Regan McKendry is Collegian Columnist.

Welcome freshmen: this is the best time of your life

KATIE LANDERS

Oh, if I could do it all over again. Freshman year. There are lots of things I wouldn't do again, but even more that I'd do ten more times. And, in three years, I've actually accumulated some wisdom. I decided that in my first column back, in my last year, I'll share these pearls with the freshmen who have actually found the collegian. Returning students might side with my cause.

Dorms.

It's probably too late to tell you that you should have gotten a jumpstart on moving in. I bet sitting in traffic for two hours with your parents wasn't exactly how you planned on spending your first day at UMass. Even though they say the dorms don't open until ten, it's a good idea to get here earlier. Good advice for second semester.

You won't use half the crap you packed into the mini-van. Wait to bring your winter clothes if you live in Massachusetts, because I promise you it won't be cold enough for the wool sweater until at least mid-October. Yes, you will be home before then, I promise.

Don't be dumb. If you get caught, you'll get shipped off to Northeast. I've seen it happen.

The cable has gotten so much better than when I was a freshman. Imagine, no MTV, no ESPN, nothing. Just Jerry Springer all day long.

The weekend.

Here in college-land, it runs from Thursday to Sunday. You'll go to Fraternity parties like every freshman does. You'll see the crowds and you'll think it's the best time of your whole life. You'll learn to like Natty. Eventually you'll stop going to Friday classes. Dream about uptown, because you won't be there for a while. Eventually, you'll make off campus friends and you'll start going to Puffton and Hobart parties. The PVTA will be your best friend. There are cops on the 'Pivta' during the weekend, so don't be a smartass.

Don't try to buy alcohol with a fake I.D.

Don't think that by packing up some kool-aid and Rubenoff into your Starbucks coffee mug you're clever and you can walk wherever you want with a cocktail. Both will land you a trip to Hampshire District Court. Have fun explaining that to your parents.

I don't care how easy it might seem to drink tequila. Eventually you'll ruin it for yourself all together and you won't even be able to smell it. Lastly, drink in moderation. No one looks cool passed out at a party, or having vomited all over themselves. A trip to Cooley-Dickinson hospital is not fun. Besides, UMass isn't even listed as a top party school anymore. What have you got to prove?

A lot of people don't go out until almost 11 p.m. Imagine that.

You'll never have as much fun at another college visiting people as you do at UMass.

Food

You might not have discovered Antonio's yet. It's the greatest pizza you'll ever eat. Ever. They don't deliver. You'll have to wait in line. Oh, the experience.

I don't care how good D.P. Dough tasted at 2 a.m. It won't feel as good the next day.

Whenever adults come, get them to take you to Judie's.

Ever hear of "the freshmen 15"? Yeah, it's not a joke. You might not gain weight at first, but DC food on top of a 30-pack every weekend doesn't help your cause. I bet you weren't taking in all that in high school. Join the gym.

Classes.

Take Bio 105 Human Biology with Professor Goedenough. Awesome class.

Don't buy your books yet. If you already have, oh well. There are three reasons for this. A) You're going to test run classes through Add/Drop and if you buy the books that's a waste. B) You might not even use the book. Especially if it's a huge lecture and the Professor wrote the book. C) Books are in the library on reserve!

If you have a major, you'll change it.

8 a.m. classes in college are a whole lot different than 8 a.m. classes in high school.

This isn't high school. Professors don't care if you overslept or you had a lot of other homework. They've probably got 4,000 other students.

Friends.

Take a good look around at the group you've just met. I bet they're cool. They're probably a lot like your friends at home, and live in the rooms close to you. Chances are you'll only remain friends with a few of them after this year.

Don't be surprised if you and your friends from home don't stay close. Things change when you move away. Plus, you'll miss your school friends over break. You'll be dying to get back to Amherst. I'm not sure, but I think your college friends are the ones you'll hold on to.

You look like a freshman. I still look like a freshman. Don't say "back in high school" yet. You were there two and a half months ago.

Welcome to UMass. You'll be happy you picked it over that expensive Boston school you'd be paying for the rest of your life. You'll most definitely have a better time.

Katie Landers is a Collegian Columnist.

"You'll never have as much fun at another college visiting people as you do at UMass."

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.05.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

The soul behind the sounds

Fernandez breathes life into his music

By Bryan G. Pfeifer
SPECIAL TO THE COLLEGIAN

Wade Fernandez (Wiciwen Apis-Mahwaew) is as real as it gets. Soaring beyond the invisible culture of the corporate music industry, Fernandez's eclectic style, lyrical prose, superb musicianship and spirit make him an artist to remember.

"Music is a very powerful gift," Fernandez said. "We should share that gift in a good way. Not just for entertainment, but more importantly in a way that heals, builds and has a conscience."

Of European/Menominee/Mexican descent, Fernandez is a registered member of the Menominee Nation and was raised on a reservation in northern Wisconsin. He recently released a six-song CD EP as a follow-up to his critically acclaimed 2000 self-titled debut that won the 2001 "Writer of the Year" (CD category) from Wordcraft Circle of Native Writers and Storytellers.

On Fernandez's recordings, all independently produced and distributed, his Black Wolf Band and local session artists also perform. A full-length CD is expected soon.

Fernandez, whose traditional name Wiciwen Apis-Mahwaew translates to "walks with the black wolf," uses guitar, hand drum, native flute, vocals and songwriting skills to combine the contemporary with the traditional. The result is a fusion he fondly calls "native soul/hood" music.

An accomplished artist, Fernandez has performed throughout Canada, Europe and the United States – including a performance at Woodstock '94 a portion of the 2000 Honor the Earth Tour and on Ed McMahon's "Next Big Star." He has performed with and/or shared the

Turn to FERNANDEZ, page 9

Video music awards dish out some laughs

By Bill Boyce
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

On August 29, MTV once again took over New York City's Radio City Music Hall. With performances by Bruce Springsteen and Jimmy Fallon within the first five minutes, this year's VMA's sealed the deal of becoming the best VMA's ever. The unforgettable show also featured an appearance from King of Pop Michael Jackson and the show ended with the return of one of my favorite bands, Guns N' Roses. There were also some great and so not so great performances. Being such a big fan of MTV, I decided to grade some of the artist's overall performances this year. If you missed the show, hopefully you can catch it sometime this week when on one of MTV's umpteenth reruns.

Jimmy Fallon

Okay, this guy should host every year. His opening routine was hilarious. He first came out dressed up like Dave Fallon continued his skit by bringing out the main character from Dave's video "Everyday." Fallon continued his parody by making fun of Nelly, which turned out to be the funniest one out of them all. Fallon brought out a bunch of half dressed dancers put a band-aid on his face and started singing Nelly's smash hit "Hot in Herre" Avril Lavigne and Enrique Iglesias were also some of the artists that Fallon made fun of. He ended his opening performance by dancing side by side with James Brown – an absolutely awesome conclusion to an already stellar performance. In the middle of the awards show, Fallon teamed up with Kirsten Dunst for a great skit in which Fallon found himself the butt of all the jokes.When Guns N' Roses were performing, you could see Fallon totally rocking on the side of the stage.

P. Diddy

P. Diddy is the man; his performance, to sum it up in one word, was unreal. This guy tops himself every time he does a live performance. This year he performed various songs like "I Need a Girl Part II" and "Pass the Courvesier." Usher came out in the beginning of the performance and rocked the crowd with his smooth dance steps. Exploding out of the crowd, Busta Rhymes joined P. Diddy and Usher on stage. The performance ended with approximately twenty dancers on stage joining all the artists. While everyone is singing and dancing fireworks explode behind them. With an unreal performance and all that talent on stage how could I not give Mr. Diddy and friends a good review?

Guns N' Roses

I love this band, and when I heard Jimmy Fallon announce them, I almost jumped through the ceiling of my apartment. Guns N' Roses opened their performance with of the most popular songs of all time, "Welcome to the Jungle." With the help of Buckethead on guitar, the entire place seemed to explode with excitement. Axl and the gang ended their unforgettable performance with their song "Paradise City." Even though it looked like Rose was out of steam at the end of the performance, it still will become one of the greatest performances in MTV VMA history.

Bruce Springsteen

What a way to open an awards show. Nothing can top Bruce Springsteen and the E Street Band rocking in the pouring rain to start the greatest awards show on TV. The entire band was rocking like they have been for the last twenty years. Few things can beat classic Springsteen music and it was awesome to see a packed crowd outside in the pouring rain just singing every word with Bruce.

Justin Timberlake

Ah, Justin Timberlake's first-ever solo performance. Yeah, it's safe to say that it did not do it for me. Justin, seriously, it's way past your bedtime. What was the deal with him coming out of a huge stereo? Another thing that bothered me about his performance was that he had a band and dancers backing him. Pick one or the other. He needs to develop his own identity as a solo artist. It looked like he was trying to be like Michael Jackson with his hat and his wardrobe.

Turn to AWARDS, page 6

Possession claims no ownership on big screen

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

POSSESSION
Directed by Neil LaBute
Starring Gwyneth Paltrow and Aaron Eckhart
Playing at the Academy of Music, Northampton

Neil LaBute, the scabrous enfant terrible behind such divisive black comedy scandals as In the Company of Men and Your Friends and Neighbors, doesn't seem like the first choice to direct a decorous adaptation of Possession, A.S. Byatt's 1990 literary romance. He did stretch with Nurse Betty – a tale of a Midwestern waitress delusionally obsessed with a soap opera actor, and the philosophical, love-struck hit man on her trail – but even that seemed at one with his previous works. LaBute may have opened a little, but he was still a cinematic misanthrope who relished taking a microscopic look at humanity's dark side.

With Possession, LaBute may have stretched too far. He has the competence to direct a literate romance that traces the parallel paths of two couples – modern literary scholars investigating the connection between two Victorian poets – but he doesn't quite fit. The movie is occasionally romantic but airless, a dusty heirloom protected under a glass shell. Possession is scholarly but lacking in soul.

It's possible that the movie may not have been transferable from the book. Told mostly in epistolary form, Byatt's novel translates into a movie about people reading letters. Yep, letters. Not the most scintillating of screen topics one could imagine. I can't wait for the movie in which the entire plot involves the writing of a newspaper article.

Possession is nothing more than a made for TV romance

Turn to POSSESSION, page 10

Mary J. Blige's Dance For Me worth a song and a dance

Mary J. Blige releases new remix hit

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MARY J. BLIGE
Dance for Me
MCA Records

If you are thinking the Queen of Hip-Hop Soul, Mary J. Blige, has followed the tired trend of making a remix album in hopes of squeezing every last penny out of consumers, you're sadly mistaken.

Blige helped start the trend with 1992's What's the 411: The Remix. Her second remix effort in a mere five-album career, Dance for Me, comes at the end of 2002's remix trend but still shows newcomers to the remix game how it's done.

There isn't a hint of hip-hop to be found anywhere on the remix album, but it's admittedly difficult to transform hip-hop tracks into full-force techno anthems. So Blige and her A-list remixers pump up the bass and tempo and sprinkle enough wizardry into the mix to create one of the best remix albums to come out in a while.

Blige will blow away those who didn't think she had the vocal chords or delivers to be a club diva. With the help of famed remix knob-twirlers Junior Vasquez and the Thunderpuss team behind her, the lukewarm "Rainy Days" (where Ja Rule's husky vocals are turned into speedy expressions) and "Your Child" are transformed into blazing dance cuts.

There are only ten tracks to the album, but Blige covers the dance bases quite well and stretches some of the songs to as much as nine minutes. There's surging samba house on "No More Drama" (Thunderpuss remix) featuring church-bells and a roller-coaster ride of tempo changes; Al B. Rich's dreamy, electronic grooves on the two-step "Never Been" and a piano-and-harp version of "Give Me You."

"Everything" (Curtis & Moore remix) and "Let No Man Put Asunder" are finely crafted disco jams. "Dance for Me" is put through fast-paced musikod breaks for added dance-floor fun.

A lot of Blige's songs were already great dance numbers (especially "Family Affair"), so it was hard to improve on many of them, but Blige, along with her remixers, did one fine job of doing just that on Dance for Me.

■ awards

Emmett

AMHERST COLLEGE
DINING SERVICES OPPORTUNITIES
COOKS • FOOD SERVERS
DISHWASHERS • KITCHEN RUNNERS
MEAL CHECKERS
CATERING
CAMPUS CENTER COFFEE HOUSE
Office of Human Resources, 306 Hicks Hall
Amherst College, Amherst, MA 01002-5000

Top ten picks for rockin' the charts

The best rock music summer had to offer

By Bill Bowce
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

This summer, for the most part, pop music lacked its, well, pop. The last couple of summers I found myself turning off the radio constantly because bands like The Backstreet Boys and 'N Sync were in heavy-duty rotation. But with pop music on the decline, this summer was different as various types of music emerged. Bands like The Hives and Jimmy Eat World made this summer one that music lovers will never forget. Even though some of these albums did not hit shelves during the summer, songs on each CD became popular. Here are the top 10 CDs you should have bought this summer and why.

1. The Strokes Is this It

Ladies and gentlemen this is indeed, it. The number one album of the summer belongs to The Strokes. These five guys blend together perfectly. Songs like "Someday" and "Last Night" are just some of the songs on the album that are truly amazing. The great thing about this band is that one member doesn't dominate the spotlight. If you have about 12 dollars lying around and truly love rock music, go out and buy this CD. You will not be sorry.

2. Dave Matthews Band Busted Stuff

I wouldn't necessarily label The Dave Matthews Band's music rock, but their new CD had to make the list because it is simply awesome. The song "Where Are You Going," the track off the Mr. Deeds soundtrack, is a great song, but not the best one on the album. "Bartender" takes the cake as it has turned into one of my all time favorites. I love the end of it when the entire band has a small jam out session.

3. The White Stripes White Blood Cells

The great thing about this band is that there are only two people in it. It is amazing to see that these two individuals (Meg and Jack White) can put together a sound like this. Coming out of Detroit, Mich., they have brought their own unique sound and stuff to radio stations everywhere. Their fast paced song "Fell in Love with a Girl" is wonderful. Also check out their song "Dead Leaves and the Dirty Ground."

4. John Mayer Room for Squares

John Mayer is incredible and that is the bottom line. We all know "No Such Thing" and even though radio stations seem to be playing it out, I quite frankly can't get enough of it. "City Love" is another standout song that is on this CD. The album is not too loud and not too soft, which makes it perfect listening music after you have had a tough day (especially now that classes started).

5. The Hives Lost Vol. Victims

All I have to say is "wow!" Flipping through the channels one night I came across this band who was performing on MTV 2's "2SBill" tour. The Hives were headlining the show and after two songs I was a fan. These five guys from Sweden rocked the entire time they were on stage. They never slowed down and one could see the crowd was eating up every minute of it. Their biggest hit this summer was the song "Hate to Say I Told You So". The video is simple and to the point and has an awesome guitar solo in it. "Find Another Girl" is another highlight on the album.

6. Jimmy Eat World Jimmy Eat World (Formerly titled Bleed American)

Jim Adkins, Tom Linton, Rich Burch and Zach Lind are the guys that make up this band. The guys changed the title of their recent album to Jimmy Eat World after the tragedies of September 11, 2001. If you have not seen the video for "The Middle" you had better hope VH1 or MTV plays it on one of those end-of-summer countdowns. "Sweetness," which is their new single, has also become popular with people all across America. Those two songs are not the only good ones on the CD however. The whole CD is awesome and those who have it know what I am talking about. If you don't have the CD, download "If you Don't, Don't."

7. No Doubt Rock Steady

Well, this band from California did it again, and this time it's better than ever. No Doubt has a great new original independent sound and it sounds hot. Their unique and creative sound has dominated radio stations all across America this summer. The cool thing about the CD is that each song is different and has a different feel to it. Gwen Stefani is obviously the leader of the group but it is good to finally see that with this album the other band members get the respect they rightly deserve. "Hella Good" and "Hey Baby" featuring Bounty Killer have received a good amount of airplay. "Underneath It All" featuring Lady Saw and "Making Out" are also worth checking out.

8. Nelly Nellyville

This summer Nelly was everywhere. If he wasn't on a television show promoting his new album you could find this rapper on almost radio station in the country. It is safe to say he dominated MTV, et. al. "Hot in Herre" was the lead cut off his new album to receive all the radio play. Bars and clubs in New York City ate this song up as I once heard it played three times in one night. His new song "Dilemma," a duet with Destiny's Child's Kelly Rowland, is also receiving a lot of attention as well. His first album Country Grammar sold over a million copies. Expect his new album to do the same.

9. Red Hot Chili Peppers By the Way

After seeing these guys at Woodstock '99, I became a huge fan of their music. Californication was a great album and their new CD By the Way is right up there with it. You have to love the way these four guys work with each other. The title track is unreal as Flea shines with his awesome bass solos. The whole album is great, but I especially like "Tear" and "Midnight". If you never had a chance to see these four guys perform live, try catching tickets next time they are around. You won't be sorry.

10. Weezer Maladroit

These guys keep reinventing themselves time and time again. Maladroit is their new album and so far from what I hear, it's quite good. The concept to use characters from the Muppets in their video for "Keep Fishin" was an awesome idea. "Dope Nose" is another great song that didn't get too much airplay this summer. Combining their new material with their old and you get one great live act.

There was so much excellent music out this summer a top ten list could not possibly highlight all the great albums released, which is why some honorable mentions are in order.

The first mention goes to Jack Johnson for his album Brushfire Fairytales. To his new fans his song "Flake" became popular this summer. "The News" is another of excellent track on Johnson's album. Heavily hyped Norah Jones also gets an honorable mention for her album Come Away With Me. She has an excellent voice, and her unique sound has gotten her a lot of attention this summer. Finally, Our Lady Peace rounds out the list with their new one Gravity. I cannot get enough of their new song "Somewhere Out There." They played New York City in mid August and gave their fans an unreal performance.

DIVA'S Nightclub
TUESDAY
HAVEN 18+
GOTH/INDUSTRIAL/DARKWAVE/FETISH
DOORS OPEN @ 9pm
WEDNESDAY
DRAG SHOW 18+
w/ HOLIDAY SPINNING PROGRESSIVE HOUSE!
21+ NO COVER
DOORS OPEN @ 9pm
THURSDAY
KARAOKE 18+
FRIDAY
SKIN 19+
DO-SO BOYS AND GIRLS
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm
SATURDAY
21+ DANCE PARTY
DJ STYLZ SPINNING TOP 40/TECHNO/HIP-HOP
DOORS OPEN @ 8pm
SUNDAY
COLLEGE NIGHT 18+
DJ OTIS SPINS WHAT YOU "NEED" TO HEAR
1/2 OFF COVER WITH YOUR COLLEGE I.D.
DOORS OPEN@ 8pm
$2.00 OFF COVER WITH THIS AD
OFFER EXPIRES 11-1-02
NOT VALID ON SUNDAYS AND SPECIAL EVENTS
492 PLEASANT ST. NORTHAMPTON, MA 413.586.8161

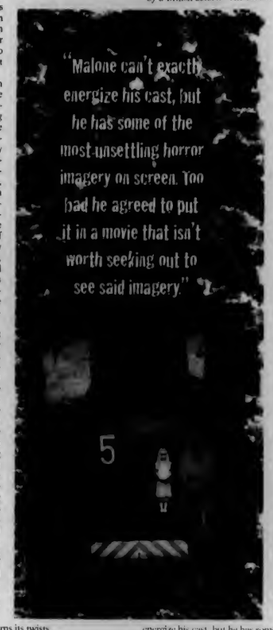
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!
•Cinder blocks
•Plywood
•Shelving and brackets
•Desktops
•Keys
•Bookcase material
•Paints
•Brushes, rollers
•Hardware
•Picture Hangers
10% OFF WITH THIS AD
150 COLLEGE STREET
LEADER HOME CENTERS
: 413-253-3411

LIQUORS 44
EVERYDAY PRICING!!!
½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99 + DEP
½ KEG BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICH. LIGHT $50.99 + DEP
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99 + DEP
COORS LIGHT & COORS 30 PACK $18.49 + DEP
GENESEE 30 PACK $9.99 + DEP
MOLSON CASE $15.99 + DEP
HARPOON 12 PACK $10.99 + DEP
BASS ALE 12 PACK $10.99 + DEP
GUINNESS STOUT & DRAUGHT 4 PACK $5.99 + DEP
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE $9.99 + DEP
MIKE'S 12 PACK $10.99 + DEP
CATCH THE SPIRIT
SMIRNOFF VODKA $18.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM $20.99
BACARDI LIMON & "O" RUM $10.99
GOLD TEQUILA $14.99
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH $12.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN $13.99
CANADIAN MIST $13.99
RUBINOFF VODKA $9.49
WOODBRIDGE WINES $10.99
CAVIT $9.99
ROSEMOUNT $9.49
KENDALL JACKSON $9.99
BOGLE $7.99
Arbor Mist $4.99
FRANZIA $6.99
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

Write for Arts

FAST, FREE
textbook delivery
at bn.com!
Over 300,000 New and USED textbooks
FREE shipping on 2 or more items
Convenient Online Book Buyback Program
Save up to 40%!
BARNES&NOBLE.com
www.bn.com
Restrictions apply. Offer subject to change. Visit www.bn.com for details.

Feardotcom misses its mark—so bad, it's scary



By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

FEARDOTCOM
Directed by William Malone
Starring Stephen Dorff, Stephen Rea and Natascha McElhone
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Feardotcom, a pretentious and garish New Exploitation horror movie, is distinctive in a way few of this year's other bad movies are: it manages to be both awful and sublime at the same time.

The movie is filled with grotesque images of torture and bondage, yet it never fesses up to the fact it is nothing but a trashy B-movie with one perverse, low-down hook – naked women being ritually tormented. Instead, the filmmakers have come to the conclusion that their movie, awful and inept as it is, is a social commentary – a dissection of the modern infotainment age's need to watch. The movie's lack of its courage of convictions is one of its many sins, and still the director, William Malone, has a lurid visual charge. Feardotcom is in dire need of a (much) better script, yet at least Malone can hammer together an interesting looking bad movie.

The images, quick cut splices of Disturbing Imagery (yes, with a capital D and I), would've held an eerie ominous power if they hadn't been used to Scotch-tape together a movie that is confused and incoherent in the telling of it's plot (forget ambiguous – the screenwriter himself probably doesn't know what the hell is going on). The basic premise, that an Internet website has the power to channel negative energy and kill those logging on via their worst fears, holds promise. And so does Malone's visual schemas, all murky, nourish cinematographis and ghostly imagery. But the plot is a jumbled hash of serial killer and supernatural storylines that never convincingly mesh and scenes that jump around without ever clearly establishing their connections. Feardotcom never earns its twists.

Here's what I could tell from the plot: Stephen Dorff, already the victim of Deuces Wild, plays a cop in an unnamed large city who partner's with Natachsa McElhone's Department of Health investigator when a series of dead bodies, each one bleeding from his eyes, turn up around the city. Each victim has only one connection with the others: they all died within 48 hours of logging on to feardotcom.com, a gruesome website run by "The Doctor" (Stephen Rea, speaking in what may possibly be the worst American accent ever uttered by a British actor). "The Doctor" is a serial killer who delights in torturing young woman until they beg for death (he kills them by giving them an autopsy) and then broadcasts their torment to a curious and ever-expanding audience of online viewers.

At least that's one way to look at it.

The website could also be run by the vengeful spirit of "The Doctor's" first victim, a hemophiliac afraid of sharp implements named Jeannie, who is killing the viewers – those she perceives as guilty. The movie actually never makes it clear whose website it really is. "The Doctor," a skeleton in Dorff's closet, never uses the same site twice and has already used the feardotcom.com URL to chart one of his victims. This twist could mean the spirit of Jeannie is running the accursed site. However, "The Doctor" likes to check on the number of subscribers he receives, which could indicate that he does run the site. So, screenwriter Josehpine Coyle, which is it?

And so it goes throughout Feardotcom. Dorff and McElhone discover things without discovering them. It's more like they just correctly guess everything. And believe me, I would've spoiled some secrets by now – if I could only figure out the secrets to spoil.

Rea, with a nasally fake patois that makes him sound like a congested cartoon character, is meant to be menacing. Instead, he comes off as banal –a post-post-Hannibal Lecter madman that we've seen far too many times before. The supporting cast, mostly unknowns, is distractingly over-the-top. Dorff and McElhone just seem bored.

Malone can't exactly energize his cast, but he has some of the most unsettling horror imagery on screen. Too bad he agreed to put it in a movie that isn't worth seeking out to see said imagery.

Fernandez

continued from page 5

stage with Mary Young Blood, Jackson Browne, Mitch Walking Elk, Douglas Spotted Eagle, Annie Humphrey, The Indigo Girls, Bill Miller, Redbone, Robert Redford, Robert Mirabal, Star Nayea, Keith Secola and Desmond Tutu.

Drawing inspiration from "everybody that played music and moved me in some way," Fernandez began his musical journey by banging on his mom's pots and pans and listening to his parents' varied album collection. He picked up his father's guitar at around age 11 and has since been playing formally.

Comfortable playing the blues, flamenco, jazz, native, rock and traditional among other styles, Fernandez's sound reflects his diversity of influences – ranging from the Beatles to Miles Davis to Charlie Parker to Stevie Ray Vaughn.

And his tribe.

"I can't deny where I came from or any part of me, 'cause if I did, then I would be half of what I am," Fernandez said. "Whoever you are or wherever you came from, you have to let that be a part of whatever contribution you make. Then people [will] notice, because they'll know you're not bullshitting."

The opening track, "Still Standing Proud," on his new self-titled CD EP backs up Fernandez's words.

Here Fernandez sings about some of the effects of over five centuries of planned genocide and underdevelopment of Native nations and indigenous people by the British, French and U.S. governments: boarding schools, environmental destruction as well as epidemic levels of addiction, diabetes and other diseases. Numerous other painful issues like racism, poverty, stolen land and under/unemployment also surface.

But Fernandez's lyrics, amid fluid and healing drum work, flute, guitar and vocal chanting on "Still Standing Proud," transcend this devastation. Illuminating the dignity, love, hope, humor, resiliency, resistance, perseverance and integrity of his tribe and other indigenous and native people, Fernandez sums up his feelings with the chorus: "We stood up tall/ We're still standing proud/ Never broken down/ Still standing proud."

Other tracks include a lullaby chant, "Nicianosaeh Weh-Nepaenon," for Fernandez's and his wife Paula's (Kamewan-Nukiw) newborn daughter Baby Cedar (Waqsepakecewin) and son Baby Wade (Wahpi-Mahwaesaeh). There's an honor song accompanied by a single drum, "Nenah Kemanon Nokomaeh," named for his late grandmother and the song "Before Tomorrow's Today," in which Fernandez sings, "Don't drown your dreams in a sea of tears," to a melancholy beat.

A standout track, "Little Cedar," is a dedication to Cedar where Fernandez sings poignantly alongside a gentle solo acoustic guitar melody accompanied by a hand drum: "Close your eyes it'll be alright/ Stretch your limbs and take to flight.../ With love you'll grow strong and wise../ Little Cedar may your wisdom shine—your beauty flow from inside/ Good night my little girl."

The track "On the Reservation," is a refreshing mix of risk taking and spontaneity rarely practiced in today's music world. Beginning with a driving rock-guitar riff backed by rolling drums and bass, Fernandez's frenetic, almost hip-hop style vocals segue into a poetry-like spoken-word that draws one in. "On my reservation we got elders, traditions, dreams and beautiful children. But it ain't no fairy tale movie or some new age paradise. 'Cause we also got alcohol, drugs, gangs and violence. Two worlds to balance, the old and the new: win or lose, which will we choose? For our children. For our children's children."

In addition to recording and performing, Fernandez conducts cultural presentations/workshops, performs speaking engagements and teaches a youth music program on the Menominee Reservation.

Besides these and his family commitments, Fernandez's time is spent trying to help youth with addiction problems or behavioral barriers.

He is also active with various environmental issues – including the struggle against a proposed Crandon mine near the Wolf River in northern Wisconsin. (Environmentalists, indigenous people, Native nations and tribes, sportspersons and others claim the mine would pollute one of the cleanest rivers and surrounding ecosystems in North America. The Menominee Nation considers the Wolf River sacred and part of its lifeblood.)

For his contributions, Fernandez has been presented with the "Tomorrow's Leaders Today" award and the Medal of Honor from the Menominee Nation among other awards and recognitions.

Throughout his art and life's work, one can't help but feel Fernandez's infectious hope, humility and talent amid his eternal honor and respect for his people's traditions.

Those that love true art have something to look forward to in Fernandez: an artistic and spiritual force that has just begun to gather steam.

Bryan G. Pfeifer is a graduate student at the University of Massachusetts and previously published this story on Independent Media Center website.

Fernandez brings his life experiences into his music.

Attention all imaginative persons seeking a fun and productive way to channel your creativity.

◆◆◆

The first all-staff Arts and Living meeting will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 7:30 p.m.

◆◆◆

All those interested in writing for Arts and Living are asked to come down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement and check it out.

Good in Bed truly a woman's delight

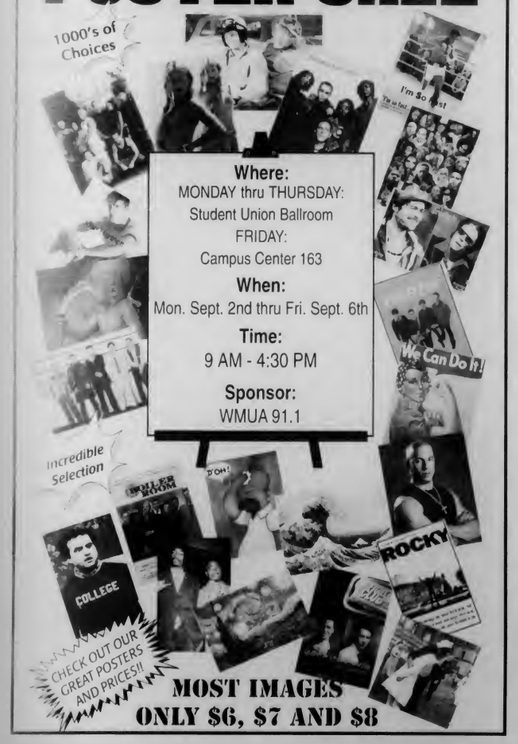
By Lizzy Nieben
COLLEGIAN STAFF

GOOD IN BED
Jennifer Weiner
Washington Square Press

Every girl needs a book to lie out on the beach and read during the summertime. The book of summer 2002 has got to be the story of Cannie Shapiro and her struggle of coming to grips with lost love, body image and a dysfunctional family.

At the outset we meet Cannie, a 28-year-old entertainment reporter for the Philadelphia Enquirer. She has recently broken up with her pot-smoking hippie of a writer boyfriend, Bruce, in order to find herself and take a break from the stresses of a relationship for a while. She's coming to grips with her size-16 body and accepting herself for who she is rather than what she looks like. Her mother has come charging out of the closet, and Cannie is none too fond of her mother's new life partner, Tonya. Cannie's father has been missing from her life since she was young, and as much as all this seems hard to cope with, she has wonderful friends and the most loyal of dogs in her little terrier, Nifkin.



Just as everything seems to be falling into place, Bruce, a well-known magazine writer, publishes an article in a national magazine called "Loving a Larger Woman." This article, quite obviously about her, humiliates Cannie to unbelievable proportions. This motivates her to join yet another "fat study," where she meets Dr. K, the doctor in charge of the study who takes a liking to Cannie's personality and biting humor. This sets in motion a stream of introductions to characters that end up making a huge impact on the story. There's Gabby, Cannie's aging boss at the Enquirer, who lacks understanding of pop-culture staples like MTV, despite being an entertainment reporter for a major newspaper. There's Maxi Ryder, the movie star that accidentally becomes a close friend to Cannie. They have a hilarious experience in Hollywood when Cannie is out visiting her that involves a completely wasted handsome movie star as well as some exchanged words with the lead singer of a punk band. And then there's Cannie's sister, the budding actress and rubber glove model who makes Thanksgiving dinner an interesting experience.

Bruce's father dies during the early parts of the story, and Bruce and Cannie have an encounter that leaves Cannie in a very delicate situation. The drama begins to escalate in the story and peaks after Cannie makes a trip to Los Angeles to successfully sell a screenplay that she has written. Upon her return, she has a falling out with Bruce's new girlfriend in the airport, escalating tension to new heights.

"Good in Bed" has it all. I laughed, I cried and I was shocked by some of the things that happened to Cannie. The dialogue had points where I was laughing so hard I was crying. But I think the strongest aspect of this book is its realness. Readers can relate to Cannie and the emotions she's feeling and the thoughts she is thinking. It's not a story about a bigger woman who works her tail off and loses 50 pounds. It's a story about a woman who learns to accept herself and love all of herself, not portions of it.

Cannie's a woman with a brain and a sense of humor and compassion – and she has a lot to offer the world: it's just a matter of her realizing it. Sorry guys, I wouldn't recommend this book to you unless you enjoy reading stories of everyday female anguish. But for any woman who is looking for a feel-good realistic story about one woman's journey through life, definitely check out this book. This story is the story of one woman's journey to accepting herself, her past, her future and realizing what she is truly capable of.

THE BIGGEST BACK TO SCHOOL
POSTER SALE

MOST IMAGES
ONLY $6, $7 AND $8

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE

- »Longer, More convenient hours
- »No hassle
- »Quicker shopping-No long lines
- »More Pleasant Shopping Environment
- »Support a local independent business, not a national chain
- »Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters

WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES

RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM

Jeffery Amherst Bookshop and College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

Juniors, Seniors, Grads, Commuters

This year is the year to leave behind the expense and hassle of cooking and cleaning up with Your Campus Meal Plan

In addition to the extensive array of award winning entrées available at the campus dining commons, YCMP members have daily access to a wide variety of cuisine as fresh, vibrant and diverse as the community it serves

Options include
Sushi Bar, Vegetarian and Vegan entrées and side dishes, complete Kosher meals, The Asian Noodle Bowl, International Station, Grab-n-Go Fresh Express meals, Stir Fry Station, Italian Pasta Bar, Full Service Grill, 40 Item Salad Bars, Bake Shop desert treats and Guest Chefs from local restaurants.

Use your YCMP at any of these conveniently located dining commons
Worcester, Franklin, Hillel, Hampshire and Berkshire

Or select campus retail outlets including
Bluewall, Hatch Food Court, Starbucks Coffee Cart, The MarketPlace Cafe, Earthfoods, Whitmore, Hampden, Physical Plant, Greenough, Sylvan and Sweets-n-More Snack Bars

With so many options to choose from you're never more than a few steps away from an exciting, nutritious and delicious meal.

Continuous Dining from 7:00 am to 2:00 am*

View menus online

www.aux.umass.edu/diningservices

For more information: Visit our Meal Plan Office at Franklin Dining Commons or our table on the Campus Center Concourse
*Hours of operation vary from location to location

Possession

Aspley Eckhart, who has appeared in LaMotte's movies plays Roland Michell, an American scholar in London who stumbles upon a discovery that could turn the literary world upside down. He has found two love letters written by the poet Randolph Henry Ash, a Victorian scholar not his wife for many years of chief that Ash was in the throes of ecstatic bliss. Michell takes the assumption for a lead, teams up with Daniel Bailey (Gwyneth Paltrow, also starring in) knack for research) as an ex-scholar whose specialty is Victorian era lesbian poet Christabel LaMotte played by Jennifer Ehle, and has the elegant look of a young Meryl Streep. Together Michell and Bailey discover that Ash and LaMotte were illicit lovers while trying to keep their findings from the hands of rival scholars (Trevor Eve, Toby Stephens) — and avoiding their own feelings for each other.

The screenplay, by LaMotte, David Henry Hwang and Laura Jones, like the novel, alternates between the two eras. But LaMotte, Hwang and Jones can't make either era very interesting. Put on screen, the romance between Ash and LaMotte plays like a Merchant Ivory rerun — period soap opera involving secret affairs, suicidal lovers and bastard children. Northam and Ehle, two actors who have all but mastered the period drama, acquit themselves nicely and have some chemistry together, the same cannot be said of Paltrow and Eckhart.

Eckhart has carefully tousled hair, a chiseled physique, two-day stubble and a frat-boy's cocky grin. He's not a literary detective — he's too hunky for that. That's not to say that the people who research books for a living must be nerds, but Eckhart seems more like an NH star — all brash charm and good looks, but nothing actually convinces that he's in love with the world of literature. He fails to strike sparks with Paltrow, playing the kind of emotionally frigid woman who must keep her hair in a tightly wrapped bun until she is set free by the love of a hunky man.

Possession is built like it was designed to headline a night on the Romance Channel (I expected Colin Cowie to appear on screen after the closing credits). LaMotte has proved he can make a warm and human romantic drama. Now let's hope he makes a better one.

Gwyneth Paltrow plays a literary character seeking emotional rest.

All-staff Collegian meeting on Wed., Sept. 11. Time to be announced.

All those interested in working for The Collegian should attend.

Arts and Living is seeking a caricature artist.

Think you have the talent? Come down to the Collegian office in Campus Center Basement and speak with the Arts and Living editors: Jen, Nick and Lizzy.

MERCYhouse
it's a church
www.knowmercy.org

Discounted up to 70%

September 9 through September 13, 2002
Monday - Thursday 9am - 9pm
Friday 9am - 5pm

free admission - open to the public

Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
200 Commonwealth Avenue
Amherst, MA 01003

J.CREW

American Red Cross

Each day in New England, the American Red Cross must collect 1,700 units of lifesaving blood to maintain an adequate bloodsupply. This blood comes from healthy members of the community just like you.

Please take an hour of your day to give someone another chance at life.

Share Your Health. Donate Blood Today.

To donate Blood:

- You must be 17 years old
- You must weigh at least 110 pounds
- You must be in good general health
- It must be 56 days since your last donation

Upcoming UMass Blood Drives

- Monday September 9th Campus Center Room 174 10:30AM-4:30PM
- Monday September 16th Campus Center Room 174 10:30AM-4:30PM
- Wednesday September 25th Campus Center Room 174 10:30AM-4:30PM
- Monday September 30th Campus Center Room 174 10:30AM-4:30PM

*Each donor will receive a collectible American Red Cross T-Shirt, an AT&T prepaid phone card and be entered into a raffle for a pair of tickets to the BIG E.

*Sponsored by Sigma Epsilon Phi Fraternity Look for other giveaways & raffle prizes throughout the semester.

For more information or to make an appointment, please call 1-800-462-2229 or stop by the American Red Cross table in the Campus Center on the day of the blood drives.

Visit our Website at www.newenglandblood.org

Together, We Can Save A Life.

Rudd Field is located next to the Softball Complex on Massachusetts Ave.

Rudd

continued from page 10

million. They were very excited to provide the opportunity for us."

The proposal became a reality when groundbreaking and construction began on May 6. Along with the $300,000 gift received from the Rudds, the UMass Athletic Fund has raised an additional $200,000 in contributions to pay for the project, estimated at a cost of $901,000.

"The economy's not the best to raise money, but we're very fortunate that the Rudds stepped up," Nitardy said.

"This is the first athletic project that has been completely funded by outside resources," Rudy said. "The administration really jumped on board and made sure this was a go."

Still, the University and the Athletic Department have even greater aspirations for their brand-new facility. Nitardy said that he hopes to soon be able to install a press box, permanent grandstands, and a sound system to make the field complete. And with the interest expressed through the fundraising and construction of Rudd Field, those additions could occur sooner rather than later.

"We hope to raise another $700,000," Nitardy said. "But the fact that [Andrew Rudd] gave us the opportunity to act as a catalyst and get other people interested, we were able to raise another $200,000."

"What we're hoping for right now is to finish this off, that would make it an unbelievable, first-rate facility," Rudy said. "But what's happening here is that we're on our way.

"Now, we can bring recruits in, and they're going to be somewhat impressed," he added.

And it's not just the coaching staff and administration that are excited about the unveiling of the new project: the players are equally excited.

"It pumps you up, gets you going," said Carly Turnnan, a sophomore midfielder on the women's squad. "We've got a new field, a new everything."

For five years previous to this season, the two UMass soccer squads hosted home contests on Totman Field, a surface that was originally only supposed to be used on a temporary basis. But now with Rudd Field, the University has not only a facility that could potentially bring in prized soccer recruits, but also a place the campus and the community can showcase.

"The whole entryway, it just jumps out at you," Nitardy said. "Once that's completed, it's going to be a tremendous message as people come in. It's a good statement for athletics."

The Minutewomen will christen Rudd Field this Friday against Rhode Island, with the official opening ceremonies to be held on Sunday against Boston University. And although the ceremony will be completed in under an hour, it's safe to assume it will leave an impression lasting long after the final buzzer sounds.

BC

continued from page 16

The Minutewomen surrendered 36 shots to the Eagles over 90 minutes but were able to keep it close by limiting BC's quality scoring opportunities.

"They organized well and they got at us," Rudy said. "We started playing deeper and deeper and it got to the point where the field was open for them to attack, but our defense did a great job."

He mentioned the solid defensive play of junior Michelle Luttati as well as the efforts in net by his junior netminder.

"Kelly didn't have a lot of things to save, but she got everything done calmly and confidently," he said.

She finished with a career-high 12 saves, while her BC counterpart Kate Taylor was forced to parry only a pair of strikes on the afternoon.

Nigh performed admirably in her return to action after being plagued by a minor injury in the preseason. She showed no jitters in her first game as the team's clear-cut number one goalie.

Friday's game marked the first time that Rudy and his troops were able to unleash their new offensive scheme in a game situation.

The more possession-oriented style of play, which Rudy likened to many European systems, did not generate the type of production that the 15th year coach was looking for.

With only two shots on goal recorded for the match, Rudy said he saw little that he liked from his offense, but believed that his team did have a few chances to dent the scoreboard.

"Despite being dominated, we had a few chances to beat them but we didn't execute," Rudy said.

However, the sideline leader knows it might take a few games before his squad becomes completely adjusted to his new offensive set.

With a lineup consisting of eight freshmen and his upperclassmen learning a brand new system, there will certainly be some growing pains.

"It's going to take some time," Rudy said. "Unfortunately, we're trying to break it in against some heavy hitters, and people who are going to put us under pressure."

Co-captain Martha Conover and the women's soccer team managed just two shots on goal in the 1-0 loss to Boston College.

J.CREW

HELP WANTED
for WAREHOUSE SALE

Sept. 9 - Sept. 13

Mullins Center
UMASS
200 Commonwealth Ave.

MOTIVATED WORKERS NEEDED
AM/PM SHIFTS AVAILABLE
$7.50 pr hr - 4 HOUR SHIFTS

CALL (732) 974 - 4174

CURIOUS about online courses?

ask us for a free course catalog or check it out on the Web
Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/

UMASS
UMass Amherst
Fall Semester 2002
a lifetime of learning opportunities

Kristin Hopwood and the UMass tennis team lost their first two games of the season on Friday and Saturday.

UMass loses heartbreaker

OT deflection hands team second loss

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Northeastern 3, UMass 2

Massachusetts field hockey goalkeeper Ashley Egland didn't even know how the ball got in the net. All she knew was that her team had suddenly started its season 0-2.

Monday, in front of the loyal Richard F. Garber Field crowd, the Minutewomen succumbed to defending America East champions Northeastern, as Husky forward Sarah Webber was able to ricochet a shot off the UMass defense directly into the cage. The overtime goal resulted in a 3-2 victory over the Maroon and White.

In the 82nd minute of play, with the scored knotted at two, a scramble for the ball ensued in front of the UMass cage. Webber gained control of the ball in the middle of the zone and fired a shot that then hit off the stick of a UMass defender and trickled into the net.

"I have no idea what happened," Egland said. "I think it was just miscommunication between me and the defenders."

As the ball hit the back of the net, the players displayed dejection on their faces as they had worked so hard to get themselves back in the game.

Coming out of halftime, the Huskies and Minutewomen were tied at zero. However, within the first 10 minutes of the second half, Northeastern had taken a commanding 2-0 lead.

"We got out of our game plan the first 10 minutes of the second half," Massachusetts Head Coach Patty Shea said. "They [Northeastern] were able to capitalize on it."

Twenty-three seconds after the two straight NU goals, UMass was able to counter the Huskies' scoring spree step by step. The first step towards getting back in the game was taken by a member of the team that is taking her first steps on the Amherst campus.

Freshman midfielder Rachel Skorupski put home her first career goal in the 44th minute when, off a rebound in the Northeastern zone, she blasted a shot past the Husky goalie, putting UMass on the board.

"Rachel was really poised," Shea said. "She was awarded for getting into the right place at the right time."

"I am really excited," Skorupski said after the match. "I cannot really ask for a better first goal."

Following Skorupski's goal, with nearly eight minutes left in the contest, UMass sophomore Caitlin Beresin received a perfect pass from senior co-captain Erika Whiston, leaving her open in front of the net. Beresin capitalized on the defensive breakdown and fired away resulting in a game-tying goal.

Northeastern dominated the corners category throughout as the final stat was 21-3, NU. In the last five minutes of the contest, UMass felt the pressure of those corners, as there were three straight at one point in the UMass zone. However, Egland clamped down and secured the 2-2 tie.

"You just try to keep your composure and settle everyone down," Egland said. "All you can do is wait and read what they do."

Egland's fantastic read on the balls helped send the game into overtime. In the extra session, UMass had major chances to win the game, but a bad bounce resulted in another loss for the Minutewomen.

"We competed and we did better than the first game," Shea said. "We will continue to get better."

Boston University 2, UMass 1

In an attempt to shake off the off-season rust, UMass dueled with another regional rival, Boston University, in its season opener Saturday. However, one game may not have been enough to shake off all the rust.

The Minutewomen came up short in their first contest of the 2002 campaign – losing to the Terriers, 2-1 at Garber Field.

"We did a lot of good things," coach Shea said. "We just need to clean up some things and show more discipline."

The Minutewomen jumped out to an early 1-0 lead in the 27th minute when freshman Jamie Bawden scored the first collegiate goal of her career.

Seven minutes later, just before the end of the first half, BU countered the early UMass punch and evened the score at one.

In the second half, the Minutewomen could not find a rhythm. They repeatedly found themselves defending their own zone rather than attacking the Terriers' cage.

"We have to attack the goal," Shea said. "We are making passes and the getting the ball in the right places but now we have to make a pact to go to the ball and attack it. Everyone should take a 100 percent risk out there."

As a result of the Maroon and White playing on their heels, the Terriers were able to snap the tie in the 49th minute of play when BU forward Lindsey Domers put one past Egland en route to the 2-1 victory.

"It's disappointing, but now we know what we have to improve on," Shea said.

Sophomore Ashley Gilbert had an assist in Wednesday's 3-1 loss to BC. Read about the game in tomorrow's Collegian.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Mill Valley ESTATES
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
OPEN 7 DAYS Delivery Available
ICHIBAN
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice. Stay healthy & live longer! "This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

Tai Pei Tokyo
To hire 1 CASHIER for Chinese Restaurant located in Northamton.
Must be able to speak and write Mandarin Chinese.
Please call 413-582-1888
16 Main St Northampton 01060

COWLS
BACK TO SCHOOL
Great Ideas!
Organize your study space!
• Install shelving
• Build a bookcase
• Design a computer station
Choose shelving of Melamine, Plywood, COWLS pine or COWLS oak. Select from a variety of fastening systems using clips, standards or brackets.
NOTE: We cut shelving to your specifications!
Customize a school tool box!
Be the HANDY PERSON in your dorm!
Tool boxes, tools, fasteners, supplies and the expertise you need ...
ALL AT COWLS!
COWLS BUILDING SUPPLY
For All Your Building and Remodeling Needs
125 Sunderland Road, North Amherst
7-5 M-F • 8-3 Sat. • FREE local delivery
413-549-0001 • www.cowls.com

TechCavalry
help is on the way!
Computer Troubles?
We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com
Tape this ad to your computer!

BE ADVISED!
PRE-MAJOR ADVISING SERVICES
615 GOODELL BUILDING
TEL 545-2191
N W E S
SERVING UNIVERSITY UNDECLARED & PRE-MAJOR STUDENTS
ADVISORS AVAILABLE MONDAY-FRIDAY 9:00-4:30

DEPARTMENT OF GERMANIC LANGUAGES & LITERATURES
510 Herter Hall 545-2350
www.umass.edu/germanic
OPEN CLASSES
•All German Language Courses, Elementary To Advanced
•All German Literature and Culture Courses Taught in German
•The Following General-Interest Courses (Taught in English)
-German 297A Crusades and The Image of Islam Cross listed with History 297A & Middle Eastern Studies 297A MWF 11:15
-German 304 From Berlin to Hollywood (AT) TUTH 1:00 - 2:15 W 6-9 PM, Screening
-German 365 Scandinavian Myth (AI) MWF 1:25
-German 372 Vienna 1890 - 1914 TUTH 11:15 - 12:30
-German 497A Women in the Cold War TUTH 11:15 - 12:30
-Swedish 110 Elementary Swedish MWF 11:15

Koch breaks school win record at Navy Tourney

Senior co-captain Yuri Morales is tied for the team lead with three shots on goal in the first two games of the season.

Minutemen fall 3-2 to host in second round

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Just two games into its season, the Massachusetts men's soccer team is already making marks in the history books.

With an opening game win at the Navy Tournament over Towson last weekend, head coach Sam Koch became the winningest coach in the history of the program.

The weekend wasn't all victories and milestones, however, as the Minutemen fell to the host Midshipmen 3-2 in the final game of the tournament.

Navy took the win on an overtime goal by junior Matt Sanchez, who found the net on a breakaway after seven minutes of extra time.

The scoring had been all UMass for much of the first half. Senior Jason Golesky opened the scoring for the Minutemen with a 30-yard blast to the top corner just 4:36 into the game. It was Golesky's first goal of the year, and the third of his career.

Senior Jeff Deren continued the scoring for UMass with a goal at the 14:11 mark. Deren and his mates benefited from a little luck, as the ball was sent into the net off a Navy foot in an attempt to block Deren's header.

The Maroon and White held its 2-0 lead until 37:58, when Sanchez netted his first goal of the game. Senior Dan Montgomery tied the game for the Midshipmen at the 65:36 mark. Montgomery found a rebound off a corner kick in the box, and blasted it past UMass keeper Colin Burns for the tying goal.

Scoring stalled for the remainder of regular time, and for seven overtime minutes until Sanchez' goal gave Navy the win.

"We made some freshman mistakes, some rookie mistakes," Koch said. "That turned the momentum of the game. We learned that a 2-0 lead is a very dangerous lead, and hard to hold. Navy just kept battling hard, and put us under pressure."

Navy out-shot the Minutemen in the match, 15-12, but UMass led in corner kicks, 6-4.

"We missed a few chances against Navy," Koch said. "If we put a few balls in, that game doesn't even go to overtime."

The story of the weekend, however, was the UMass victory on Saturday over the Tigers of Towson University, which gave Koch the record.

The Minutemen took the match on a goal by senior Jeff Deren at the 88:58 mark. Deren put a shot past Towson goalkeeper Andy Hicks to the far side of the net for his first goal of the year.

The scoring had been back-and-forth throughout the match, with Towson netting the first goal at 5:20. Towson senior Ade Elliott headed a cross past UMass goalkeeper Enzo Altomare.

UMass struck back 20 minutes later, when Path Myers slid a rebound past Hicks to knot the game at one.

Senior Andrew Eicher headed a Derek Rhodes corner kick into the net at 41:44 to give the Minutemen the 2-1 lead heading into the half. In the second half, Towson senior Machel Millwood, who assisted on the Tigers' first goal, notched one of his own with an unassisted tally at 67:58.

Deren's late score put the Minutemen ahead, however, and they held on for their first victory of the season.

The Minutemen were on-shot at this game as well, with the Tigers holding a 17-16 edge, though UMass once again had the advantage in corner kicks. Altomare's performance (15 saves on 17 shots) was a large factor in the win for UMass.

Koch was unimpressed with his team's play, however.

"We were very fortunate. Towson played very well, but they missed some opportunities, missed some empty nets."

Ironically enough, Koch felt that his charges performed better against Navy than against Towson.

It was also Koch's 124th victory at the helm of the Maroon and White, pushing him ahead of Lawrence Briggs, who coached the team from 1930 to 1967. Briggs amassed his 123 win over nearly 37 years, with three seasons absent due to World War II. Koch has reached the milestone in just 11 years, two of which were years in which the Minutemen won the Atlantic 10 regular season title. Over that span, Koch's teams have posted an impressive 123-76-8 record.

"I must be getting old," Koch said. "You only get records like that once you're around long enough."

Koch also chalked up much of his success to his assistant coaches.

"You need a good support staff to be successful, and I've had some excellent assistants."

There are some issues and concerns that lay ahead for the Minutemen, the most troubling of them being the young defensive corps. Koch sees improvement on the near horizon though, due in part to the assistance given by some of the veterans on the team.

"The older players are doing a great job of supporting the younger players, teaching them how to defend. There are a number of players on the field who are like assistant coaches for me. That helps the transition happen faster."

Koch also made mention of two coaches at UMass who have become models for his success.

"I think that what [Baseball Coach] Mike Stone and [Former Water polo and current Swimming and Diving Coach] Russ Yarworth have done is just so impressive. Coach Stone is my idol. I just want to be like him," said Koch. "I'm very proud to call both of them my colleagues."

Perhaps Koch should expect the same remarks from them.

Not to be entirely overshadowed by Koch's entry in the record books, Deren also earned the inaugural Dinn Brothers UMass Athlete of the Week award.

The Minutemen will stay on the road, but return to Massachusetts to play a visit to Boston University on Friday. Match time is set for 7 p.m.

Path Myers scored the first UMass goal against Towson.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3
BLAST II SHOCKWAVE
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
BLAST II SHOCKWAVE is the next generation of the 2001 Tony Award winning theatrical spectacular, BLAST!. Exploding with color, light, movement and music, this new production explores this contemporary genre with new cutting edge artistry. Part precision marching band, part spectacular pageant and 100% excitement; it is a soaring take-off to new frontiers of sight and sound.
SPONSORED by PEOPLES BANK and WRNX
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10
JON NAKAMATSU, PIANO
Bowker Auditorium at 7:30pm
The Gold Medallist of the Tenth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, Nakamatsu takes a showman's delight with his big keyboard style. He performs with innate phrasing, spontaneous musicianship and joyous abandon. He'll pull you right on stage with him.
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17
MARK MORRIS DANCE GROUP
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
Liking his dances is the easiest thing in the [illegible] His dance smoke was full in... with dancing, dancing with music flowing so whole hearted it transmits an overflow of joy. And the experience - performing to live music - is rare today.
SPONSORED by WFCR
Catch the beat
Share the Joy
TICKETS ONLY $7, $10, & $15
FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS
545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS FOR TICKETS
online at www.fineartscenter.com
WHMP 100.9FM
PeoplesBank
88.5 WFCR

THE MONKEY BAR
Monthly Drink Specials
Rum & Coke..... .....$2.50
Bud/Bud Light Draft.....$2.00
Bud/Bud Light Pitchers.....$5.00
Try the Monkey Bar Original Drink "Vanilla Gorilla"
Come check out the brand new video/dvd system!
2002 Entertainment Lineup
Tuesday - Techno Tuesday
- DJ Fooz spinning International Techno, Trance, and House music
Wednesday - Playtime at the Monkey Bar
- DJ Playtime spinning Hip-Hop, R&B, Reggae, and Party Music
Thursday - Fusion
- DJ Fooz (SYBPRODUCTIONS.COM) spinning an eclectic mix of Hip-Hop, R&B, Techno, and Remixes
- Free mixed cd giveaway
Friday - Turntable Tactics
- DJ Menace (DJMENACE.COM) spinning the hottest Hip-Hop and R&B
Saturday - Coyote Ugly Guest DJ Night
- Guest DJ's spin a variety of styles
- Beautiful and talented bartenders sing, dance, and get crazy beginning Sept 14th www.mymonkeybar.com
The Monkey Bar
63 N. Pleasant Street
413.259..1600

Daily Collegian CLASSIFIED

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

AUTO FOR SALE

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Turbo East Car Mechanic owned High mileage Many New Parts, $2300.00 413-665-3931

WANTED: Funky, Sassy girls with the ability to dance, sing, & work a crowd. Call (413) 537-8527 for more info.

DJS WANTED

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

WANTED: Earn money thering. Call (413) 537-8527

MOVERS WANTED

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises com-

APARTMENT FOR RENT

mensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

CAMPUS SPOKESPERSON NEEDED $15.00 PER HOUR JOB ON CAMPUS. CAMPUS INFORMATION SERVICES IS CURRENTLY SEEKING HIGHLY MOTIVATED STUDENTS MUST HAVE STRONG INTERPERSONAL SKILLS VERY OUTGOING. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL 1-800-375-5701.

SPRING BREAK

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Hottest Destinations – Best Prices

EMPLOYMENT

Book Now! Campus Reps Wanted 1-800-234-7007 endlesssummer-tours.com

Part-Time Delivery and Warehouse help for local furniture store Flexible hours. Tues.-Sat. 256-6184 ask for James

LIFEGUARDS

Lifeguards/WSI The Town of Amherst, Department of Leisure Services and Supplemental Education (LSSE) Aquatics Program is now accepting Lifeguard and WSI applications for the school year 2002-2003. Previous experience preferred. $8.19-9.48/hr. Applications are available from the Town Hall Human Resources Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst.

EMPLOYMENT

Equal Opportunity Employer

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem, Please call 212-817-5530 or e-mail dormstory@hotmail.com

WANTED

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions. Must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact. 860-257-9139 for more info.

SPRING BREAK

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs

FOR SALE

From Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplash-tours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

BARTENDERS

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

ROOM FOR RENT

Attention Students! Protect Environment and Get Paid! Clean Water Action is hiring campaign organizers to: *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *protect our air and water *promote renewable energy Good communication skills a must, Paid Training, fun work atmosphere, flexible schedules, great pay, 10 mins. from campus and bus route. Call Megan 413-584-9830

Kaplan Test Prep hiring enthusiastic counter staff for evening and weekend hours. Also hiring marketing assistants to flyer local campuses. Applications available at our Center, 150 Fearing St., Amherst or call 549-5780. Work for Kaplan for one year

SUMMER SUBLET

& get a free Kaplan class!

Recreation Leader – After School Program The Town of Amherst seeks Recreation Leaders for its After School Programs operated by the Leisure Services and Supplemental Education Department (LSSE). Camp Couseling, other experiences working with school age children, and/or related course-work in Elementary Education preferred. $7.80-9.03 hr; 5-15 hrs per week. Applications available from Human Resource Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or LSSE, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or call S. Basniak @ 256-4065. Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra)_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN

Home Shopping Cable Network

ABC/A
NBC/N
Fox Sports Nl
PBS/ST
USA/2 Movie Channel
WB/20
Mtn N. Movie Channel
TV Guide Channel
BOX/61
A&E/48
NJN/13
International Channel
CMA/TV
HSCN 804 Channel
ESPN
ESPN 2
LIVE/49
ESPN Classic
Game Show Network
CNN
CNN HL
Weather Channel
Courtroom Channel
History Channel
A & E
Discovery Health
Food Network
NASA
Home & Garden TV
Travel Channel
Lifetime
CNBC
Tech TV
BET
EPN/38
USA
TNN
MTV
CMT
VH-1
TNT
TBS
E! Entertainment
Sci-Fi Channel
Court TV
Nick at Nite
Comedy Central
Cartoon Network
Game Show Network
TV Land
FOX Family
Univision
Galavision
Telemundo
College TV Network
C-SPAN
C-SPAN2
Bloomberg Television

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

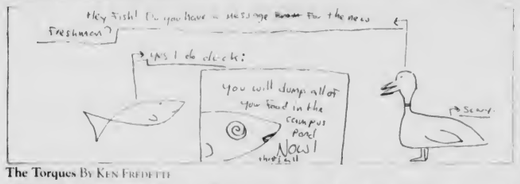
		C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	3	32	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes I (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes I (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Ily Wife Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		5	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	40	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Akuifumi: Cradle		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	22	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	11		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News		Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	69		Conby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Nine Lives" (1957, Drama) (R) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	51		The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Monsters		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	23	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	45	10	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Dickies	★★ "Shadow" (1994, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	52		White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	21		Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs		Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Major League Baseball		Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE	62		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53		(6:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanMD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		MJo Movie	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	25		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey, Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	65		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stend (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	63	28	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Brain"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	54		NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender "FTF" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA		Trains Burlin's Day Off" (1988)
USA	59		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	60		(6:45) ★½ "Texas in Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13				Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	61		(6:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)				Set. Enough		★½ "Ms. Myself & Irene" (2000) Comedy) Jim Carrey R				★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves PG-13
SHOW	65		★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG						★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett R		Soul Food (TV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird



Noodle By Jacki

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Noodle By Jacki

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"I've felt the light, I'm satisfied that the highest star is you."

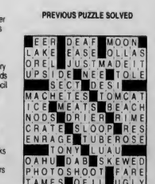
-Eddie Vedder

Amherst Weather

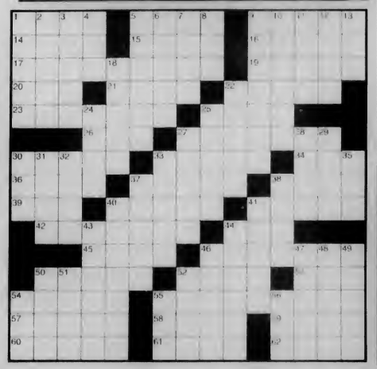
Thursday	Friday	Saturday
High: 77 Low: 45	High: 78 Low: 48	High: 53 Low: 29

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You slacker, what are you doing going to class? Go get your sleep on!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't eat at the DC next week.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker is under your bed.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you, and they're secretly trying to steal your fish.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herter at all costs. Damn trick stairways.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The perfect girlfriend would say, "You're so sexy when you're hungover."
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Got a case of end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy $20 worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Put on a happy face... or at least take a shower. You look disgusting.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember, kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.



DIRTY BUSINESS LLC
LAUNDRY DELIVERY SERVICE
(413)-256-DIRTY
www.DIRTYDELIVERY.com
Order before Sept. 10th and get 10% OFF!
Off-Campus only



ACROSS
1 Road rally
5 Wound remainder
9 Visit, as a ghost
14 "— Called Horse"
15 Cab
16 Ms. Winfrey
17 Old comic-strip hero
19 Type of boat
20 Stiff — board
21 Disagreeable task
22 Acted like a thief
23 Brat
25 Put on weight
26 Reply to a ques.
27 Wakes up after surgery
30 Gulf
33 Weather warning
34 "my!"
36 Ode writer
37 Ice hockey locale
38 Bounder
39 He gives a hoot
40 Ostrich cousins
41 Hangs len
42 Liveliest
44 Six shooter
45 Bright fish
46 Customers
50 Added brandy
52 Whiskey measure
53 "I knew it!"
54 Prairie roamer
55 Winter sports gear
57 Mia Farrow movie
58 Serene tributary
59 Pierre's friends
60 Church council
61 Made haste
62 Swampy

DOWN
1 Indian royal
2 Entertain
3 Place for locks
4 MIT grad
5 Office workers
6 Louisiana native
7 Earth's line of rotation
8 Wheel part
9 Incapacitated
10 Cooks' attire
11 — River of Russia
12 Cathedral part
13 Quaker word
18 Cuts of meat
22 Mead's island
24 Continue
25 Hired thugs
27 Athletic-shoe part
28 Odin's son
29 Egg, in Arles
30 Gl address
31 Curtsies
32 Shrill bark
33 Not stale
35 "Certainly!"
37 Out in front
38 Ancient epicenter
40 Aged, as cheese
41 Business wear
43 Baroque style
44 Looked radiant
46 Picked
47 Wynonna's mom
48 His and her
49 Brash
50 Sweet-scented flower
51 "Z" — cat
52 Fabric sample
54 College degs
55 "Mayday"
56 Radio enthusiast

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-30-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Tomato Soup

Shepherds Pie

Captain's Catch Sandwich

Lentil Chili
Oney Ga
(vegan)

Garlic Eggplant Stir Fry
(vegan)

Pasta Bar
Alfredo Chicken Broccoli Penne

Grill Station
Captain's Catch Sandwich

DINNER
Tomato Soup

WELCOME BARBECUE
(See D.C.s for menu.)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matt Despres
Photo Technician	James Schaffer
Copy Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production staff	Emily Richards, Jen. Dimeglio, Pete Preston, Melissa Hammel

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass' new look debuts Saturday

Whipple assures win over CCSU

By Jim Pignatiello
Collegian Staff

"We're going to win the game," Massachusetts head football coach Mark Whipple told those attending Wednesday's Sports Luncheon put on by the UMass Athletic Fund.

When asked about the guaranteed win after the luncheon, Whipple claimed that it was nothing significant.

"I always think we're gonna win the game," the Brown University grad said. "The thing is, I don't play."

"We have better athletes than they do," he said, but then points out that it doesn't necessarily mean anything.

"You still have to execute."

After Central Connecticut St.'s 52-3 loss to Maine, which was picked one spot ahead of the UMass in the A-10 Preseason Coach's Poll, it would take some sort of an effort on the part of the Minutemen to suffer an upset Saturday at Warren P. McGuirk Stadium.

Coach's wonder program has been come true as the Blue and White fan base has high hopes for the 2002 season. A loss on Saturday to other would-be-mediocre CCSU team would be the equivalent of season-ending embarrassment for the program for which Whipple has been a very successful off-season through Whipple's ability to sign defensive coordinators and transfers. His chip-off transfer, and the imminent return of receiver Adrian Zullo.

Whipple addressed the crowd, Nov. 2 on the field vanish empowered the game's chances of victory.

"Any time your [two] starting backs, [Zullo's] called it [and] it's going to significantly different feel to your offense and [the other] team's defense," Whipple said. "Our goal is he's fast, but he's a good player. He makes everybody better. He makes the [running] game better. He makes the [passing] game better."

With Zullo, one of the top wideouts and returning star receiver in New Hardly the passing game should be set for the Minutemen. It is the running game, led by sophomore Jason Peebler and redshirt freshman Rammy Rosario that will be under the microscope this season, starting with Saturday's contest.

"I'd like to see us block everybody," Whipple said. "That includes receivers. We don't want to see any fumbles. We have got to get our nine guys to block their nine guys to give Peebler and Rosario a chance."

Whipple expects the defense to be up to the task, as a knee injury scare for All-American defensive tackle Valdamir Brower turned out to be nothing serious.

"He's fine," Whipple said. "It was more of a scare. He's just got to get a brace." Brower practiced with the team this week.

With the game essentially over before it starts for the Minutemen, Whipple is looking for the contest to show as much about the attitude of this team than the football talent.

"I just want to make sure they're prepared physically and emotionally," Whipple said.

"I have more confidence in this group as a whole than I did [with last year's team]," he said, pointing out that his team hasn't suffered from the same sophomoric problems that plagued the team during last year's rough, 3-8 season.

"I think this game will tell us how mature we are," Whipple said.

Just don't judge the team's maturity on the first offensive drive. Whipple made sure to warn the folks at the luncheon that both Krohn and Zullo were so hyped up to be running their opening plays in practice had been rather ugly. But after that, everything was fine.

Zullo has even managed to get Whipple to allow him to return one kickoff Saturday.

With so many expectations heading into the 2002 season, Saturday's game could either be the first step toward the Atlantic 10 Playoffs, or a car wreck. Only the team's character can decide which.

"I know we'll get better," Whipple said. "We really don't know where we're at [right now]. Yeah, they look good, but it's different when you get in the stadium."

D'Shon Hardy, Edwards and Adrian Zullo will form one of the best receiving duos in I-AA football.

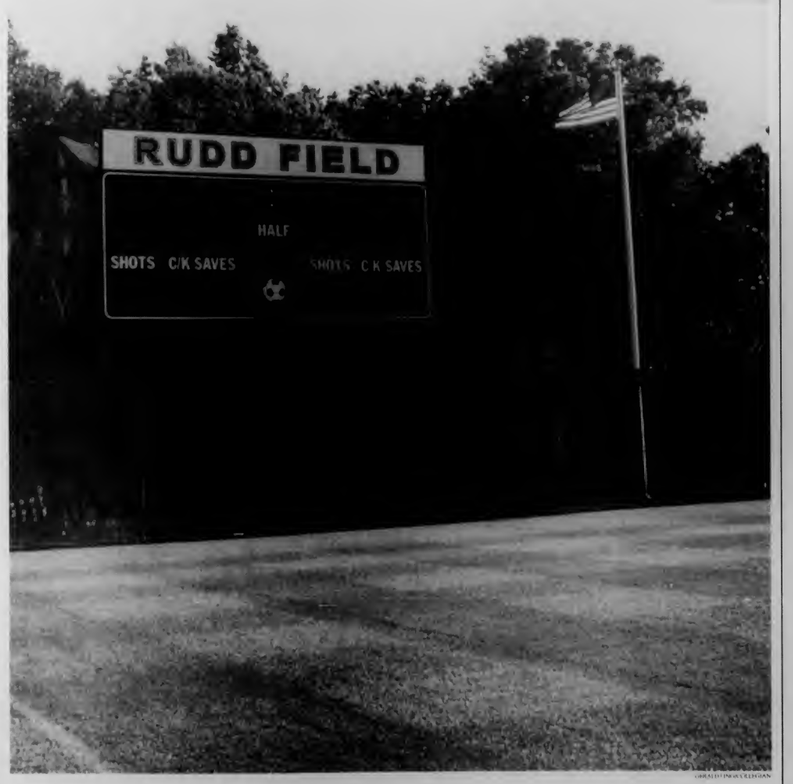
Soccer's field of dreams

Will host first game Friday

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Generally, the University of Massachusetts isn't regarded as one of the most aesthetically pleasing campuses in the area. In fact, the recently released Princeton Review voted UMass as one of the most "unsightly" campuses in the nation.

With the new athletic complex nestled right on the edge of the University, that sentiment could soon be erased.



Rudd Field, the new home to the UMass men's and women's soccer teams, will soon become the outdoor crown jewel of the Athletic Department, and with good reason. With a lush playing surface and a brand-new scoreboard, the facility has already been described as the most beautiful soccer complex in the Northeast.

"What we have here is the finest playing surface in New England," said Jim Rudd, head coach of the women's soccer team. "It may play a little soft this fall, but next fall, there's not going to be a better surface around."

The field, which sits adjacent to the UMass Softball Complex right off the entrance to Route 116, was chiefly made possible by a generous grant by Andrew and Jimmy Rudd, parents of current UMass defender Alex Rudd and trustees of the Rudd Foundation.

"I talked to [Andrew Rudd] several times over [last] summer, and he committed to me that he would like to help us out," said John Nitardi, Associate Athletic Director of Development. "[He] committed a half a million dollar gift, with a challenge to raise another half

Turn to RUDD, page 11

The UMass women's soccer team will play on the sparkling-new Rudd Field for the first time Friday.

Women drop season opener

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's soccer team this year is young and hungry to win. Unfortunately, the operative word last Friday in its opening game was "young."

The Minutewomen made the familiar trek down the Mass Pike to Chestnut Hill looking to open the season with a statement, but the high-octane BC lineup would have none of it. UMass could generate little of its gameplan in a 1-0 loss to Boston College that saw the Eagles control throughout. The veteran Eagle squad suffocated the Maroon and White for a large portion of the game, holding the visitors to a mere six shots on goal.

"I don't think collectively we were happy about the way we played. We basically got schooled by a senior/junior laden experienced team," Head Coach Jim Rudd said. "It was one of the best defenses I've seen but it was a tribute to our kids that they could hang in there under adverse conditions like that.

"They were experienced, well-organized, they grabbed us, got us by the hair and they had us." The win marked the first time in its last 18 attempts that Boston College had knocked off the Maroon and White.

Despite being outshot 19-4 in the first half, the Minutewomen were able to stay deadlocked with the Eagles entering the locker room.

The two in-state rivals remained scoreless until BC's Laine Ceddia capitalized on a great opportunity, taking a feed from teammate Sarah Rahko and blasting a shot over UMass keeper Kelly Nigh's head for the only tally of the contest.

Turn to BC, page 11

SUMMER JOB HELL. ED/OP PAGE 4. ... SPORTS PAGE 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
FRIDAY ISSUE THREE 9.06.02

University employees rally together

Union members assemble statewide to rally against the state's refusal to fund pay raises.

Thousands gather statewide during 'coffee break' protest

By Rachel Smith, Dan Lamothe and Jamie Loo
Collegian Staff

Several hundred University of Massachusetts workers gathered in numerous locations on campus yesterday morning to protest a lack in pay raises and an unfunded higher education contract.

Professors, administrators and other professionals from six campus unions took part in a 15-minute "coffee break" across the state. With thousands of workers from 27 public college campuses participating in the protest, it was the largest simultaneous unionized walkout in state history.

Protestors expressed anger, saying that University leadership is not doing enough to support the contracted pay raises.

"We have every reason to believe that [President William] Bulger is actively not supporting these raises," said Simon Kochakian, a field representative for the Service Employees International Union, during the protest.

Acting Governor Jane Swift vetoed a bill this summer that would have funded the contracts UMass employees negotiated more than two years ago. The pay freeze is affecting all contracted UMass employees. They have not received a raise since July 1, 2000.

"It's time to go back to the traditional ways of doing things and keep your word," said Ronald Sweet, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP). "We want the Chancellor to come out."

Story said that the demonstration was not an act of aggression toward Chancellor Lombardi. The unions want to work with the new chancellor to fund their contracts.

"We want the Chancellor to publicly support the contracts," Story said. "We are asking, we are demanding [that he supports the contracts]."

> "They need to get the message that we're not going to back down. We've lived up to our end of the bargain. Where's the money?"
> - UAW President James Shaw

Protesters carried signs stating, "fund the contracts," "higher ed unions united," "keep your word" and "452nd day pay has been frozen," and they chanted many of the same things.

Tom Colish, president of the Service Employees International Union said that this is the first in a series of protests that the members in the various unions on campus will organize.

"We know they have reserve accounts," Colish said. "It's not like the state is broke. We feel really betrayed. This has never happened in the history of collective bargaining in Massachusetts."

James Shaw, United Auto Workers (UAW) Union President, said that the group of unions, each united under a coalition called Higher Education Unions United, would organize statewide in Worcester to plan further actions on Sept. 10.

A Sept. 18 meeting of all union membership on campus is also scheduled in the Student Union Ballroom. "Hopefully, we'll overflow the ballroom," Shaw said.

Shaw continued to share his enthusiasm for the coalitions.

"The exciting thing is that what happened today happened in Lowell, in Boston, in Worcester," he said. "They need to get the message that we're not going to back down. We've lived up to our end of the bargain. Where's the money? They're underestimating the amount of disruption that the rank and file workers are willing to do."

Coalition leaders hope that by putting pressure on Chancellor John Lombardi and President Bulger, they will take a stand supporting the workers. With enough pressure, they hope to get a contract passed through state legislation as soon as possible, which is currently in special session.

"This has never happened before," State Senator Stanley

Turn to PROTEST, page 3

Professor named to new position

By Chris Theberge
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Professor of Food Science Eric A. Decker has been appointed to a new professorship named after current Food Science Department Chair Fergus M. Clydesdale.

"Professor Decker is a research scientist of the highest caliber," said Cleve Willis, Dean of the College of Food Science. "His work on food safety is internationally acclaimed. Last year he was awarded a research grant of $1.7 million to develop nutrient carrier systems for foods that protect compounds that are sensitive to oxidative destruction. Also, Decker is a teacher and mentor of uncommon quality and dedication."

The Clydesdale Endowed Professorship was established in Clydedale's honor in recognition for his superior leadership in the department for the last 11 years. The Food Science Advisory Board raised more than $500,000 in support of the professorship.

Its creation was driven by Campaign UMass, the University's first comprehensive campaign to raise capital, recruit advocates, and enhance the University's image. The endowment was created to provide a distinguished faculty member some support with their research and outreach needs.

"Eric is one of the top researchers and teachers in the country," Clydesdale said. "He is the recipient of the College Outstanding Teacher Award [and] is a wonderful student advisor and mentor. He more than fills all the characteristics of a 'student's professor' and a top researcher."

In 1988, Decker received his doctorate in food science from the University of Massachusetts. In 1993, he joined the department of food science as an associate professor.

Decker is presently conducting research to identify and characterize natural antioxidants and potential lipid oxidation catalysts in foods. His research into the oxidation of emulsified oils recently earned him a $1.7 million federal grant. He received funding to develop nutrient carrier systems for foods that protect compounds sensitive to oxidative destruction.

He has also collaborated on research projects including the investigation of possible factors influencing the oxidation of skeletal muscle and trying to determine the relationship of antioxidants, lipids and lipid oxidation products in the molecular basis of disease. He has numerous publications and reviews in academic journals and has written book chapters for several publishers.

Decker has received various awards throughout his career as a food scientist, including the American Chemical Society's Young Scientist Award, Agriculture and Food Chemistry Division; the Samuel Cate Prescott Award of the Institute of Food Technologists; the International Life Science Institute's Future Leader Award; the American Meat Science Association's Achievement Award and an Outstanding Teaching Award from the College of Food and Natural Resources.

Professor Eric Decker

Minuteman Express the faster way

The fall schedule for the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) buses is out, and administrator Gary A. Shepard has advised those traveling between Northampton and the University of Massachusetts to use the M40 Minuteman Express bus line instead of the B43.

The M40 is currently in service and provides faster transportation between the two destinations. The first bus leaves Smith College at 7:15 a.m. on weekdays and the last leaves at 5:45 p.m. There is a three and a half-hour break at midday.

The M40, eastbound, stops at Smith College, the Academy of Music, the Northampton Post Office, Sheldon Field and Haigis Mall at UMass. Heading westbound, the M40 stops at the Haigis Mall, Day Avenue, Bridge Street School, the Northampton Courthouse, Crackerbarrel Alley, the Academy of Music and Smith College.

Several changes have been made to the bus schedule over the summer. The Minuteman Express, or M40, now provides late-night service on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, as it did last fall. There have also been minor time adjustments to the Route 30 schedule on the weekends and to Route 36's second morning trip. Route 33 to Mill Hollow will only run at 8:45 a.m. and 5:58 p.m. Route 37 will no longer go to the Five College Credit Union, and minor time adjustments have been made to Route 45 on the weekends. In addition, the bus now turns around at Belchertown Common, rather than traveling to Belchertown State School.

PVTA also reminds students to arrive at the appropriate bus stop about five to seven minutes early, standing in a place where they will be visible to the driver with the exact change ready upon bus arrival. Buses may be late or early, according to factors such as traffic or weather. The driver will not allow pets, food or beverages on the bus. Those carrying a bulky parcel or stroller are encouraged to sit at the rear of the bus for the safety of the passengers.

More information on the M40 Minuteman Express is available by calling (413) 546-5806. Information on the PVTA schedule is available at (413) 781-PVTA or at www.pvta.com.

- Janet Jock

Students board the PVTA bus outside the Lederle Graduate Research Center.

Campus Perspectives

by James Schaffer

Have you noticed any changes since the budget cuts?

Russel Plate
Senior
Political Science
"I just came from suites, and they got rid of one of the movie channels."

Nick Gaines
Junior
Pre-Vet
"All of a sudden I can't believe it's not butter."

Lauren Castner
Junior
Economics
"Honestly, haven't noticed much of a change."

Katie Hartley
Sophomore
Undecided
"A lot of my friends came to school this year with only one or two classes."

Joe Cuerie
Junior
Classical English
"I can't get into any of the English classes."

Nichole Barone
Senior
Communications
"Classes are hard to get into, and people seem more miserable."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts—operating solely on revenues published by advertising alone. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the Collegian Separat in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1934 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1991. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.L. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Touhy Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
ICHIBAN SUSHI
OPEN 7 DAYS Delivery Available
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice
Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

Mill Valley E·S·T·A·T·E·S
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!
•Cinder blocks
•Plywood
•Shelving and brackets
•Desktops
•Keys
•Bookcase material
•Paints
•Brushes, rollers
•Hardware
•Picture Hangers
10% OFF WITH THIS AD
150 COLLEGE STREET
LEADER HOME CENTERS
: 413-253-3411

McMurphy's
Welcomes Back
Students For Fall 2002
37 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
Positive ID Required

'Welcome to the Rock'
Anthony Perez, a freshman Army ROTC candidate, rock climbs while he is waiting to be registered.

protest

continued from page 3

Rosenberg said during the protest. "We're going to stand by this, and we're going to win."

Chancellor Lombardi was in Boston visiting Bulger at the time of the protest. His office deferred all comments and statements to Bulger's office.

"As we stand now, we are on solid, stable financial ground," John Hoey, spokesman for President Bulger's office, said. "Our focus is on remaining on it. The President's support for the staff and faculty is clearly documented."

According to Hoey, at no point were the collective bargaining agreements ever funded for 2003. He said that the context under which the agreement was made "clearly changed" when the financial situation of the state, University and country changed last fall.

Hoey said he can understand that there is some legitimate disappointment in the financial situation that the state and University is currently facing, but that he cannot understand all of the anger.

"Everybody's entitled to their say, but look at the facts and try and understand...it's a difficult time. Right now, the state's financial situation is very, very serious," Hoey said. "I think there's a general feeling that when the University's financial situation improves, we can revisit [getting contracts funded]."

According to Barbara Pionnik of the UMass News Office, the University has no problem with the "coffee break" idea and recognizes that all employees are entitled to a break period during the day.

"I think the actions taken were a way for the faculty to send a message to the state and administration without hurting their students," said Dan Saunders, Student Government Association Speaker of the Senate. "They didn't violate their contracts; they didn't alter the daily routines of their students. I think it was a very good thing to do."

Saunders further expressed his concerns for the government's actions.

"As far as I'm concerned, the actions taken by acting Governor Swift have been outrageous," he said. "The state is not doing its job and something needs to be done about it. This ultimately affects the morale of the faculty working here. I'm just glad I'm not a union member right now."

Kristin Shrewsbury contributed to this article.

"Higher Ed Unions United" is one of the signs held during the protest.

Talent Search grant awarded to campus

In an attempt to encourage disadvantaged students to graduate from high school and attend college, the Department of Education has awarded a four-year, $1.2 million grant to the University of Massachusetts through its Talent Search program.

"This is great news for the campus, especially since application for this funding is extremely competitive," Joseph Marshall, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Enrollment Services said. "Talent Search is integral to our outreach and community relation efforts."

The Talent Search program provides academic support to eligible low-income and first-generation college students. This support includes tutoring – specifically in English and mathematics – academic and career advising, mentoring, academic and life-skills workshops, assistance with the college admissions process and applications for financial aid, according to Gloria De Guevara, Associate Dean of Enrollment Services.

"Early intervention is a key factor for success," said De Guevara, who administers the Talent Search program. The program begins reaching out to students who have completed fifth grade and may be as young as 11 years old.

"These kids have everything against them," she said.

According to De Guevara, just a few of the obstacles kids are facing in the surrounding communities include poverty, a limited knowledge of English and high pregnancy and school dropout rates as well as family backgrounds that do not include education as a priority.

The program will serve 875 students per year in Hampden and Hampshire counties, primarily in the Holyoke, Northampton, Westfield and Amherst school systems.

"This grant affirms the outstanding work of our enrollment services staff," Jo-Anne Vanin, Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, said. "I'm delighted we're able to continue this important program that serves hundreds of students annually."

–Amy O'Neill

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE
»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters
WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES
RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop and College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446
Semester Special $179
Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt
•FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
•AQUA AEROBICS
•CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
•CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
•FULL COURT BASKETBALL
•VOLLEYBALL
•INDOOR TENNIS
•YOGA
•AEROBICS •STEP
•JACUZZI •SAUNAS
•CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT
MasterCard VISA

Campus Perspectives

by James Schaffer

Have you noticed any changes since the budget cuts?

Russel Plato
Senior
Political Science
"Class selection sucks, and they got rid of one of the movie channels."

Nick Gartner
Junior
Pre-Vet
"All of a sudden, I can't believe it's not butter."

Lauren Gartner
Junior
Economics
"Honestly, haven't noticed much of a change."

Katie Hanley
Sophomore
Undecided
"A lot of my friends came to school this year with only one or two classes."

Joe Cuerte
Junior
Classics/English
"I can't get into any of the English classes."

Nichole Barone
Senior
Communications
"Classes are hard to get into, and people seem more miserable."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts' calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew E. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
ICHIBAN
OPEN 7 DAYS
Delivery Available
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice
Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

Mill Valley
E·S·T·A·T·E·S
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!
•Cinder blocks
•Plywood
•Shelving and brackets
•Desktops
•Keys
•Bookcase material
•Paints
•Brushes, rollers
•Hardware
•Picture Hangers
150 COLLEGE STREET
10% OFF WITH THIS AD
LEADER HOME CENTERS
: 413-253-3411

McMurphy's
Welcomes Back
Students For Fall 2002
37 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
Positive ID Required

'Welcome to the Rock'
Anthony Perez, a freshman Army ROTC candidate, rock climbs while he is waiting to be registered.

protest

continued from page 3

Rosenberg said during the protest. "We're going to stand by this, and we're going to win."

Chancellor Lombardi was in Boston visiting Bulger at the time of the protest. His office deferred all comments and statements to Bulger's office.

"As we stand now, we are on solid, stable financial ground," John Hoey, spokesman for President Bulger's office, said. "Our focus is on remaining on it. The President's support for the staff and faculty is clearly documented."

According to Hoey, at no point were the collective bargaining agreements ever funded for 2003. He said that the context under which the agreement was made "clearly changed" when the financial situation of the state, University and country changed last fall.

Hoey said he can understand that there is some legitimate disappointment in the financial situation that the state and University is currently facing, but that he cannot understand all of the anger.

"Everybody's entitled to their say, but look at the facts and try and understand...it's a difficult time. Right now, the state's financial situation is very, very serious," Hoey said. "I think there's a general feeling that when the University's financial situation improves, we can revisit [getting contracts funded]."

According to Barbara Pitoniak of the UMass News Office, the University has no problem with the "coffee break" idea and recognizes that all employees are entitled to a break period during the day.

"I think the actions taken were a way for the faculty to send a message to the state and administration without hurting their students," said Dan Saunders, Student Government Association Speaker of the Senate. "They didn't violate their contracts; they didn't alter the daily routines of their students. I think it was a very good thing to do."

Saunders further expressed his concerns for the government's actions.

"As far as I'm concerned, the actions taken by acting Governor Swift have been outrageous," he said. "The state is not doing its job, and something needs to be done about it. This ultimately affects the morale of the faculty working here. I'm just glad I'm not a union member right now."

Kristin Shrewsbury contributed to this article.

"Higher Ed Unions United" is one of the signs held during the protest.

Talent Search grant awarded to campus

In an attempt to encourage disadvantaged students to graduate from high school and attend college, the Department of Education has awarded a four-year, $1.2 million grant to the University of Massachusetts through its Talent Search program.

"This is great news for the campus, especially since application for this funding is extremely competitive," Joseph Marshall, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Enrollment Services said. "Talent Search is integral to our outreach and community relation efforts."

The Talent Search program provides academic support to eligible low-income and first-generation college students. This support includes tutoring—specifically in English and mathematics—academic and career advising, mentoring, academic and life skills workshops, assistance with the college admissions process and applications for financial aid, according to Gloria De Guevara, Associate Dean of Enrollment Services.

"Early intervention is a key factor for success," said De Guevara, who administers the Talent Search program. The program begins reaching out to students who have completed fifth grade and may be as young as 11 years old.

"These kids have everything against them," she said.

According to De Guevara, just a few of the obstacles kids are facing in the surrounding communities include poverty, a limited knowledge of English and high pregnancy and school dropout rates as well as family backgrounds that do not include education as a priority.

The program will serve 875 students per year in Hampden and Hampshire counties, primarily in the Holyoke, Northampton, Westfield and Amherst school systems.

"This grant affirms the outstanding work of our enrollment services staff," Jo-Anne Vanin, Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, said. "I'm delighted we're able to continue this important program that serves hundreds of students annually."

-Amy O'Neill

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE
»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters
WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES
RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop and College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446
Semester Special $179
Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt
•FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
•AQUA AEROBICS
•CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
•CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
•FULL COURT BASKETBALL
•VOLLEYBALL
•INDOOR TENNIS
•YOGA
•AEROBICS •STEP
•JACUZZI •SAUNAS
•CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT
MasterCard VISA

Campus Perspectives

by James Schaffer

Have you noticed any changes since the budget cuts?

Russel Plato
Senior
Political Science
"Class selection sucks, and they got rid of one of the movie channels."

Nick Garner
Junior
Pre-Vet
"All of a sudden, I can't believe it's not butter."

Lauren Castner
Junior
Economics
"Honestly, haven't noticed much of a change."

Katie Hanley
Sophomore
Undecided
"A lot of my friends came to school this year with only one or two classes."

Joe Cuerte
Junior
Classics/English
"I can't get into any of the English classes."

Nichole Barone
Senior
Communications
"Classes are hard to get into, and people seem more miserable."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
ICHIBAN SUSHI
OPEN 7 DAYS
Delivery Available
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice
Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

Mill Valley
E·S·T·A·T·E·S
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!
•Cinder blocks
•Plywood
•Shelving and brackets
•Desktops
•Keys
•Bookcase material
•Paints
•Brushes, rollers
•Hardware
•Picture Hangers
150 COLLEGE STREET
10% OFF WITH THIS AD
LEADER HOME CENTERS
: 413-253-3411

McMurphy's
Welcomes Back
Students For Fall 2002
37 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
Positive ID Required

DEBAJEHOUSE/COLLEGIAN

'Welcome to the Rock'
Anthony Perez, a freshman Army ROTC candidate, rock climbs while he is waiting to be registered.

protest

continued from page 3

Rosenberg said during the protest. "We're going to stand by this, and we're going to win."

Chancellor Lombardi was in Boston visiting Bulger at the time of the protest. His office deferred all comments and statements to Bulger's office.

"As we stand now, we are on solid, stable financial ground," John Hoey, spokesman for President Bulger's office, said. "Our focus is on remaining on it. The President's support for the staff and faculty is clearly documented."

According to Hoey, at no point were the collective bargaining agreements ever funded for 2003. He said that the context under which the agreement was made "clearly changed" when the financial situation of the state, University and country changed last fall.

Hoey said he can understand that there is some legitimate disappointment in the financial situation that the state and University is currently facing, but that he cannot understand all of the anger.

"Everybody's entitled to their say, but look at the facts and try and understand...it's a difficult time. Right now, the state's financial situation is very, very serious," Hoey said. "I think there's a general feeling that when the University's financial situation improves, we can revisit [getting contracts funded]."

According to Barbara Pitoniak of the UMass News Office, the University has no problem with the "coffee break" idea and recognizes that all employees are entitled to a break period during the day.

"I think the actions taken were a way for the faculty to send a message to the state and administration without hurting their students," said Dan Saunders, Student Government Association Speaker of the Senate. "They didn't violate their contracts; they didn't alter the daily routines of their students. I think it was a very good thing to do."

Saunders further expressed his concerns for the government's actions.

"As far as I'm concerned, the actions taken by acting Governor Swift have been outrageous," he said. "The state is not doing its job, and something needs to be done about it. This ultimately affects the morale of the faculty working here. I'm just glad I'm not a union member right now."

Kristin Shrewsbury contributed to this article.

DANIEL P. ZAITSEV/COLLEGIAN

"Higher Ed Unions United" is one of the signs held during the protest.

Talent Search grant awarded to campus

In an attempt to encourage disadvantaged students to graduate from high school and attend college, the Department of Education has awarded a four-year, $1.2 million grant to the University of Massachusetts through its Talent Search program.

"This is great news for the campus, especially since application for this funding is extremely competitive," Joseph Marshall, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Enrollment Services said. "Talent Search is integral to our outreach and community relation efforts."

The Talent Search program provides academic support to eligible low-income and first-generation college students. This support includes tutoring – specifically in English and mathematics – academic and career advising, mentoring, academic and life skills workshops, assistance with the college admissions process and applications for financial aid, according to Gloria De Guevara, Associate Dean of Enrollment Services.

"Early intervention is a key factor for success," said De Guevara, who administers the Talent Search program. The program begins reaching out to students who have completed fifth grade and may be as young as 11 years old.

"These kids have everything against them," she said.

According to De Guevara, just a few of the obstacles kids are facing in the surrounding communities include poverty, a limited knowledge of English and high pregnancy and school dropout rates as well as family backgrounds that do not include education as a priority.

The program will serve 875 students per year in Hampden and Hampshire counties, primarily in the Holyoke, Northampton, Westfield and Amherst school systems.

"This grant affirms the outstanding work of our enrollment services staff," Jo-Anne Vanin, Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, said. "I'm delighted we're able to continue this important program that serves hundreds of students annually."

-Amy O'Neill

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE
»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters
WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES
RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop and College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446
Semester Special $179
Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt
•FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
•AQUA AEROBICS
•CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
•CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
•FULL COURT BASKETBALL
•VOLLEYBALL
•INDOOR TENNIS
•YOGA
•AEROBICS •STEP
•JACUZZI •SAUNAS
•CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT
MasterCard VISA

Campus Perspectives

by James Schaffer

Have you noticed any changes since the budget cuts?

Russel Plato
Senior
Political Science
"Class selection sucks, and they got rid of one of the movie channels."

Nick Garner
Junior
Pre-Vet
"All of a sudden, I can't believe it's not butter."

Lauren Castner
Junior
Economics
"Honestly, haven't noticed much of a change."

Katie Hanley
Sophomore
Undecided
"A lot of my friends came to school this year with only one or two classes."

Joe Cuerte
Junior
Classics/English
"I can't get into any of the English classes."

Nichole Barone
Senior
Communications
"Classes are hard to get into, and people seem more miserable."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the 5¢ Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Colmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice! Healthy Choice!
ICHIBAN SUSHI
OPEN 7 DAYS Delivery Available
Authentic Japanese Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plazu, Northampton, MA
(413) 585-1185
(Behind City Hall, Off Main St.)
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice
Stay healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
• Cozy & private
• Parties available up to 25 ppl
10% Off Dinner w/ Student ID (All 5 College Students)
Exceptional Catering Service
Sushi chef works @ your party
Lunch Specials $4.95 & up
Reserve for Karaoke

Mill Valley E·S·T·A·T·E·S
Apartment Deals
Significant Discounts Available
call now 253-7377
•On Bus line
•Free Heat/hot water
•Washer/dryer hookups
•Indoor cats accepted
•Only minutes from campus
•Air conditioning
420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst • 253-7377
Equal Housing Opportunity

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS
WE HAVE YOUR NEEDS!
•Cinder blocks
•Plywood
•Shelving and brackets
•Desktops
•Keys
•Bookcase material
•Paints
•Brushes, rollers
•Hardware
•Picture Hangers
150 COLLEGE STREET
10% OFF WITH THIS AD
LEADER HOME CENTERS
: 413-253-3411

McMurphy's
Welcomes Back
Students For Fall 2002
37 North Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA
Positive ID Required

GERALD LONG/COLLEGIAN

'Welcome to the Rock'
Anthony Perez, a freshman Army ROTC candidate, rock climbs while he is waiting to be registered.

protest

continued from page 3

Rosenberg said during the protest. "We're going to stand by this, and we're going to win."

Chancellor Lombardi was in Boston visiting Bulger at the time of the protest. His office deferred all comments and statements to Bulger's office.

"As we stand now, we are on solid, stable financial ground," John Hoey, spokesman for President Bulger's office, said. "Our focus is on remaining on it. The President's support for the staff and faculty is clearly documented."

According to Hoey, at no point were the collective bargaining agreements ever funded for 2003. He said that the context under which the agreement was made "clearly changed" when the financial situation of the state, University and country changed last fall.

Hoey said he can understand that there is some legitimate disappointment in the financial situation that the state and University is currently facing, but that he cannot understand all of the anger.

"Everybody's entitled to their say, but look at the facts and try and understand... it's a difficult time. Right now, the state's financial situation is very, very serious," Hoey said. "I think there's a general feeling that when the University's financial situation improves, we can revisit [getting contracts funded]."

According to Barbara Pitoniak of the UMass News Office, the University has no problem with the "coffee break" idea and recognizes that all employees are entitled to a break period during the day.

"I think the actions taken were a way for the faculty to send a message to the state and administration without hurting their students," said Dan Saunders, Student Government Association Speaker of the Senate. "They didn't violate their contracts; they didn't alter the daily routines of their students. I think it was a very good thing to do."

Saunders further expressed his concerns for the government's actions.

"As far as I'm concerned, the actions taken by acting Governor Swift have been outrageous," he said. "The state is not doing its job, and something needs to be done about it. This ultimately affects the morale of the faculty working here. I'm just glad I'm not a union member right now."

Kristin Shrewsbury contributed to this article.

JAMIE SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

"Higher Ed Unions United" is one of the signs held during the protest.

Talent Search grant awarded to campus

In an attempt to encourage disadvantaged students to graduate from high school and attend college, the Department of Education has awarded a four-year, $1.2 million grant to the University of Massachusetts through its Talent Search program.

"This is great news for the campus, especially since application for this funding is extremely competitive," Joseph Marshall, Assistant Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Dean of Enrollment Services said. "Talent Search is integral to our outreach and community relation efforts."

The Talent Search program provides academic support to eligible low-income and first-generation college students. This support includes tutoring – specifically in English and mathematics – academic and career advising, mentoring, academic and life skills workshops, assistance with the college admissions process and applications for financial aid, according to Gloria De Guevara, Associate Dean of Enrollment Services.

"Early intervention is a key factor for success," said De Guevara, who administers the Talent Search program. The program begins reaching out to students who have completed fifth grade and may be as young as 11 years old.

"These kids have everything against them," she said.

According to De Guevara, just a few of the obstacles kids are facing in the surrounding communities include poverty, a limited knowledge of English and high pregnancy and school dropout rates as well as family backgrounds that do not include education as a priority.

The program will serve 875 students per year in Hampden and Hampshire counties, primarily in the Holyoke, Northampton, Westfield and Amherst school systems.

"This grant affirms the outstanding work of our enrollment services staff," Jo-Anne Vanin, Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, said. "I'm delighted we're able to continue this important program that serves hundreds of students annually."

-Amy O'Neill

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE
»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters
WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES
RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop and College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446
Semester Special $179
Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt
•FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
•AQUA AEROBICS
•CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
•CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
•FULL COURT BASKETBALL
•VOLLEYBALL
•INDOOR TENNIS
•YOGA
•AEROBICS •STEP
•JACUZZI •SAUNAS
•CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT
MasterCard VISA

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED. OP EDITOR: JAMIE TOO

"Rainy-day" fund:
An untapped source

As we begin this semester, we are faced with a double-edged sword that, swung either way, will hurt students. The issue of whether or not the Commonwealth of Massachusetts should be held responsible for pay-raise contracts agreed upon earlier this year is a Catch-22.

Funding the contracts would appease professors, staffers and union workers alike. However, according to the Commonwealth, funding pay raise contracts would force layoffs, limiting the number of available faculty and staff positions. Either way, students feel the blow. Either way, students are asked to dig deeper into their shallow pockets. Either way, students are left struggling to educate themselves in a state that has clearly dismissed the value of higher public education.

Money must be redistributed within the Commonwealth. We are not broke; we do have a substantial "rainy-day" fund. The "rainy-day" fund is a failsafe, insurance in case of an accident. The accident has happened, and it's time to collect our insurance. In refusing to appropriate a fraction of the "rainy-day" fund, the Commonwealth is acting as a dictator, holding and using citizens' tax dollars while citizens scream for it to be used elsewhere. The economy, while not soaring as in years past, is equally not as devastated as last year's. Education propels the economic state, and therefore should be thus supported by the supposed "rainy-day" fund. Apparently, the Commonwealth plans to wait for a downpour, since the "rainy-day" fund remains untapped, while in the minds of most citizens it's already pouring in Massachusetts.

As a government – a recognized organization of power, authority and representation – the Commonwealth of Massachusetts owes it to its citizens to keep the promises it makes. The State must recognize the example it sets forth to business, private citizens and students by not living up to its agreement to fund such contracts as those signed for the Massachusetts Society of Professors. An agreement should not have been reached; contracts should not have been signed if the State was not entirely confident it had the funds to stand behind its signature.

The unification of various unions, separate organizations, rallying together to produce yesterday's walk-out holds a powerful message. It is no longer separate factions bickering between each other, fighting for funds; it is a conglomerate of parties united in not only rage but disappointment as well. Disappointment, founded in the inability of those in government to maintain dedication to their responsibilities and respect the importance of the promises they make.

In turn, professors and staff demanding their contracted pay raises are putting their individual needs above those of the University as a whole. What they want will cost students more than it will cost administrators in Boston.

In times of crisis, everyone must chip in as well as swallow losses.

Budget cuts and tuition hikes have become a vicious circle, in which nobody is hurt more than the very students the University and Commonwealth claim to support.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial staff.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

What I didn't do on my summer vacation

LIZZY NIELSEN

I don't think it was possible for me to verbalize my excitement in early May when I aced an interview and was offered an internship at one of the most prestigious radio stations in Boston. I was going to learn about the industry that I had planned to spend the rest of my life in. I have participated in radio broadcasting during my first three years at UMass, and an internship seemed like the next logical step in pursuing a career in the broadcasting industry. Well kids, just when you're sure you want to do something, an internship can make or break your mind. It definitely broke mine.

You would think that after participating in an internship at such a prestigious radio station, I'd at least learn a little bit about broadcasting or marketing or promotions. You would think wrong. What did I do this summer? I cleaned closets and organized rolodexes.

Occasionally, the other interns and I were sent out to hand out prizes. Once I was even sent to a remote broadcast where I was able to observe the broadcasters and the engineer of the broadcast and learn how "real" remote broadcasts were orchestrated. For the majority of the nearly 12 weeks that I spent interning from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. (and usually MUCH later than that) on Tuesday and Thursday, I spent my time either doing nothing, cleaning offices or licking envelopes.

This was tolerable for the first seven or eight weeks, but after that, I became disgruntled. One of the marketing directors of the station talked to me about "how internships are what you make of them" and how I should be asking for more stupid, brainless tasks that teach me nothing when the interns had down time. Right.

This was not what I wanted to be doing. Not even close. So I did exactly what she said for the last three weeks of the internship. No, I didn't ask for more monotonous, boring paper shuffling. I became friendly with one of the DJ's for the station, and began sitting in on his show and observing how a real radio show was produced. Eventually, this DJ allowed me to push buttons and use the experience I already had to learn more about radio broadcasting and aspects of it that I had no idea existed.

Internships are supposed to be learning experiences. They are not supposed to be filled with an abundance of envelope licking or making photocopies. I understand that there has to be at least some of this. It's reasonable to think that the station higher-ups need help with certain things, including data entry and making phone calls. However, as a promotions and marketing intern, I learned absolutely nothing about promotions and marketing. I learned that carrying 20 pound boxes in 90-degree heat sucks. I learned that I don't like the taste of envelope glue. And I learned that I would never want to work in the promotions department of any radio station anywhere.

"Internships are supposed to be learning experiences. They are not supposed to be filled with an abundance of envelope licking or making photocopies."

Companies that offer internships should have a set syllabus of teaching their interns about whatever industry they are participating in. They shouldn't just expect them to be "free help," which is what my internship was. Intern coordinators should also be educators, who can instruct interns about their particular industry during an internship.

Even still, I did learn a valuable lesson even though I resented the marketing director for scolding me with the motto, "I get out of an internship what I want to," she was right. And I did just that for the last three weeks when I was sitting in with the night DJ, helping him produce his show and not doing irritating busy work. I wish I had done that the whole summer. Regardless, I've made a contact with him, and I know he'd let me come back and sit in anytime.

I definitely plan on it. That's what I did or didn't do on my summer vacation.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian staff member.

Copyright © 2002 Newspaper Enterprise Association, Inc.

Want to draw editorial cartoons? Come to the Collegian office and talk to Jamie or Regan.

Blacklists and me

DAVID WEI LIU

A notable quote from a notable movie goes like this: "With great power comes great responsibility." Another notable quote states: "When in Rome do as the Romans do." Ready for some analogies?

My car is Rome. I am the king of the Romans since I sort of own the car. As the Roman king, I have a responsibility (a great one) and the power (great power) to make laws that you, the passenger, must abide by. See, it actually is very simple. Here are the laws that I've come up with, put eloquently.

When you sit down in my car, one thing should happen instantly. Your hand should be reaching for something known as the seatbelt. If it doesn't and I find out (I'm sort of two feet away from you at this point), you will be blacklisted. By the way, these are new rules, and I take them about 10 times more seriously than I did one month ago. You should know that now. I'm serious. More on being blacklisted later.

Another thing that bothers me deals with the mats. I have mats in my car. I bought them. They're there because I like my car a lot, and I want to keep it nice and clean. That means that your shoe should never be touching the carpet of my car unless there is a mat between them. But I vacuum my car often, so this isn't that big a deal. What is a big deal is that these mats are folded onto themselves and jammed underneath the front seats. When this happens, I get mad. Very mad. But there is no way of telling who did it, so I'll just become irrational and not give rides at all. No tourists!

The front passenger window of my car was involved in an accident before I owned it. It is broken. When you try to close it once it's open, it doesn't fit right. A piece of plastic or rubber or something is broken, and the only way of closing the window properly would be for me to go outside and push it in and close the window at the same time. This isn't my idea of fun.

When you're in my car in shotgun, you should never move around violently. Why? Because many times before when this has happened, my view of the side mirrors is blocked. I use my side mirrors a lot. I also use my rear view mirror a lot. This is why I usually ask the person sitting bitch to duck. But seriously, blocking my view of the mirrors can lead to the death of us all.

When I slow to zero miles per hour, there is a sequence of things that I do. I go to neutral. I push on the handbrake. I go to park. I turn off everything (wipers, mats, AC). I unlock the doors. I turn the car off. This sequence must not be disturbed. It is a habit, and it is therefore very disturbing to me when interfered with. You will be blacklisted if you open the door before I unlock it.

The last, and definitely not the least important, thing I want to address is tardiness. I hate tardiness. When I'm picking people up, it's usually at their homes. It doesn't take 20 minutes to come down from your home to the curb. And if it does, tell me it does, and time it so that you arrive at the curb when I arrive at the curb. If I want to pick you up at 12:45, and it's 12:40, and you have to take 10 minutes to put on your socks and shoes, tell me so that I will arrive at 12:50. I will be more pleasant. Being late consistently or obscenely will result in being blacklisted.

Blacklisted is another term for "I will never pick you up again in life."

David Wei Liu is a UMass student

Trying to Make Some Cash
Ticks, Knives and Furniture

PATRICK LEAHY

As the spring semester slowly winds to an end, it is not uncommon to see college students scrambling to find something to occupy themselves during the endless months of summer. Last June, I decided to forego my usual trip home to Wisconsin, and instead chose to live and work in Amherst. While this is not an uncommon thing for many people caught up in the academic realm to do, I, in particular, found it just a tad frustrating.

In early May I interviewed with MASSPIRG, the statewide environmental group. As I walked into its office for my scheduled interview, I was quickly introduced to several of the employees, and then was whisked over to a large, circular shaped table for my sit-down interview. As I filled out the necessary paperwork and answered each question thoughtfully, I began to get a sense of the certain intensity that seemed to be characteristic of those who worked there. At first, I'll admit, I found this type of intensity intriguing and hoped that working with these individuals over the summer would prove educational.

Not so.

The Tuesday after Memorial Day weekend, I came in for my first day – an observation day. This meant that I would be canvassing door to door with an already experienced member of the workforce. After approximately six hours of having dogs bark at me, having received weird looks and having seen doors slammed in my face, I realized that perhaps I wasn't quite cutout to be a salesperson. As we continued our journey through the virgin forests of Leverett (meeting not-so-virgin types of people) with folders, papers, umbrellas and bags in tow, I could have predicted the rain storm that hit only an hour into our excursion. Finally, at approximately 10 p.m., after having been on my feet longer than I could have ever imagined, we arrived back at the office where plans were being made to go out for ice cream at Bart's. Of course, mind you, I had only eaten a small sandwich that day and was, needless to say, starved. When I was asked if I would be attending, I immediately expressed my condolences and walked out of the office shaken, frustrated and covered in ticks (which I dealt with later that evening). As I wandered the streets of Amherst desperately searching out a place to eat, it occurred to me. Of course they invited us to Bart's; nothing else is bloody open at 10 p.m. in Amherst in late May.

"After approximately six hours of having dogs bark at me, having received weird looks and having seen doors slammed in my face, I realized that perhaps I wasn't quite cutout to be a salesperson."

Several days later I found myself again interviewing for a job, this time with a cutlery company determined to lure unsuspecting high school and college students into their tangled web. After going through a group interview, led by an individual who was the spitting image of my best friend in high school (though he had a bit more polish on his teeth), I was offered the job. I was overjoyed to have something set up. I went home to Wisconsin for a few days before starting work in order to attend a best friend's high school graduation. One evening, I began talking to my friend Stephen online. He was working the same job in Virginia and gave me the low-down, dirty details of what the job was really like. According to him, even though they advertised being a "no door-to-door, no telemarketing" type of business, in truth, it turned it actually was. After having flashbacks of working with MASSPIRG, I cancelled my appointment with them and continued the never-ending search.

After briefly chauffeuring around an elderly woman (who never called me back after my supposed first day of work and who apparently didn't care much for my slick 1988 Toyota Carolla Wagon), I received a call from my father. Unlike myself, he had managed to find himself a job after being unemployed for three years. The company who had hired him had offered him a sum of money to help him move to their region, right outside of St. Paul-Minneapolis. I was thrilled that his luck was better than mine ($80,000 a year better, mind you) and that he was willing to hire me to help him move. Of course I agreed and several days later, I jumped into my trusty jalopy and drove 17 hours back home.

While I have yet to see a paycheck from my father, I imagine it will be showing up in my mailbox in a few days...or will it?

Patrick Leahy is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING Weekend Edition

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.06.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

King of Rock 'N Roll still alive in hearts and minds of fans

Elvis continues to rock on in our memories.

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"There are several unbelievable things about Elvis, but the most incredible is his staying power in a world where meteoric careers fade like shooting stars." – Greil Marcus

I love Elvis Presley, even though I was born several years after his death. I have never seen Elvis in concert; I have no real mental picture of him beyond all the movies I have memorized and the live concerts that are still shown on television, but 25 years after his death, I still consider myself part of the group of die-hard Elvis fans.

The group itself is substantial. It consists of people like my mother who insisted that my sister and I sing along in the car when an Elvis song came on (perpetual backup singers for his music even at the tender age of eight) and extends to those who make the yearly vigil to Graceland to commemorate his death. Elvis has fans of all ages: children, elderly, rock stars and celebrities and just average people. Elvis had something for everyone.

The Man

"...it was like he came along and whispered some dream in everybody's ear, and somehow we all dreamed it." - Bruce Springsteen

Elvis was a southerner at heart. I think that fact explains a great deal about both his persona and his musical influences. Born in Mississippi in 1935, he moved to Tennessee when he was a teenager and lived and died there. Taking in a steady diet of R&B, country music, gospel and the popular music at the time, he developed a style that was a hybrid of all types –something all his own.

He officially broke onto the music scene with a pelvic thrust and a hip swivel on the Milton Berle Show in June of 1956 with a version of "Hound Dog" that hooked teenage girls and caused parents to label him the devil. Although it might seem insignificant to a modern day music listener, dancing on stage wasn't very common and dancing in a way that exhibited sexuality was virtually unheard of.

"A lot of people have accused Elvis of stealing the black man's music, when in fact, almost every black solo entertainer copied his stage mannerisms from Elvis," said Jackie Wilson, of Motown fame.

Despite the controversy or perhaps because of it, he made his way to the Ed Sullivan Show in September of the same year, drawing the highest rating of any variety show ever. He went on to make 33 movies, all but one of them musicals, put out countless albums spanning genres from country to gospel and to modern music and attained such a high degree of fame that he is referenced as simply "the

Turn to ELVIS, page 7

Moby remains techno wizard on 18

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MOBY
18
V2

In 1999, Moby released a little album simply titled Play. Filled with techno music bursting with emotion, the album went on to sell 10 million copies (thanks in part to Moby's decision to commercially license all tracks off the album) and convinced the masses that all techno-dance music doesn't need to be mind-numbingly repetitive. Finally, after a decade-long career, he received the recognition he finally deserved.

Moby continues his newfound fame with 18 (partly named for the number of tracks on the album). He doesn't necessarily craft techno music, but rather uses that framework to create his own genre. He takes ghostly old voices from blues and gospel folk and remixes them into seductive, yet restrained, dance music. By looping the vocals over electronic arrangements, the vocals shine like rays of light. Moby's extraordinary talents – he plays all the instruments, mixes and produces on this, his 12th release – make him one of the most talented artists in popular music.

18, which features guest vocalists MC Lyte, Sinead O'Connor and Freedom Brenner among others, contains great music in the realm of funk, blues and soul. Moby's vocals, featured on three of the tracks, add to the depth of the album. "Signs of Love," in which Moby sings about flying high after falling in love, is sung with emotional warmth lacking in much of today's music.

In one of the record's moving moments, "Sleep Alone," two ghosts fly through a city while holding hands. "Sunday (The Day Before My Birthday)" features breathy vocals by Sylvia Robinson, who grieves the loss of yesterday's bright day. The song becomes piercingly poignant when you learn that Moby's birthday is Sept. 11.

"One of These Mornings," about the eventual loss of a loved one, couples unhurried drumbeats with vintage vocals by Dianne McCaulley, creating a soaring portrait of morbid outlook. "Great Escape," featuring the tender vocals of Azure Ray, is another lasting track that should become the soundtrack for every magician's great escape.

Despite gorgeous guest shots from other vocalists such as Jennifer Price ("In This World") singing the hauntingly beautiful "Lordy, don't leave me/ All by myself" and the Shining Light Gospel Choir ("In My Heart"), there's too much vocal repetition and not enough songwriting to go around. Whether this is to drive home a point or whether the lyrics are meant to be short and sweet, the formula fails to work on all cuts.

But the album's not all about heavy topics. Moby knows how to have a good time, and he shows it on "Iam for the Ladies," a club-like song that's light, frothy and fun. Tellingly, it's also one of the few times Moby delves into heavy beats.

But make no mistake; the music on 18 is for the sophisticated listener. Moby turns up the vocals more than he's known to, leaving only a handful of tracks as old-school instrumentals but, even still, listening to a track like "Fireworks," devoid of any lyrics, may make you feel like the song (and the album) lacks any sort of heat, never mind fire.

Since most of the tracks aren't full of joy, I'm betting you'll need to be in a bluesy mood to fully enjoy the album. In fact, whether sampled or newly sung, the voices seem to be perpetually in mourning, and they're set to music that is slow and contemplative – much like the sad, slow tone at the end of a dramatic movie.

COURTESY DANNY CLINCH

Moby's music is just about as deep as his contemplative state in this picture.

Midnight Snacks solves midnight munchies problem

JAMES M. HARTLEY/ COLLEGIAN

Filled with about 150 recipes, this delectable handbook will solve your late-night munching nightmares.

By Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MIDNIGHT SNACKS
Michael J. Rosen and Sharon Reiss
Broadway Books

It's 2 a.m. and you've just gotten home from the bars (or if you're not 21, let's say the frats or your friend's dorm room). You're starving, and your roommate ate the last of your Fritos. The evening out has sucked your wallet dry, so ordering out is not an option. This is seemingly quite the predicament. However, going hungry you won't be, because with things that you can find in any sparsely filled food cabinet, you can create yourself a quick and tasty snack found in the recipe book Midnight Snacks, which contains 150 alternatives to going to bed with a rumble in your tummy.

Midnight Snacks is chaptered by hour of the night, beginning with 10:15 p.m. and continuing up until the pre-dawn hour of 5:30 a.m., and it offers recipes for anything from sitting in front of the TV watching a movie to coming home after a night out and needing a food fix to having to get up super early for an early morning work shift.

Midnight Snacks offers recipes for anyone from domesticated people who like things like paprika and sage in their spice cabinets to your average college student who might only be able to find graham crackers and stale marshmallows. Crispy potato spoons are an example of this. It involves potatoes, cheese (which is optional) and salt and pepper – all things that can be easily located in your average apartment. They basically involve scooping out the middle of the potato and baking the skin in the oven at a high temperature, creating a potato chip-like snack, except a heck of a lot healthier.

Another easy fix for the late night munchies is the recipe for Tossing and Turnovers. All that is required is four slices of any kind of soft textured bread, some butter and your choice of filling for rolling up these breads. Jellies and chocolate are suggested fillings by the authors, but it can be pretty much anything you want and can take under 20 minutes to cook.

For those who have a little more time and are perhaps a bit more adventurous, there are recipes that produce appetizing snacks suitable for parties or study sessions or one of any number of informal get-togethers. Multiplying the recipe might be smart though, because most recipes are only written for one or two servings.

> "Whether it be late night snacks after a trip downtown, an early morning fix before a 7 a.m. flight or a mini gathering, Midnight Snacks has all your munchie needs covered"

Recipes range from reviving to peculiar. A most appetizing snack appropriate for late-night study marathons is the Smooshed Tomato Toasts. It involves tomatoes, garlic, olive oil and salt and pepper together on thick sliced toasted peasant bread. Something more unusual though, and maybe even questionably appetizing, would be the Hot and Sweet Pumpkin Seed Brittle, which involves roasted pumpkin seeds sprinkled with brown sugar and cayenne pepper. (I like cayenne pepper and brown sugar separately, but I'm not sure how my stomach would react to the sugary/fiery combination; but then again, to each his/her own.)

There are also recipes for healthy and filling breakfasts. Some take a little longer to prepare, but the Cottage Cheese Hot Cakes seem completely worth the wait. They involve pancakes with cottage cheese and maple syrup. Just reading the ingredients made me want to go back to my apartment and break into the Bisquick. Good Morning Mush sounds interesting, as it is cornmeal with maple syrup and honey. All of the early morning fixes are said to provide you with the energy you need to function at such a rotten time of day.

Whether it be late night snacks after a trip downtown, an early morning fix before a 7 a.m. flight or a mini gathering, Midnight Snacks has all your munchie needs covered. The recipes are creative; most are appetizing, and even those who can't boil water would probably be able to manage most of them. So, instead of taking the peanut butter jar out of the pantry and making a mess, perhaps pulling out Midnight Snacks and adding just a little extra effort, you can create scrumptious, filling and healthy alternatives to satisfy those late night munchies.

Author offers endless ideas for writing diaries for children

COURTESY MICHAEL J. HEATH

DuMar will be presenting a workshop at Barnes and Noble on Sept. 19.

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BEFORE YOU FORGET: THE WISDOM OF WRITING DIARIES FOR YOUR CHILDREN
Kelly DuMar, M.Ed.
Red Pail Press

Take a moment, my reader, and just picture the scene. See the fresh, blank page staring you in the face as you look down at the newly creased notebook sitting before you. Smell the scent of woodcuttings from the recently sharpened pencil nestled between your fingers. Feel yourself breathe a sigh as you begin to collect your thoughts.

Soon the moment will arrive, and you can let your untried ideas, warm recollections and heartfelt emotions flow onto paper without judgement or ridicule. Yes, that time will come when you can express your thoughts to your heart's content without having to worry an instant about rambling on for far too long or only making sense within your own head.

Picture this scene, my reader, and ask yourself when it could possibly come to life. The answer will await you as you bring your attentions back to the here and now. It is the process of diary writing, and a process that is ever familiar to Kelly DuMar, author of the book Before You Forget and alumna of the University of Massachusetts.

DuMar's text puts the art of diary writing into a somewhat unique context, for she does not simply discuss diary writing in order to just keep a personal legacy jotted down for later introspection (though she admits in her introduction that she has maintained such a journal since age 13). Instead, DuMar's main focus is the art of writing to loved ones; namely to one's children.

From her personal experiences of writing such diaries to and for her own children, DuMar shares with her readers the passionately romantic idea of keeping memories alive through the written word. "Children trust you to remember, but you will forget," one subtitle reads, headlining a section that explains the importance of writing down special moments in order to maintain their vividness in the years to come.

DuMar's simple phrases, laced with a touching sincerity that exudes from her own experiences of writing from a mother's point of view, are intertwined with passages from those said dairies addressed to her children: Landon, Perrin, and Frances. As Before You Forget progresses, DuMar begins to offer advice to parents whom she has won over with her philosophy on journals and who may also wish to begin such diaries for their children.

In addition to her book, DuMar also hosts workshops for parents to help provide them with more ideas for ways of keeping diaries of children. DuMar will offer one such workshop, entitled "Parenting Wisdom Through the Diary Door," free of charge on Sept. 19 at 7 p.m. at Barnes & Noble Booksellers in Holyoke.

Tai Pei Tokyo
To hire 1 CASHIER for Chinese Restaurant located in Northampton.
Must be able to speak and write Mandarin Chinese
Please call 413-582-1868
18 Main St. Northampton 01060

Affordable
Rings, Bracelets, Chains, Candles, Earrings, India Print Bedspreads, Great Clothing And Gifts, Happy B'day Cards, Baskets, Paper Lampshades, Area Rugs, Posters, Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing, Incense, Bead Curtains
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5:30 Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops Northampton 108Main St.

UMass CAMPUS RECREATION
Paid Officials Needed for Flag Football, Soccer Field Hockey, Softball, Ice Hockey & Volleyball
Clinics: Football-Sept. 10, 11, 12 Soccer-Sept. 10, 11, 12, 13
Co-ed Softball-Sept. 16, 17 Field Hockey - Sept. 16
Ice Hockey-Sept. 24, 25, 26 Volleyball - Oct. 1, 2, 8, 9
Call for requirements, times and locations
Still Time To Enter: Flag Football, Soccer, Field Hockey, & Softball
More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693
On The Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

THE BOLTWOOD PROJECT™
(32 years of service—and counting!)
A STUDENT / COMMUNITY SERVICE LEARNING PROGRAM
(an RSO and Dept. of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning sponsored prog.)
REACH OUT—AND BECOME A SPECIAL FRIEND TO PEOPLE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS
Your life will NEVER be the same!
EARN 1–2 CREDITS GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE REWARDING, CHALLENGING, and FUN
Fall Semester 2002 — Recruitment Nights
You must attend ONE of these meetings. No exceptions, even if you have participated before!
6:00-8:00 PM (Note: Prompt starting time!!!)
Room 163C of the Campus Center for all meetings •Sept. 9 (Mon) •Sept. 10 (Tues) •Sept. 11 (Wed)
•Assignment notification ONLY Thurs, Feb 7th @ Boltwood table CC Concourse. No telephone inquiries. YOU (or a friend) must pickup the notification letter!!!
Volunteer, while earning credit!

HIPPODROME
SS EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES SS
Western New England's largest dance club and multi entertainment complex is hiring for our busiest fall/winter season:
Bartenders, Cocktail Services, Cashiers, I.D. Checkers, Security, Barbacks, Bus Persons, Coatroom
Apply In Person Only
Date: Tuesday, September 10th and Wednesday, September 11th 2002
Time: 5:00p.m. - 8:00p.m.
Place: Hippodrome, 1700 Main Street, Springfield, MA 01103
Website: www.hdrome.com

Elvis

continued from page 5

King."

But with all of his accolades and his fame, it is impossible to say what made up Elvis. It is hard to explain why someone like me and a generation of people like me, would want to listen to a man that we will never see. But to explain Elvis's appeal would be to try to explain charisma or the concept of love; simply put, Elvis Presley was a hell of a lot more than he appeared on paper.

The Myth

"Elvis Presley's death deprives our country of a part of itself. He was unique, irreplaceable. More than 20 years ago, he burst upon the scene with an impact that was unprecedented and will probably never be equaled. His music and his personality, fusing the styles of white country and black rhythm and blues, permanently changed the face of American popular culture." - President Jimmy Carter, 1977, during his official statement following Elvis's death

Every legend has a myth that surrounds him. Elvis's myth surrounds his death rather than his life. Did Elvis die? Is he still alive somewhere in a small town in Texas driving a bus or shopping in a grocery store? No. But it is more interesting to think so. Since this story is to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Elvis's death, It seems fitting to speak about the death itself. The argument that Elvis is still alive is actually based on strange circumstances surrounding his passing.

The crux of the main argument is that a different person's body was identified as that of Elvis. The death certificate was released a month late and a revised copy was distributed. On the certificate, his body weight was listed as far less than it was in actuality, and the cause of death was simply listed as heart failure. Truth be told according to everyone who knew Elvis, he was a drug addict up until the time he died and had near-death experiences previous to the actual final call. So in the tradition of many other much-loved musicians that died before their time, there is the invention of the undead Elvis. Carl Perkins summed up the death of a cultural icon best when he said, "We've lost the most popular man that ever walked this planet since Christ himself was here."

Beyond that, there are so many Elvis impersonators that literal conventions are held in Las Vegas every year, so chances are when you saw Elvis in the men's room last week, it was really a fraud.

The Legacy

"Before Elvis, there was nothing." - John Lennon

What do Britney Spears, Elton John, Jim Morrison, Bruce Springsteen and countless others have in common? They are all Elvis fans. Like it or not, Elvis has had a serious impact upon the modern day music industry, the political arena and modern film. To date, there have been a myriad of movies, mostly bad, about Elvis's life and countless Elvis references in film. Disney's most recent movie Lilo and Stitch, and Honeymoon in Vegas, a movie starring Nicholas Cage (Lisa Marie Presley's newlywed husband) are just a couple of movies that reference Elvis, but you can find a reference in basically any movie set in Vegas.

Even politicians reference Elvis in their campaigns.

"You know, Bush is always comparing me to Elvis in sort of unflattering ways," said Bill Clinton during the 1992 presidential campaign. "I don't think Bush would have liked Elvis very much, and that's just another thing that's wrong with him."

But what it all comes down to is the music. The reason why Elvis is so important is because of his influences upon modern popular culture and music. Whether or not you enjoy his music, he has likely influenced artists that you do enjoy.

"Ask anyone. If it hadn't been for Elvis, I don't know where popular music would be," said Elton John. "He was the one that started it all off, and he was definitely the start of it for me."

Either way, 25 years after his death, the world still remembers Elvis Presley, and the music world feels his influence. He is now a part of our history.

"It's rare when an artist's talent can touch an entire generation of people. It's even rarer when that same influence affects several generations. Elvis made an imprint on the world of pop music unequaled by any other single performer." - Dick Clark

Want to write for the Collegian's Arts & Living section? Want to draw caricatures for said section? You got it! Find out more by coming down to the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 7:30 p.m. for the first all-staff Arts & Living meeting. We'll be waiting...

WORMTOWN BREWING CO. PRESENTS
THE 4TH ANNUAL
WORMTOWN MUSIC FESTIVAL
SEPT. 6, 7 & 8
All Ages, Kids Tent, Food Vendors
Sponsored by Red Hook Brewery
MAX CREEK * THE RECIPE * ENTRAIN * SLIPKNOT * THE ZEN TRICKSTERS * ULU * FLIPPER DAVE * RAQ * THE GRAPES OF VAUDEVILLIAN FANTASY * MOUNTAIN OF VENUS * MOON BOOT LOVER * PSYCHEDELIC BREAKFAST * LEROY WHITE * HEIR * OAK ST. JAM BAND * AARON KATZ BAND * BRUCE MANDARO BAND * UNCLE SAMMY * SIMON * BROTHERS PAST * SOULWORK * DEXTER GROVE * HAZIE MAZE * FOXTROT ZULU * ZYRAH'S ORANGE * REVERAND TOR BAND W/ GRATEFUL DEAD KEYBOARDIST, TOM "TC" CONSTANTEN
TICKETS:
$15 IN ADVANCE
KIDS UNDER 12 ARE FREE !!!
ALL PRICES INCLUDE CAMPING
WHIPPERNON COUNTRY CLUB
RT. 20
RUSSELL, MA
TAKE I-90 TO EXIT 3
GO 10/202 SOUTH TO WESTFIELD CENTER
GO WEST ON RT.20
NO DOGS NO GLASS BOTTLES NO OPEN FIRES
PLEASE BRING: KIDS, COOLERS, GRILLS, LOTS AND LOTS OF DRUMS !!!

TechCavalry
help is on the way!
Computer Troubles?
We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com
Tape this ad to your computer!

Now Hiring!
ATKINS JOB FAIR
Saturday, September 7, 2002
from 10:00 a.m. - 12:00 p.m.
Full-time, Part-time and Seasonal Positions Available in the following Departments:
Deli Bakery Ice Cream Cash Registers Scarecrows Apples
COME BE A PART OF OUR TEAM!

Do you Doo-Wop?
AUDITIONS!!!
UMass Doo-Wop Shop since 1993
We are an all male a cappella group
Consisting of 5-7 people
Singing everything from the fifties to today's top hits
Looking for people like YOU!
Come check us out:
September 8th, 6pm Sunday
Room 149 in the Fine Arts Center
Contact us at:
Doowopshop1@yahoo.com
www.geocities.com/thedoowopshop or call Jason: 549-6905

MERCYhouse
it's a church
www.knowmercy.org

East meets West; this time on Boston U's turf

DIGITAL COLLEGIAN

Martin Buswell makes a sharp move around the defender, he hopes to do the same against Boston U. this weekend.

Minutemen ready for the tough regional rival

By Katie Landers
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts men's soccer team is on the road again, this time to Boston University's Nickerson Field to take on the Terriers. The Minutemen, currently holding tight at 1-1, will face their biggest non-conference rival of the season in BU.

Just a year ago this week, the two teams met in Amherst in a grueling 2-1 overtime UMass win. Power forward Jeff Deren scored the winning goal to end the annual matchup. In these early days of the season, BU has only a loss and a tie to back them up. UMass Head Coach Sam Koch, however, knows that it's too early to bet on a win today.

"It's always a big game, our biggest non-conference play," Koch said. "Records don't mean anything."

BU has a history of being stingy when it comes to letting in goals. The Terriers held opponents to an average 1.2 goals per game in 2001, while netting themselves 2.5 per game. The team did lose its most powerful forward from last season, Joachim Karlund, who scored 19 goals in 18 games played. Trailing him with seven goals in 19 games, midfielder Andrew Dorman remains on the roster to help out with the Terrier offense.

On the home stretch, the Minutemen have been working out the kinks after the loss against Navy on Sunday. Deren has been able to handle the goal scoring, but it is the defense that needs to stop the opposing teams. So far senior goalkeeper Enzo Altomere has seen time in the net to replace the graduated All-American Bryan O'Quinn.

"We're working on defense," Koch said. "It's the one area we've made some mistakes."

Besides being two top Massachusetts' soccer teams, there lies a deep history between the east and the west. Coach Koch looks forward to this game each year as a chance to see two tough teams compete, as well as a chance to catch up with BU coach Neil Roberts.

"We're good friends," Koch said.

Roberts is another outstanding head coach, ranking in the top ten among Division I coaches in NCAA soccer. The Terriers finished the 2001 campaign with a 9-1-1 conference record, and at 13-5-1 overall, Roberts' team was crowned American East Region Seasonal Champions.

UMass even hones its own Terrier Alum. Assistant Coach Dean Smith, in his third season at UMass, graduated from BU in 1999. Smith was a central defender and captain for the team and earned All-America East awards from 1996-98. The native of Newcastle Upon Tyne, England, is positioned here at UMass to help build the defense. Helping a defense that only allowed 27 goals last year; today will be a test of skills against his alma mater.

UMass will face off against BU on Nickerson Field tonight at 7.

Interested in writing for Sports? Come to our meeting in the Campus Center Basement at 5pm on Sunday.

Hold on to your hats: Oakland streaks its way into history book

MATT BRADY

On Aug. 19, I was in Charlotte-Douglas International Airport, waiting for a flight that was almost two hours away from departure, so I decided to take a walk and see what stores were there for me to browse through things. I found a Lids store and promptly entered, deciding to finally order my green A's cap to pay homage to the team led by my favorite baseball player (Barry Zito) and one of my favorite position players (Eric Chavez).

On Aug. 19, Oakland defeated Cleveland 8-1, as Chavez hit two homers to lead the A's to their sixth consecutive victory, moving them near to the top of the super-competitive AL West.

Now, more than two weeks later, they are still going. Twenty consecutive wins. The best run of all time in the American League, and fourth only to two fantastic streaks by the Cubs and an incomprehensible 26-game streak by the New York Giants of 1916.

Winning three games in a row in this day and age of watered down talent levels is impressive enough, but to break the streak of a team that could run "Big Ed" Walsh out to the mound every other day (the '06 White Sox) is nearly impossible.

But the most impressive thing about the streak to me is the manner in which the A's have won 20 games in a row. Twelve of the games have been decided by three runs or less, which means that when times have been tough for the A's, they have fought through immeasurable odds to win. It also indicates a tremendous performance by the bullpen, which is a strong group of wily veterans (32-year-olds Ricardo Rincon, Jim Mecir and Jeff Tam) and a fireballing closer in Billy Koch.

We all know about the five-armed monster known as the A's pitching staff, of which the elder statesman is Cory Lidle (30) and all the rest are age 27 or younger. This group has gone from a bunch of kids with a lot of potential to the best pitching staff in the major leagues in practically no time at all.

The offense has been led by two true stars (Chavez and Miguel Tejada – more on him later) and a bunch of role players, many of whom have seen their careers resurrected by the Bay. Scott Hatteberg, for years far too valuable as a backup catcher in Boston to stay there, moved to first base to be the "replacement" for Jason Giambi. In subscribing to the A's philosophy, he has been incredibly solid with a mid-.350s on base percentage for most of the season.

One night at Fenway Park this summer, I remember having a conversation with a pair of reporters about who had a shot at the AL wild card. "Don't write off the A's," I reminded them. They promptly laughed at me and said that now that Oakland had traded away Giambi's little brother, Jeremy, they were surely done for the season. The person they received in the trade, John Mabry, then thought to be a washed-up utility infielder, has been hitting better than .300 for most of the season with a slugging percentage of nearly .600, a number that is mind-boggling for those who remember him from his days in St. Louis.

The outfield has done its part too, as David Justice and Jermaine Dye have pitched in solid seasons. The oft-reliedupon Terrance Long has had his struggles at the plate this year, but has provided stellar defense in center.

But the offensive key to this team is certainly the left side of the infield, who provide a combination of power, average and defense not equaled in the rest of the Major Leagues. Chavez is a Gold Glover who this season has already put up his second consecutive 30-plus homer, 100-plus RBI season. With his numbers, and his character, he has established himself as one of the best, if not the best, third baseman in the majors.

The player who obviously has more to do with the success of this team than anyone else on the field, though, is certainly Tejada. The "big three" at shortstop quickly transformed to the "big four" this season with the emergence of Tejada as the second best offensive shortstop in the majors behind Alex Rodriguez. His defensive range is easily comparable to his peers in the American League, and he has what might be the strongest, (though not the most accurate) arm from his position in the big leagues. But more importantly, the 26-year-old from the Dominican Republic has turned into one of the most clutch players at the plate in the game.

And if my former colleague Dave Rose were here, he would certainly be spearheading the "Tejada for MVP" campaign in this sports section. But since he's not here, I'll make the case.

Nobody, and I mean nobody, wants to see A-Rod win the MVP this year. If you do, then just go away. Everyone is in accordance with the fact that a player on a team as bad as the Rangers should not win the award despite the fact that he is the best player in the league. Besides, Tejada has batted in nearly the same number of runs as his counterpart and has carried his team to far more victories.

The only two other logical candidates for the award are the elder Giambi and Alfonzo Soriano. While Giambi has had a strong season, his numbers are comparable to Tejada's despite the fact that he plays a far less skill-oriented position. Soriano is likely the most well-rounded player in the majors right now, and is one of the few people who still excel at all five tools. His numbers are almost as good as his comrade in Oakland's are, but to me the clinching argument is how valuable the two players are to their respective teams. The Yankees would likely still make the playoffs without Soriano, though it might be much more of a fight. The A's, on the other hand, would likely be lucky to pull off a wild card spot without the services of Tejada.

The real story behind the Athletics' miraculous run, however, is not of the players on the field at all. It is the combination of incredible managing at the hands of Art Howe, smart and cost-effective moves by Billy Beane and nearly flawless development techniques in the minor leagues. Every player on the Oakland roster knows the art of working a pitcher deep in a count to get the best pitch and get the pitcher tired. Oh, and for those of you expecting a drop off when the vaunted pitching staff goes after high-priced contracts, most of the key members are locked up for several more years and according to reports, the pitching staff at double-A is even better than when Zito, Tim Hudson and Mark Mulder were there.

Enjoy what you are watching, baseball fans. Watching a team with one of the smallest payrolls out there having this great of a success is something that does not happen too often.

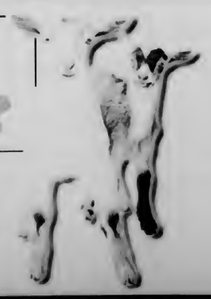
Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

■ AFC

continued from page 9

instead of allowing the geezer (Doug Flutie) to midget his way around the field. Second-year running back LaDanian Tomlinson will struggle this year behind an atrocious offensive line. If first-round pick Quentin Jammer ever signs, the Chargers would have a very good secondary. If not, they'll look just like the rest of the D. Mediocre.

Postseason:
Wild Card: Miami, Indianapolis.
1st Round: Miami over Tennessee, New England over Indianapolis.
2nd Round: Denver over New England, Miami over Pittsburgh.
AFC Championship: Denver over Miami.



Awards:
AFC offensive MVP: Ricky Williams-RB-Miami
AFC defensive MVP: Takeo Spikes-LB-Cincinnati
AFC offensive rookie of the year: David Carr-QB-Houston
AFC defensive rookie of the year: Dwight Freeney-DE-Indianapolis

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian columnist. You can read the NFC preview in next Wednesday's Collegian.

AMHERST COLLEGE
DINING SERVICES OPPORTUNITIES
Amherst College is accepting applications for the following part-time positions beginning late August-early September
COOKS • FOOD SERVERS
DISHWASHERS • KITCHEN RUNNERS
Weekday and weekend shifts (breakfast, lunch & dinner)
Previous food preparation and kitchen experience preferred
MEAL CHECKERS
Breakfast, lunch, dinner and weekend schedules available. Must be able to work a minimum of three shifts (approx. 3 hours each) up to a maximum of 19 hours per week. Light cleaning duties (including tables) during and after hours. Will train.
CATERING
Banquet Captains • Waitstaff • Bartenders • Drivers, Setup • Catering Dishwashers
Work special functions/catered events. Previous experience preferred but will train.
CAMPUS CENTER COFFEE HOUSE
Counter Service. Weekday and weekend late night shifts available
We offer competitive starting rates. No benefits. Interested candidates may submit a resume or complete an application at: Office of Human Resources, 201 Converse Hall, Amherst College, Amherst, MA 01002-5000.

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9
For more information call 253-7571
• Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-and many more
• Nutritonal Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
• Fitness Testing & Programming
Semester Special $160
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
• Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment
NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

www.dailycollegian.com

Lack of choices
GOT YOUR GOAT?

ask us for a free course catalog or check it out on the Web
Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
UMASS
UMass Amherst
Fall Semester 2002
a lifetime of learning opportunities

DIGITAL COLLEGIAN

Full Steam Ahead!
Corey Potter and the UMass defense will look to steamroll over the Central Connecticut offense on Saturday.

AFC preview: Can New England repeat as champs?

JIM PIGNATIELLO

Millionaires and billionaires fighting over money nearly ended the baseball season early and have soured many fans on the sport. Luckily, the 49ers and Giants kicked off the NFL season last night.

Here's how I see the 2002 season breaking down in the AFC:

AFC East
New England Patriots
Miami Dolphins
New York Jets
Buffalo Bills

I can't remember the last time a defending Super Bowl Champion came into the following season with as little respect as the New England Patriots have this year. They may not win it all again, but coach Bill Belichick will lead the team to another division title.

The addition of running back Ricky Williams from New Orleans should give the Dolphins a much-needed ball control offense. Combine that with a stingy defense and a quarterback (Jay Fiedler) that doesn't make mistakes, and Miami will be in the playoff hunt.

The Jets will be better than advertised this year. I don't have much confidence in Vinny Testaverde, but he does have a very good receiving core to work with. Oh, and then there's that Curtis Martin guy running the ball. The defense, despite losing a number of starters, should be quite good.

The addition of Drew Bledsoe makes the Bills one of the toughest teams to predict this season. Bledsoe's presence will improve the offense, but not enough to get the team out of the cellar until next year.

AFC North
Pittsburgh Steelers
Cleveland Browns
Cincinnati Bengals
Baltimore Ravens

Pittsburgh is the popular choice for 2003 AFC Champion. Pretty sure they were the "expert's" choice last year, too. They'll win the mediocre division, but fall off in the playoffs again as Kordell Stewart simply isn't the guy to take them to the Promised Land.

Cleveland's defense has quickly become one of the very best in the league, but the offense may take another year to catch up. Four-year veteran QB and former No. 1 pick Tim Couch is under a lot of pressure in Cleveland to lead his team into the playoffs this year. With an improved running game via rookie William Green, Couch should come up with enough to make the Dawg Pound happy.

Cincy is an interesting young team. Had they traded for Bledsoe in the off-season, I would have been tempted to jump them over the Browns (maybe even the Steelers, but they dropped the ball – as the perennially bad teams like the Bengals always seem to do. So now, even though they have a strong defense, consistent running back and solid receivers, they won't make the playoffs. No better way to kill your playoff dreams than having Jon Kitna, Akili Smith and Gus Frerotte "compete" for the starting QB job.

The Ravens stink. They're just awful. Here's a team that mortgaged the future to win a Super Bowl, and they'll be paying for it for a couple years. I am interested in seeing how running back Jamal Lewis plays after destroying his knee last year.

AFC South
Tennessee Titans
Indianapolis Colts
Houston Texans
Jacksonville Jaguars

The Tennessee Titans should bounce back nicely after a rough 7-9 season last year. Running back Eddie George is back at 100 percent, and the defense should be improved, but the real reason the Titans should put up 10 or 11 wins this year is their in-division competition. Any team would love to beat up on the Texans and Jaguars twice a season.

The Indianapolis Colts offense will get back on track in 2002 with the return of a healthy Edgerrin James. His presence on the field will make Peyton Manning and the receiving core much, much better. Even with the hiring of Tony Dungy, the Colts' defense is probably still at least a year away.

Amazing that an expansion team should end up in third place in its division this year. It's not that I expect the Texans to be all that good, I just think that the Jaguars should be that bad this year. No. 1 pick David Carr should perform as well as can be expected of a QB on an expansion team, and the defense looks better than any new team's has a right to be.

The Jaguars fell into the same trap the Ravens fell into. The only difference is, at least the Ravens won a Super Bowl. The Jags never even made it that far. If running back Fred Taylor ever stayed healthy, this team would have a shot at .500. So, they have no shot at eight wins.

AFC West
Denver Broncos
Kansas City Chiefs
Oakland Raiders
San Diego Chargers

If Brian Griese plays up to his potential this year, the sky's the limit for the Broncos. Rookie Clinton Portis will team with Olandis Gary to create what should be a "good enough" backfield. Good enough, that is, to keep defenses honest and allow the passing game to flourish. With healthy receivers Rod Smith and Ed McCaffrey, the Broncos will win the West.

The Chiefs are on the rise. Running back Priest Holmes was one of the few bright spots in the team's last place finish in 2001. The journeyman finally found a permanent home with a league-leading 1,555 yards rushing. QB Trent Green should be improved as long as free agent receiver Johnnie Morton can revert back to his glory days and tight end Tony Gonzalez can keep his head in the game.

The Raiders really seem to have psyched themselves out of this season already. Still fuming after the infamous "tuck-rule" call in the second round of the playoffs last year, the team walked out on a meeting with league officials a few weeks back. There's nothing like whining about last season to prepare for this season. Makes sense to me. The offense is ancient. Combine the ages of quarterback Rich Gannon and receivers Tim Brown and Jerry Rice, and you'll reach triple digits. The loss of coach Jon Gruden hasn't been given its due credit.

San Diego coach Marty Schottenheimer made the right decision in naming Drew Brees the team's starting QB. The team isn't going anywhere this year anyway, so why not give the young guy the experience

Turn to AFC, page 8

COUNTING CROWS
LIVE IN CONCERT
HARD CANDY

WITH SPECIAL GUEST
GRAHAM COLTON
SPECIAL TAPER SECTION
SAT OCT 5
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AT THE BOX OFFICE, AT ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500.
ONLINE AT ticketmaster.com
NEW ALBUM "HARD CANDY" IN STORES NOW
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

UMass FOOTBALL
SATURDAY
SEPTEMBER 7TH
WARREN McGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM
Wide Receiver Adrian Zullo
UMASS
VS.
Blue Devils
Central Connecticut State University
UMass Quarterback Jeff Krohn

KICK OFF
1:00 PM
STUDENT TICKETS FREE
Big Y Day
Prizes, Give-aways and much more!
FOR TICKETS CALL
1-866-UMASS-TIX
www.umassathletics.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Saab 900 Turbo Fast Car Mechanic owned High mileage Many New Parts. $2300.00 413-665-3931

WANTED: Funky, Sassy girls with the ability to dance, sing, & work a crowd. Call (413) 537-8527 for more info.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.syb productions .com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

WANTED: Earn money flyering. Call (413) 537-8527

MOVERS WANTED

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

CAMPUS SPOKESPERSON NEEDED $15.00 PER HOUR JOB ON CAMPUS. CAMPUS INFORMATION SERVICES IS CURRENTLY SEEKING HIGHLY MOTIVATED STUDENTS. MUST HAVE STRONG INTERPERSONAL SKILLS. VERY OUTGOING FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL: 1-800-375-5701.

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Part-Time Delivery and Warehouse help for local furniture store. Flexible hours. Tues.-Sat. 256-6184 ask for James

LIFEGUARDS

Lifeguards/WSI The Town of Amherst, Department of Leisure Services and Supplemental Education (LSSE) Aquatics Program is now accepting Lifeguard and WSI applications for the school year 2002-2003. Previous experience preferred. $8.19-9.48 hr. Applications are available from the Town Hall Human Resources Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst. Equal Opportunity Employer

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem, Please call

EMPLOYMENT

212-817-5530 or e-mail dormstory@hotmail.com

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions. must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact. 860-257-9139 for more info.

SPRING BREAK

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1-800-426-7710 www.sunsplash-tours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

EMPLOYMENT

Attention Students! Protect Environment and Get Paid! Clean Water Action is hiring campaign organizers to: *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *protect our air and water *promote renewable energy Good communication skills a must. Paid Training, fun work atmosphere, flexible schedules, great pay. 10 mins. from campus and bus route. Call Megan 413-584-9830

TESTING

Kaplan Test Prep hiring enthusiastic counter staff for evening and weekend hours. Also hiring marketing assistants to flyer local campuses. Applications available at our Center, 150 Fearing St., Amherst or call 549-5780. Work for Kaplan for one year & get a free Kaplan class!

EMPLOYMENT

Recreation Leader – After School Program The Town of Amherst seeks Recreation Leaders for its After School Programs operated by the Leisure Services and Supplemental Education Department (LSSE). Camp Couseling, other experiences working with school age children, and/or related course-work in Elementary Education preferred. $7.80-9.03 hr; 5-15 hrs per week. Applications available from Human Resource Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or LSSE, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or call S. Basniak @ 256-4065. Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

BABYSITTING

After-school care for Two children 7 & 11 years old. Needed in Amherst home. Mon. 3-5pm, Weds. 1:30pm-5:30 pm. Car required 253-5197

Pruddy's is hiring DJ's, bouncers, and waitstaff. Apply in person Wed-Sat 8pm-10pm 253-3345

ROOMMATE WANTED

Looking for child care Thursday evenings. Transportation, references, and experience required. Michelle 259-1118

Jazz Piano Lessons. Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen. $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at

SUMMER CAMPS

(888) 923-3238 or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

WANTED: Technical Assistant for economic modeling software firm. Computer programming experience a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West St. Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jz1@remi.com

WANTED

WANTED: Business Development Assistant telephone sales and marketing for a policy analysis software firm. Knowledge of Economics a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West Street Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jz1@remi.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 35 cent/word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 3
4	NBC / 4
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Closed-to-Cloved
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Hist-ory Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNNC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-56
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television
70	Nickelodeon

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

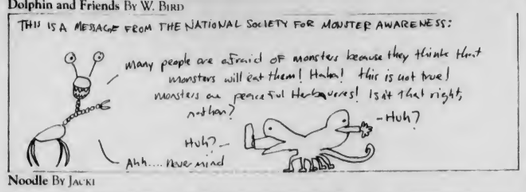
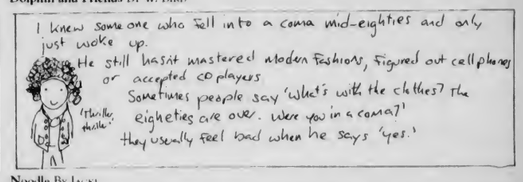
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	32	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	Accordingly-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Allstutes: Cradle		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife Kids	Accordingly-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of Men"		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WYBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	60	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order	Self-Defense (N)	Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	42	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	62	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★ "Hacker" (1938, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci		South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	63	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	59	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)			Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	64	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	65	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAID2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		U. Jo Movie	Making-Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	66	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family	All in Family
SOFI	67	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	68	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure		Monster Trucks
TNT	69	NYPD Blue "Iam Pete" (N)		Preliander "PTP" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Jimde NBA		"Martin Burillo's Day Off" (1986)
USA	70	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	65	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks (In Stereo) PG-13				Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Talking Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	65	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)				Sec Enough		★½ "Mr. Mysot & Hime" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey R		★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves PG-13
SHOW	65	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG				★★½ "The Cell" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett R				Soul Food (TV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.



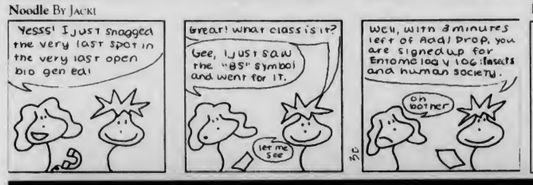
Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



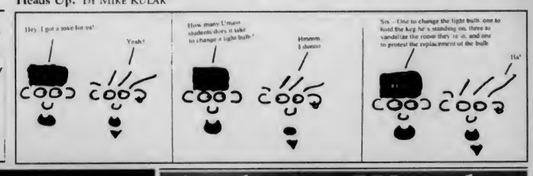
Dolphin and Friends By W. Bird

Dolphin and Friends By W. Bird

Dolphin and Friends By W. Bird



Noodle By Jacki



Noodle By Jacki

Noodle By Jacki

Heads Up! By Mike Kulak

Quote of the Day

> "Why are there so many songs about rainbows and what's on the other side?"
>
> -Kermit the Frog

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
High: 79 Low: 52	High: 84 Low: 63	High: 92 Low: 62

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 21-Dec. 21) – Today is Friday. You know what that means. Wear clean socks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You know that hot girl in your class, stay away. She thinks you're weird.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Skip class today. You need a break. If you always skip class, show the Collegian to your professor as your absence excuse. They'll understand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – The stars are telling you something that you really don't want to hear. Eventually you will snap, and the police will arrest you for swimming naked in the Campus Pond screaming, "Shut up, Julia Roberts!"

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may eat some ... food ... of some sort ...today. Although it may be a cosmic metaphor — look, I'm not really sure. The Magic 8 ball's stuck on "Try Again." And Miss Cleo's phone is busy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – There is a chance that you might meet your soul mate today in one of your classes, there is also a chance that you might not. The future is hazy, try back later.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – The planets are finally in the right alignment. Now is the time for you to reform your band for your glorious reunion tour. Hair bands are back, Venus says.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Venus is in the house of Capricorn, Saturn is in the house of Aries and Mars is in the House of Pancakes. What does this mean? We don't know. Just be careful.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Partly cloudy today with a chance of showers toward evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Surf areyouhotornot.com. You may find your soul mate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Suddenly the answer to all of your problems will appear at 113 Campus Center Basement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – When someone says, "I think I'm getting sick," don't believe him. It's man-code for "I really want to make our with you."

Write for the Collegian...because this cute dog says so.

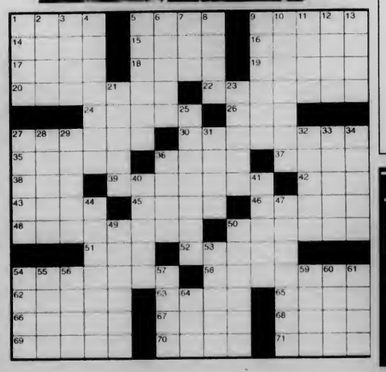
THE HARP
"Start your own tradition"
SATURDAY Sept.7th
ALRUDA
MONDAY Sept. 9th
Introducing the
ALL-U-CAN-EAT
Buffet $5.95
8:30-10:30pm
TUESDAY Sept. 10th 9pm
Pub Trivia Returns!
Win money and prizes!
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900

ACROSS

1 Drill
5 Pet lovers' org.
9 Set firmly
14 Frankenstein's helper
15 Walked
16 Like watermelon
17 Expensive
18 Moreno or Rudner
19 Construction-site sight
20 Vegetables
22 Yacht basins
24 Hike
26 Author L. — Hubbard
27 Haunted-house sound
30 Ancient conifers
35 Slice
36 Nevada town
37 "Outta here!"
38 — shoestring
39 Freighter crew
42 Ms. Peron
43 Between jobs
45 More
46 Preside at a meeting
48 Shambled
50 Food items
51 Yes, in Montreal
52 Uplift
54 Sequin
58 Work on a cartoon
62 Skater Sonja
63 Twisted
65 Not resist
66 Devoured
67 Fishing gear
68 Had on
69 Develop
70 Not so much
71 Amounts



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

11-2-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

DOWN

1 Buys at auction
2 Molding type
3 Certain horse
4 Unpredictable
5 Unbroken series (of wins)
6 Rainbow maker
7 Narrow bed
8 Eve's guy
9 Type of account
10 Soft wools
11 Chili ingredient
12 Author Ferber
13 Pigments
21 Yews and firs
23 Passion
25 Overture
27 Ruin
28 Krishna devotee
29 Domain
31 Hazzard County deputy
32 Pacific, for one
33 Actor Niven
34 Telescope targets
36 Miff
40 Eliot's "cruellest month"
41 Annov genre
44 Dark hardwoods
47 Farm storage areas
49 Oregon city
50 Plastics
53 Challenges
54 Mets' home
55 Fall fruit
56 Not "pro"
57 James — Jones
59 "— Ben Adhem"
60 Semester
61 Gazes at 64 Tiny

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

Chicken Quesadilla

Fish Nuggets

Vegan & Vegetarian Black Bean Quesadilla (vegan)

Vegan Cutlets

DINNER

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

Maryland Crabcakes

Beef Strudel

Vegetable Strudel Marinara (vegetarian)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Matt Brady
Photo Editor: James Schaffer
Copy Editor: Jennifer Eastwood
Production Staff: Melissa Hammel
Designer: Mike Kulak, Pete Preston, Gerry Guy

DAILY COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Field hockey trying to break out of the cage

This Massachusetts field hockey team is set to hang for the season to its losing trend to the early part of the season.

Third consecutive loss results in worst start in school history

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Last academic year, the politicians in Boston chopped away at the state's school budget – leaving public universities, such as the University of Massachusetts, helpless and forced to make staff and program cuts. Now the collegiate field hockey teams in Beantown are beating up on one of the best athletic programs UMass has to offer.

After falling to Northeastern and Boston University earlier this week, the Massachusetts field hockey team succumbed once again to a team that calls the capital of the Commonwealth home, Boston College.

In their first road affair of the young 2002 season, the Minutewomen traveled to Chestnut Hill, looking to find their first victory of the season. Unfortunately, the search was unsuccessful, as they were defeated by the Eagles, 3-1.

"We played very poorly, and it was quite unfortunate, because we made such great strides in our last game," Head Coach Patty Shea said. "We took some steps backwards today, and we just have to regroup now."

With the loss, the Minutewomen dropped to 0-3 on the season. It is the slowest start in the 27-year-old program's history. The Eagles improved to 2-0 on the year.

The Eagles flew over UMass in the early portion of the game, as they scored two quick goals in the first twenty minutes. From that point on, the Minutewomen were in a desperate struggle to make ground on BC.

Similar to the first two contests, the Achilles' heel for the Maroon and White was its offensive attack.

Massachusetts was dominated in the shots category by BC. The final numbers read BC 14, UMass 1. To add salt to a wound, Massachusetts had zero penalty corners, while Boston College had eight.

"Last year's frontline had an experienced backfield behind them," Shea explained. "Now this year, the backfield is young, so the forwards must adjust to different timing and different movement."

Following UMass' 3-2 heart-breaking overtime defeat to Northeastern on Monday, coach Shea pleaded for her team to start attacking the goal with more shots. The stats alone show that the problem may still be around.

The promising part of the Minutewomen's lone shot was that it resulted in their lone goal of the game.

Nearly six minutes into the second half, sophomore Danielle Carrier received a pass from classmate Ashley Gilbert in the Eagles' zone and took full advantage by placing a shot past goalkeeper Lauren Hill. It was Carrier's first goal of the season and brought UMass within one at 2-1.

However, Boston College remembered to pay their insurance bill and put the game away with ten minutes left by scoring its third and final goal – lifting the Eagles to the 3-1 victory.

Once again, the Minutewoman goaltending was spectacular under some rough conditions. Going with a change of pace from last game, sophomore Christine Tocco started over veteran Ashley Egland. Tocco made nine saves in the cage while trying her best to block the rapid fire the Eagles placed on the UMass goal.

The Minutewomen will have a long time to think about their 0-3 record, as they do not play again until Friday, Sept. 13, when they will travel to College Park, Md. for two games.

There, they will face-off with American University and one of the top teams in the entire nation, Maryland. The ladies who sport the Maroon and White will have their work cut out for them as the Terrapins are coming off their fourth consecutive ACC title last season.

"The week-long break will be beneficial for us," Shea said. "To beat one of the best teams in the country, you have to bring high energy and a strong effort."

Entering unfamilar territory

Women to start play at new Rudd Field

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

With the opening of Rudd Field this weekend, the whole University of Massachusetts soccer community is abuzz with excitement. But with all the anticipation surrounding the opening of one of the Universities latest additions, there's some anxiety in the minds of one of its leaders.

"I won't know until we get there, but it's a concern," said Jim Rudy, head coach of the women's soccer team, about whether the ceremonial aspects of the weekend will hinder his squad's performance.

The Minutewomen will clash today at 3 p.m. with Atlantic 10 foe Rhode Island in the inaugural match at the complex. However, the official opening ceremonies will occur prior to Sunday's 1 p.m. showdown with cross-state rival Boston University. The stands should be packed on both days with fans looking to check out the new pitch and the new roster, and Rudy fully expects those in attendance to make some noise, especially on Sunday against the Terriers.

"The second game is going to be grandiose for so many people," Rudy said. "I think it's going to be loud; it will be something else to deal with."

Junior Erin Lilly and the rest of the Minutewomen will battle URI in their first game at Rudd Field.

The Rams enter today's matchup in the conference opener for both clubs. Rhode Island had its season opener against Providence this past Sunday and was able to pull out a 3-3 tie against the Friars. Like the Minutewomen, Rhode Island will rely heavily on its youth for production, as the Ram roster features 14 underclassmen. Freshman Melanie Kasparek provided the spark for URI in the tie, netting a goal and an assist on the afternoon.

The Terriers will look to play the role of spoiling Sunday's festivities and could very well do so after playing impressively in their opening two contests. The back-to-back America East champions knocked off Creighton in their opener by a count of 1-0, before losing a heartbreaker to Kansas in double overtime, 2-1 in Lawrence, Kan. Boston netminder Jessica Clinton has been solid in the two outings so far, and will look to stymie the Minutewomen offense as it looks to adjust to the new offensive system Rudy has instilled.

But even with the Amherst contingent urging the Maroon and White to victory this weekend, Rudd Field could play like a foreign surface to the team. The Minutewomen have not been able to learn the ins and outs of the natural turf as of yet, so having that advantage won't be available until later in the season.

"The field's new enough that we haven't had the opportunity to train on it," Rudy said. "It could very well be like playing your first two games on the road."

The squad will be holding a small ceremony prior to today's game to honor former Minutewoman Stephanie Santos, who passed away three months ago. A plaque will be dedicated and presented to the Santos family to honor the squad's teammate and friend.

"That certainly has its psychological implications," Rudy said. "That's why we're doing it early."

Despite all the factors that could possibly weigh against the Minutewomen as they attempt to make the opening weekend a success, UMass has a golden opportunity to pick up two wins and make last Friday's 1-0 loss to BC a distant memory. These two games will give the youth of the team a great chance to step up and showcase Rudy's potentially dangerous offensive scheme.

"We're going to give it our best shot," he said.

The UMass women's soccer team will also be holding open tryouts on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 3 p.m. on the Lower Boyden fields. All attendees must present a copy of their insurance card and physical within the last year or a note from their doctor certifying that they are fine to participate. This must be received by assistant coach Rebecca Myers in 220 Boyden. To reach Myers, call 545-2816.

Sophomore Danielle Carrier scored the only goal for UMass in a 3-1 loss to BC.

FRIENDS' STARS TAKE THE BIG SCREEN
ARTS PAGE 5.
THE NECESITY OF LIES
ED/OP PAGE 4.
DYNASTIC GROUNDED GAME
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE FOUR ☆☆☆☆☆ 9.08.02

Campus activism gives UMass national attention

MassPIRG recruits new student members.

TINA GRADY/DAILY COLLEGIAN

Mother Jones names UMass to its top 10 active campuses

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Mother Jones magazine recently named the University of Massachusetts seventh on their Top 10 list of activist campuses on the heels of a tumultuous year on campus.

A nonprofit, independent magazine committed to investigative journalism, Mother Jones cited UMass in their Sept.-Oct. issue primarily on the strength of resident assistants on campus voting last March to form the first undergraduate employee union in the United States.

They acknowledged the attention received in facing the University after it refused to recognize the union and negotiate with it. In addition to media coverage and several protests, Mother Jones mentioned that six Massachusetts gubernatorial candidates openly backing the RA union as a factor in their decision to include UMass in the Top 10.

"It's a great testament," said James Shaw, president of Local 2322, the United Auto Workers Union that the RA union organized with.

"A lot of times schools get ranked in bad categories. They get recognized for worst food, for most beer, all sorts of things. It's [getting recognized] obviously something that the RAs should be proud of, but also UMass students.

"UMass students have a lot of fun too, but it's good to students being recognized for something positive," Shaw said. "This is not the first time UMass is on the list. It's really a strong tradition for UMass to challenge the status quo and stand up for the common good."

Shaw said that the campus made the list about five years ago as well.

Several other campus organizations were also largely involved in activism on campus, including the Graduate Employees Organization (GEO) and the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG). GEO actively pushed for the RA union's recognition, with widespread involvement in protests organized to draw attention to the University's refusal to negotiate with the RAs.

MassPIRG, a statewide student-directed and funded organization, pushed actively for several environmental, political and economic issues. Last semester, it tested the water in the campus pond and in nearby Warren Lake in Hadley, recommending a plan of action and publishing their findings in a press conference.

They also removed eight tons of trash from waters during five river cleanups, held three food and clothing drives for the Amherst Survival Center, registered 400 students to vote and organized several awareness-based protests to promote arctic issues.

"I think its really cool that UMass made the Top 10," MassPIRG member Laura Kyser said. "I think that students have led changes in many social events and its important for us to get involved in everything. A lot of students are interested in service because we seem immediate results.

"Its really awesome students are beginning recognized for their activism," Kyser said. "The media likes to portray that we spend all our money on things and that we don't really care, but this is the real thing."

Prof. Sturm appointed Dean of College of Humanities and Fine Arts

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Harlan Sturm, former associate dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts (CHFA) was named interim director of Continuing Education at the University of Massachusetts.

The opportunity came following former Director of Continuing Education Kevin Aiken retirement. The appointment became effective on Sept. 1, and is open-ended.

John Mullin, interim vice chancellor for University Outreach made the announcement.

"I think we are very fortunate to have a person of Harlan's depth and experience and I think he will bring new energy and a new sense of direction to Continuing Education. We are honored that he has chosen to accept the position," said Mullin.

Sturm came to UMass in 1969 as a faculty member. He was acting chairman of the department of Spanish and Portuguese from 1977-78 and chairman from 1980-87. Since 1991, he has been the associate dean in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts.

Additionally, in 1998 he was named acting chair of the department of French and Italian. Sturm also chaired the Faculty Senate Rules Committee for two years and was chair of the Graduate Council for three years.

In response to his appointment Sturm spoke to the issue of continuing the department's series of successful years.

"The Division of Continuing Education has had a long, stable, and successful period under the leadership of Kevin Aiken," said Sturm. "I look forward to working with the staff of the Division and the faculty at the University to continue that success and meet the challenges facing us today as we expand even more into outreach programs and distance education."

Members of the CHFA will miss Sturm.

"Harlan and I have worked extremely well together for 11 years," Lee Edwards, dean of CHFA said in a University press release. "We were really a team. I'm going to miss him. The entire college is going to miss him. But, of course, we wish him well in his new venture."

The Division of Continuing Education consists of part-time students, as well as local, national, and international businesses, and to the general community, according to their Web site.

"Undergraduate courses, specialized degree programs, noncredit workshops, and professional development certificates and programs are specifically designed for, and delivered to, people whose other responsibilities – family, work, or other life circumstances – make full-time study difficult," says their site.

Campus blood drive

By Amy O'Neil
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDANT

The Hampshire County American Red Cross Chapter will be hosting a blood drive today from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center in Room 174.

For each pint of blood donated, up to three lives can be saved according to a nurse at Hampshire County Red Cross center. Blood donated helps anyone from accident victims to cancer patients. Anybody can donate as long as they weigh at least 110 pounds, are in good health, over the age of 17 and haven't donated in the last eight weeks.

Very sterile procedures are used so it is impossible to contract any disease from donating, however some donors have reported feeling dizzy or weak immediately following. It is usually required that people planning on donating eat a meal at least 30 minutes before and wait 10 minutes after before getting up and walking around.

The whole process takes about 30 minutes depending on how busy the blood drive is at any certain time. First, they will take a potential donor through a series of questions about their medical background, sexual history, and any traveling to other countries because of the possibility of infectious blood. A potential donor will then have their blood pressure, weight and temperature recorded. Next, a small amount of blood is taken from the potential donor's finger in order to measure the volume of red blood cells or the amount of hemoglobin in the donor's blood.

This test is performed in order to determine whether or not the potential donor is anemic. If a low amount of hemoglobin or red blood cells is detected, the potential donor is temporarily deferred. If this does not happen, the donor then goes to the donation area.

The vein is then cleaned and a sterile needle attached to a plastic bag is inserted in the vein. Once the blood begins to flow into the bag, it takes about 10 minutes to fill up. After the needle is removed the donor rests for several minutes while refreshments are provided. Donors are usually advised to drink plenty of fluids for 24 hours following and to avoid lifting heavy objects.

Following the donation, the blood is sent to a lab where it is then tested for any diseases or infections such as AIDS or hepatitis. If anything is found in the donor's blood, they are contacted and their blood is deemed not useable.

Blood is in constant need and because of this about eight million volunteers in the United States, according to WEBMd online, donate about 14 million units every year.

People who would like to donate but cannot make today's times will have another chance on Sept. 16, from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the UMass Campus Center, Room 174.

Additional opportunities off campus include: Sept. 18, 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. at the VA Medical Center, Recreation Room; Sept. 20, 12:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m. at Arbors of Amherst, University Dr.; Sept. 21, 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at Anne T. Dunphy School, Williamsburg; and Sept. 28, 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. at Easthampton High School.

The Hampshire County Chapter does not take donations at their headquarters but anyone with any questions or would like to donate at a different time than those listed can contact Mary Snyder at (413) 584-8887 or call the Blood Donor Center at (800) 462-2229.

Tunnel Vision
UMass construction from an insider's view.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

NATURALLY, WE PUT GREAT VALUE IN NUMBERS. ESPECIALLY THE NUMBER ONE.

VOTED NUMBER ONE IDEAL EMPLOYER.

PricewaterhouseCoopers was voted the number one ideal employer in the 2002 Universum Undergraduate Survey of more than 4,000 business students and the number one accounting career profession in the 2002 Emerson Company Campus Recruiting Survey.

www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere.

Look beyond the numbers.

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

Iraq

Iowa State U. students would feel impact of war in Iraq

By Jessica Anderson and Michaela Saunders
IOWA STATE DAILY (IOWA STATE U.)

(U-WIRE) AMES, Iowa – Experts on Iowa State University's campus said the Bush administration could be creating a lose-lose situation in its handling of the weapons situation in Iraq.

Joel Moses, professor of political science, said the words of Vice President Dick Cheney have cornered the United States.

"If we don't attack now, we'll look like idiots," he said. But, the policy is "inept and stupid," and is making other countries think twice about their association with the United States.

Italy, Spain and the United Kingdom said they will support President Bush if he decides to take military action. Germany and Russia oppose bombing Iraq, while France would like proof that nuclear weapons are present in Iraq. France also wants the United Nations inspectors back in Iraq.

"Our government has decided to engineer a war and nobody else in the world is in favor of this war," said Joanna Courteau, university professor of foreign languages and literatures and adviser for Amnesty International. "For it not to happen, we must become engaged in influencing the government."

Last week, Cheney said Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein is a threat to the United States, and the United States should not wait in taking action against Iraq because the Middle Eastern country is developing nuclear weapons and has not destroyed other chemical and biological weapons.

"For a long time, we've been trying to dehumanize Saddam," Courteau said. "I think that the U.S. government is concerned about getting the focus abroad – so we're not focusing on domestic problems." She said those current domestic problems include benefits for senior citizens, student financial aid and the stock market.

"Americans always rally behind the government when they think we're going to war," Courteau said. "I think if we in fact go to war in Iraq, there is no way to explain it to students."

A war will impact students, because their grants and scholarships will be reduced and families will suffer, she said.

Jeff Hall, library assistant and adviser for student group Time For Peace, said the situation in Iraq is being played out on two fronts: public opinion and foreign governments.

"They are trying to come up with a more broad-based solution," he said. "A lot of the concern is what will happen to the economy if the Middle East blows up."

Cheney said Hussein might try to dominate the Middle East because Iraq holds 10 percent of the world's oil reserves.

"It's our energy policy that is at the root of this," Hall said.

He said the United States needs to develop and implement energy alternatives, making the country less dependent on foreign oil.

Courteau said while Iraq has a repressed government, the United States engineered an oil embargo against the country that is also hurting its people. The sanctions and blockades prevented Iraq from selling oil and trading with other countries.

Moses said the argument that congressional approval is not necessary a legal one, not a constitutional one, that has roots in decisions made in 1991 after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

Last week, White House lawyers said President Bush did not need to consult Congress before striking Iraq.

Mexico

Mexican colonists look for opportunities in Utah

By Evan Mackay
THE DAILY UNIVERSE (BRIGHAM YOUNG U.)

(U-WIRE) PROVO, Utah – At just over six feet tall, with strawberry blond hair and bright blue eyes, David Teancum Call, 23, of Provo, Utah, is far from being easily recognized as a Mexican citizen.

"I like telling people I'm from Mexico; it's a great way to start a conversation," said Call. Call and his brother Chad, 21, of Provo, Utah, who both look more like Norwegians than Mexicans, are from Colonia Juarez, a small Mexican town of 2,000 people, three hours south of El Paso, Texas.

The citizens of Colonia Juarez look very much like the Call brothers too, because they all share at least one thing in common – a Mormon pioneer heritage.

In 1876, nine years after the first Mormon missionaries entered northern Mexico, Mormon colonists from Utah began to build small ranching and farming towns in the Mexican state of Chihuahua. Church leader Brigham Young had sent them there to the area, hoping to find a place of refuge for those who were part of persecuted polygamist families. Although the Church, as well as the members in Mexico, officially halted the practice of polygamy in 1890, the colonist stayed and called the colonies "home."

"I'm proud of my heritage," said David Call. "The colonies are so unique, and the people there are really great. It's like one big family.

"I hold dual citizenship, which makes me American and Mexican, but culturally I am mostly American," he added. "The colonies are like a piece of Utah stuck in northern Mexico. Obviously there are some Mexican influences on our culture, but we behave like Americans."

Call's brother Chad has a similar attitude toward his hometown.

"The colonies were a great place to grow up," said Chad Call. "The colonies are so rural, and that's a good thing. We had so much more time to just be kids. When we came home from school there was so much to do. We always had sports or some other type of activity to keep us busy."

There were eight original Mormon colonies in Chihuahua, with a population of 6,000 settlers by 1880. Today, only two of those colonies, Juarez, and Dublan, are inhabited. The population between those two colonies is about 2,400 people, and that number includes non-pioneer descendants as well. Everyone in the colonies agrees the population is getting smaller.

"There are about 400 colonists in Juarez, and 400 in Dublan," said David Call. "Who knows how many will be here in the next 20 years."

That is precisely why the Call brothers are in Utah in the first place. Like most young colonists, they come to the United States for their education and usually end up staying. And like many of their friends and relatives, they came to Utah to attend Brigham Young University and Utah Valley State College.

"This is a great place to get an education," said Chad Call. "It's also a great place to find a wife. There just aren't many opportunities to get higher education or to meet new people in the colonies. We have to come up here."

David and Chad both feel returning to the colonies would be wonderful, but may be "wishful thinking."

Another colonist and distant cousin of the Call brothers is Randall Hatch, 22, of Orem, Utah. Like the Call brothers, Hatch would like to return to the colonies, but projects that that won't happen for a few years.

Paquime is essentially a co-operative fruit packing operation run by the colonists. Many colonists grow fruit and send it to the packing operation. The fruit is then sent to other places, such as Guadalajara and Mexico City, to be sold.

Randall Hatch's father, Gerald Hatch, is currently the plant manager at Paquime, a position that Randall would like to take over someday.

"If I decide to return to the colonies, it would be to take that job," Hatch added. "If I don't do that, I'll just stay in the States until I retire and then go back down. I love living in Mexico."

Hatch said his favorite aspect of living in Mexico is the freedom he feels there.

"Of course you have to respect the laws, but you really tend to appreciate the liberty that Mexico offers," he said. "There aren't so many laws down there as there are up here (in the United States)."

Hatch also mentioned that his recent marriage solidifies his desire to return to Mexico when the time comes to raise his children.

"The colonies are an excellent place to grow up and raise a family, because of the teaching opportunities you can give your children," Hatch said. "Farm life helps kids learn true responsibility. I guess the main disadvantage about not raising your kids in the United States is the opportunities that they miss if they were to grow up in mainstream American culture. They would miss out on a higher quality education."

Carol Hatch, 55, of Colonia Juarez, married one of the few people that did return to the colonies after a visit to the states, and said that she valued the opportunity to raise a family and live in the quiet of a small foreign community.

Hatch speaks for many colonial mothers who see Juarez and Dublan as safe harbors for raising children in a positive environment. They do realize that the colonies are not perfect, and have some inherent problems.

"Our youth, even here in the colonies, are showing the effect of the media and fallen values," said Carol Hatch. "At least here they have so few places to go, and we are such the minority that news usually gets around about which kids are going where."

News meeting for all writers on Tuesday, Sept. 10 at 5 p.m. in the Collegian office.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1582 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Mary Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Warehouse Sale
Discounts up to 70%

J.CREW

September 9 through September 13, 2002
Monday - Thursday 9am - 9pm
Friday 9am - 5pm

free admission open to the public

Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
200 Commonwealth Avenue
Amherst, MA 01003

We accept VISA, MasterCard, American Express®, J.Crew credit cards, cash, and personal checks (with proper identification).

Directions: Route 9 to Route 116 North. Head North on Route 116 for approximately one mile to first exit (University of Massachusetts). Turn right onto Massachusetts Avenue, then left onto Commonwealth Avenue. The Mullins Center will be on the left.

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE

JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE

»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters

WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES

RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM

Jeffery Amherst College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Activism on campus:

Positive for community

It is something to be proud of.

This past week Mother Jones magazine ranked UMass one of the top ten teachers of campus activism in the country. For some people this is a negative title. It screams of rallies that disrupt our classes, protests resulting in arrests and flyers that litter our campus. It's another title most of us at UMass would rather not have, along with being considered an ugly campus, one with a notoriously lethargic administration and questionable digestible food.

It's an incredibly flattering label for this campus.

It says that while students at other campuses are sitting back and shooting the breeze, UMass students are actively engaged in free speech. We're speaking our minds and putting our views out there for the world to hear. We're rallying and protesting to get our point across, whatever it may be. We're not sitting around, waiting for graduation and the "real world." UMass students are taking what happens on campus and in the world seriously enough to speak out about it now. They're becoming your dorm representatives, Collegian writers, RAs and student leaders.

Our Student Government Association may not always be successful at its endeavors, but there is no doubt that they attempt to make the best decisions possible for students. We're the first campus in the country to have a RA Union, something that we've debated for years. We've got MASSPIRG, which does voter registration drives and works to save the environment and help the homeless.

During our budget battle last semester, SCERA kicked into action, by helping to organize the Save UMass Rally. We have a very vocal campus Democrat and Republican club, who actively wage issue battles by inviting controversial speakers to campus and by publishing newspapers. We have open meetings about issues such as the budget cuts and finding a new chancellor where hundreds of students attend to ask questions and say their piece.

How can all of this energy collectively, not be a positive thing for this campus?

Freedom of speech, the essence of democracy and activism, is alive and well on this campus. Students on this campus should be proud that our school is on this list. Without this energy, our campus wouldn't be moving anywhere. We would be at a permanent stand still in thoughts and ideas. As our professors lecture on about great leaders of our time and moments in history we would be constantly living in their moments, not our own. Our campus would fit the description of our generation: apathetic.

We're not like other campuses. UMass students are open to different ideas, criticism and constant debate. We're moving and driving forward to become thoughtful and constructive citizens in this world. We should be proud to be recognized as activists, for without activism there is no change in this world. It only takes one person to change the world, and there are 18, 000 undergraduates on this campus ready to do that.

Imagine that.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Flammable pants

SEAN JACQUET

Lying. We all do it. Think about it. Yes, like me, do it daily, maybe even more. Little white lies, really big lies, it all boils down to being dishonest.

Lying, we are told, is a sin. It's against one of the commandments. It is destructive and unhealthy. If you lie, we are told, eventually you'll get caught in your own web of lies. The moral: always be truthful. So if Jesus doesn't approve of dishonesty, why is it so common?

We lie to our parents. "Sure Mom, my grades are good and yes I'm going to all my classes." "This lasagna you made is awesome." and "No, Dad, I don't know who scratched your truck."

Parents lie to you too, though. "Sean, it's so good to have you home. We missed you so much." "I love watching my son's Little League games." and "Yes, I smoked pot, but I only did it once and that was a long time ago before you were born and I haven't done it since."

Guys lie to their girlfriends. "Oh babe, your hair looks great." "You look nice in that outfit." "I love hanging out with your friends?" "You're much better looking than your younger sister."

Girls lie to their boyfriends. "It's not too small it's a good size."

Sometimes, however, we walk into these lies by asking stupid questions. "Do you even know my name?" "Do you know what today is?" and "Was that good for you?"

We even lie to our exes. "Oh no, I haven't been with anybody since we broke up."

We lie when we're breaking up. "It's not you, it's me." "I love you but I'm not in love with you" or "There's nobody else, I swear."

Even after the need to lie has passed we continue to do it. It just feels weird being completely honest with your ex. "Oh man, I hope she never gets her hands on this."

We lie to our friends. "Dude, those twenty inch rims look sweet on your Accord," and "Yeah dude we all think your new girlfriend is wicked cool. She's cute too."

We lie to teachers. "Yeah I've been doing the reading." "Sorry I wasn't here on Monday, I was really sick."

We lie to the cops. "No sir, I haven't been drinking." "I didn't even see that red light." "Driving an uninsured vehicle? But I had no idea that was against the law."

We lie at birthdays and Christmases. "Oh a Creed CD, just what I wanted." "Socks, awesome, you can never have too many of those."

We lie at weddings. "You two look so happy. I'll bet you'll be together forever."

We lie to our landlords. "Don't worry about it, the check is in the mail."

Then, of course, there are the lies we are told. Lies are told so frequently, people have trouble discerning truth.

Our national anthem lies: "...land of the free, home of the brave." Really? Ask a Native American or a black person how free his people have been over the years.

Even the "elite" in society, the people that we are supposed to trust the most, lie almost as much as they tell the truth.

Religious leaders lie to us. "Religion is an essential part of our growth and development as human beings." "There is not, and has never been a problem with pedophilia within the Catholic Church."

Our own University lies to us: "The University of Massachusetts is one of the finest public universities in the U.S." "We care about your education," and "William Bulger is a competent leader and a fine President."

"Even after the need to lie has passed we continue to do it."

President Billy himself assured us that the budget cuts would cause "no diminution of quality of education at the Amherst campus."

The other President Billy, Bill Clinton, did his fair share of lying as well: "I did not have sexual relations with that woman."

In fact, Presidents lie quite often. Take Lyndon Johnson, for instance. During the Vietnam War, he said, "I will not send American soldiers overseas to die."

Not to be outdone, in the wake of Watergate, Tricky Dick Nixon explained, "I am not a crook."

Celebrities also can lie with the best of them. O.J. Simpson has been lying for several years now: "I will not rest until the real killers have been found."

Tom Cruise too: "I'm not gay."

I even lie to myself: "Hell yeah the Sox are going all the way this year." "This column about lying is going to be a cool idea." "Alright, this semester I'm going to bear down, study hard and go to all my classes," and "Nobody noticed that my fly was open for about 45 minutes."

People will lie to me about this column: "Sean, good column the other day. I thought it was funny and well-written."

Lies are part of our everyday lives. Where would we be without them? We'd have to face reality and acknowledge some harsh truths about ourselves and others. Lies maintain relationships and keep you out of trouble. Lies are fun and humorous.

Honesty? Yeah, that's a great idea.

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian columnist.

Don't hate me because I'm Ed/Op.

3 The Rocky Mountain News. Dist. by NEA Inc.

TIME'S A WASTIN'.
TURN IN YOUR ED/OP
APPLICATIONS SOON!

Disjointed thoughts

DAN LAMOTHE

Good morning sports fans! Welcome to the random things bouncing around in my head. Please enjoy. If not, find a Minuteman [illegible] weekend [illegible] Christensen chasing [illegible] Hasselhoff's Swimmer? You [illegible] be kidding me. [illegible] remember making [illegible] shown in speedos [illegible] Puke. Feeling great, but the Sox are done. Why do things always seem to go that way?

Justin Timberlake is collaborating with two rappers I guess it's something. It figures one of the rappers is named the Patty Cake Man. I haven't played that game since I'm like seven, and that makes perfect sense. Timberlake's never going to get it – once you sell out and sing love songs to 13-year-olds, you're probably S.O.L. for life. Unless you're the New Kids on the Block. Oh wait, especially if you're the New Kids.

UMass. It's home of the bulldozer, the detour, and really big holes in the ground.

McDonald's has decide to change the recipe on their French fries. Soon, they will be frying the taters in vegetable oil instead of animal fat. In a related note, a goofy clown in big red shoes just rolled over in his grave.

Ahhh freshmen. You gotta love the goofy deer-caught-in-the-headlights look.

Can anyone explain why dorm rooms will be 85 degrees and classrooms will be 50 degrees once winter hits?

Axl Rose: please, please give it up. You left your vocal cords behind a long, long time ago and you just hurt our ears now.

The LSA basketball team lost TWO games last week. I can't handle this. I don't want to hear about poor refereeing. I don't want to hear about not being familiar with the way each other plays. They lost to ARGENTINA. I'd almost rather see the college guys play again – at least they played for pride.

"Vin Diesel, I hate you. No one has ever called ME sexy for having a shaved head."

Vin Diesel, I hate you. No one has ever called ME sexy for having a shaved head.

John Lombardi's glasses are cool. Even cooler than Drew Carey's.

The Los Angeles Times has released a report linking Tupac Shakur's death with the Notorious B.I.G. Biggie could not be reached for comment. Maybe people should just let the whole story go.

I saw Bloodwork the other weekend. I really wish Clint Eastwood would leave his shirt on.

Teamsters needed to build a meeting place. And seriously, they went to non-union contractors. Seems the union guys charge too much. Bet ya the UMass administration loves hearing that one with R.A. negotiations around the corner, eh?

"The Anna Nicole Smith Show:" also known as white-trash TV.

So when's the first riot on campus this year? I think I should start a pool. The person closest to the first gathering involving more than 5,000 people on campus with fireworks, flashing alcohol and po-po in riot gear wins an all expenses paid trip to the third-world country of their choice. Professors protesting doesn't count.

For those of you keeping score at home, it's been 25 years since Elvis Presley died. He's still dead, I think.

I noticed the dining commons don't have enough help and are having trouble keeping enough trays out this year for all of us in line to put our dishes on. That could be a problem. Without trays, how are hundreds of drunk students going to entertain themselves sledding during the blizzard this winter?

I bet you I'm still the only one on this campus to ever crash a mail truck.

A couple tried to name their kid bin Laden? I guess all of the other good Christian names were taken.

Thanks for listening. Enjoy the DC seafood.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am a clerical worker here at UMass Amherst. In the four and a half years I have worked on this campus, I have seen UMass President William Bulger's annual salary go from $189,000 in 1998 to its current level of $309,000. In the same period of time, my salary has risen—partly because I changed jobs to a higher graded position—from $22,000 per year to $27,600.

I am sharing this financial information with the readers of this paper because I want them to understand why UMass employees are angry that our contracts, including cost-of-living raises, have not been funded by the state. Unlike William Bulger, people at my income level are living on the edge financially. Every added expense—such as our higher parking fees and our newly raised co-payments for doctor's visits and prescription drugs—pushes us closer to that dangerous place where we have to choose between paying rent or buying food. It is therefore not just a question of fairness when we protest that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts has reneged on our promised contracts: for us, it is also a matter of survival.

Throughout this period of shock—when we have been realizing how great the betrayal by our leaders has been—William Bulger has done nothing to allay our growing suspicion that he willingly went along with the breaking of the state's word. In The Collegian's excellent article of September 6, 2002, John Hoey, William Bulger's spokesman, was described as being unable to understand all of the anger. I would like to say then to President Bulger that he should either get a new spokesman or a new understanding of what it is like to live at the other end of the financial spectrum. People, especially hard-working people who have been making do with short rations and fewer co-workers, do not take kindly to the news that their captain has not been looking out for his crew. Rather than making sure that UMass employees get a decent, living wage, this particular captain has approved the appropriation of $91 million for the construction of new dormitories at UMass, Boston. It would have taken less than $30 million to fund our employment contracts.

If the UMass ship is sinking financially, then William Bulger has made sure that his personal lifeboat is very well-equipped.

Lisa Lipshires
Clerk III

ED/OP...WHY?
BECAUSE WE RULE.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.09.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Mixed bag for "Friends" on film

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE GOOD GIRL
Directed by Miguel Arteta
Starring Jennifer Aniston and Jake Gyllenhaal
Playing at Pleasant Street Theater, Northampton

SERVING SARA
Directed by Reginald Hudlin
Starring Matthew Perry and Elizabeth Hurley
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Since time immemorial, movie critics have complained about the phony shallowness of Hollywood movies, glib junk food churned out one after another in a cynical attempt to pump audiences for their hard-earned money. But there's a breed of independent film that's as synthetic and fake. The Good Girl is such a film. The movie is pitch-dark comedy about an essentially decent person who takes one step into rebelliousness in order to awaken his lives and finds that the world has started to come down at his feet. The director, Miguel Arteta, and the screenwriter, Mike White (who collaborated on the 1999 film Chuck and Buck) stage their movie as a sociopathic sitcom prank – everything that happens seems inauthentic and deliberate, an overly methodical stunt. The movie is the latest wallow in indie-chic misery.

The big news surrounding The Good Girl is the fact that it's leading lady happens to Jennifer Aniston, making a bid for credibile post-"Friends" stardom. Aniston's casting may just be another moment of calculation – let's see what we'd get if we put Rachel through emotional calcification – but at the least Aniston acquits herself well. Every stoop-shouldered shuffle, every defeated glance and every sad sigh sketch out a character that is the complete 180 of Aniston's "Friends" persona. Her Justine is a 30-year-old woman who has been crushed by the pervasive meaninglessness of her life. She works a menial job selling cosmetics at the Retail Rodeo, a kind of lowrent Wal-Mart wannabe. She's in a dead-end marriage to Phil (a marvelously lunkish John C. Reilly), a housepainter whose favorite activity is to get stoned in front of the television with his best friend Bubba (Tim Blake Nelson). She hates her life and then she meets the Retail Rodeo's new cashier, a brooding young man named Holden (Jake Gyllenhaal, this generation's poster boy for older woman-younger man affair), self-named after the main character in J.D Salinger's Catcher in the Rye. Holden is a mysterious young man who wants to be a writer, whose real name is Tom (that's his "slave name"), and who thinks no one but Justine gets him. Justine's feelings are at first mutual, and she launches into a heated affair with Holden. And then everything falls apart for her.

If only things fell apart in a way that was convincingly poetic or even deeply disturbingly funny. The Good Girl is a hermetically sealed goof in which the characters aren't actually characters – they're vessels for Arteta and White's caustic view of what could constitute comedy. That's not to say that the duo don't get a few good laughs off – they do – and Aniston's performance is so rich and textured and nuanced that one

Turn to MOVIES, page 6

Young Israeli artists set emotions to page through ink and paint

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Consider sitting through a slide presentation of pictures drawn solely by children. What images would come to mind if you knew its creators were young artists with only budding talent as their guiding light?

Click. Simplistic stick figures standing by a one-dimension house. Click. A tracing of hand. Click. A deceivingly dimensional garden of flowers and trees. Click. A family of cats, walking about an empty room.

While these may be some of the common concepts of what subjects are chosen as art by a universal youth, they are not the end all and be all of juvenile artistry.

Visions of a world torn apart by greed, hatred and misunderstanding and brought closer together with love, awareness and compassion are just as pertinent in the minds of children as in the consciousness of adults. As such, youth can capture emotions behind these visions on paper with free-flowing lines of ink and paint just as easily their elders.

Although it is harder to find such youthful skill professionally displayed, it is not impossible. Those interested simply must know where to look, and those seeking such an exhibit from Sept. 24 until Oct. 18 need not look further than the Augusta Savage Gallery at the New Africa House, University of Massachusetts.

The exhibit Young Artists: Images from Israel showcases artwork and writing from two groups of Israeli students and is part of the gallery's ongoing Young Artists Series.

Phyllis Gross, a third grade English teacher at Gvanim Elementary School, Israel, and Haya Cohen from Israeli Nes Ziona School have overseen the project since its inception. While each teacher's students have set their emotions to paper in the most creative ways they know how, each section of students focused on varied themes.

Students of Gvanim Elementary School, situated in northwest Israel and just south of the ancient Biblical port city of Acre, have attempted to place themselves in the mindset of children in a country practically on the other side of the world from them (the United States) when faced with tragedy (the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001). As part of her English language lesson, Gross inspired her students to capture their emotions through their artwork.

Cohen's students, on the other hand, use paintings in hopes to aid in the healing process ancestral and cultural German-Israeli wounds. The final result was the project, A Bridge Between Two Countries, Nes-Ziona, Israel – Solingen, Germany, 1966-2002, which brought issues of racism, nationality and identity to the forefront of conversations.

In Gross's case, teacher-student discussions were held after Sept. 11 in hopes to aid children and their coming to terms with an attack on a country as large as the United States.

"For Israeli children, inevitable conclusions were made, as Israel is such a small country," said Gross in her released commentary about the project. "The children drew pictures of the World Trade Center and other violent scenes, expressing their own fears of vulnerability."

Gross's student's art projects were all completed in January 2002 and attempted to go beyond the basic factual events of Sept. 11 and delve into the humanity of those affected by its destruction.

"[It] sought to step away from the concrete issue of the Twin Towers, and to look into the personal world of these children, their feelings and their outlook on life," Gross commented. "We sought to use art as a tool for expressing this moment in time for them. I think the overwhelming positive feelings despite local and world news are a reflection of their protected environment, and a reflection of their still unshattered moments of innocence."

Cohen's project mission, to explore an interdisciplinary study of the Holocaust through history, political science and the arts, allowed students to express their attitudes through art, poetry and face-to-face meetings of students and teachers in Germany and Israel and to then share their experiences with the other students in their

Turn to KIDS, page 6

To pledge or not to pledge

On Saturday afternoon, I was bored. While sitting on the floor of my couchless living room, I noticed that there was a lengthy "Sorority Life" marathon on MTV. Instead of cleaning my apartment like I was suppose to, I sat and watched the most mindless TV in all of existence for the next six and a half hours.

With the recent success of shows such as "The Osbournes," obviously the next logical reality TV destination would be a sorority pledge process. I made fun of this idea along with everyone else when I first saw the previews on MTV, however, it falls conveniently after "Road Rules" (one of my favorite shows) and I ended up watching it one Monday evening for lack of anything better to do. I use the car wreck analogy to describe "Sorority Life": It's so unbelievably bad and wrong that you just have to watch.

A few months ago we met Jordan (the rebel), Candace (the dumb one), Mara (the overachiever), Amanda (the follower), Dede (the quiet one), and Jessica (the one I'd most like to smack in the face). They are all University of California at Davis students. The idea is simple. Six girls are selected to live in a beautiful house while MTV videotapes their every move during the sorority pledging process. First of all, it doesn't take a rocket scientist to realize that six girls living under one roof is going to create all kinds of catfight drama, and when the pledgemaster, Becca, lays down all kinds of strict rules with these party girls in a beautiful house, BOOM, you have ratings.

There have been some great moments on this season of "Sorority Life." You have the tension between former best friends Jordan and Amanda when Amanda becomes close with the resident alcoholic in the house, Candace. Funny enough, during that same episode, Candace kisses a guy that she is very aware that Amanda likes. When Amanda is standing RIGHT THERE. Now, if that isn't sisterhood, I don't know what is. Later on during the episode, you have Candace attempting to justify what she did by saying, "when I get drunk, I kiss guys." Absolutely classic.

My favorite moment of the entire season, well so far, has to be the infamous Jessica slap from a few weeks back. Those who watch the show know what I'm talking about. Jessica and Sylvia (one of the non-MTV-housed pledges) were at a bar, and Sylvia was hooking up with a guy she had just met there. Jessica, being the obnoxious, whiny little brat that she was, marches up to Sylvia and instructs her to "stop acting like a slut and making drama." Well, Sylvia, in completely justified retaliation delivers Jessica a hard slap across the face. Sylvia did what millions of viewers had been dying to do to Jessica since day one.

Amanda is probably the second likeliest to get a punch in the face from me. The incident when Mara had Jessica warn Amanda about some guy Amanda had been flirting with and Amanda flew off the handle at not Mara, but Jessica. I believe the exact words out of Amanda's mouth were "I don't care if Mara had you say it to me. You're the one that said it." Now, if anyone can explain the logic of that to me, please come down to the Campus Center basement and do so.

Now, I've gone off on most of the girls. But I am going to say something nice. Really. I like Jordan. I didn't like her in the beginning, just because well, she chose to rush this sorority and she's complaining about the rules, but as the season wore on, she proved that she isn't just another cookie cutter wanna-be sorority girl. The way she handled the Amanda situation and the friendship between her and Mara is something I enjoyed about the show. She was depicted as someone with depth, even though she did go through an entire can of hairspray every four or five days.

Conflict later arose between the new pledges and the sisters because some of the sisters raised concerns about the pledge house girls being "so not sigma." Sadly, that is a direct quote. Between Candace the lush (oh wait, she's not a lush, she went four whole days one week with no drinking)

Turn to SORORITY, page 6

kids

continued from page 5

Yaacov Agam's "Fragments from Israel" is coming to UMass Sept. 24 to Oct. 18.

humanhood.

One such objective with this project was to encourage teachers, students, schools and communities to "remember and never forget," said Cohen in her exhibit commentary. "We sought greater understanding through visits to Buchenwald, Germany and Yad Vashem, Israel, where we promoted dialogue between survivors and among youth in hopes that this work will correct false stereotypes about Germans and the Holocaust as well as establish greater tolerance for differences."

The result consisted of art and poetry exhibitions held in Solingen, Germany, and later in New Zionia, Israel. Each exhibition included 50 paintings of both Israeli and German youths and teachers.

Augusta Savage Gallery is open Monday and Tuesday from 1-7 p.m. and Wednesday through Friday from 1-5 p.m. while the University is in session. Admission to Young Artists Images from Israel will be free and open to the public.

movies

continued from page 5

wishes it were placed in a more serious film. Unfortunately, The Good Girl is cut down at every turn by the insistence to make things sell consciously outrageous.

Aniston's "Friends" co-star, Matthew Perry, has been thwarted in his attempts at achieving big-screen stardom...and his latest effort, Serving Sara, doesn't exactly seem like the kind of movie that will prolong his cinematic career. It's as big-screen facile as The Good Girl was faux art house cool. A mostly thudding slapstick dud, the movie is routine and serviceable and occasionally amusing, but never actually good.

Perry plays a Joe, a process server who is sent to serve papers to Sara (Elizabeth Hurley, going through the comic motions), on behalf of her millionaire husband and business partner (Bruce Campbell). Sara agrees to pay Joe one million dollars if he rips up her papers and serve her husband instead. Joe, cynical and jaded, immediately agrees and the movie is sent on a supposedly mad-cap journey to find and serve the hubby.

Serving Sara is as madcap as a migraine. The movie plays like the pilot to a mediocre sitcom stretched to feature length. If the highlight of a movie comedy is when your leading man sticks his arm up a cow's rear to, uh, stimulate it, then you know that your movie is starving for comic imagination.

Perry is passably good in the role of Joe, but the egregiously counterfeit romance that develops between Joe and Sara has the feel of a studio footnote showed inelegantly into the screenplay. Cedric the Entertainer is cast as Joe's boss, but he's given nothing to do but act apoplectic, ad the filmmaker's haven't exactly thought out the suitability of some moments of the movie. Considering Perry's past problems with substance abuse, the storyline about his being a wine-maker is distasteful. Also they send a bad message to the movie's young audience when Hurley flashes her breasts to get a hotel room (sorry guys, you don't get to see them). But I digress. I shouldn't judge a movie on its moral grounds; I should judge a movie on quality. If the movie were any better I may have been able to do it. But there's only so many ways you can say a comedy is not really funny without being redundant.

sorority

continued from page 5

and her faithful follower Amanda and their constant presence and behavior in bars around campus and Jordan and Mara and their escapades at a strip club the night of the Sigma formal, many of the sisters have had enough of the raucous behavior of these girls, and as of the second to last episode of the season, some of the girls' future status in the organization is in jeopardy.

I don't exactly know what MTV was trying to accomplish with the creation of "Sorority Life." It was obviously a bank on the "reality TV gone completely haywire" of late, but I think that the girls of Sigma were hoping that this kind of opportunity would shed some positive light on their sorority and the Greek system in general and maybe eliminate some stereotypes about it. It did completely the opposite. "Sorority Life" reinforced every single sorority stereotype that exists. The sisters: Becca, Leah, and Leslie were definitely portrayed as intelligent and accomplished young women, but the pledges were depicted as unintelligent, skanky, drunken girls with no brains and no direction, and who were just doing all this for the MTV exposure. The first season ends tonight, and I will definitely be watching to see if all the girls decide to become sisters, and looking forward to next season.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian Columnist.

Mandatory Arts meeting for all interested writers Tuesday at 7:30pm. Be there or be a rhombus.

BECOME AN EMT!

For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885

Sign up for the fall class now!!!

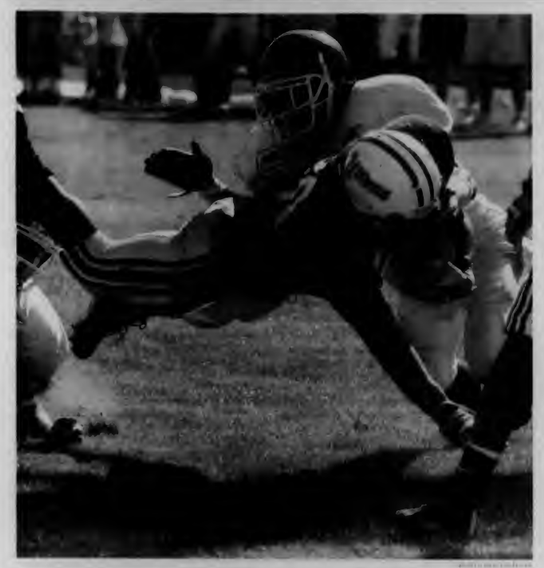
STUDENT TRAVEL

44 Main St (413) 256.1261

www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL

or call >> on the phone >> on campus >> on the street

OFFICE WORKERS



Various office help needed: packing boxes, counting materials, labeling cartons, and answering phones. Preferred candidates will work quickly and accurately and be able to work at least 3 consecutive hours between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. on days that we have work. On-call hours available beginning mid-September throughout the academic year. $8.00/hr. Call 256-0444 to request an application.

Personnel

NATIONAL EVALUATION SYSTEMS, INC.

P.O. Box 226 Amherst, MA 01004-0226

personnel@nesinc.com E.O.E.

Redshirt freshman Raunny Rosario dives into the endzone for six in Saturday's 52-3 UMass win over CCSU.

Zullo's squeamish return

By Jim Pignatiello
Collegian Staff

According to UMass head coach Mark Whipple, senior receiver and All-American candidate Adrian Zullo was feeling a little under the weather before his first game back after a knee injury that caused him to miss the entire 2001 season.

"[Some of the players] said he got up this morning at four," Whipple said. "He threw up. He didn't have any energy. He's been waiting for this for a year and a half."

UMASS NOTEBOOK

Zullo also had some trouble on the field. After returning the opening kickoff for a career-high 59 yards, No. 2 had some trouble running his passing routes and lining up in the correct formation.

In fact, quarterback Jeff Krohn's first four incomplete passes were thrown in Zullo's direction.

"He still made some plays when he went the right way," Whipple said.

Zullo ended the afternoon with six catches for 96 yards and a touchdown.

A first-timer

After rushing for 116 yards on 12 carries in the first collegiate game of this career, redshirt freshman Raunny Rosario was named the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week.

No. 20's performance puts him in third in the A-10 with a 116.0 yards per game average.

Rausario combined with sophomore Jason Peebler to gain 242 yards on 30 carries against the Blue Devils.

Jimmie redshirts

Senior wideout Jimmie Howard will not be playing this season. The emergence of freshman Joe Bruce has allowed for Whipple to redshirt his senior receiver.

Howard has made 22 catches for 379 yards and five touchdowns over his career.

Bruce made his first career catch in the third quarter of Saturday's contest.

Whip wouldn't do it

Central Connecticut State took on two Atlantic 10 powers in its first two weeks of the season. As members of the New England Conference, playing A-10 schools for CCSU is similar to playing Division I schools for UMass.

The Blue Devils lost 52-3 to Maine last weekend, and then lost 52-3 to the Minutemen. CCSU head coach Paul Schudel scheduled the games as a way to toughen up his team.

When asked if he agreed with that philosophy, Whipple thought the decision was a bit much.

"You don't want to play two of them," the 14-year head coach said. "You just don't. One's good. [Two Is] too much."

He did, however, concede that the Blue Devils had played better against his squad than t ey had in week one.

Wishing for a football U-Game

While talking about the last two teams from Connecticut to challenge the Minutemen, Whipple couldn't help but take a jab at new Division I school UConn's reluctance to take on UMass.

"At least [CCSU and New Haven] will play us. At least there are two schools in Connecticut that will play us. I've got more respect for those two schools than somebody else that won't play us. You guys [in the press] always like that stuff, anyway."

Whipple chose that comment to end his press conference on.

The Minutemen last faced the Huskies Nov. 20, 1999 and destroyed their rival, 62-20.

Until this weekend's 52-3 win over CCSU, that game stood as the last time two UMass running backs [Marcel Shipp and Kevin Quinlan] rushed for 100-plus yards in one game.

www.dailycollegian.com

SNOOPING AROUND for a course?

ask us for a free course catalog or check it out on the Web

Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/

UMASS UMass Amherst Fall Semester 2002
a lifetime of learning opportunities

UltimateFitness THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER

Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9

For more information call 253-7571

- Full Aerobics Programs including:
  -Cardio Kickboxing
  -Sports Step
  -and many more
- Nutritonal Consultation
- Tanning
- Sauna
- Juice Bar & Supplements
- Fitness Testing & Programming

Semester Special $160

- Stairmasters
- Precor Treadmills
- Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
- Lifecycle Upright Bikes
- Precor Crosstrainers
- Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
- Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

UMass CAMPUS RECREATION

GET THOSE FORMS IN BY

Flag Football (M/W/C)	9/9
Soccer (M/W)	9/9
Co-ed Softball	9/10
Field Hockey (W)	9/10
Cross Country (M/W)	9/17
Ice Hockey (M/W)	9/19

On the web www.umass.edu/umim

LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215

Tai Pei Tokyo

To hire 1 CASHIER for Chinese Restaurant located in Northampton.

Must be able to speak and write Mandarin Chinese.

Please call 415-586-1888 18 Main St. Northampton 01060

UMass CAMPUS RECREATION

Paid Officials Needed for Flag Football, Soccer Field Hockey, Softball, Ice Hockey & Volleyball

Clinics: Football-Sept. 10, 11, 12 Soccer-Sept. 10, 11, 12, 13
Co-ed Softball-Sept. 16, 17 Field Hockey - Sept. 16
Ice Hockey-Sept. 24, 25, 26 Volleyball - Oct. 1, 2, 8, 9

Call for requirements, times and locations

Still Time To Enter: Flag Football, Soccer, Field Hockey, & Softball

More Info: 215 Boyden, 5-2693

On The Web: http://www.umass.edu/umim/

There's still time to register...

Greenfield Community College introduces LATE START

beginning Thursday, September 12...

- Introduction to Philosophy
- Mathematical Problem Solving
- Oral Communication: Public Speaking
- Principles of Psychology
- Psychology of Death & Dying
- English Composition I (extended registration)

GREENFIELD Community College

For more information (413) 775-1801 • www.gcc.mass.edu

HIPPODROME

$$ EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES $$

Western New England's largest dance club and multi entertainment complex is hiring for our busiest fall/winter season:

Bartenders Security
Cocktail Services Barbacks
Cashiers Bus Persons
I.D. Checkers Coatroom

Apply In Person Only

Date: Tuesday, September 10th and Wednesday, September 11th 2002

Time: 5:00p.m. - 8:00p.m.

Place: Hippodrome 1700 Main Street, Springfield, MA 01103

Website: www.hdrome.com

THE BOLTWOOD PROJECT™

(32 years of service—and counting!)

A STUDENT / COMMUNITY SERVICE LEARNING PROGRAM
(an RSO and Dept. of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning sponsored prog.)

REACH OUT—AND BECOME A SPECIAL FRIEND TO PEOPLE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS
Your life will NEVER be the same!

*EARN 1–2 CREDITS GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE REWARDING, CHALLENGING, and FUN

Fall Semester 2002 — Recruitment Nights
You must attend ONE of these meetings. No exceptions, even if you have participated before!

6:00-8:00 PM (Note: Prompt starting time!!!)
Room 163C of the Campus Center for all meetings •Sept. 9 (Mon) •Sept. 10 (Tues) •Sept. 11 (Wed)

•Assignment notification ONLY Thurs, Sept. 12th @ Boltwood table CC Concourse.
No telephone inquiries. YOU (or a friend) must pickup the notification letter!!!

Volunteer, while earning credit!

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Hiring Trips-on-campus, cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com Bartenders & Waitress help wanted. Apply at DP Diner in Downtown Amherst.

AUTO FOR SALE

1991 Saab 900 S Convertible, Red, 5 speed, 4 cyl, High Performance. Must Sell. Asking $3,500. Call 549-1871

'97 DODGE Caravan, 7 passenger, power windows/locks, cruise, tilt, AM/FM cassette, A/C, rear defrost, 3rd row seat, dual airbags, 3.3L V6 engine, 1 owner, 73K miles, $6,500 or best offer. Call (413) 527-8327 or (413) 695-0101

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE...DJ Chris2 & SYB Productions is looking for Kali Koncerts! Call 413-527-8327 or email for information.

Accounting/retail/moving company looking for (1) enthusiastic individual part time. One position available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

APARTMENT FOR RENT

SPOKESPERSON NEEDED
$15.00 PER HOUR
JOB ON CAMPUS.
CAMPUS INFORMATION SERVICES IS CURRENTLY SEEKING HIGHLY MOTIVATED STUDENTS. MUST HAVE STRONG INTERPERSONAL SKILLS, VERY OUTGOING. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL: 1-800-375-3701.

BARTENDERS

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Part-Time Delivery and Warehouse
help for local furniture store.
Flexible hours. Tues.-Sat.
256-6184 ask for James

LIFEGUARDS

Lifeguards/WSI
The Town of Amherst, Department of Leisure Services and Supplemental Education (LSSE) Aquatics Program is now accepting Lifeguard and WSI applications for the school year 2002-2003. Previous experience preferred. $8.19-9.48 hr. Applications are available from the Town Hall Human Resources Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst.
Equal Opportunity Employer

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem. Please call 212-817-5530 or e-mail dornstors@hotmail.com

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions. must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact. 860-257-9139 for more info.

SPRING BREAK

#1 Spring Break
Travel Free
Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre
Free Drinks/Lowest Prices
1800-426-7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers
Travel Free 2003
Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV
www.sunsplashtours.com
1-800-426-7710

Bartender Trainees Needed.
$250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

Attention Students!
Protect Environment and Get Paid!
Clean Water Action is hiring campaign organizers to:
*fight corporate polluters
*defend public health
*protect our air and water
*promote renewable energy
Good communication skills a must.
Paid Training, fun work atmosphere, flexible schedules, great pay, 10 mins. from campus and bus route.
Call Megan 413-584-9830

TESTING

Kaplan Test Prep hiring enthusiastic counter staff for evening and weekend hours. Also hiring marketing assistants to flyer local campuses. Applications available at our Center, 150 Fearing St., Amherst or call 549-5780. Work for Kaplan for one year & get a free Kaplan class!

Recreation Leader – After School Program
The Town of Amherst seeks Recreation Leaders for its After School Programs operated by the Leisure Services and Supplemental Education Department (LSSE). Camp

EMPLOYMENT

Couseling, other experiences working with school age children, and/or related coursework in Elementary Education preferred. $7.80-9.03 hr; 5-15 hrs per week. Applications available from Human Resource Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or LSSE, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or call S. Basniak @ 256-4065. Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

Pruddy's is hiring DJ's, bouncers, and wait-staff. Apply in person Wed-Sat 8pm-10pm 253-3343

BABYSITTING

After-school care for Two children 7 & 11 years old. Needed in Amherst home. Mon. 3-5pm, Weds. 1:30pm-5:30 pm. Car required 253-5197

Looking for child care Thursday evenings. Transportation, references, and experience required. Michelle 259-1118

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass. on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238 or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

WANTED

WANTED: Technical Assistant for economic modeling software firm. Computer programming experience a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West St. Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jzl@remi.com

WANTED: Business Development Assistant telephone sales and marketing for a policy analysis software firm. Knowledge of Economics a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West Street Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jzl@remi.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun

Sears Room Refrigerator 2.5 Cubic feet. Never used. Paid $168.00 Selling for $110.00 413-549-6681

3 Desks & File Cabinet for Sale $45-$200 See at www.pioneervalleyguide.com/furniture or call 584-7730

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFinder 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at 888-923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

ENTERTAINMENT

STAGE HANDS
WANTED at Fine Arts Center. $6.75 / hr. Variable schedule – week day availability preferred 9-noon, 1pm-5 Applications at production services Rm 146 F.A.C.

Amherst Leisure Services Department is hiring officials for its Adult Volleyball League. The games are held Sundays at a local school. We are also looking for a Supervisor to run the program. League runs from late September-mid-December. To apply, go to Town Hall, Human Resources Department, Work Study and Non-Work Study jobs available. For more information please contact Erika Cumps 256-4065x114 or at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Over-sized studio art with separate bedroom area. New kitchen & bath. Sliders to deck. 10 min to campus on bus route. In S. Deerfield 413-665-5082

Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the student legal services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Research Interviews Ideal for college students. Conduct surveys over the phone. No sales. Set your own schedule each week. 20+ hours/week. Evening/weekends. $7.50/hour. Hadley location. PVTA accessible.
Field Marketing, Inc.
1-888-423-5381

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement - UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

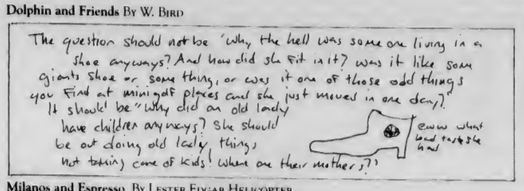
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

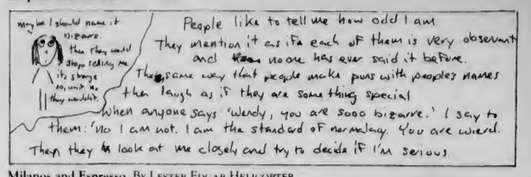
Rates: $5.00 for 20 words, 25¢ per word thereafter. Deadline: 4:00pm two days prior to publication.
Student rate: 10 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 20 cent/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment



HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

CBS / 3
NESN
Fox Sport NE
PBS / 57
HSCN Movie Channel
WB / 20
HSCN Movie Channel
TV Guide Channel
FOX / 61
ABC / 40
NBC / 22
International Channel
UMATV
HSCN Info Channel
ESPN
ESPN 2
UVC-19
ESPN Classic
Cinevi-tv-Cinevi
CNN
CNN HL
Weather Channel
Learning Channel
History Channel
A & E
Discovery Health
Food Network
NASA
Home & Garden TV
Travel Channel
Lifetime
QVC
Tech TV
BET
UPN-38
USA
TNN
MTV
CMT
VH-1
TNT
TBS
E! Entertainment
Sci-Fi Channel
Court TV
Nick at Nite
Comedy Central
Cartoon Network
Game Show Network
TV Land
FOX Family
Univision
Galavision
Telemundo
College TV Network
C-SPAN
C-SPAN2
Bloomberg Television

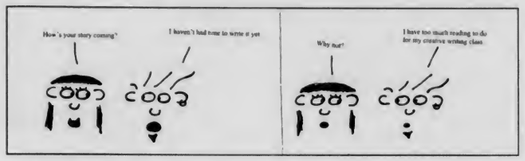


WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

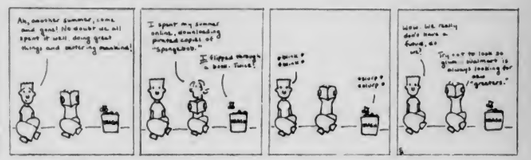
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyes				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	Accordng-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Sabrina-Witch	Frosh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Burnie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Akutatec Credo		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	Accordng-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Chesn	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P1"		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	44	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret	American Justice: Menendez			Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live	Newsnight			Crossfire	Moneyline
CON	50	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Giselle	★★ "Pacifier" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci			South Park	Insomniac		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	25	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	51	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Major League Baseball	Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAID2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		J. Lo Movis	Making-Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	55	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers		All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	26	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4) (N)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
YLC	67	World of Hewell		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	54	NYPD Blue "Twin Peaks"		Pretender "PTB" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA		Trans Buster's Day Off" (1998)
USA	52	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species II" (1998, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	49	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks (In Stereo) PG-13				Biz Fast Undrs (In Stereo)		Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	48	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)				Set: Enough		★½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey R				★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves PG-13
SHOW	46	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG				★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett R				Soul Food (n) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

Dolphin and Friends By W. Bird

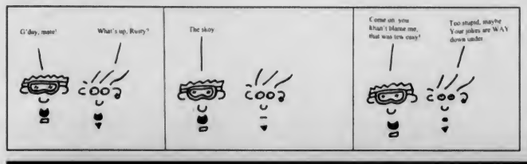
Dolphin and Friends By W. Bird



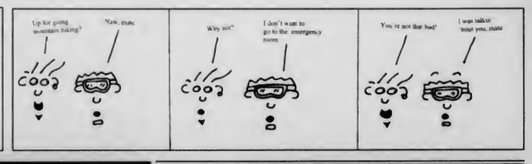
Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter



Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter



Heads Up! By Mike Kulak



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Heads Up! By Mike Kulak

Heads Up! By Mike Kulak

Quote of the Day

> "What's the point of going out? We're just going to end up back here anyways."
>
> -Homer Simpson

Amherst Weather

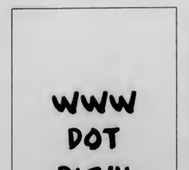
Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 95 LOW: 62	HIGH: 89 LOW: 55	HIGH: 72 LOW: 46

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS- Someone will heap a great deal of praise on you today, but don't get a swell head, after all you did run out of clean socks and you smell bad.
CAPRICORN- Do you drink too much? Don't do it today, beyond the fact that it is a Monday showing up to your class drunk on the second week of school will not get you the "A" you desire.
AQUARIUS- Still trying to get into classes? Today is the day to give up, it just isn't going to be your week.
PISCES- Today is the perfect day to strike up a conversation with that person in your life that you have been eyeing for a while. Topics to avoid include your digestive system and the history of Pez.
ARIES- The turmoil that has been plaguing you will not dissipate today. Expect to deal with both stress and difficult people. Give yourself an hour of fun today to cope.
TAURUS- You need to do a little soul searching today. Think about it, is this really where you want your life to be?
Contemplate this as you spend the afternoon at Charlie's, the answer will soon become clear.
GEMINI- You will spend time at the beginning of this week analyzing your priorities. Plan a move sometime in the near future, potentially from say Boston to Amherst. The air is better here anyhow.
CANCER- You are a person with infinite patience. You would have to be, your sign of the zodiac is named cancer, it is easy to make fun of.
LEO- Anyone born under the sign of Leo has a strong sense of leadership and often finds themselves with a great deal of responsibility, they are also often people pleasers. Today is the day to be nice to your staff. Give tons of raises; that should make people happy.
VIRGO- With all of the campus construction today would be a good day to watch where you walk. The stats predict that you will be particularly clumsy today so avoid walking around campus all together. Stay in bed.
LIBRA- Try to balance out your social life with your academic endeavors today. Also try to avoid any type of fish dishes served on campus that always seems to be good advice in any situation.
SCORPIO- The friends you make you should do your best to keep, because come the dead of winter you'll be lonely and cold and riding the bus without them.

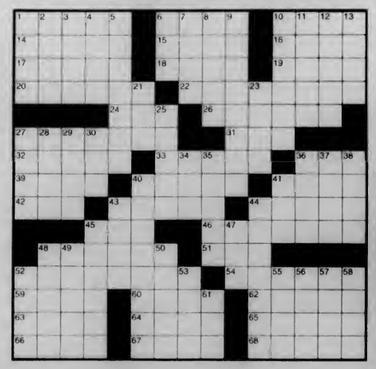
WWW DOT DAILY COLLEGIAN DOT COM

ACROSS



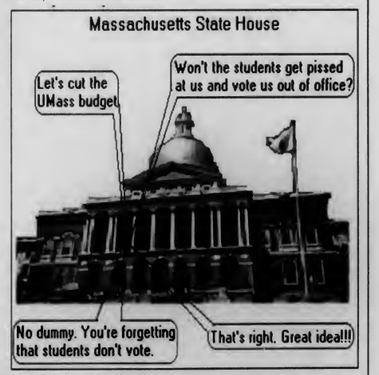
1 Wets down
6 Tour de force
10 "Kon-Tiki" craft
14 Like an acrobat
15 Fish-eating eagle
16 Perry's creator
17 Burro alternative
18 Tang
19 Low-quality
20 Slot-machine fruits
22 Type of bun
24 Balance-sheet gurti
26 Type of salad
27 Sleep: slangily
31 Earn
32 Carries
33 Reacted in fright, like a horse
36 Pop
39 Treben of "Jeopardy!"
40 Noise
41 Famous volcano
42 Legal matter
43 Boutonniere's place
44 Location of 41 Across
45 Catch cold
46 Pencil ends
48 Midwest shopping area
51 Cold measure
52 The future
54 Swamp vapor
59 Pitcher
60 Brainstorm
62 Spring flower
63 Bus route
64 Morays
65 Make a speech
66 Reduced
67 Pepsi or Coke
68 Threw a tantrum

DOWN



1 Entry
2 Stars at

3 Old name for Thailand
4 Ticklish Muppet
5 Ghostly meetings
6 Groundhog's mo
7 Commentator Severed
8 Bit of mischief
9 Almost grown
10 Meal
11 Bakery emolument
12 Ceiling opposite
13 Sea swallow
21 007's occupation
23 Require
25 "Sour grapes" coiner
27 Galaxy part
28 Bucket defect
29 Colorado Indians
30 Houston's st
34 Tint
35 Bay
36 Trick
37 Slightly open
38 Uproars
40 Wages
41 Musical notes
43 Polygraph flunker
44 Custodian
45 Islands off Portugal
47 Computer abbr
48 Kind of knife
49 Solemn assents
50 Cowboy competition
52 — it like it is
53 Use a blowtorch
55 Distinctive air
56 Metal dross
57 Little bug
58 Mimicked
61 Stiff — board



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-9-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Reality By Fernando Pires

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Leafy Vegetable Soup

Leapin' Lizard Chicken

Seafood Quiche

Italian Vegan Jambalaya (vegan)

DINNER

Leafy Vegetable Soup

Mediterranean Cod

Beef Bourguignon

Lemon Ginger Stir Fry with Garlic Rice (vegan)

Daily Collegian Staff
Melissa Hammel
Gerald Ling
Jim Pignatiello
Mike Kulak
Shannon Farrington, Jennifer DiMeglio, Jennifer Eastwood

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass scorches Blue Devils

Krohn throws four touchdowns in season opener

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

At McGuirk Alumni Stadium on Saturday, one team ran 25 more plays than its opponent and dominated the time of possession by more than a 2-to-1 margin. Unfortunately for that team, Central Connecticut State, it was on the short end of a 52-3 drubbing at the hands of the University of Massachusetts.

"[Time of possession] to me is overrated," UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "They had a lot more plays than we had, and that came down to third down conversions. I was surprised they ran that many plays (53) in the first half."

UMass	52
CCSU	3

Jeff Krohn threw for 198 yards and four touchdowns in his debut for the Minutemen, including a 4-for-4 performance for 94 yards on the game's opening drive. However, he only completed 15 of his 30 throws and had two passes fall into the hands of Blue Devil defenders.

"It was alright. I was probably a little mediocre I think," Krohn said. "We just have to execute better on offense and that will just get better by watching this film and I'm sure every week it will keep improving."

Jeff was average," Whipple said. "He has a tendency to get complacent and bored. Same with practice at times. At least he knows that's a fault. But, we'll keep him. We won't trade him or anything."

Yesterday's game also marked the return of star receiver Adrian Zullo, back after a year and a half away from the game because of a knee injury. He led all Minutemen with six catches and 96 yards receiving, including his first touchdown since Sept. 30, 2000 in a 51-36 loss to Hofstra. Zullo revved up the crowd from the game's opening play, returning the kickoff 39 yards to set up the team's first scoring drive.

However, Zullo showed signs of rust in the game, lining up incorrectly in formations and running routes incorrectly, including a play late in the first half where miscommunication between he and Krohn resulted in a CCSU interception.

"The timing was off because Jeff, a couple times, was looking for him and he ran the wrong route," said Whipple, who now owns a 32-19 record at the helm for the Minutemen. "He was supposed to run a post route and he ran a jet instead."

"The guy who was really the worst player out there was Adrian," he continued. "He was terrible. He ran probably five routes wrong. I say he's our senior freshman. It was ridiculous."

Senior receiver DeShun Hardy, voted the team's outstanding offensive player last season, picked up where he left off for UMass, finding pavdirt twice on three receptions for 34 yards.

The best surprise on offense for the Minutemen was certainly the running back tandem of sophomore Jason Peebler (126 yards rushing, three touchdowns) and redshirt freshman Raumny Rosario (116 yards rushing, one TD), neither of which had any collegiate experience at the position before Saturday's contest.

The defense also proved itself strong in the Tom Masella's debut as defensive coordinator, holding the Blue Devils to just over three yards per play in the first half despite being on the field nearly four times as much as the offense.

"We played a lot, but Coach Masella plays a lot of guys, so there were times when some of the younger guys were in and I was getting a break or [junior linebacker Mark] Kimener was getting a break," senior co-captain Corey Potter said. "It was my and match, which is good because it gives some of the younger guys experience playing with other guys, and we're young so we need all of the experience we can get."

"We've got to do a lot better job on third down conversions," Whipple said of the defensive performance. "I thought our zone drops in certain situations were really bad."

In addition to Zullo's game-opening return, Hardy chipped in on special teams with an impressive 31-yard punt return in the first quarter to set up a UMass scoring drive. Bobby Boyer also forced a CCSU fumble on the second half kickoff that Brandon Brudzinski picked up for his first career fumble recovery.

"Probably the best thing about the game was our special teams," Whipple said. "We didn't make any mistakes there and we had a couple of good returns."

For Central Connecticut, it was the second consecutive blowout at the hands of an Atlantic 10 team. Last week, the Blue Devils fell by an identical 52-3 score in Orono to the University of Maine.

"I still think I made the right decision in scheduling these two teams," CCSU Head Coach Paul Schudel said. "If it's done nothing else, it's opened the players' eyes to what it takes to play this kind of caliber competition. You've got to compete and I think it shows some of our weaknesses against these teams and where we've got to improve."

Despite his team's dominance on the scoreboard, Whipple was far from praising his team's performance.

"The objective is to win the game and get a lot of guys playing time, which we did," he said. "I got a lot of tape to show the guys why they won't play again. Now we can go to the tape and say this is why they went 74 yards when we were up 21-0. I'll feel really good about this team if we improve as much as Central Connecticut did from the first week to this week."

GERALD LINSCOTT/COLLEGIAN

All-America candidate Adrian Zullo had six receptions for 96 yards in his first game back after missing the 2001 season

Running the double-back option

Peebler, Rosario debut at RB

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

From 1997-2000, the UMass offense was exciting because of former Minuteman and current Arizona Cardinal Marcel Shipp. No. 5 spent his four years in the backfield breaking just about every rushing record imaginable and was one of the key pieces to the 1998 National Championship puzzle. While at UMass, Shipp ran for 6,250 yards and scored 58 touchdowns.

When the current NFL back was in maroon and white, the running game was enough reason to feel excited about the team's offense. This year, it was supposed to be the passing attack that led UMass back into the postseason.

Apparently, no one informed sophomore Jason Peebler and redshirt freshman Raunny Rosario that they should take a backseat to the air attack prior to the Minutemen's 52-3 win over Central Connecticut State Saturday.

Each player ran for over 100 yards, marking the first time two players had done so since Shipp and Kevin Quinlan both hit the century mark against UConn on Nov. 20, 1999.

Head Coach Mark Whipple was pleased with the performances, especially from his offensive line.

"I thought that our guys played pretty well up front," Whipple said. "I thought there were some holes. I thought that Jason ran well and that Raunny gave us some things. He's getting better and better. I think our fullbacks blocked pretty well. We're still coming together."

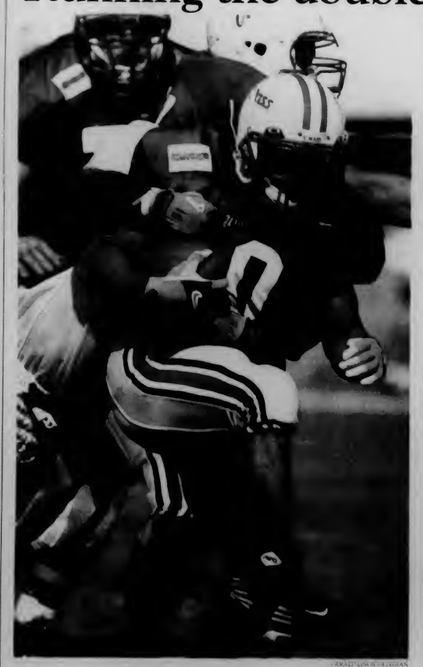
Peebler immediately found open holes in the defense, rushing for 41 yards on just four carries in the first quarter. He scored the team's first touchdown when, on the opening drive, he went across the middle, in front of the linebackers and caught a bullet from quarterback Jeff Krohn for a nine-yard touchdown.

The former wide receiver showed his 4.4 speed on each rush by blowing through the line, past the linebackers and forcing the secondary to make the tackles.

Peebler exploded in the fourth quarter to help preserve UMass' huge lead. He doubled his total carries in the final frame with nine, going for 50 yards in the quarter and a total of 126 on the ground.

The 6-foot-1, 210-pound back, who told another newspaper that he felt disrespected by the Collegian last week, was happy with his performance, but saw room for improvement.

"I thought I played not to my full potential, but I thought I played decently for it being my first game at tailback," Peebler said. "There's a lot of improvements with both running the ball and blocking, but I think that will come along."



Rosario showed both his explosive speed and tackle-breaking ability in his first collegiate game.

No. 20 had just 14 touches, but managed to post 131 total yards of offense. The number could have been even larger, but he had another 20-yard run negated by a holding penalty.

Rosario made a habit of making Blue Devil defenders miss. Only once did the first man to touch him bring the 5-foot-9, 191-pound running back down.

Whipple expressed optimism for his backfield for the upcoming season, especially with next week's likely return of R.J. Cobbs, who suffered a preseason knee injury. The former cornerback will give the Brown grad another option in the backfield.

"Raunny keeps getting better and better," Whipple said. "Jason catches the ball well and Raunny ran much better today. I think R.J. [Cobbs] should be back next week so that will give us a little more depth back there."

GERALD LINSCOTT/COLLEGIAN

Tailback Raunny Rosario (with ball) was named Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week Sunday.

GERALD LINSCOTT/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Jason Peebler ran for 126 yards in the season opener for UMass.

SWIMEAN: A ROUGH STROKE
ARTS PAGE 5.
WHATS THAT RINGING?
ED/OP PAGE 4.
RUDD FIELD OPENS
SPORTS PAGE 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ISSUE FIVE 9.10.02

SGA gearing up for Senate elections

14 election commissioners successfully chosen; SGA urging students to vote

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Student Government Association's Coordinating Council chose 14 election commissioners to take part in this fall's senate elections last night.

With past electoral discrepancies in the Senate elections, the approval on 14 commissioners was a shock to many members and a sign of hope.

"We had 20 to 25 people show up at a Coordinating Council meeting and I don't think that's happened in a long, long time," Speaker Dan Saunders said. "We have 14 commissioners to ensure that the elections go according to the SGA By-Laws. Especially when we've had a lot of discrepancies, it's good to start off on the right foot and not on skepticism."

Aside from 14 new elections commissioners, the Coordinating Council appointed Gabriel Tavarez as the new Chancellor of Elections this past summer. Former Chancellor of Elections Linsen Naval resigned after the spring SGA presidential and student trustee elections.

"Honestly I just want everything to get done, period," Tavarez said. "I don't want any screw-ups on people being paid on time, because we've had a lot of problems with that in the past. Everything will go as it's supposed to because I'm going to make it go that way."

Nomination papers for the fall Senate elections will be out starting Sept. 11 and will close on Sept. 18. Elections will be on Sept. 25 and 26.

"We're having the elections for two days this year in an effort to increase voter turnout. In the past it's only been for one day," Saunders said.

"We're going to have referendum questions on safety and readdressing the Greek area because I know that last year the wording on some of the questions was not direct," Saunders said. "We want everything to be worded in the most direct way possible so that students will know where were coming from and we can get direct answers back from them."

> "Dealing with issues that we want changed is hard without the students to back us up. A lot of students feel disenchanted by the SGA. We want them to know what changes we're doing and how they can get involved."
> - Dan Saunders, SGA Speaker

Members of the SGA Executive Cabinet addressed a variety of issues, many of which involved public safety and security. Secretary of University Policy Hannah Fatemi explained her concerns with public safety and the SGA hopes to provide it to the student body.

"My main focus for this semester is safety and increasing awareness on campus," Fatemi said. "We need to publicize the new bus route and schedule as well as continue supporting the buddy system."

SGA President Dave Carr also expressed his concerns with public safety, particularly focusing on security in the residence halls. Carr explained the need for safety inside the buildings and a revamping of the security system currently in place.

"Student safety is always a huge deal, but you need money for improvements. We unfortunately don't have it, and its especially hard restructuring around all the red tape we have," Carr said. "I think video cameras are ok if used correctly, but I don't think they are."

Carr continued to explain that one of his main concerns involving security is the lack of it within the residential halls on campus.

"I feel that we need to do something about security getting into dorms," Carr said. "The other day, I just walked into a dorm without being carded while the individual on security duty and their advisor watched me just walk in. There is something wrong with that."

SGA members also stressed communication as a priority. They explained the need for more student involvement within the SGA and the programs it offers.

"We have around 30 campus committees that work individually with all areas of the University, and we're really looking for students who want to take an active role on campus," Fatemi said. "Students have the option for receiving credit and a possible grade for their time, as well."

Saunders said it is important for students' voices to be heard. Saunders expressed hope that students will vote and communicate what they want both to University administration and members of the SGA.

"Voting is such a great way for students to get their voices heard on issues. It allows us to go to the administration stating what changes we want with the backing of six to seven thousand students, versus fifteen hundred," Saunders said.

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

Student Government Association Speaker Dan Saunders contemplates another difficult year for the SGA.

"Dealing with issues that we want changed is hard without the students to back us up. A lot of students feel disenchanted by the SGA. We want them to know what changes we're doing and how they can get involved," Saunders said.

Members of the SGA will continue meeting as a coordinating council until the senate elections take place.

"I hope that students will take everything one step at a time this fall," Carr said. "I feel that sometimes we focus on what has happened and forget to look to the future. I think we're going to be able to do great things here this year."

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

Fourteen election commissioners were chosen by the SGA last night.

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

You can check out anytime you'd like...

Kevin Snow relaxes in his room at the Campus Center Hotel.

Assault on RA and anti-semitism top weekend police log

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The assault of a resident assistant in John Adams dormitory and anti-semitic graffiti topped the log of police activity for the first weekend back at the University of Massachusetts.

A resident assistant in John Adams Dormitory was assaulted early Friday morning in an unrelated incident. According to police reports, the RA got up at around 4 a.m. to use the bathroom downstairs from her room on the sixteenth floor. She came upon three loud, intoxicated men arguing with each other in the stairwell between the sixteenth and seventeenth floors. She was attempting to resolve the situation when one of the men proceeded to punch her in the eye.

The alleged offender is described as a white male with black fuzzy hair. He was wearing a wood beaded necklace at the time of the incident. Police are also investigating anti-semetic graffiti that was discovered and reported late Sunday night on the seventeenth floor elevator lobby of John Adams Dormitory.

A resident assistant in the building reported the vandalism at 11:38 p.m. on Sunday night. According to Lyons, the graffiti included swastikas and the phrase "f---ing Jews," scrawled on the walls in magic marker. The graffiti has already been cleaned up and is under investigation by UMass police.

Police are in the process of investigating both situations, according to Lyons. Anyone with information on either incident is encouraged to call the UMass Police Detective Bureau at 545-0893 or the anonymous UMass tips line at 577-TIPS.

There was also an assault in Washington Dormitory. An argument between roommates led to violence when Anthony Genovese, 19, of Melrose, Mass., attacked his roommate. He was charged with assault and battery.

The first weekend back to school presented UMass police with much alcohol-related activity to respond to. UMass police made over 50 calls directly related to alcohol, between calls for liquor law violations, intoxicated people and medical emergencies as a result of intoxication.

Police responded to two medical emergencies within four minutes of each other involving extreme alcohol intoxication in Southwest. The first incident involved two students from John Adams Dormitory at 12:38 a.m. The second involved a student from John Quincy Adams Dormitory at 12:42 a.m. All three students were rushed to Cooley Dickinson Hospital for medical treatment.

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Friday, Sept. 6, 2002

2:10 a.m.: A caller reported a group of 50 individuals yelling and disturbing the peace outside of Baker Dormitory on Clark Hill Rd. Officers responded and reported that a group of 7 people were dispersed and that all was quiet.

3:42 a.m.: A group of students waiting for a delivery outside of Cashin Dormitory on Eastman Lane were ordered to disperse by an officer on duty.

3:20 a.m.: An officer responded to a call for suspicious activity near Thatcher Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave. and reported that a student was carrying a beer and being loud while walking back to his room.

3:22 a.m.: A caller reported that there was someone banging and kicking a door on the odd-numbered side of John Adams Dormitory on Fearing St. Police responded and found no one was doing so. Investigation revealed nothing.

6:11 a.m.: Someone called from Tobin Laboratory on Holdsworth Way to report a burglar alarm. Police found an active intrusion alarm in place.

8:59 a.m.: A traffic stop was made on the Lot M3 meters north of Boyden Gymnasium.

9:58 a.m.: Someone at Stockbridge Hall at Campus Center Way called to report a voicemail message that disturbed him. Police investigated.

11:10 a.m.: Someone called police to report that a student made inappropriate comments toward Parking Services regarding the towing of his vehicle. The student was in their office filing an appeal and not creating a problem at the time of the call.

1:58 p.m.: A traffic stop was made on Stockbridge Road after a car went through a stop on a one-way street.

2:13 p.m.: An officer stated that something was stolen from a University Transit bus. The incident was investigated.

2:38 p.m.: A traffic stop was made on University Dr. Jeffers Sampson, 22, of Duxbury, Mass. was arrested for operating an unregistered motor vehicle with a suspended license.

2:48 p.m.: A female called to report that she was accosted by someone that she has been having problems with for the last three months near Lot 71 on Massachusetts Avenue. The incident was investigated.

3:00 p.m.: A $200 motherboard was taken from Room 422 in the W.E.B. DuBois Library on Hicks Way.

3:56 p.m.: A traffic stop was made on University Dr. after a vehicle did not stop for a flashing red light.

6:38 p.m.: Officers assisted with a well being check at MacKimmie Dormitory on Sunset Ave.

8:16 p.m.: Amherst Towing reported that a vehicle was towed from Lot 62 by Parking Services.

10:31 p.m.: Someone called to report annoying telephone calls. The subject said she will contact Telecom to have her number changed and made private. The officer said he will contact the offending party.

11:18 p.m.: Amherst Fire Department and UMPD responded to a medical emergency reported in Baker Dormitory on Clark Hill Road. The officer on duty reported that the individual refused medical treatment.

Saturday, Sept. 7, 2001

12:38 p.m.: The Amherst Fire Department transported two people with extreme alcohol intoxication to Cooley Dickinson Hospital on Fearing St.

12:42 a.m.: The Amherst Fire Department transported a person suffering from extreme alcohol intoxication from John Quincy Adams Dormitory on Fearing St. The subject was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

1:27 a.m.: A report was made that a group of about 50 people in the Quad area were being very loud.

2:34 a.m.: A medical emergency was called in from McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane. The Amherst Fire Department checked the patient. The patient refused further treatment.

2:53 a.m.: A caller in Coolidge Dormitory called reporting that there was a male knocking on her door that wouldn't leave.

4:25 a.m.: A soft top was removed off of the right side of a jeep in Lot 32F on Massachusetts Ave. A stereo was missing from a second vehicle in the lot.

7:14 a.m.: A male was reported to be in the women's bathroom. The incident is under investigation.

4:09 p.m.: An RA states that while on duty the night before she was punched in the eye attempting to break up an argument between three men in a stairwell of John Adams Dormitory. Police are investigating the incident.

6:04 p.m.: Police responded to a two-vehicle accident in Lot 40 north of Boyden Gym. Operators exchanged information prior to an officer's arrival.

7:26 p.m.: Environmental Health and Safety responded to a fire alarm at McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane. The alarm was due to burnt popcorn.

9:33 p.m.: An officer responded to liquor law violations in Lot 22 on University Drive. Adam Binette, 19, and Anthony Rooney, 19, both of Concord, Mass., were charged with liquor possession by a person under the age of 21.

9:49 p.m.: A caller in McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane reported that someone took her TV and VCR combo from the lounge.

10:03 p.m.: Officers respond to liquor law violations in Lot 11 north of Alumni Stadium. Ryan Conachen, 19, of Marshfield, Mass., was charged with unlawful transportation of liquor.

Sunday, Sept. 8, 2001

12:27 a.m.: A pedestrian in front of the Newman Center on N. Pleasant St. was struck by a vehicle when she had to step into the road around a construction site. The person refused medical treatment. Investigation was referred to the Amherst Police Department.

1:02 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in McNamara Dormitory on Eastman Lane. Someone appeared to have attempted suicide, taking a handful of pills. The person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital with the responding officer and the Amherst Fire Department.

2:03 a.m.: Student Security called to report that a pizza delivery driver was reporting a past assault with a squirt gun in John Quincy Adams Dormitory on Fearing St.

2:15 a.m.: Officers responded to an odor of marijuana coming from a Washington Dormitory room on Fearing St.

2:30 a.m.: Officers responded to an odor of marijuana coming from a Patterson Dormitory Room on Sunset Ave.

2:39 a.m.: A sub woofer, sub woofer box, and an amp were reported stolen from a vehicle in Lot 44 north of the Sylvan Dormitories.

3:30 a.m.: Anthony Genovese, 19, of Melrose, Mass., was arrested and charged with assault and battery on his roommate after an argument between the two turned violent.

4:16 a.m.: A noise complaint was reported in the Pyramids in Southwest. An officer dispersed a group of seven people outside playing bongos.

11:38 a.m.: An RA reported anti-semitic graffiti in the elevator lobby area on the 17th floor of John Adams Dormitory on Fearing St.

2:14 p.m.: A report of a threatening message written on a room mirror was reported from Thoreau Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave.

9:04 p.m.: An RA reported graffiti in the third floor north stairwell in Brett Dormitory on Infirmary Way. Police are investigating.

9:13 p.m.: A caller reported a goat's head in a sink of Coolidge Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave. The head was bagged and removed for destruction.

9:24 p.m.: A two-car accident outside of Cashin Dormitory on Eastman Lane was reported. No personal injury occurred.

11:08 p.m.: An elevator alarm was pulled when three people got stuck between the third and fourth floors in Dickinson Dormitory on Orchard Hill Dr.

11:16 p.m.: A vehicle in Lot 32 W south of Massachusetts Ave. was reported keyed.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a 30-subject publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cora Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Discounted up to 70%

September 9 through September 13, 2002
Monday - Thursday 9am - 9pm
Friday 9am - 5pm

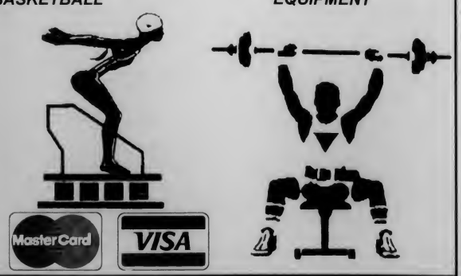
free admission open to the public

Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
200 Commonwealth Avenue
Amherst, MA 01003

We accept VISA, MasterCard, American Express®, J.Crew credit cards, cash and personal checks (with proper identification).

Directions: Route 9 to Route 116 North. Head North on Route 116 for approximately one mile to first exit (University of Massachusetts). Turn right onto Massachusetts Avenue, then left onto Commonwealth Avenue. The Mullins Center will be on the left.

J.CREW



HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club

The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446

Semester Special $179

Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt

- FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL
- AQUA AEROBICS
- CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT
- CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS
- FULL COURT BASKETBALL
- VOLLEYBALL
- INDOOR TENNIS
- YOGA
- AEROBICS •STEP
- JACUZZI •SAUNAS
- CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT

MasterCard VISA

The Daily Collegian wants YOU!

Come check us out at our Collegian All-Staff meeting.

Thursday, Sept. 12 at 6:00 p.m.

Meet editors and managers and learn how to get involved and make a difference as a member of New England's biggest college daily newspaper!

Correction: Yesterday in The Daily Collegian, A headline incorrectly stated that Professor Harlan Sturm was named Dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Massachusetts. This is incorrect. Sturm was named interim director of Continuing Education. The Collegian regrets this error.

September 11 remembered

University of Massachusetts:

Sept. 10:

At 4:00 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium, GEO will present Kristina Olsen, sister of a Flight 11 victim, as well as others to speak to the "Hidden Truth of 9-11."

Following Olsen, Kyle Hence will give highlights from the panel of experts on 9-11 that spoke to the Washington Press Club in Washington, D.C. Sunny Miller will conclude the event by speaking to the issue or how to prevent war in Iraq.

At 8:00 p.m. the Newman Center will hold a special mass.

Sept. 11: A Day of Remembrance

Morning: Tolling of the Old Chapel Bells at 8:45, 9:02, 9:45 and 10:03 a.m. followed by moments of silence to remember those lost when the four flights crashed.

Evening: Gather on the Student Union Lawn (or in the event of rain, in the Student Union Ballroom) for remembrance.

The remembrance will include the following:

6:45 p.m.: the University String Quartet will play

7:00 p.m.: the Old Chapel bells ring.

7:03 p.m.: Chancellor Lombardi will address the gathering

7:08 p.m.: Words of remembrance will be heard from Buddhist, Christian, Hindu, Jewish and Muslim representatives

7:18 p.m.: Student speakers will address the crowd

7:23 p.m.: A procession into the Student Union will be made to honor those who died

7:30 p.m.: A reflective gathering will be held in the Student Union for those who wish to share through writing, artwork, or discussion. Music will be performed and refreshments will be served inside the Student Union.

Amherst College:

8:30 a.m.: There will be a gathering at the college's War Memorial for a brief period of silence honoring all those lost, followed by the Johnson Chapel bell being tolled 21 times. At noon there will be a Five College coordinated bell ringing.

3 to 4 p.m.: There will be a community tea for faculty, staff and students in the Lewis-Sebring dining commons.

4:30 p.m.: There will be an interfaith memorial service at Johnson Chapel.

7 p.m.: There will be a meeting with Deans Onawumi Jean Moss and Gregory Call on "1001 reasons to Hope," followed by a candlelight vigil in the main quadrangle.

9:30 to 11 p.m.: There will be counselor drop-in hours in residence halls.

Throughout the day, Chapin Chapel will be open for reflection and prayer.

Smith College:

Sept. 10:

At 7 p.m., "No More Victims," an international panel of survivors of war-related violence, will speak at John M. Greene Hall.

There will be a vigil for a Peaceful Future at Paradise Pond beginning around 9 p.m.

Sept. 11:

There will be an interfaith service of remembrance and hope at the Helen Hills Chapel at 8 a.m., culminating with the tolling of the chapel bells at 8:48. From this time until 9:15 a.m., across campus there will be moments of silence.

The chapel will remain open during the rest of the day for prayer and meditation.

Faculty and students will collaborate for a half hour of music at 12:30 p.m. in Sage Hall.

Mount Holyoke College:

Students will gather for "A Service of Remembrance," at 12:15 p.m. in Abbey Memorial Chapel. The interfaith service will be open to the public, with offerings from President Joanne V. Creighton, Professor of Chemistry Sheila Browne, and students.

Hampshire College:

The Five College Program and the World Security Studies (PAWSS) group will present an expert panel to speak from 7-10 p.m. in Franklink Patterson Main Lecture Hall.

The panel includes Carollee Bengelsdorf, Margaret Cerullo, Vinnie Ferraro, Sohail Hashmi, Michael Klare, David Mednicoff, Karen Pfeifer, and Jon Western.

Town of Amherst:

On Sept. 10, at the Amherst town common a traditional Irish Wake will be held to commemorate 9/11 and the one-year anniversary of the town's decision not to hang flags through town (prior to 9/11).

The "Twin Tower" float that led the town's July 4 parade will be laid out on the common, illuminated by lights provided by the Barnes Air National Guard 104 Fighter Wing. Flying over the "towers" will be the town's American flag, which was ordered to be taken down by the town Select Board on Sept. 4, 2001 and was hung again on Sept. 11.

According to Commemoration Committee members Kevin Joy and Larry Kelley Irish, custom requires mourners to continuously accompany the "deceased." They plan to be with the flag as it flies over the common as it is taken at dawn to Northampton, and then back to Amherst by later in the morning on Sept. 11.

Flags will fly proudly in Amherst as the town remembers Sept. 11.

At 8:30 p.m. on the Amherst Town Common, the flag will fly during a candlelight ceremony. The town hopes to have a wall of 3,000 candles, with each candle bearing the name, age and hometown of a victim. All are welcome.

Local activist group SAGE will hold a vigil on the Amherst Town Common from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. for a "peaceful response" to the attacks and to proclaim, "Our grief is not a cry for war!" according to the group's press releases. The vigil will consist primarily of silence, with occasional musical interludes.

The following churches will hold special services in remembrance:

Grace Episcopal Church on 14 Boltwood Ave from 9 to 11:30 a.m.

Goodwin AME Zion Church, 41 Woodside Ave. at 6 p.m.

St. Brigid's Catholic Church, 122 N. Pleasant St. at 6:30 p.m.

First Congregational Church of Amherst, 165 Main St., at 7 p.m.

PAID POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

COLLEGE STUDENTS TO THE RESCUE II

Your predecessors stopped the Vietnam War.
You can stop the terrorist attacks.
You can also raise wages, cut prices, cut taxes, increase jobs, increase benefits, clean the environment and* LOWER YOUR COLLEGE COSTS.
You can do all these things by electing a new congressman and Senator in November and it will only cost pennies per student.
You can elect a new congressman and Senator by promising the voters the following changes:

1. A $2 MILLION LIMIT ON TOTAL WEALTH PER HOUSEHOLD
2. A $200,000 LIMIT ON YEARLY INCOMES (average US worker earns $35,000 per year)
3. A 2 YEAR EXEMPTION FROM FEDERAL TAXES (or whatever is possible after the IRS collects the excess over the $2M limit)
4. PRICE CONTROLS
5. FULL EMPLOYMENT WITH FULL BENEFITS and
6. JUSTICE IN FOREIGN RELATIONS

There are 1200 four-year colleges in the U.S. There are 469 seats in Congress open for election in November (435 in the House, 34 in the Senate).
So you only need to get 469 colleges to select candidates. Honest candidates. Then you only need to collect $120 from each of the 1200 colleges ($140,000 total).
With this $140,000 you can purchase two full-page ads in USA Today. These 2 ads will list the names and addresses of your candidates and spell out their platform.
Word of mouth will take it from there.

What working person in America isn't going to vote for an end to terrorist attacks, for higher wages, lower prices, lower taxes etc.?

Who wouldn't like to see David Rockefeller, Bill Gates and Warren Buffett, Tiger Michael, and Pedro, Oprah, Jennifer and Julie, Tom, Jerry and Puffy and all the other overpayed people in our society brought back to earth?
You'll need to run your candidates as write-ins since it's too late to get their names on the November ballot.

Voters can vote for write-in candidates in three ways:
1. Write the candidate's name and address directly on the ballot in the space provided,
2. Make up a ballot at home and hand it in at the poll, or
3. Pick up an absentee ballot before election day.

You should run your candidates as Independents. That way everyone can vote for them without partisan politics. If you choose to take on this project you will give the American people someone worth while to vote for this November. If you choose not to do this you can standby and watch sorrowfully as your elders proceed to re-elect the Democrats and Republicans whose foreign policies have made us the target of terrorist attacks and whose domestic policies have screwed us economically and environmentally. Wouldn't you really like to snatch the government out of the greedy paws of the international business crooks and their bribe-taking flunkies in Congress?

You can make November 5, 2002 another 4th of July.

A grateful nation may even decide to pay for your college education.
Future generations will speak of you in hushed tones.

(The anti-sweatshop groups or anti-WTO groups on various campuses might be interested in coordinating this effort.)

If you need more information call 413-746-0272 (6-8pm)

PAID POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Bring tailgates back

Start from there

[illegible] arrival both new Chancellor John Lombardi and [illegible] Director Ian McCaw have spoke of revoking the no tailgating [illegible] is enforced during athletic events on campus.

[illegible] are all for it.

In every [illegible] one might notice that UMass, unlike most [illegible] universities in the United States, lacks somewhat in the [illegible] department.

Despite that [illegible] to over 20,000 students, there is little excuse [illegible] such as have that frequents football and basketball games.

[illegible] saying that reinstituting tailgating, i.e. excessive drunkenness and food consumption prior to games, will bring fans from their [illegible] Sunday football games, but it's a start.

[illegible] it is a change. A change that this campus needs and [illegible]. Granted it seems trivial to consider tailgating such an [illegible], but start to think about it and it makes sense.

[illegible] and McCaw are proposing, and they haven't officially [illegible] anything yet, is not simply a policy change, but a promotion of [illegible].

[illegible] that it is a futile effort to try to become something [illegible]. No matter what UMass will never be like the small, private, [illegible] institutions that scatter the New England landscape, and why should we be?

[illegible] how hard it tries, UMass does not have the ability do be as [illegible] as the area private schools, not while it continues to accommodate [illegible] students.

Why don't we be like the Michigans and Floridas that combine an academic reputation with a big sports program?

Answer is, we can.

Except at UMass will likely never boast a 70,000 fan turnout at a football game, but a solid turnout on Saturdays and some sold out Mullins [illegible] aren't out of the question.

But the point here is not limited to the sports community. The UMass community on the whole needs a face-lift in the attitude department. It's been years since the last few years with budget cuts, overstocked classes and misdirected revenue sports to criticize the school.

But now with some fresh and motivated personnel ready to take the helm, UMass looks like it has survived a mini-dark age and is ready to [illegible] toward the future. And hopefully it will be a future of success in the classroom, visitors on the field, and enjoyment for students.

Little things like revoking the ban on tailgating won't give UMass an instant turnaround, but it's a start.

Staff editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Let Freedom Ring

REGAN MCKENDRY

My brother was born on the 43rd anniversary of Pearl Harbor Day.

Now be honest, how many of you, in an instant, could figure out that my brother beat's birthday is December 7. Hehe. I'm sure there were some, but they are the minority. Many people of our generation don't specifically know when Pearl Harbor Day was. Most do know that it was when our nation was attacked, that it took place in Hawaii and ushered the United States into World War II. And isn't that what's really important?

Asking your grandparents the same question would probably reveal that most easily know when Pearl Harbor Day was. They lived through it. In our case, most of us were born approximately forty years later. The date itself would be easy for us to forget. However, the events of that Sunday in December and the implications are truly what matter. As one of a select few who have had the privilege to visit Pearl Harbor and the USS Arizona Memorial, I can state with certainty it is perhaps the most solemn place I've ever been to, regardless of my knowledge as to what day the attack took place.

Now we have reached September 11, 2002, the first anniversary of the terrorism attacks on our nation. Of course there will be many moving tributes and many personal reflections on that unbelievable day that transpired last autumn. Like many will have millions of thoughts running through my head that day, where I was, was it happened, has America honestly changed etc. One thing I will not being doing though, is thinking, or referring to it as 9/11. September 11, or anything else signifying the day.

The day is unimportant in the long run. The actions, emotions, and memories of the day are its significance. One year later it is impossible to forget the specific details of the actual calendar day. Yet ten years from now, how many of us will remember that it was a Tuesday? In twenty years how many of us will remember that the date was September 11? Some of us will have forgotten, and the number will grow as the event moves further into the past. I find it hard to think though, that anybody will forget where they were and what happened.

Keeping this in mind, I am proposing our government give a name to the day. Rather than having our entire country refer to one of the most momentous days in our history simply as September 11. I suggest that it be called Freedom Day.

Here me out on this. I came up with the name as early as last November. Twin Towers Day or Pentagon Day are inappropriate because then slight have most of us were born approximately forty years later. The date itself would be easy for us to forget. However, the events of that Sunday in December and the implications are truly what matter. As one of a select few who have had the privilege to visit Pearl Harbor and the USS Arizona Memorial, I can state with certainty it is perhaps the most solemn place I've ever been to, regardless of my knowledge as to what day the attack took place.

Now we have reached September 11, 2002, the first anniversary of the terrorism attacks on our nation. Of course there will be many moving tributes and many personal reflections on that unbelievable day that transpired last autumn. Like many will have millions of thoughts running through my head that day, where I was, was it happened, has America honestly changed etc. One thing I will not being doing though, is thinking, or referring to it as 9/11. September 11, or anything else signifying the day.

The day is unimportant in the long run. The actions, emotions, and memories of the day are its significance. One year later it is impossible to forget the specific details of the actual calendar day. Yet ten years from now, how many of us will remember that it was a Tuesday? In twenty years how many of us will remember that the date was September 11? Some of us will have forgotten, and the number will grow as the event moves further into the past. I find it hard to think though, that anybody will forget where they were and what happened.

Keeping this in mind, I am proposing our government give a name to the day. Rather than having our entire country refer to one of the most momentous days in our history simply as September 11. I suggest that it be called Freedom Day.

"Referencing September 11, 2001 as Freedom Day, and not simply by its calendar location, emphasizes the real impact of last fall, much like Pearl Harbor Day is a more fitting remembrance than simply December 7, 1941."

Freedom Day, as a term, specifically places importance on the positives that arose out of the terror. The heroes, the patriotism, the love of country and one another, regardless of differences, is highlighted, rather than the actual attacks of cowards.

As generations pass, we will never forget that day last fall, but our children and grandchildren will never experience it the same way. Rather than giving them a date to mark on their calendar as just another event from before they were born, let's bequeath to them the opportunity to reflect on this great nation. Let's leave them with a fitting memorial to the events that reminded us to cherish what we are all so lucky to have. Freedom Day will leave all with a lasting impression of what was felt on that day in September, and why it was so important.

September 11, 2001, the date will be forgotten. The actions and response from Freedom Day will not. Though I must admit I will always remember the day of September 11; it's my father's birthday.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

Applications for Ed/Op are closing next week!

Turn in your stuff if you've got an application, or get your rear end down to the office and talk to Jamie or Regan as soon as possible!

The Twilight Zone: Umass-Dartmouth

JAMIE LOO

[illegible] I was [illegible] about cigarettes. She [illegible] I [illegible] "She's an artist and I'm a [illegible] I'm getting a movie reading [illegible] dinner with friends, plus [illegible] other distractions. She [illegible] my parents happy. I go out of my [illegible] that I'm doing will eventually [illegible] the [illegible] I [illegible] to an all-girls school like [illegible] Mount Holyoke [illegible] she ended up choosing [illegible] Dartmouth-Massachusetts. I [illegible] like with the budget cuts it might not be a [illegible] for [illegible] at UMass. My parents called me a [illegible] they couldn't [illegible] a check to UMass-Dartmouth.

Dartmouth? I was going to move onto campus early, but I [illegible] that parental game was too well to know it wouldn't happen. Had I moved in early, without helping my [illegible] little sister move into her first college dormitory, I would have been in for a lengthy guilt trip later on.

I have to admit, I was slightly curious about our sister school, the Dartmouth campus, and though sometimes I doubt that is actually related, I did want to see her off and wish her well. On freshman move-in day, we packed up the pine [illegible] and headed for North Dartmouth, about an hour from my hometown. I had heard a lot about the campus but didn't really know what to expect. My parents kept telling me that the Dartmouth campus was uglier than Amherst. I couldn't see how that would be possible until I got there.

UMass-Dartmouth, is like UMass-Amherst except in a parallel universe. As soon as we turned off the highway I thought I was in the twilight zone. We were on Route 6, the small highway outside of the campus, which looks eerily like Route 9. There was the Dartmouth Mall, which had a few cars but looked as dead as Hampshire Mall is becoming. There was a Stop & Shop and a Wal-Mart. There were also various fast food and restaurant establishments dotting the strip. Strangely, there were more trees around the area than on our own Route 9. I was already confused. A few turns later I could see the entrance to the campus looming in the distance. As we waited for the left turn I heard a loud commotion coming from outside.

Protesters. At least 300 of them were standing at the entrance to the campus, running up to cars with flyers and chanting. They were protesting Governor Swift's veto of their contracts, the first in a series of protests across the state (one took place on our own campus last week). Now I was spooked. First Route 6, and now protesters on move-in day.

What next?

The freshman move in system. My parents told me UMass-Dartmouth streamlined the freshman move in system. It's simple, each car pulls up to the curb where there are upperclassmen waiting to help you unload your stuff and then help you bring everything to your room. I thought it was a complete lie. In a budget crisis, where would UMass get the money to hire upperclassmen to help you move in? And for that matter, how much money would it take to even entice upperclassmen to help freshman in a task like moving? But there they were when we pulled up to the curb, students with huge laundry bins ready to unload the car. They were incredibly happy, running over to introduce themselves and then whipping objects out the back of the van and into the bin. Being the cynic (and in search of campus flaws), I asked them how much they were being paid to do this.

"Oh we do it for free. We're all volunteers," one of the women smiled.

At this point I was beyond spooked. They volunteered? You couldn't pay upperclassmen enough money at the Amherst campus to ever do something like that. Christina's dormitory is a set of four buildings called J. Louis Roberts Hall, but they each live in a different "phase." Most of the freshman seem to be in "phase one," also known to me as Sylvan at Dartmouth. Her dorm room is a little bit bigger than a Sylvan suite, but it has a really weird set up. The Ethernet jack is by the doorway, far from the desks and the cable TV hookup is conveniently halfway up the wall above her roommate's bed. There are new dorms not far from phase one, which are an amusement to me in their own right. A few years ago when there was a housing crunch at Dartmouth, a few hundred students protested administration's decision to possibly force upperclassmen off campus. The end result was obviously new dormitories. At Amherst, when there are a few hundred students protesting outside of Whitmore, everyone in the building smiles and locks their doors.

"UMass-Dartmouth, is like UMass-Amherst except in a parallel universe."

After all of the moving was done we went to the campus center. Of course, before that I asked my dad at least five times if the lot we were in was safe from tow trucks. Parking Services at Amherst WILL get you on move-in day (believe me, I have friends who know). I stood in the lobby outside of their U-store looking around and immediately an older woman approached me and asked me if I needed help looking for something. I resent the fact that I looked like a confused freshman, but was grateful that there were Dartmouth staff all over the campus center ready to help people like my Christina. I walked away for 10 minutes and I thought I had been swallowed up by their campus center, never to be seen again. The entire building is concrete, and has small winding hallways some with lights other without. It's like being lost inside the Fine Arts Center, except their hallways are darker and narrower. And there are pirates on the walls at every turn because their mascot is the Corsairs. Eventually, I saw sunlight and found my way back out.

I'm still shocked at how oddly similar and yet different, our campuses are. I think the big difference was the people. The Dartmouth campus is a smaller, more close-knit community. Everyone on move-in day was very friendly, from the staff to the students, something that can rarely be seen at Amherst sometimes. Then again, my sister didn't go into any of the administrative buildings. Maybe they also make accusatory remarks about how whatever your problem is you must've caused it. First impressions are deceiving, and I guess I'll find out more about UMass-Dartmouth later. It's a nice place to visit, but I wouldn't go there. Christina said she's enjoying her experience so far and her roommate is very nice. Her roommate is also a freshman art major, and her favorite art medium is duct tape. Duct tape. I hope Christina doesn't piss her off.

Jamie Loo is a nervous older sister and a Collegian columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.10.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

SWIMFAN BELLYFLOPS

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SWIMFAN
Directed by John Polson
Starring Jesse Bradford and Erika Christensen
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Swimfan is nothing more than a tepid teen knock-off of Fatal Attraction, Adrian Lyne's '80s morality play about a wealthy adulterer who cheats on his wife with the wrong woman. The movie was a grown-up version of those umpteen Friday the 13th offs, a horror show response to the sexual consequences begotten from the free love '60s and '70s. Swimfan once again portrays a cheater and his stalker, but resets the story into high school. The movie is nothing more than watered-down bunk, albeit watered-down bunk that is occasionally entertaining in spite of its attempts not to be.

Jesse Bradford, the young actor from the shiny pre-teen sci-fi dud Clockstoppers, takes over the Michael Douglas role of the golden god destined to be undone by wayward ways, while Erika Christensen, all long blonde mane and Wonderbra, plays the psychotic femme fatale with Medusa locks who worms her way into Bradford's life. Ironically, Christensen played Douglas' junkie daughter in Traffic. That would've made a more interesting movie than Swimfan.

Bradford's Ben Cronin is a former junkie who cleaned up his act to become the star member of his swim team and the boyfriend of the sweetest

Turn to SWIMFAN, page 7

COURTESY SONY PICTURES; EDITING BY JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Afro-Puerto Rican music group Plena Libre hits Northampton

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Plena Libre, a traveling group performing Afro-Puerto Rican music, arrives in the Pioneer Valley come Thursday, Sept. 12 at 8 p.m. Gary Nunez, a graduate of the University of Massachusetts, first coordinated the performance a little over six years ago. Now it returns to the area, the Davis Ballroom at Smith College, as part of a combined effort between the Northampton Arts Council and Nosotras of Smith College to fuel more funding for the Council's granting program. (Due to state cutbacks, the granting program's budget has been scaled down 62 percent this year.)

Born out of what is considered the plena jam sessions of Puerto Rico, Plena Libre is perhaps best known for its bright and intense rhythms – a combination of salsa and jazz as well as various other native Afro-Caribbean sounds. According to its press release, Plena Libre, while heavily percussion-driven, incorporates a structured chorus and lines of solo improvisation. Plena Libre has also been herald by reviewers for its ability to breath a new excitement into its genera:

"Talented, spicy and full of young followers," stated Latin Beat Magazine in one review. "Plena Libre is the new face of Puerto Rican plena."

"Today Plena is hip thanks to Nunez's 12 piece band," wrote the Miami Herald. "...the people keep dancing and asking for more."

"Plena Libre has given a new era to this wonderful rhythm, plena," agreed the Daily News of New York.

Advance tickets, purchased from Coopers Corner, Florence, State St. Fruit Store, Northampton or For the Record, Amherst, cost $10 adults and $5 for students and children. Tickets at the door will be $12 and $7.

In addition to its performance, Plena Libre will also provide a workshop demonstration at the Jackson Street School, Northampton at 10 a.m. on Friday Sept. 13.

COURTESY JW CILMAN

By Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

DON'T TRY THIS AT HOME
Hunter S. Fulghum
Broadway Books

For thrill seekers and adventurers worldwide, there is a new book that can cut down the months of research previously required to take on some of the greatest challenges out there.

Don't Try This at Home makes the impossible possible. Hunter S. Fulghum, in his fifth release, presents over 250 pages of how-to style instructions for winning a sumo wrestling match, transporting secret documents from country to country and even sinking nuclear submarines.

Fulghum, however, is serious when he warns not to try these at home. The more challenging endeavors are not for the light hearted; low funded or amateur thrill seekers. The book describes tactics for breaking into Fort Knox and Buckingham Palace, both require an extensive amount of equipment and trained personnel. Sinking and surfacing nuclear submarines are equally improbable ventures.

Still, the how-to manual is an enjoyable read of sorts. You can't sit down and approach it as you would a novel, but you can still get lost thumbing through the pages.

Fulghum presents each approach systematically, which best suits the material. Each listing includes material needed, background, an estimate of time required and step-by-step instructions. The detail provided is the result of research that Fulghum describes in the prologue:

"In researching this book," he wrote, "I found myself having conversations in which I asked questions such as 'I know this would never happen, but if it did, how would I do it?'"

According to Fulghum, "the most

Turn to DON'T TRY, page 7

Number 6 Fumbles; dropping the ball

By Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

NUMBER 6 FUMBLES
Rachel Solar-Suttle
MTV Books

There is nothing quite like a trashy novel. Some days I just want to kick back in my bed in front of my air conditioner and read something that doesn't teach me anything or force me to use any of my brain cells. Number 6 Fumbles makes a feeble attempt at becoming this awesome trashy novel, but it fails miserably.

In the first chapter, we meet Rebecca, or Beck, or Becca Lowe: a student at the University of Pennsylvania who is attending a football game with numerous friends. At a crucial point in the game, number six on the home team fumbles the ball. Somehow this forces Rebecca to completely reevaluate her own life and what would happen if she "fumbled the ball." We are then brought down the miserable, alcohol-saturated journey that becomes the mess that is Rebecca's life.

Obviously Rebecca's character would have to have parents that she has difficulty with, as they are sorely disappointed that she did not attend Harvard. Her difficulty with her mother lies in the fact that her mother refuses to trust any of Rebecca's judgments, particularly ones concerning her schoolwork. Rebecca's choice in paper topics and courses never really please her mother, no matter what kind of grades Rebecca receives.

Rebecca's father is just as cold and distant and refers to Rebecca as a "disappointment." However, this wasn't always the case. Rebecca and her father were once quite close, but as Mr. Lowe states towards the end of the book, "that was a different time and place."

To distance herself from these family troubles, Rebecca deals with all her emotional trauma through heavy drinking and randomly hooking up with various boys. She first falls for Ryan. However, after each time the two get together, he finds some random, weak excuse to not call her. (Sounds familiar girls?) But Rebecca persists anyhow, and her affections become so strong she decides to lose her virginity to him after a night of partying. You guessed it: even after this scene, he still doesn't call, and some lame-o excuse follows.

After Ryan, there is a steady stream of young men that enter and exit Rebecca's life after nights at the bars. There's Trey, lared and finally Jake, with whom she ends up having a dangerous encounter. Still, through partying every single night of the week and finding herself asleep in someone else's bed most mornings, Rebecca is still able to keep her grades up. The end of the book is just bad. I won't ruin it for anyone who decides to waste money on this mediocre attempt at a teen novel, but the end is simply dull and unsatisfying.

> "Number 6 Fumbles falls way short of something unrealistic enough to read as a trashy, brainless book (I mean that in a good way), and it's too unrealistic to be a reflection to what happens to girls in college."

Number 6 Fumbles makes a pretty awful attempt at trying to do what Judy Blume did in We'll Always Be Together. It tries to create a realistic story of a girl's journey in discovering herself and bringing peace into her life through relationship struggles – family and otherwise.

However, the metaphor of the fumbling of the ball is just so bad, and it proves impossible to get over the feeble cliché while reading the book. Many times the reader may pause to wonder, "How can watching a quarterback fumble a football lead to this kind of ridiculous self doubt and emotional and physical destruction?"

The end leaves the reader confused and discontented. The conflict in the story is never really resolved. The last paragraph in the story makes some lead that an end might be in sight, but it definitely doesn't leave the reader with knowledge that the story had an introduction, rising action, turning point, falling action and a resolution, as the Shakespearean theory goes.

Number 6 Fumbles falls way short of something unrealistic enough to read as a trashy, brainless book (I mean that in a good way), and it's too unrealistic to be a reflection to what happens to girls in college. If you really want to go waste $12.95 on something that falls short of mindless entertainment, go ahead and purchase the book. But you'd be just as well off giving the money to me or throwing a bunch of quarters down a sewer.

cont. from

De Niro back in action

Traditional police saga treads water

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGE STAFF

CITY BY THE SEA
Directed by Michael Caton-Jones
Starring Robert De Niro, James Franco and Frances McDormand
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Robert De Niro hasn't seemed fully alive on the big screen for a while. It's probably because his movies haven't been alive in a while. Every actor gets to slum once in a while – to make a movie for a paycheck. Even then, De Niro deserved better movies than Showtime or The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle, high-priced turkeys that look good only in a pitch meeting at 3 a.m.

In City By The Sea, De Niro has finally returned to being an actor. The movie itself is nothing we haven't seen before, but De Niro does something new: he becomes vulnerable. His character, Vince LaMarca, is a tired, wounded man, but De Niro is more awake on screen then he's been in a while.

City By The Sea is a cop movie, and knowing full well the clichés worn into the territory, it doesn't even bother to break free of the clichés that come with cop movies. Vince LaMarca is a dedicated, decorated New York cop investigating the murder of a low-level drug pusher nicknamed Picasso. The evidence points to only one conclusion, however – that LaMarca's estranged son Joey (James Franco), a homeless junkie with dreams of going to Florida, is the killer. LaMarca's father is already known as a child murderer, and when his son is accused of killing a cop investigating the case, LaMarca must confront his past to protect his future.

The ironies of the plot – a killer's son becomes a cop who has a son who may be a killer – seem a bit too diagrammed on paper, but that's until you find out that it was based on a true story (Ken Hixon's screenplay was based on Mike McAlary's magazine article "Mark of a Murderer").

LaMarca's life is in distraught shambles, which he hides not only from his quasi-girlfriend Michelle (Frances McDormand, imbuing enough life into a stock role), but from himself. He wants only to forget his past and ignore his present. He hasn't seen his son since he divorced his first wife under disharmonious conditions. As the plot unfolds, he is confronted by the fact that he wasn't around for his son and that his son may now be a murderer.

The entire arc of the police story almost seems to be an afterthought to the real intentions of Hixon and director Michael Caton-Jones. Every last chestnut that has been cemented into the police drama formula has been checked off the list. The partner destined to not last to the final frame, the female confidant and the turned-in-badge-and-gun get there due appearances here, but strangely, City By The Sea doesn't seem like a screenwriter's handbook exercise. Caton-Jones doesn't exactly enliven the clichés; he just uses them as a solid foundation for what turns out to be the real story: that of the relationship between a father and a son.

Caton-Jones directs in a style that could be called '70s-cinema chic. The movie takes place in Long Beach, which looks like a bombed-out Las Vegas (the movie was shot in Bruce Springsteen's adopted hometown of Asbury Park, NJ). The boardwalk is lined with desiccated casinos and hotels that look like monuments to a prosperity that has long since atrophied into oblivion. The sets aren't just gritty or squalid; they're lifeless. And Caton-Jones shoots in an unfussy style that places the actors in the middle of long-shot compositions that have been lost in the music video-headache era of the '90s. This kind of de-adrenalized drama probably won't sell in the current bang-bang marketplace, but it makes for an fascinating shift in studio politics to see a studio (in this case Warner Bros) allow a style like this come down the pipe.

Franco, who may have given the best performance ever in a TV biography, playing James Dean, has been compared to a new-generation Dean. He looks like Dean, but more importantly, he looks the part of Joey LaMarca. He's emaciated, as desiccated as the buildings around him. He talks in a thick New York slur and has aced the role of a junkie. Yet there's something fundamentally more. He's aced the role of a junkie who's grieving for the father he's never seen, as well as the life he wants but knows he has to pretend to believe he'll get.

I could've done without some moments of the plotting stupidity (why do all movies now have to have a baby?!), but City By The Sea, miraculously registers as a movie. It may be bound to a crime drama formula that it never really transcends, but it also manages to be a rarity in a Hollywood that allows movies like The Adventures of Pluto Nash to get a green light: a solid adult drama.

Robert De Niro's character may be a bit more multi-leveled than in recent films past, but City By The Sea still follows the same old police-story plot line.

■ Swimfan

continued from page 5

girl in school, Amy (Shiri Appleby of TV's Roswell). Madison Bell (Christensen), the new girl in town who none too convincingly becomes attached to Ben when he opens her locker. Against his better judgment, Ben is having a one-night-stand with Madison in the school pool. He wants to brush it off and remain friends, but Madison has become increasingly more needy – and then dangerous.

Everything you need to know about Swimfan can be seen directly in the theatrical trailer. Predictable and lacking in tension, the movie is saturated in mediocrity. The big plot twists, if they can be called that, have telegraphed long before the opening credits unroll; it takes the fun out of having your friends spoil the ending for you. Suspense is undercut by director John Polson's decision to announce Madison's little breakdowns with jump cuts and screeching violins. We aren't even allowed a glimmer of visual excitement; Polson's a boringly non-visual director, aligning bland cinematography to a bland pop soundtrack.

Bradford is still a likable guy, but likeability can only take an actor so far. He doesn't seem all that threatened by Madison; there's no intensity. Since Christensen plays Madison not as a menacing fallen angel, but as an obsessive rich brat, it's not hard to see why Bradford may not seem to be menaced. Christensen, so good in Traffic, has been reduced to another Maxim cover model.

Swimfan drowns in slack acting, dull visuals, suspense-less suspense and over-ripe dialogue that left the audience in stitches – it's just unknown if it was meant to be funny. But it can be enjoyed on a so-bad-it's-good level. It's a potboiler joke that can be appreciated if only on it's own base level. Empty-headed drivel at it's best, Swimfan begins to taste like a McDonald's French fries and has less substance than a Twinkie. Moviemaking alchemy allows Polson to tread water, crafting (ahh, what a word) a rock-dumb entertainment that amuses for 89 minutes. Otherwise, the movie would have been totally waterlogged.

Swimfan, says the critic, dives into a plot seen many times over, making it one-dimensional and predictable. Jesse Bradford and Erika Christensen could do better.

■ Don't Try

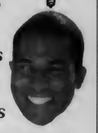
continued from page 6

common response was silence." However, someone must have been listening, as the book offers a wide breadth of subjects.

A personal favorite described offers a means to smuggle top-secret documents using Boy Scouts. These crafty fellows apparently meet on the United States and Canada border annually. The descriptions offered by Fulghum outline plans that tap the under-utilized spy skills of necker-chief-clad teenagers to transport government secrets.



In his plans to enter Buckingham Palace, Fulghum inserts a more light-hearted tone, suggesting that after departing from the high altitude aircraft, gaining access by using a stun gun on a servant and entering with night-vision goggles, the adventurer should take the time to short-sheet Prince Charles's bed.

This book offers a step up to the how-to books that explain the growth cycles of tulips and when it is best to plant the bulbs. It improves upon Bob Villa's step-by-step plans to retile your bathroom.

Fulghum has tapped human curiosity with this latest publication. In providing the extremes, he is adding to the popularity of the Worst Case Scenario survival books. Fulghum also said that he is providing something more at a time when people have started to take the "No Fear" logo to the next level and are acting on adventure interests.

Don't Try This at Home is an enjoyable manual that opens those closed, locked, barricaded and sealed doors into the most unusual of places. From cover to cover, the descriptions and instructions offer a unique look that appeal to everyone, adventurer or not.

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE

- »Longer, More convenient hours
- »No hassle
- »Quicker shopping-No long lines
- »More Pleasant Shopping Environment
- »Support a local independent business, not a national chain
- »Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters

WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES

RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM

Jeffery Amherst College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

Today is the day.

The first all-staff Arts and Living meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 in the Collegian office. All interested in working with the section are encouraged to attend.
Stories currently up for grabs deal with:
Concerts/albums
Movies/television
Theater/dance
Galleries/museums
Campus life
...And so much more
There's sure to be something to catch your eye, so hurry down and meet the staff.

Very truly yours,
Jen, Nick and Lizzy

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9
For more information call 253-7571

- Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-and many more
- Nutritonal Consultation
- Tanning
- Sauna
- Juice Bar & Supplements
- Fitness Testing & Programming

Semester Special $160

- Stairmasters
- Precor Treadmills
- Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
- Lifecycle Upright Bikes
- Precor Crosstrainers
- Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
- Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

There's still time to register...

Greenfield Community College introduces LATE START

beginning Thursday, September 12...

- Introduction to Philosophy
- Mathematical Problem Solving
- Oral Communication: Public Speaking
- Principles of Psychology
- Psychology of Death & Dying
- English Composition I (extended registration)

GREENFIELD Community College

For more information (413) 775-1801 • www.gcc.mass.edu

Mr. Touchdown

Redshirt freshman Brandon Tweed has caught two touchdown passes this season for the Minutemen on three catches against Central Connecticut, and will look to continue on a three-game streak against American International College on Saturday.

Team USA fails in hoop debacle

During the 2001-02 NBA All-Star break, Commissioner David Stern addressed the media on the state of the league as he does every year around that time. One of the topics of interest was the upcoming FIBA World Basketball Championships to be played in Indianapolis, Ind. at the end of the summer.

Reporters asked him who was going to be on the team. At the time he was unsure of roster.

He began to reminisce on the teams he had assembled in the past and couldn't help to ask himself, do people want to see domination anymore?

Ten years ago when the Olympic committee decided to allow professional players play in the summer games; USA Basketball all of a sudden became the arena to see the superstars of the league mesh together on the same side of the court.

The experiment was an outstanding success as the original Dream Team was the best team assembled in the history of sports. Just imagine this, Magic Johnson at the one, Michael Jordan at the two and Larry Bird at the three. Dreams like that are not supposed to come true, but they did in Barcelona at the 1992 Olympic Games.

GLEN STRAUB

For every other country in the tournament it was a nightmare, as the U.S. team was thrashing many of its opponents by more than 50 points.

The tradition continued as Stern sent more classes of NBA studs to the Olympics and World Championships in the following years. The results may have been similar – gold medals on the Americans' part – but the aura surrounding Dream Teams 2-4 was just not the same.

So rather than milking the Dream Team novelty, this time around Stern decided to cut back on sending the best-of-the-best to the international event. He wanted to bring some competition back to the games and most of all, he realized that the publicity and love for the first Dream Team would never again be matched.

His plan was to send the second and third tier players of the NBA. Not Kobe, Shaq or Tim Duncan but budding stars like Elton Brand, Andre Miller and Ben Wallace would be the makeup of the USA Basketball squad.

Stern and USA Basketball wanted to win the gold, but this time they wanted to earn it through competitive games. Unfortunately for Stern and the rest of the NBA the plan backfired and now questions are being asked.

Sunday night, Yugoslavia and Argentina played for the gold medal. Led by Sacramento Kings stars Vlade Divac and Peja Stojakovic, the Yugoslavian national team defeated the Argentinean national team in overtime to win their first World Championship since 1998 in Athens tUSA Basketball was forced to send CBA players that year due to the player lockout).

Missing from this gold medal equation was the current U.S. national team. A team that was assembled, not for its star power, but for its potential cohesion of multi-talented players.

Instead it was a team of bums.

The United States came in sixth place at the very same World Championships that they hosted. Worst of all the state of Indiana – known by many as a hoops Mecca – had to witness it firsthand.

The dismay on the minds of NBA fans across the nation started when USA lost its first game with NBA stars in 56 contests. They were outplayed and outcoached by an Argentina team that was led by future San Antonio Spur, Emanuel Ginobili. The final score was 87-80. The loss was shocking; however, it was a sign that the Americans are no longer invincible.

David Stern got what he wanted. He wanted to see if the stars of his league could make a comeback and still take home the gold. It would be a chance for the young stars to prove themselves as true competitors rather than ballers playing for the commercials or highlights.

However, the Americans went on to lose two of the next three games and fell out of contention for a medal.

The NBA and its players can start apologizing, because they have lived up to every complaint pro basketball haters have to offer. No matter how talented, physically inclined or high-flying they can be, a new ungrateful, heartless class of basketball players has become the majority in the NBA. The youths are disillusioned to the fact that it's important to bring home the gold medal in these kinds of events. It reassures the quality of the league they work for.

Despite being the most noted icon in the world, Michael Jordan still played each and every minute of the '92 Summer Games like it was Game Seven of the NBA Finals.

If even one player on the U.S. squad showed that much heart, the United States would have taken the gold easily. But they didn't, and now even the head coach of this pathetic team is turning his back on the players.

George Karl, Head Coach of the Milwaukee Bucks, said, "the money and the greed have had an effect on the competitive nature of basketball."

This remark shows Karl's true colors. He has always made controversial comments to the media. He loves it. He might be right in this fact but maybe he should look in the mirror. He is one of the highest paid coaches in the league. Did that take away from his competitive fire?

Last season he had one of the most talented teams in the league with the trio of Sam Cassell, Ray Allen and Glenn Robinson. That team didn't even make the playoffs, after advancing to the Eastern Conference finals the year before.

The easy solution to all this mess is to blame the greedy youth of the league, but the real matter is that the rest of the world is finally catching up to the homegrown talent. International teams now have multiple players from the NBA on their rosters. There used be just one player per nation, if that country was lucky.

Yes, like many basketball fans, I feel the display at the World Championships by the Americans was pathetic. They were not prepared. European teams are not as bad as they used to be. It is time to realize this.

The ripple that will be felt the most from this tournament is when pro scouts go on their search for new exciting players. Scouts may start to primarily focus on international players, leaving the young players in the U.S. out of a chance to shine in the NBA.

It is hard to say if it would go that far, but predicting that the U.S. would place sixth at the World Championships this year would be a stretch too.

Glen Straub is a Collegian Columnist. Information from ESPN.com was used in this column.

All-staff meeting
Thursday at 6 in the CC basement
BE THERE

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

NEED EXTRA CASH?
Sign up to receive emails about upcoming decision making experiments from the Department of Resource Economics!
To sign up go to:
http://www.umass.edu/resec/expecon
$100 Bonus Opportunity
If you participate in one decision making experiment during the Fall semester your name will be entered in a drawing for $100. (drawing to be held at the end of the fall semester)

Domino'S Pizza
EXPIRES 9/19/02
Two Weeks Only
ONLY $1.99
Buy Any Pizza Get The Second Pizza For $1.99
GOOD Sunday Monday Tuesday Wednesday Thursday ONLY
$6.99 MEDIUM 1 TOPPING PIZZA LUNCH SPECIAL $7.99 LARGE GOOD 11am-4pm 2 SODAS 99¢
$12.99 LARGE PIZZA WITH 1 TOPPING +CINNA STICKS
$10.99 EXTRA LARGE 3 TOPPING PIZZA 2 LITER SODA BREADSTICKS & WINGS
$7.99 1 10-IN PIZZA +1 TWISTY BREAD +1COKE
$12.99 LARGE 1 TOPPING PIZZA 2-LITER COKE
$9.99 MEDIUM 2 TOPPING PIZZA +2 SODAS
OPEN TIL 4AM
256-8911

Unlimited Nights & Weekends. Fits all back-to-school schedules.
UNLIMITED Nights & Weekends
Minutes on the America's Choice® Network
Plus 1000 Mobile To Mobile MINUTES to call any of our 30 million customers anytime
Long Distance Included!
Buy One. Get One Free!
Kyocera 2135
$49.99 for both phones
1 year contract on both phones. Some restrictions apply.
AMERICA'S CHOICE
300 anytime minutes FOR $39.99 monthly access
Every month as long as you remain on the plan. With 1 or 2-year agreement. Calls placed outside the calling plan area are 69¢/min.
All with no roaming or long distance charges when calling on the America's Choice™ network.
The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas. CDMA tri-mode phone with updated software required. Mobile to Mobile not available throughout the America's Choice Network.
@Wireless
www.shopatwireless.com
Hadley 322 Russell St. 413.587.3248
Holyoke 50 Holyoke Mall 413.533.2500
verizon wireless
Important Consumer Information: Night & weekend hours: Mon-Fri. 8:01pm-5:59am Sat. 12am-Sun. 11:59pm. Subject to Customer Agreement and Calling Plan. Activation fee of $30-$35 required. $175 early termination fee. Requires credit approval. Not available in all markets. Cannot be combined with other offers. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Limited time offers. Geographic and other restrictions apply. Subject to taxes, other charges. See store for details. ©2002 Verizon Wireless.

Rudd

continued from page 12

from the University to thank them for their contribution, as well as a soccer ball autographed by the entire women's team. The men's soccer team and a portion of the UMass marching band were also on hand to mark the occasion.

Following the match between the Minutewomen and BU, the men's team played a special exhibition match for the fans in attendance against a squad comprised of former Minutemen.

Friday's atmosphere was a little more somber, however, as the Minutewomen paid tribute to Stephanie Santos prior to the game against Rhode Island. A memorial stone was unveiled behind the North goal at the complex featuring her likeness and a tribute to the former freshman standout, and a duplicate plaque was presented to Santos's parents, John and Leonilde.

Her jersey with No. 17 on the back was also given to the family, and Head Coach Jim Rudy proclaimed the number would never be worn again at UMass. He also said that his team members would touch the stone before each home game.

Santos's friends and teammates from her hometown of Ludlow, Mass. also attended the ceremony, coming by bus to pay tribute to their teammate and friend.

"It was a special day, I just wish we could have been more successful on the scoreboard," Rudy said, referring to his team's 3-0 loss. He also said that having to repress their emotions was extremely tough for his players following the ceremony.

"It's a big jump to go from there," he said, pointing to the memorial, "to play on heaven."

The newly erected Rudd Field, located just next to the UMass Softball Complex, is the newest athletic facility on campus.

schooled

continued from page 12

been on the road for the past two and a half weeks, including a trip to Canada, would have ample time to become more comfortable with each other, but it wasn't the case Friday night. Possibly because of the frustrating defensive style of the Terriers, possibly because of youth, the Minutemen weren't able to put together enough chances to take the game. They did, however, control the ball well, especially in the first half.

The match also featured a large amount of physical play, including some near-squabbles in the waning moments.

"It's always tough playing against BU, it's kind of like an interstate rivalry," Deren said. "Every year, I mean, last year we beat them 2-1 in overtime, the year before we lost to them 1-0 here, but it was a very physical game, and then today people just getting banged up."

There is certainly reason for hope, however, as this squad has shown some moments of excellence, and the young defense has proven that with a little more time, it can become nearly as viable as the one it replaced.

"We're the type of team where it will come, we just need to fix the mistakes, which are fixable," Deren said. "We can't get caught ball-watching as much as we are, because every time we make a mistake, they punish us. We're young, so, with a little more experience, we'll be alright."

The Minutemen will have a week to fix whatever created the mistakes against the Terriers before facing off with Iona this Friday at 4:00 PM, the first official game for them on Rudd field. They'll follow up with a clash against Michigan State on Sunday at 1.

Senior Yuri Morales and the men's soccer team will look to even their record on Friday against Iona.

WANT TO WRITE FOR SPORTS?
email Jim at collegian_sports@yahoo.com or swing by the Campus Center Basement

OFFICE WORKERS
Various office help needed: packing boxes, counting materials, labeling cartons, and answering phones. Preferred candidates will work quickly and accurately and be able to work at least 3 consecutive hours between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. on days that we have work. On-call hours available beginning mid-September throughout the academic year. $8.00/hr. Call 256-0444 to request an application.
Personnel
NATIONAL EVALUATION SYSTEMS, INC.
P.O. Box 226 Amherst, MA 01004-0226
personnel@nesinc.com E.O.E.

STUDENT TRAVEL
hip hop
(Find your rhythm.)
44 Main St (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> ON THE STREET

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

TechCavalry
help is on the way!
Computer Troubles?
We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com
Tape this ad to your computer!

THE BOLTWOOD PROJECT™
(32 years of service—and counting!)
A STUDENT / COMMUNITY SERVICE LEARNING PROGRAM
(an RSO and Dept. of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning sponsored prog.)
REACH OUT—AND BECOME A SPECIAL FRIEND TO PEOPLE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS
Your life will NEVER be the same!
EARN 1–2 CREDITS GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE REWARDING, CHALLENGING, and FUN
Fall Semester 2002 — Recruitment Nights
You must attend ONE of these meetings. No exceptions, even if you have participated before!
6:00-8:00 PM (Note: Prompt starting time!!!)
Room 163C of the Campus Center for all meetings •Sept. 9 (Mon) •Sept. 10 (Tues) •Sept. 11 (Wed)
•Assignment notification ONLY Thurs, Sept 12th @ Boltwood table CC Concourse.
No telephone inquiries; YOU (or a friend) must pickup the notification letter!!!
Volunteer, while earning credit!

CURIOUS about online courses?
ask us for a free course catalog or check it out on the Web
Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/
UMASS
UMass Amherst
Fall Semester 2002
a lifetime of learning opportunities

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE (413)545-3500 FAX (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Spring Break with STS. America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips, travel on campus, earn cash and free trips. Most destinations. 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com

Dishes & Kitchen help wanted, apply at DP Dining, Downtown Amherst

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Suzuki Samurai Turbo 4 cyl. 5 speed. Must see! Make offer. Call 413-253-3431

WANTED: Harley, Sportster, or other motorcycle, running or not. Will pay cash. Call 413-337-8527 for more info.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE 1st BODY & SIR Productions are now looking for Fall semester. Call (413) 337-8527 or www.sirproduction.com

Mystique Exotic moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

CAMPUS SPOKESPERSON NEEDED $15.00 PER HOUR JOB ON CAMPUS. CAMPUS INFORMATION SERVICES IS CURRENTLY SEEKING HIGHLY MOTIVATED STUDENTS. MUST HAVE STRONG INTERPERSONAL SKILLS. VERY OUTGOING. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL: 1-800-375-5701.

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Part-Time Delivery and Warehouse help for local furniture store. Flexible hours. Tues.-Sat. 256-6184 ask for James.

LIFEGUARDS

Lifeguards/WSI The Town of Amherst, Department of Leisure Services and Supplemental Education (LSSE) Aquatics Program is now accepting Lifeguard and WSI applications for the school year 2002-2003. Previous experience preferred, $8.19-9.48/hr. Applications are available from the Town Hall Human Resources Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst. Equal Opportunity Employer

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem, Please call 212-817-5530 or e-mail dormstory@hotmail.com

WANTED

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions. must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact: 860-257-9139 for more info.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

Attention Students! Protect Environment and Get Paid! Clean Water Action is hiring campaign organizers to: *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *protect our air and water *promote renewable energy Good communication skills a must. Paid Training, fun work atmosphere, flexible schedules, great pay, 10 mins. from campus and bus route. Call Megan 413-584-9830

TESTING

Kaplan Test Prep hiring enthusiastic counter staff for evening and weekend hours. Also hiring marketing assistants to flyer local campuses. Applications available at our Center, 150 Fearing St., Amherst or call 549-5780. Work for Kaplan for one year & get a free Kaplan class!

Recreation Leader—After School Program The Town of Amherst seeks Recreation Leaders for its After School Programs operated by the Leisure Services and Supplemental Education Department (LSSE). Camp Counseling, other experiences working with school age children, and/or related course-work in Elementary Education preferred. $7.80-9.03 hr. 5-15 hrs per week. Applications available from Human Resource Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or LSSE, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or call S. Basniak @ 256-4065. Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

CHILDCARE

After-school care for Two children 7 & 11 years old. Needed in Amherst home. Mon. 3-5pm, Weds. 1:30pm-5:30 pm. Car required 253-5197

Looking for child care Thursday evenings. Transportation, references, and experience required. Michelle 259-1118

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500/mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238 or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

WANTED: Technical Assistant for economic modeling software firm. Computer programming experience a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West St. Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jsl@remi.com

WANTED: Business Development Assistant telephone sales and marketing for a policy analysis software firm. Knowledge of Economics a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West Street Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jsl@remi.com.

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun

FOR SALE

Sears Room Refrigerator 2.5 Cubic feet. Never used. Paid $168.00 Selling for $110.00 413-549-6681

3 Desks & File Cabinet for Sale $45-$200 See at www.pioneervalleyguide.com/furniture or call 584-7730

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFinder 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at 888-923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

STAGE HANDS WANTED at Fine Arts Center. $6.75 / hr. Variable schedule – week day availability preferred 9-noon, 1pm-5 Applications at production services Rm 146 F.A.C.

Amherst Leisure Services Department is hiring officials for its Adult Volleyball League. The games are held Sundays at a local school. We are also looking for a Supervisor to run the program. League runs from late September-mid-December. To apply, go to Town Hall, Human Resources Department. Work Study and Non-Work Study jobs available. For more information please contact Erika Camps 256-4065x114 or at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

Research Interviews Ideal for college students. Conduct surveys over the phone. No sales. Set your own schedule each week. 20+ hours/week. Evening/weekends. $7.50/hour. Hadley location. PVTA accessible. Field Marketing, Inc. 1-888-423-5381

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SPRING BREAK

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs from Florida! Get Group – Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Wanted: Co-manager to work at Greenough subshop. Pick up application and more information at center for student businesses in Student Union by 9/12.

Ever wondered about joining a fraternity? Come to Rm 911-915 of the Campus Center on Tuesday, 9/6 to meet the brothers of Delta Upsilon, the only non-secret fraternity at Umass. Questions? Call Rich at 413-657-6883. See you at 7pm.

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigmaalphalambda.org

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement. - eMail

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

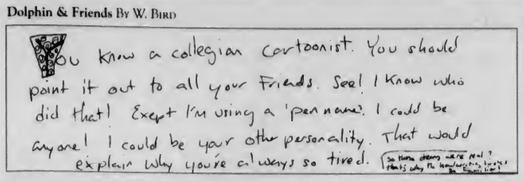
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open hours: 8:30 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Mon.-Fri. 9:00 a.m. - 2:00 p.m. Sat.
Student rate - 20 cents/word/day. Non-student rate - 50 cents/word/day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment



HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 ..... CBS / 3
3 ..... NBSN
4 ..... Fox Sport NE
5 ..... TBS / 57
6 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
7 ..... WB / 20
8 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
9 ..... TV Guide Channel
10 ..... FOX / 61
11 ..... ABC / 40
12 ..... NBC / 22
13 ..... International Channel
14 ..... UMATV
15 ..... HSCN Info Channel
16 ..... ESPN
17 ..... ESPN 2
18 ..... UVC-19
19 ..... ESPN Classic
20 ..... Cinemax-East
21 ..... CNN
22 ..... CNN HL
23 ..... Weather Channel
24 ..... Learning Channel
25 ..... History Channel
26 ..... A & E
27 ..... Discovery Health
28 ..... Food Network
29 ..... NASA
30 ..... Home & Garden TV
31 ..... Travel Channel
32 ..... Lifetime
33 ..... CNBC
34 ..... Tech TV
35 ..... BET
36 ..... UPN 44
37 ..... USA
38 ..... TNN
39 ..... MTV
40 ..... CMT
41 ..... VH-1
42 ..... TNT
43 ..... TBS
44 ..... E! Entertainment
45 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
46 ..... Court TV
47 ..... Nick at Nite
48 ..... Comedy Central
49 ..... Cartoon Network
50 ..... Game Show Network
51 ..... TV Land
52 ..... FOX Family
53 ..... Univision
54 ..... Odyssey
55 ..... Telemundo
56 ..... College TV Network
57 ..... C-SPAN
58 ..... C-SPAN2
61 ..... Bloomberg Television

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

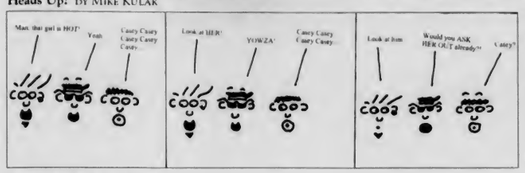
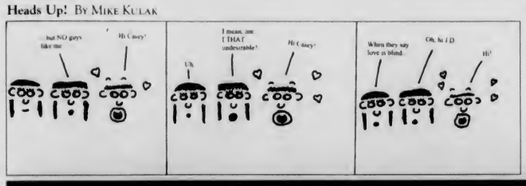
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News		Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date
WVIT	9	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8 11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Barrie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	9 22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WCBY	10 5	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Allusions: Cradle		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40 20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (In Stereo)		Enterprise Shadows Of P.Dem		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal,				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	45	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20 21	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	47 26	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★ "Pardon" (1936, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci,		South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show		Sat. Night Live
DISC	52	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	33	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)			Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	24	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	39	Ch.39) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAID2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		J. Lo Movie	Making-Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	56	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	29	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	27 28	World of Hewitt		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	29	NYPD Blue	Twin Peaks (R)	Pretender "P.T.B." (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		"Twins Bustle's Day Off" (1996)
USA	30	Walker, Texas Ranger		UFO "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley,				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley,
HBO	69	(5:45) ★★½ "Hero on Earth" (2000) Chris Terrio				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks (In Stereo) PG-13				Sit: Feel Under (In Stereo)		Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	65	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)				Sat: Enough		★½ "Ms. Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey R				★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves PG-13
SHOW	68	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG				★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett R				Soul Food (N) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.



Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird



Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Heads Up! By Mike Kulak

Heads Up! By Mike Kulak

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Don't get smart with me, Lamothe."
-Vogt

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 92 LOW: 60	HIGH: 72 LOW: 42	HIGH: 71 LOW: 45

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS- Get up and do whatever comes to mind. At least you'll be making headway.
CAPRICORN- Be sure to make yourself available to others throughout the day.
AQUARIUS- You'll deal closely with those who are after something quite different today.
PISCES- Rise from your mental slumber. Now regress. Think but do not act alone, unless thou art together.
ARIES- You are the one.
TAURUS- Get up out of your chair and go the nearest window. That is if you have a window. If you can't find a window then make one. When you find this window look out of it, at the people, the trees, the animals, the buildings. And discover your answer.
GEMINI- Lucky you may be. A woman today, lay eyes and heart on you she will. Screw it up you might. Lest care you treat her with and goddess you make her feel like.
CANCER- You are a poison in the locker room. You're not a team player. You put "me" before "we," so get with the program. Unless of course you're on your own, then by all means rock on.
LEO- What begins swift is likely to end swiftly as well. If this sounds like something out of a fortune cookie, it is.
VIRGO- The Dark side I sense in you.
LIBRA- Now is the time to proceed with extra caution.
SCORPIO- Look at your television. Is it on? It should be on. If it is not on, you are falling behind. Now move to your computer. You know what to do.

ALL STAFF MEETING AT 6PM ON THURSDAY IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT!

BE THERE OR WE'LL STOP THE CROSSWORD PUZZLES!

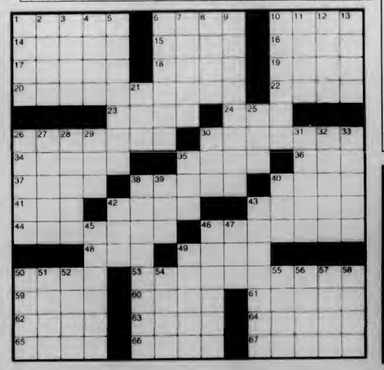
Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Six Bean Soup
Chicken Fricassee
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Curried Vegetables (vegan)

DINNER
Six Bean Soup
Grilled Pork Chops
Turkey Divan
Grilled Portabella Mushrooms Steaks (vegan)
Vegan Stuffed Shells

Today's Staff
Matthew F. Sacco
Tina Gualberto
Glenn Straub
Mike Kulak
Scott Cirusc
Jolene Rousseau
Shannon Farrington

www.dailycollegian
risingsophomore.com



ACROSS
1 Dirt
6 Practice boxing
10 — ale: bar order
14 Mall for Pinto
15 Engage 16 PDQ's kin
17 Yellowish pink
18 Sir — Guinness
19 Grant territory
20 Baseball feat
21 Comedian Danny
23 Fiesta shouts
24 Mediocre grade
26 Punk hairdos
30 Exulted (in)
34 Signs of the future
35 "How've ya —?"
36 Investor's Farmer —
37 Boathouse gear
38 Chimneys
40 Volcano's output
41 Greek letter
42 Lasher
43 Slair in Orion
44 Tot's "beach"
45 Most profound
46 Sense of humor
48 — lang syne
50 Blouse part
53 Indoor antenna
59 Like eggs
60 Moby Dick's foe
61 Seaweeds
62 Respiratory organ
63 Sheepfold
64 Braid
65 March 15, in Rome
66 Leered at 67 Norsemen

DOWN
1 Statistic
2 Frankenstein's gofer
3 Patty of "Tank Girl"
4 Snare
5 Reveres
6 Forms
7 Bothersome people
8 Domain
9 Uses again
10 Green Bay player
11 On the briny
12 Female
13 Fencing sword
21 Forest grazer
25 Lo-ng time
26 Heaths
27 Cornhusker city
28 "Great blue" bird
29 Ques comeback
30 "Wow!"
31 Picture
32 Roof overhangs
33 Handed out, as cards
35 Hobo
36 10K, e.g.
39 Permissive
40 Mouth part
42 "Most Wanted" org.
43 Bureaucrat's delight
45 Resides
46 Added to a sound track
47 Bulldogs' fan
49 Subside
50 — Sierra
51 Roman poet
52 Garden green
54 Mariner's hello
55 Ms. Fitzgerald
56 Petri-dish contents
57 Train a need
58 Mounts gems

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	O	S	E	S		F	E	A	T		R	A	F	T
A	G	I	L	E		E	R	N	E		E	R	L	E
L	A	M	A		B	I	T	E		P	O	O	R
L	E	M	O	N	S		C	I	N	N	A	M	O	N
			C	P	A		L	A	S	A	R
S	H	U	T	E	Y	E		G	E	T
T	O	T	E	S		S	H	I	E	L	D	A	D
A	L	E	X		R	O	U	N	D		F	U	J	I
R	E	S	T		L	A	P	E	L		J	A	P	A
			A	I	L			E	R	A	S	E	R	S
	B	A	Z	A	A	R		T	O	N
T	O	M	O	R	R	O	W		M	I	A	S	M	A
E	W	E	R		I	D	E	A		T	U	L	I	P
L	I	N	E		E	E	L	S		O	R	A	T	E
L	E	S	S		S	O	D	A		R	A	C	E	D

10-9-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR, JIM PIGNATIELLO

Anthea and Jimmy Rudd, joined by Chancellor John Lombardi, were the recipients of the building of Rudd Field.

Rudd Field dedication highlights weekend

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's soccer team might have dropped both of its games for the opening at Rudd Field, but that didn't make the event any less of success.

Over 1,500 people were on hand to witness Sunday afternoon's match with Boston University and the celebration that preceded it. Athletic Director Dan McCaw, Chancellor John Lombardi, several other members of the Athletic Department and the Rudd family were all present to commemorate the first weekend at the new complex.

Lombardi brought a laugh to the crowd, saying "I get to inherit this wonderful achievement and I didn't have to do anything to inherit it."

He continued by asking the crowd to envision the completion of Rudd Field down the road when more funds are raised for the project.

"I want all of us to imagine the expanded stands, the lights, the other facilities that will be built on the same pattern that the Rudd foundation has established for us," Lombardi said. He urged the fans to make a small contribution to the project, stating that a small gift can grow bigger and bigger until it becomes a gorgeous new facility.

Andrew and Jimmy Rudd, trustees of the Rudd Foundation and parents of senior Minutewoman Alexi Rudd, addressed those in attendance next. The generous $500,000 gift from the foundation, coupled with the fundraising efforts of the University, made the new complex possible.

"The foundation is organized to aid various academic initiatives and youth athletics," Andrew Rudd said. "This project is a good example of the sort of things we'd like to be involved in.

"About a year ago, we made a challenge to the university to be the catalyst to help build a first-class facility on the campus," he continued. The UMass Athletic Fund was able to raise an additional $200,000 in order to finance the project, the first athletic facility at UMass to be completely funded by outside resources.

The Rudds were presented with commemorative shovels as a gift

Turn to RUDD, page 9

A disappointing debut

Minutewomen drop first two at new venue

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

The new pitch was in gorgeous condition, the weather was beautiful, and a large legion of fans was in force for the opening of Rudd Field this weekend. The only things missing for the Massachusetts women's soccer team were wins in the standings.

BU	3
UMass	2
URI	5
UMass	0

With emotions running high, the Minutewomen couldn't generate enough offensive production to pick up their first victory of the season, dropping a pair of games to Rhode Island and Boston University. UMass rebounded from Friday's disappointing 5-0 thrashing at the hands of the Rams and were poised to knock off its in-state rival, but BU's late goal catapulted the Terriers to a 3-2 win, sending 1,552 UMass fans home disappointed.

"We did better, but the second half showed that we played Friday and they hadn't," said Head Coach Jim Rudy about his team's improved performance against the Terriers.

UMass hung tough against the two-time defending America East champions, but Tiffany Chag's blast at 71:30 high over helpless Maroon and White netminder Kelly Nigh broke the 2-2 deadlock and quieted the Rudd Field contingent. The Minutewomen had an opportunity to put home the equalizer when junior forward Erin Lilly split a pair of Terrier defenders, but Lindsey Bellini couldn't convert Lilly's feed into the goal.

"We gave it the best we could, but you could definitely see the fitness factor," Rudy said.

UMass was finally able to dent the scoreboard, however, as sophomore Erica Wideberg broke the goal line with a sensational individual effort. Wideberg streaked down the right side, blew past the BU defenders and threaded a bullet into the left side of the net, sending the Minutewomen into a frenzy near the crease. It was the first goal in the history of Rudd Field, as well as the first tally of the Maroon and White's young campaign.

"It was pretty exciting," Wilderberg said. "It felt like a weight was lifted after I scored."

"We didn't want to get shut out three games in a row, so it was nice to get that first goal," Rudy said. "It was a product of stick-to-itiveness and hard work."

The celebration was short-lived, however, as the Terriers quickly jumped in front 2-1 on a pair of twine-tinglers from Rebecca Beyer and Meghann Cook 40 seconds apart. BU seemed ready to grab all the momentum heading into the break. Thirty-one seconds later, however, captain Martha Conover caught Terrier goalkeeper Jessica Clinton out of position, and put home Alexi Rudd's assist into the empty net at 43:08 to energize the home crowd and the Maroon and White bench.

UMass was also unable to fully prepare for its Bay State foe, as a potential scouting video sent in from BU's last opponent turned out to be a worthless VHS.

"We had a videotape coming to us from Kansas, and it's 240 minutes of sitcoms, none of which I enjoy," Rudy said.

The Terriers had the advantage in both total shots (34-26) and shots on goal (13-8) for the match.

Despite the loss, UMass put forth its best performance of the season against BU, and seemed to put aside the emotional rollercoaster it rode Friday. Before the Rams knocked off the Minutewomen, a small ceremony was held in honor of former teammate Stephanie Santos.

Possibly affected by the pre-game memorial, UMass couldn't mount a sustained attack against URI, as it spent most of the first half in its own end. However, the Minutewomen were able to keep the game scoreless until the 30:41 mark, when Rhode Island's Trisha Hewitt headed in a Sarah Johnston centering pass to give the Rams a 1-0 lead at halftime.

The Maroon and White came out of the break passionately and looked ready to get back into the game, but Melanie Kasparek killed all thoughts of a rally when she blasted a shot top shelf at 46:36 to crush the spirits of the home team.

"That definitely hurt us because we opened up well the second half," Rudy said. "We opened aggressive, and looked like we were going to get at it."

URI tacked on three more goals to seal the blowout win. Kasparek finished with two markers, while Johnston contributed a goal and two helpers for the Rams. Nigh finished with a career-high 16 saves, as she was peppered all afternoon.

"I think Friday was the worst we'll ever play the entire season," Lilly said. "It's good to get it out now."

The young Minutewoman team has also not gained its collective health, as ailments have plagued Rudy's squad since the preseason.

"We're still juggling injuries. I think I've subbed more in two games than I did all last year," the 15th year coach said.

UMass was dealt another blow as freshman defender Amy Maffucci went down with a left ankle injury late in the second half.

Still, through all the inexperience, all the health issues, and all the emotions that have influenced their play, the Minutewomen are focused to take a step in the right direction.

"I think we still have some work to do, but I think we're going to come into our play pretty soon," Wideberg said.

GERALD LYNCH/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Lindsey Bellini and her teammates couldn't quite squeeze out a victory on Sunday, falling 3-2 in a nailbiter with BU.

UMass gets schooled in voyage to Boston

Seniors Jeff Deren (left) and Derek Rhodes (right) teamed up for UMass' lone goal in a 3-1 loss to BU.

Chin's first goal a winner for Terriers

By Andrew Merritt
Collegian Staff

Any trip into the academic hotbed found within the city limits of Boston is expected to bring a lot of education. The Massachusetts men's soccer team found that quite true Friday, when it dropped its game to Boston University, 3-1.

As much as the Minutemen (1-2) learned about the Terriers Friday night at Nickerson field, they learned a lot more about themselves. Specifically, that the whole team, but especially the defense, has to improve before heading into the Atlantic 10 season, which starts Friday, Oct. 4 with a matchup against Xavier.

Terrier freshman Sedrick Chin was the star of the evening, scoring the winning goal for BU, his first collegiate score, on a nifty cross play from senior David Fahey at 68:02. Chin also assisted on the Terriers' first goal.

Chin's assist came on a fluke deflection from Alan McNamara, which had UMass starting goaltender Enzo Altomare stuck leaning the wrong way.

The Minutemen finally struck back when senior Jeff Deren received a beautiful long cross from senior Andrew Eicher, stationed just inside the half line. Deren took the cross, and popped it over the head of Terrier keeper Matt Smith at the 69-minute mark.

It wouldn't be enough, however, as the Minutemen failed to put the ball in the net again, and the Terriers sealed the deal with a goal from senior E.A. Carr with 2:07 remaining. Chin added his second assist of the night on a play similar to the one that gave BU its second goal, a cross that found its target with a gaping net.

The Minutemen were left walking off of Nickerson's new FieldTurf pitch with a heavy loss to carry home, and many questions to answer before Friday's clash with Iona at Rudd field.

"I don't think anyone had a strong game," senior tri-captain Jeff Deren said. "We got caught ball-watching a lot, we were letting people roam on the back post, and we just didn't get the job done that we needed to get done."

The UMass defense was certainly the most glaring weakness on the field against BU, but there were mistakes happening everywhere, many that led to excellent scoring chances for the Terriers.

"We have to be a stronger team defensively all over the field," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "We weren't tight on our marks, we weren't organized as well as we need to be, we let people run through, which we can't do."

There were some positives, however, including a few well-placed balls that led to good scoring chances for the Minutemen, but the Terrier defense – a five-man, smothering style which frustrated the Minutemen forwards and attacking midfielders all game – kept all but Deren's attack from getting close enough to really test the Terrier net.

Still, Koch's crew will have much to work on in the coming days.

"I think we just need a little more time to come together as a team," Deren said. "We're three games into the year, and we need to get used to playing with each other. Last year's squad, we all worked together so well, we were pretty confident that no one could beat us, and nothing could happen. We just need a little time for us to come together like that."

One would think that the Minutemen, who have

Turn to SCHOOLED, page 9

ANTHONY NEE[illegible]ING
ARTS PAGE 5.

REMEMBERING.
ED/OP PAGE 4.

[illegible]FD
12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEDNESDAY ISSUE SIX 9.11.02

Ground Zero: reflecting on a year past

Observations on Ground Zero on the one year anniversary of 9-11's terrorist attacks

By Jamie Loo
Collegian Staff

Collegian staff member Jamie Loo visited Ground Zero on August 21—exactly 3 weeks to the date of the first anniversary.

It's New York City. The streets are bustling as usual as if nothing had happened.

Some cars have American flags. The city isn't draped in red, white, and blue but evidence remains that New Yorkers have not forgotten. Along the stretch of Second Avenue, a few businesses on each block still display flags. The occasional car passes by with the stars and stripes waving off an antenna or on a sticker.

The merchandise of storefront vendors in Chinatown and on the street has changed. Proudly on display at the front of their tables are snow globes, photographs, key chains and other souvenirs depicting the Twin Towers. A few small figurines of the Statue of Liberty, and tiny Empire State Buildings collect dust behind them. The Twin Towers also dominate the postcard stands.

Turning off of Canal Street and onto Broadway, the street looks eerily familiar. Even if you had never been to New York City before, this end of Broadway and the surrounding streets are images painted in our minds covered with dust and ashes from the fallen towers. Ground Zero is only a few blocks away, but you would never know it from walking up the street. New Yorkers are carrying on with their business, chatting on cell phones and hailing cabs.

About 200 yards away is a long line of people, two to three people thick, stretching around the block. There are a few hundred of them fidgeting in business suits and dresses, listening to a few uniformed men yell various directions at them. This line outside of the Jacob J. Javits Federal building turns into several smaller lines, winding around metal dividers. A sign with bold, red capital letters above the door says, "UNEMPLOYMENT LINE STARTS HERE." It's a year later, and yet the numbers of the unemployed continues to grow. I'm told later that not everyone can be processed in one day; many have to return to the line the next day. There are job fairs held every few months, but it doesn't alleviate the hundreds unemployed as a result of 9/11 and a down economy.

There are police everywhere around the building, continuing for at least two blocks of Broadway. Officers eye every move of people passing by, and no vehicles are allowed on the side streets around the building. Approaching the outside of City Hall, there are several people dressed in red smocks, handing out fliers. Up ahead are two banners, mounted on PVC piping that read "PRAYER STATION."

"We're here to let the people of New York City know that it's not just New York City that's grieving, but the entire nation," Dolores Gemmil said.

Gemmil is from the Morning Star Christian Chapel in Whittier, California. Thirty

Turn to GROUND ZERO, page 3

Goat head found in sink

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Coolidge Dormitory residents found a severed, sklnned goat's head in the central 14th floor women's bathroom sink Sunday night. Those responsible for the action are unknown.

"It was a shaved head, eyeballs and all," resident Chantelle Frechette said. "I saw some strange people on the floor. The floor went crazy [when it was found] and I walked in and saw the head in the sink. It was gross, just sitting in the sink."

A female resident walked into the bathroom sometime after 8 p.m. and saw the head sitting in the middle sink in the bathroom. She notified her resident assistant, who called the University of Massachusetts Police Department at 9:13 p.m.

An officer arrived on the scene shortly thereafter to bag and remove the head for destruction. "There were cops and stuff bagging up the head," another resident, Erin Glynn, said.

"Where do you even get something like that?" he said.

Several residents mentioned that there were strange men on the floor not long before the incident, but it is unknown if they are the parties responsible for it. "I saw some shady guy walk by, but I don't even know if it was him," resident Danielle Angus said. "It wasn't anyone on our floor because that's disgusting."

"I saw some strange people on the floor, but I'm not even sure if they had anything to do with it," Frechette said.

Residents were shaken up by the incident, according to Angus. "We were all flustered, but we're doing okay," she said.

Resident assistants and resident directors offered no comment, referring statements to Ron Trunzo, the Southwest area director. "A student found it in the bathroom and reported it to the RA, who reported it to police. That's all we really know right now."

UMass police spokespeople could not be reached for comment.

One man's fight to fly the American flag for Amherst and restore a town reputation

By Miriam Godfrey
Collegian Correspondent

It was an untimely action.

Last September, Roderick A. Raubeson, a 59-year-old former Marine, head of Amherst Veteran Services and the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, purchased 29 American flags for the town of Amherst. They were originally meant to stay up through Veterans Day; however, shortly after they were raised, complaints began to trickle into the office of Town Manager Barry L. Del Castilho. Following Labor Day, Castilho ordered the flags be taken down pending a public debate and a decision by the five-member select board on Sept. 10, 2001. Over 50 people showed up to voice their opinions to the board.

"Flying so many flags every day made it like part of the scenery and eroded their meaning," said one citizen.

The board voted four to one that the commemorative flags should be reserved for six days: Patriots' Day, the graduation-Memorial Day weekend, Flag Day to Bunker Hill Day, July 4, Labor Day and Veterans Day. However, 12 hours later, after the terrorist attacks, the flags were emphatically re-displayed and the board's vote was clouded amid the confusion. Though seeming to forget the outcome of the vote, many people did remember one remark from the meeting held the previous night.

"What the flag is, is a symbol of terrorism and death and fear and destruction and oppression," said Jennie Traschen, a UMass physics professor. An Amherst resident, Traschen attended the meeting to add to the flag discussion. At the meeting, she urged for more spending on education and health care for veterans rather than spending money on flags. Traschen attended anti-war protests as a child with her father, a World War II veteran, during the Vietnam War. He taught her that the flag stood for free speech.

It was an untimely comment; picked up by The Wall Street Journal, CNN, The Washington Post, and other media networks. Traschen says "there's been a level of repercussion that was totally unanticipated."

Critics published her email address, phone number, and home address; she was bombarded by threats, obscenities, and profanities. According to the Wall Street Journal, one letter read, "These Marxist traitors should be hanged with piano wire and left to rot in the sun."

Traschen affirms that she was referring to the U.S. military policy that often brings torture and death. "To many, many ordinary people in countries around the globe, the U.S. has done terrifying things," she declares, "if I think about the flag I have to think about it from the point of view of these people."

Raubeson said he appreciates her opinion, but said that "when you speak your mind like that you must be pre-

Turn to FLAG, page 3

"War without end" presentation held in Campus Center

Kristina Olsen, sister of Flight 11 victim Laurie Neira and member of 9-11 Families for Peaceful Tomorrows, sang and spoke about her experience at home and with Afghani victims of U.S. bombing.

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Issues surrounding the United States government's lack of information about September 11, and the war on terrorism were a few of the many subjects discussed in an open presentation yesterday.

The event, "Unanswered Questions about the 'War Without End'," took place in the Campus Center Auditorium yesterday, drawing in faculty, students and members of the Amherst community.

John Pepi of the Connecticut River Valley Greens organization headed the event, which was sponsored by the Graduate Employees Organization (GEO), Traprock Peace Center and the Connecticut River Valley Green Party.

"There is a dearth of concern and a lot of questions that need to be asked that have not been covered by the mass media," Pepi said. "So many bits and pieces of the how the government handled information prior to 9/11 have been said, but not the whole picture."

A variety of speakers were on hand to discuss their thoughts on the war on terrorism and their opinions of the failures of the American government. Kristina Olsen, sister of American Airlines Flight 11 victim Laurie Neira and member of 9-11 Families for Peaceful Tomorrows, spoke and sang about her own experiences in Afghanistan since 9/11.

"Last year I had the opportunity to meet four of the core-founding family members of 9-11 Families for Peaceful Tomorrows in Washington D.C. at a peace rally last year," Olsen said. "I was later invited to go to Afghanistan in June, where I had the opportunity to met people and speak with families who had lost family members in many of the bombings."

Olsen continued by explaining how she had hopes that people will turn to real peace when looking at the government's reactions to Afghanistan.

"When the bombing started, I felt my sister's death to be meaningless in the eyes of the government," Olsen said. "I feel it's my responsibility to speak about this. We can all make a big difference and I will do everything in my power to prevent war myself."

Sunny Miller, Director of Traprock Peace Center, followed Olsen by reiterating the need to stop the war on Afghanistan, and encouraged the audience to get involved. Miller presented video footage of Scott Ritter, a former Chief U.N. Weapons Inspector in Iraq, explaining how the U.S. has set up American weapons inspectors.

"Ritter has taken an initiative and now we have someone on the inside and I invite you to consider to take the initiative and write letters and make phone calls to your Senators," Miller said. "The press has not talked about the abuse the U.N. weapons inspectors have faced, and we have the opportunity to get this information out."

Miller concluded her speech by signing up members of the audience to participate in local anti-war events as well as taking ideas on how to stop the war in Afghanistan.

"We still stop this war if you really want to, and we will stop it," Miller said.

Kyle Hence, co-founder of UnansweredQuestions.Org was the final speaker of the evening. Hence explained how these "unanswered questions" can affect the United States.

"There are so many questions that are of a great concern to me and these unanswered questions are a threat to the Bill of Rights and our Constitution," Hence said. "We've barely touched the service of what really happened, and there's a lot of skepticism on behalf of the government. I believe we've been lied to and deceived."

The event concluded with an informational video, "The Great Deception: The War on Terrorism – An Alternative View."

Diversity Calendar

September 11 - September 15

Wednesday-

Event of the Week: Amherst College is sponsoring an interfaith memorial service in honor of those lost in the events of September 11. The Five College community is welcome to attend the services in Johnson Chapel at 4:00 p.m.

The University of Massachusetts is holding events in honor of September 11 in the Student Union Ballroom at 6:45 pm. Events begin with a string quartet and the ringing of the Old Chapel bell. Chancellor John Lombardi will speak at 7:05 p.m. A gathering will be held at 7:50 p.m. for students who wish to reflect upon the events of September 11.

The Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies is sponsoring a faculty symposium, "September 11 and its Aftermath," at Hampshire College from 7:00 to 10:00 p.m. The symposium is being held in the main lecture hall of Franklin Patterson Hall.

The Korean Student Association is holding its first meeting at 8:00 p.m. in the Campus Center. All students are invited.

Thursday-

The Campus Crusade for Christ is holding a "Real Life" meeting in the Campus Center at 8:00 p.m. "Real Life" is the organization's weekly meeting.

The Graduate ALANAA and International Caucus are holding a meeting in the Dukes Room of the Student Union at 6:00 p.m.

The Stonewall Center invites all to a reception from 4 to 6 p.m. in Southwest. The Center will provide food and beverages.

The Hillel House invites students to movie and pizza night at 7:30 p.m. at the House.

The Office of ALANA Affairs, Black Mass Communications Project (BMCP) and the Black Student Union (BSU) is sponsoring a roller skating night at Interskate 91 in the Hampshire Mall from 8 to 11 p.m. Transportation is first come, first serve. Buses leave from the front of the Student Union at 7:50 p.m.

Friday-

The French Department is giving a talk at the Hallowell Center in Mount Holyoke College at 4:30 p.m. Refreshments will be served after the lecture.

The Black Student Union and Black Communications Project is sponsoring a Comedy Show, featuring Capone, Rob Stapleton and Kenny Williams from 8 to 11 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Tickets will be on sale at the Fine Arts Center Box Office. Admission is $5.

Check out folk performances at the Dickinson Dormitory Patio at Mt. Holyoke College at 6:30 p.m. The concert will move inside in case of rain.

The Five Colleges are sponsoring a Yusef Lateef Tribute Concert at Bowker Auditorium. The music starts at 7:30 p.m.

Saturday-

The Buddha Maitreya Study Group is hosting a lecture and reading at 7:00 p.m. at Smith College, Seelye 106. A Tibetan Buddhist nun will speak about how the mind works.

The Hillel House welcomes you to free hayadah candy and ice cream sundaes in the recreation room at 8:00 p.m.

The Black Mass Communications Project, is sponsoring the annual "Jeans 'n T-Shirts" Party from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. The event will be hosted by New York City's own Fame Fortune from POWER 105.5 FM. DJ Mad Kat and DJ Playtime will be spinning. Tickets are $5 for Five College students and $8 for general admission.

The Chabad House is holding Shabbos services at 10:00 a.m. Meals follow the services

Sunday-

Smith College presents a rare book exhibition about silks and textiles in the Books Art Gallery on the second floor of the Neilson Library.

Yom Kippur events begin tonight. Get in one last meal before you fast at 5:15 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the UMass Student Union.

Conservative Yom Kippur services begin tonight in the Cape Cod Lounge in the Student Union at 6:15 p.m. Liberal services begin at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. A discussion follows the services. Candles will be lit at 6:40 p.m. at the Chabad House in Amherst.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Index Tyle. Became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Bi-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broad-sheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

THE BOLTWOOD
PROJECT™
(32 years of service—and counting!)
A STUDENT / COMMUNITY SERVICE LEARNING PROGRAM
(an RSO and Dept. of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning sponsored prog.)

REACH OUT—AND BECOME A SPECIAL FRIEND TO PEOPLE WITH SPECIAL NEEDS
Your life will NEVER be the same!

EARN 1–2 CREDITS
GAIN VALUABLE EXPERIENCE
REWARDING, CHALLENGING, and FUN

Fall Semester 2002 — Recruitment Nights
You must attend ONE of these meetings. No exceptions, even if you have participated before!
6:00-8:00 PM (Note: Prompt starting time!!!)
Room 163C of the Campus Center for all meetings •Sept. 9 (Mon) •Sept. 10 (Tues) •Sept. 11 (Wed)
•Assignment notification ONLY: Thurs. Sept. 12th @ Boltwood table CC Concourse
No telephone inquiries. YOU (or a friend) must pick up the notification letter!!!
Volunteer, while earning credit!

Srutilaya
presents
The Silken Bow
An Indian Classical Music Concert By LALGUDI G.J.R. KRISHNAN
Accompanied by
Sri K.V Prasad on Mridangam
& Sri Vaidyanathan Suresh on Ghatam
Thursday, September 12, 2002 at 6:30 PM
Campus Center Auditorium,
UMass Amherst, MA
Tickets: Students - $4, General - $7
For tickets and information please contact:
Viswesh (413) 549-8977, Ayappan (413) 549-5881
http://listen.to/srutilaya
Event is made possible in part by a grant each from the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund and the UMass Arts Council.

■ Ground Zero

continued from page 1

members of her church were there on a weeklong mission trip to pray for the citizens of New York City. Three prayer stations were set up throughout the area including one outside of Ground Zero.

"As soon as the events of September 11 happened, so many people in our church wanted to come here and give support to the people of New York City," Gemmil said.

When asked about the reactions New Yorkers have had to her group, Gemmil said, "It has run the gamut.

"There are lots of people just walking up to us looking for prayer. There are people that are really hurting."

Gemmil said she has been approached by atheists and other angry New Yorkers who have used "colorful language" to tell them that they shouldn't be there.

"Many people are glad we're here but it seems that most New Yorkers don't want us here. It's still awesome to be here though."

Gemmil said she believed the site should be rebuilt as both an economic area with space for a memorial, until she got to the city. Gemmil said she spoke to many people who felt the same, but one woman in particular changed her mind.

"I talked to a woman whose son died in one of the towers. They never found her son. It's unthinkable to her to rebuild. It's almost sacred ground," Gemmil said.

Gemmil now thinks the site should become purely a memorial. She said that rebuilding might offend a lot of people, especially to those who lost loved ones like the woman she spoke with.

Up ahead the first makeshift memorial can be seen on the fence around St. Paul's Church. The 235-year-old church stands next to Ground Zero, and was barely damaged by the blast on September 11.

"Oh my God, take them all down," an old woman yells as she hurries by the church, shaking her head.

Several passers-by look at her in disgust and turn back to the fence gently touching the flags, photos and other objects. Stuffed animals wearing NYPD and FDNY T-shirts gaze sadly down at the tourists. Many of the mementos left are from people that have made pilgrimages to the site. There are flags covered with signatures, T-shirts from schools, fire departments, and police departments. Photographs of people lost also hang on the fence, with poems, notes and various other tributes. "Happy 24th Birthday..." one reads, with notes from friends and family. That birthday isn't the only one remembered on the fence.

"It's very emotional...touching," Joann Restrepo said, her voice trailing off as she gazed at the wall.

Restrepo lived in New York for thirty-three years, but now lives in Houston, Texas. Restrepo was in the area visiting family and wanted to see Ground Zero to be close to the tragedy. As a former New Yorker, Restrepo said she feels a very personal connection to the area. The World Trade Center was a landmark that she used to pass on her way to work. Restrepo said that the site should be rebuilt, however not in the same way it was before.

"It wouldn't seem right to duplicate what was there. You do have to go on, there should be some sort of rebuilding."

Also marveling at the memorial was Armand Lavoie who said he felt, "lost and helpless. I think most feel that way here."

Lavoie, a former Massachusetts resident, now lives in Trenton, N.J. He took the day off from work and came with his family just to see Ground Zero.

"I decided to come to take it in before the first anniversary."

It was his first trip to the city since the tragedy, and felt drawn to it.

"This is the most real experience I will have with this tragedy. My destiny, I suppose. It's my visit with a historical moment, or whatever you want to call it."

Lavoie believes that Ground Zero should be rebuilt with office space.

"I would like to see four office buildings connected," he said, "with the middle square as a memorial site."

Lavoie, an engineer, said that when the Twin Towers were first built many people thought it was ugly. From what he saw of the first six plans he believed they lacked imagination.

"If I were an architect I would jump on the chance to design something creative, imaginative," he said. "Part of the tragedy is that there isn't a good idea yet. That's unfortunate."

Around the corner the memorial stretches on every side of the fence. In the distance there is a crane reaching up into the sky and a huge patch of empty blue sky. It's Ground Zero. The area is surrounded by fences, covered in green mesh. Hundreds of people follow the fence, peering through random holes in the fabric. They are speaking many different languages, and most are armed with cameras and maps. The green mesh ends abruptly, and with it the chatter of tourists. Many press toward the chain-link fence silently, some speak in hushed whispers as they gaze at the expanse of Ground Zero.

In her 30 years working in the news industry, producer Valerie Zizza said she has never seen so many people intensely interested in coming to the site of a tragedy.

"Not only from New York but all over the country and all over the world," she said.

Zizza is a producer for the European Union Economic Commission. She works mainly with broadcast operations. Since the tragedy, Zizza said she drove by many times but hadn't actually stopped and been so close to the site. As a producer she said being there was particularly poignant and somewhat uncomfortable.

"We're so used to seeing so many horrific scenes. But when you think of it, it's horrible to think of so many people dying."

When asked her what she thought about the tourists she said that she feels that there is "earnest in their concern and their sadness."

Zizza said that the site should be rebuilt as both a memorial and an office space. She said that they shouldn't try to recreate the buildings, especially another tall building. In addition to rebuilding she strongly believes in a memorial at the site for the workers, firefighters, police officers, and victims of 9/11.

Michael Smith, from Brooklyn, N.Y., said he's too young to have ever been to war but that being at Ground Zero seemed comparable.

"It was like going to war. I consider this my war patch right here," Smith said.

Smith is a construction worker who has been at Ground Zero since day one. You can see in his sad, clear blue eyes that his experience has been incredibly emotional and that it's tough work. The day he stepped foot on Ground Zero was surreal, walking among the debris with the heavy cloud still in the air. He was also there for the removal of the last beam and for the last remains found. According to Smith, the progress on Ground Zero has been pretty good, and that they're four to five months ahead of schedule.

Smith said he talks to a lot of tourists who pass by. Many of them ask the same questions about the towers and his work.

"After they [the tourists] ask the questions many people thank us for the work that we're doing. That helps us a lot."

Smith has met tourists from all over the world including places such as England, Germany, the Philippines, Singapore, Australia, and Brazil. Most say they are here to pay their respects right at Ground Zero. Contrary to Zizza, Smith said the site should be rebuilt with something as high or close to the height of the Twin Towers.

"If we wimp out and build something like 50 stories, it's like we're chicken. It shows them that we've lost and we certainly haven't."

Smith said that it should be half business and half memorial, because business does need to come back to the downtown area. "A few acres should do it for both."

On my way back by St. Paul's, I stop to talk to Carmen Reyes and her husband Luciano. They are street vendors outside of St. Paul's Church. Today is a slow business day for their table, which sells clothing with FDNY and NYPD logos among other memorabilia. Reyes says tourists are buying a ton of 9/11 memorabilia, and the highest sales are from American tourists, who she thinks feel more closely touched by the incident. She said that they've all been very concerned, and many are here to pay respects and some are there out of sheer curiosity.

"A lot of people come are praying around this area. They get very emotional as they go along the wall."

She said there has been a good response from tourists and New Yorkers to the street vendors. Reyes estimates that about one out of 10 people are openly angry about the merchandise, saying that it's "making profit out of misery." The tragedy hit everyone hard and really made New Yorkers, who according to Reyes are normally cold and unfriendly, incredibly close.

"For us to come out as the number one most courteous state in the country is unbelievable. It showed how we really came together. Everyone is so nice."

Reyes said this feeling carries over to the present day, almost a year later. She said she believes it will increase as we draw closer to the first anniversary, reminding New Yorkers of the tragedy.

"It's an open wound. It takes more than a year for people to heal."

Reyes said she believes the site should be rebuilt with both office space and a memorial. She concluded that it's a huge piece of land for a memorial, and more business needs to come downtown. If they didn't rebuild, she said, it would be like admitting a sort of defeat.

"We have to show these people that we're better. We're not going to stay down. That in itself would be a memorial to those who died."

As I walk away from Ground Zero, New Yorkers continue with their business. They're hurrying to their next destination, sitting outside on benches enjoying the last few days of summer. Hailing cabs, talking on cell phones.

Although the metropolis that is New York has begun to recover, moving day to day as if nothing happened, looking closer it becomes apparent that something did happen here, a year ago. And when you walk by and look New Yorkers in the eye, you can sense that no one has forgotten. New Yorkers and the rest of the world will never forget.

Drive for bone marrow

Three bone marrow drives will be held today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in remembrance of those lives lost on September 11, 2001.

The United States Postal Service, Springfield District has sponsored the drive in correlation with the Jimmy Fund and The Human Leukocyte Antigens (HLA) Registry Foundation. The free bone marrow testing is taking place at the Springfield Post Office on Main Street, the Amherst Post Office on University Drive and the Holyoke Ingleside Station.

"The Drive will give people the opportunity to save a life. Many people are looking for something to do to honor the 9/11 victims to express themselves. This is a great way to counter the loss of life and for many, a chance to save a life," said Domenic Battista, a Postal Service employee and HLA event organizer.

Battista further explained that she hopes that the public will consider donating bone marrow and possibly becoming a part of the bone marrow bank. Over the past five years the Postal Service, Jimmy Fund and HLA have tested over 15,000 individuals and harvested matching bone marrow from over 40 people.

More than 60 potentially fatal diseases, including several types of leukemia, are treated with unrelated narrow transplants. Eight thousand new cases will be reported this year alone. The test requires two milliliters of blood to be taken from the finger to see if one is eligible to be a donor.

"With less than 50 percent of patients finding donors, our involvement is an excellent opportunity to increase the number of volunteers in the donor banks and hopefully save some lives," Battista said. "It's great to have an opportunity to be part of a program that will save a life in the future. It's also nice to be able to do this to honor the 9/11 victims."

Information provided by the 9/11 Bone Marrow Drive. For more information call (413) 731-0299.

-Kristin Shrewsbury write for news

Fulbright grant

University of Massachusetts Associate Professor of Communication Disorders, Mary V. Andrianopoulos, received a Fulbright Grant to teach and conduct research at the University of Athens in Greece during the 2002 academic year.

According to Andrianopoulos, she will be teaching a course that she developed at UMass, in the University of Athens' Department of Cognitive Science.

In addition to teaching, Andrianopoulos says she will be conducting research into the use of objective measurements to determine the relationship of perceptual features and differential representations of acoustic signals with Stella Vosniadou, who chairs the Department of Cognitive Science.

"Since my training and area of expertise as an academician and research scientist in the U.S. are highly specialized," Andrianopoulos explained, "I will have the opportunity to contribute to the mission of the basic and applied science program at the University of Athens with respect to training graduate students, to improve the competitiveness of the Greek scientific workforce in European and international communities."

The Department of Cognitive Science is an interdisciplinary program that includes faculty and researchers in the fields of psychiatry, neurology, psychology, cognitive science, education, signal processing, the humanities and computer science, Andrianopoulos said.

She specializes in clinical voice disorders and differential diagnosis of speech and language disorders.

Andrianopoulos earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Vermont in 1979 and a master's degree and a doctorate from the University of Utah in 1985 and 1988, respectively. From 1990-92, she served as an adjunct faculty member at Harvard University's Medical Residency Programs in Otolaryngology and Neurology.

The Fulbright Grant, which was established in 1946, was named after the late U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright of Arkansas.

-Amy O'Neil

■ flag

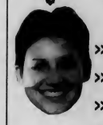
continued from page 1

pared to deal with the consequences."

To Traschen, the consequences mean "people are going to have a much harder time speaking their mind in this community."

Larry Kelly has a personal passion to repair the reputation of Amherst. Kelly, a town representative and fifth-generation resident of Amherst, took action to dispel rumors that Amherst supported the terrorist attacks that took place on Sept. 11. Reports rang through the nation that the town ordered all flags to be removed on the same day the towers fell.

Following the events of Sept. 11, Kelly contacted Mayor Rudy Giuliani for help to realize the vision that would fill the void he felt.



"To have [a town of Amherst-owned American flag] unfurled over Ground Zero will make us proud, help us heal and remind everyone about the price of freedom," pleaded Kelly.

On December 1, 2001, Kelly proudly paraded the Amherst flag over Ground Zero in New York City. Governor Jane Swift, Senator John Kennedy, Congressman John Oliver, and Jane Garvey, the head of the Federal Aviation Association on Sept. 11, have all signed the photograph of Kelly with the flag at Ground Zero. Kelly hopes to acquire President George W. Bush's signature as well. Following its trip to Ground Zero, the Amherst flag flew above the Capitol in Washington D.C., the State Capitol in Boston, and in Amherst during the July 4 parade. The flag rode on the Amherst Legion Post's 123 Twin Tower Float, which was created by Kevin Joy and Dale Barton.

The float was illuminated yesterday on the Amherst Center Town Commons from 8:30 p.m. to 4:00 a.m. Following the traditional Irish custom for wakes – which requires mourners to continuously accompany the dead – Kelly and fellow Commemoration Committee member Kevin Joy will stand guard with the towers until the break of dawn. This morning the float journeyed from Sheldon Field in Northampton, over the Coolidge Bridge, through Hadley, and arrived at Amherst Town Commons around 8:15 a.m. State police motorcycles, Amherst police motorcycles, and cruisers from other respective jurisdictions accompanied the float on its eight-mile route. Moments of silence were observed at 8:50 a.m., 9:03 a.m., 9:43 a.m., and 10:00 a.m., the times when each of the planes crashed.

The Yankee Candle Co. donated 3,000 twelve-inch candles to kindle the evening ceremonies on the Commons that begin at 8:30 p.m. The total number of lights will be slightly larger, creating a wall of luminescence, as each candle represents one life that was extinguished during the attacks. Kelly himself has labored over 12 hours in labeling each candle with the name (nickname if available), age, and hometown of each victim. Kelly feels this will help honor the lives that were lost.

SMART UMASS STUDENTS GET THEIR COURSE BOOKS AT THE
JEFFERY AMHERST COLLEGE STORE

»Longer, More convenient hours
»No hassle
»Quicker shopping-No long lines
»More Pleasant Shopping Environment
»Support a local independent business, not a national chain
»Keep your money in our community, not sent to Chicago Headquarters

WE CARRY ALMOST ALL UMASS COURSES

RUSH HOURS: SUNDAY, SEPT. 1 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT. 2 8:30AM-6PM
TUESDAY-THURSDAY, SEPT. 3-5 8:30AM-8PM
FRIDAY-SATURDAY, SEPT. 6-7 8:30AM-6PM
SUNDAY, SEPT. 8 12-5PM
MONDAY, SEPT 9 8:30AM-8PM

Jeffery Amherst
College Store
(Behind the Jeffery Amherst Bookshop)
26 S. Prospect St. Amherst
253-7816 253-3870

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE FOO

America needs closure:

Turn off television

"Are you concerned about a terror attack on the anniversary of 9/11?" This is the poll question for Sept. 10 on CNN.com.

Who wouldn't be scared, or frightened, or at least wary of an imminent attack? With the way the media has been handling the anniversary of last year's terrorist attacks, it has been impossible to avoid coverage, difficult to read between the lines and challenging to go beyond the attacks that happened one year ago today.

There is new footage from Al Qaeda, dead dogs, urban warfare training and chemical compounds being mixed in desert labs. This week we have news of what Osama bin Laden was doing last September as the attacks took place.

What does this coverage achieve? Is there any information that we are getting now that is necessarily urgent? Perhaps. There is a news value to anything new on the whereabouts and the activities of "public enemy number one" bin Ladin. But that is only one facet of what the news media unloaded on us last week, this week and probably next week.

We are looking for a return to normalcy. President Bush has asked us to go about our lives little and time again, but he has been one of the television maintrays when it comes to "Post-9/11" coverage. How do we return to normalcy when every threat, every whisper in the wind about imminent attacks, potential threats and peculiar circumstances is run across the screen as breaking news?

We were warned to watch our crop dusters, and there weren't any major attacks on the cornfields of America. We were told that bridges might be in danger. One year later, the Golden Gate still stands. Reservoirs, nuclear power plants and the next-door neighbor have all been a part of what could be the next attack, the next act of terror, and we have gone one year unscathed.

Far be it for anyone to say there isn't a risk, a chance that something could happen. It is certainly a possibility and we would be pompous as a country to assume that we are impenetrable, but this wariness should come on our own terms.

Letting tragic events become an entry in our history books is an important part of moving on. Post-9/11 entertainment summaries, one-year-later looks at sports and "America Remembers" CNN specials do not help healing. They reopen wounds; they remind loved ones of loss, of hurt. Anyone who was able to understand the tragedies last September will remember them. We don't need to be reminded with every morning tooth brushing and every evening with friends.

The First Lady may have had the best suggestion. Turn off your TVs today. While her warning was for the children, it is a suggestion we may all want to take.

Let what happened join the annals of American history. It was tragic, no doubt. It was a day we all wish we could have never seen, certainly. But it has happened, and moving on is the next step.

Hopefully we will see a responsible media in the coming weeks. Hopefully tasteful coverage, not repetition of tragic footage, or sorrowful sound bites will be presented.

It has been a year; let us try and close this chapter of our history and move on. Personally, it can be difficult, but as a society we need to embrace it.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

American and scared

S.J. PORT

While traveling through southern Europe this summer, I encountered many majestic and enigmatic things. In agreeing to travel outside of one's home territory one accepts the loss of certain safe haven privileges, as well as certainties. Little did I imagine that the most troubling, pressing question most of those I encountered would have for me would concern the events of Sept. 11, 2001.

While crossing the Aegean Sea from Italy to Greece my travel companion and I hanged atop a majestic deck. Five stories above it, crashing waves surrounded us, nothing more than the meeting of turquoise and azure of the Mediterranean. Hemingway in hand, I worked on tan-accenting my New Englander pallor into a rebel brown.

Two stories below, in the gaming room, next to the discotheque but far enough from the pool that those uninterrupting CNN reports were not disturbed by the gay cries of children romping through the water, news began to spread that November 11 had struck once more.

Serene and confident we reentered the cabin for dinner. Walking through the cafeteria-style dining room, we chose a table close to the television, number 10 closer to absorb our daily dose of media. CNN being the units channel in English, we flipped there and began to eat.

Gathering up I saw the port we had left only hours before on the screen. My friend now became aware, and we watched as terrorism unfolded once more before our eyes.

Ferries from Venice to the Grecian coast leave several times a day carrying travelers aplenty from port to port, travelers and tourists. Europeans and Americans. As planes carry passengers between cities and states in the U.S. The ferry rated to leave after ours, however, was the target of the Athens-based terrorist group "November 17."

A suicide bomber bought a ticket like anyone else would, and began to board the ship. However, before he stepped onto the ramp he accidentally exploded half his face and right side. The bomber survived his own attempt, and was held by Athens police who for 18 years have failed to crack the November 17 ring.

Unaware of whether or not the attack had anything to do with the tourism industry, Americans, us, the world we came from or the world we hoped to return to, we numbly found our way back to our deck seats.

A dingy man missing his right incisor, white hair strewn one way and the other, crawled into the seat beside me, inhaling and exhaling deeply, blowing smoke rings through his nose, and asked where we were from. I answered, "the States."

"Really," he mused, he'd guessed our nationality to be British. His own accent revealing his South African roots. "What do you think of the attacks on America? On Sept. 11?" he asked through the haze mingling between us.

Just like that he asked. Without knowing my name, whether or not I'd lost someone directly, or simply lost my faith, he asked a stinging series of questions.

"How has the country reacted?" he continued.

Flabbergasted, I knew not how to reply. Who was I to speak for the nation? A diverse varied myriad of people and peoples all feeling and reacting differently.

I looked to my friend, whose face now studied mine for answers, raising her eyebrows she told me she didn't know how to answer either.

Without answers, the man went on to explain what he thought of the situation. How he saw those who would always be jealous of great nations like his own and ours. How America had handled it well. America, not the continent, not the western world, or even global community, but simply and singularly America. His words stung me, chipping away at whatever power the idea of a global unity had held over me.

I had never thought of Sept. 11 as something that happened to the United States. It wasn't an American tragedy, it was more simply a tragedy. America is not a place in which you can kill people and manage to not injure at least some who look, dress or think like you. The American citizen has long since declared loyalty to a legion of separate "old countries."

The bombs, the intelligence, the technologies are a worldwide issue. They plague us all.

Deeper into our peregrination my friend and I lay on a black beach on the island of Santorini discussing world politics with two amiable Canadians, Mike and Alia, whom we'd met in the surf.

Mike shocked me by openly asserting his distaste for the American government and much of our society.

The two of them had been gallivanting across northern Europe for over a month before arriving in Greece, and shared the response they'd seen towards Americans with us.

Being Canadian, their lack of accent was often misinterpreted as that of an American. While in France, Mike chatted up the waiter at a small bistro, after explaining that he was indeed Canadian and not American. The waiter then professed his deep belief that Americans were to become the new generation of Nazis.

The thought did not surprise me, although in my heart of hearts I believe in the American way and spirit, the view is founded. I did not, however, expect to discuss this on my leisurely journey through the Mediterranean.

Alia spoke up to wonder how, and when the United States planned to address the growing issue of its infringement upon other nations sovereignty.

As we lay in the brilliant sun, our toes curled into the black sand, our heads gasped for air as my friend and I questioned what would become of the lessons we'd learned in school together. Lessons founded on the American dream and democracy: federalism and freedom, diversity and globalization.

In Mama Cyclone's breakfast house, atop the caldera in the main city of Thira, we sat over an American breakfast of pancakes and eggs, with two American boys we'd met on the road in. The conversation turned from lighthearted marriage proposals to terrorism when four British girls joined our brunch.

The girls wanted to know about 9/11, the American response, the lessons we'd learned, and how we're a single nation, separate from the global community would respond.

John from California and Paul from Ohio glanced down and then at my friend and I. None of us had the heart to explain that we didn't know how the nation had reacted, that we could not speak for a nation so grand it seemed almost intangible at times. My head shook, as I laid my napkin on the table and offered my thoughts.

Although I found it impossible to speak as a representative for the nation, I somehow did, in speaking for myself.

Mankind has always seen terror, destruction and loss. The Old Testament teaches "an eye for an eye," as does modern business. But as the world grows smaller we must realize that to help one another, we must see not only Connecticut as our neighbor but Greece as well. As a global community we lost the towers, and as a world united through commerce, travel, technology and blood we must mourn, remember and recover.

For The Damaged

THOMAS NAUGHTON

September 11 is a day I cannot touch. Throughout the past month, as the day that changed our country, in many ways, I've often known the exact moment of that date's passing. I had no words for there were none. I couldn't begin to understand the incredible grief felt by those who lost loved ones in the crash of United Airlines Flight 93 and in attacks on New York City and The Pentagon. I have no idea of the unbelievable pain and the far-reaching anger, frustration and sadness felt by those affected by the day's events. I was directly affected, with caution because I know that there are some [illegible] who, after reading my last statement, will say, Everyone was affected by September 11." Both parties are right to a degree. There is no question that my efforts of the attacks were and are limited, and even American citizen. However, I can't help but recognize the strange disconnect that exists following the deaths, the separation of actual [illegible] from patriotism that sometimes results in [illegible] like the dust from the rubble in New York City.

[illegible] my eyes widened and were glued to the television in the Blue Wall Cafe as [illegible] started replaying the [illegible] of the world as we know it. It was as if we were all collectively hypnotized by the television, a country sedated in a fight [illegible] feeling that if we turned away, it would settled on New York. We [illegible] ultimately, the nightmare was real. [illegible] upside down, people held [illegible] and their homes, people left [illegible] and there were [illegible] on skin [illegible] leaders were made gods and [illegible] justice was received. My [illegible] from the expressing of disbelief [illegible] to the [illegible] for the events of [illegible] the jarring notion of shock over my year later. They roll in my head with the intention at that date I want to dig down deep into the dirt, cover myself over, or smash every television, radio and computer or duct tape the mouths of every person living or anything to avoid the mention of the day that left me a forever speaking person. speechless. I feel embarrassed and ashamed on the roads of our cities and towns seeing horrible green paper Fourth of July decorations year round. I feel fearful of the revocation of my rights with the sight of every single trumper sticker that snickers "So Glad I Voted For George W. Bush." Was this what the dead had intended if they had intentions? Would they wish for prisoners of their deaths to be mentioned at every game by garish news correspondents? Would they have intended for our excuse the term drink of a president, grace the pages of People, Us Rolling Stone and Ladies Home Journal simply because he was a drink at the right place at the right time? Would they wholeheartedly embrace the homage paid to one George W. (drink) Bush who, before the attacks was slashing all of our economic progress, the crapper? Would the native New Yorkers on those flights feel satisfied with the repaired image of Rudolph Giuliani (super drink at their expense?

Perhaps these are questions I shouldn't and can't ask. There is far too much politics involved, too many Wal-Mart sales on American flag paraphernalia, too many George W. Drink Calendars, an annoying amount of Rudy "G" action figures, a frightening number of angry, racist white faces, one too many radio dissertations concerning the fault of passionate and misinformed trade by drink fundamentalists, too many protests, too many vigils, and a number of other flashy outside factors involved that strays the eyes, my wide ones included, away from the root of the events on the 11th day of September the empty spaces where there were people.

Thomas Naughton is a Collegian columnist.

© Denver Rocky Mountain News. Dist. by NEA Inc.

Never forget 9-11

MELISSA HAMMEL

I am not turning off my television today.

Despite urgings from prominent U.S. figures to simply shut off the horrific images that we as a country have seen over and over again, I won't. It is not as if I enjoy a media walk down memory lane. However, ignoring the issues that occupied our minds one year ago today would be inviting us to forget. And forgetting terrifies me.

I fear this will turn into a tragedy that eventually is riddled with a lack of awareness. The potential exists for this to become an incident that is significant to some people in a way that Memorial Day or Veterans Day is, something that is obviously important, but for reasons which many have ceased to understand. I don't want this to turn out to be a reason for a day off or a parade, something that is easily forgotten.

September 11 is being compared to Pearl Harbor or to the death of John F. Kennedy, events that some of the nation still remembers vividly while the details for younger generations are fuzzy. For the longest time the incidents that were associated with my youth were the explosion of the Challenger and the Oklahoma City bombing, both of which I remember minimally, and only in the context that it was an upsetting and violent incident.

I want to be able to give my future children an accurate account of what occurred because for national safety we need to remember. So for that reason I am choosing to keep my television on and mentally record the events that unfolded.

What I find myself wondering about is how September 11 affected children in this country. How did this affect my six-year-old cousin and how it did it affect all of the other children in the world? I wonder if they have nightmares about planes crashing into their homes and the workplaces of their parents. Maybe the monsters under their beds have the faces of the al-Qaeda. Will they feel safe growing up in a world where we are not immune to tragedy?

> "Blocking out violent images will not prevent them from occurring in the future, but instead will leave us unprepared to cope. Tuning out the media is just another way to avoid reality."

My life changed in a million small ways following the attacks. I find myself looking up at the tall buildings in major cities just to check and see if they are still there; I have started to note when a plane flies low overhead; it has just become a part of my existence.

Although there is little that can come out of senseless tragedy of any kind, there is one basic enveloping theme: life is short. There are so many stories in which people were in the wrong place at the wrong time or on the flip side, narrowly avoided tragedy.

September 11 changed my life in the millions of ways that it did for people all over the world. I started to appreciate the firefighters and police officers more than I had in the past, I started to take stock of where I was and where I wanted to be because I realized that it could easily have been me if I had been in a different place that day. It is so important for us to remember what happened one year ago today. Although it feels as though we will never forget, blocking out violent images will not prevent them from occurring in the future, but instead will leave us unprepared to cope. Tuning out the media is just another way to avoid reality.

The best way to commemorate 9/11 is to remember it as an important part of our nation's history and do our best both personally and politically to prevent extreme acts of violence in any situation.

I will not turn of the television to our history today or any day because I don't want to forget how precious life is.

Melissa Hammel is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor -

I am finished reading the "Ram-dan" fund editorial. After reading the paragraph about the professors and staff demanding their contracted pay raises, I disagree with your opinion that in doing so "they are putting their individual needs above those of the University as a whole" and that "what they want will cost students more than it will cost administrators in Boston."

I would like to point out to you that those individuals you are referring to may be the very individuals who are paying for a large group of the students to be here. Many parents who have worked here for years are sending their children here to school. When you keep these people from receiving the money that the state bargained in good faith to give them, it is placing a burden on their ability to pay for their offspring to go here.

By assuming that we the workers are greedy people just looking for more money, you are not taking into account that many of us are single income households and that the single income we receive makes it difficult to make ends meet. You might also consider that the less than adequate incomes that two income families receive might not cover the costs of their student's educations.

Will you be as ready to give up pay increases after you graduate and face the real world, as you are for us to forego ours now? Are you ready to say that a contract that was bargained in good faith should be nullified, thus taking away the ability of our unions to negotiate reasonable contracts for future generations of state workers? We all need to stand together and let Boston know that this is unacceptable and that we the taxpayers will be heard.

Kristin Allen
UMass Employee

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.11.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Anthony's vocals strong, but songwriting needs some mending

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MARC ANTHONY
Mended
Columbia

International pop/salsa star Marc Anthony (born Marco Antonio Muniz in New York City) is one of the best male vocalists in music. It's too bad that his other qualities aren't as great.

Mended, Anthony's second English-language album, follows his tradition of catchy, mid-tempo salsa shakers but the tracks have so much in common with themselves you'll feel as if you're listening to the same track over and over.

Anthony's post as a love god may have been wounded after his divorce from a two-year marriage with former Miss Universe Dayanara Torres. The divorce doesn't help the listener believe many of Anthony's sappy lyrics on love and relationships. "I have never seen an angel standing oh so close to me/ I have never touched someone and felt such electricity," he unconvincingly sings on "I Swear."

Mended clearly showcases these positive and negative qualities. Anthony's vocal and musical range is easily his high point. And his vocals serve as excellent springboards to craft heart-pulling ballads and fiery dance-floor grooves–unfortunately the lyrics aren't there to complement his soaring voice.

Anthony once again teams up with co-writer/producer Cory Rooney, executive producer of his triple platinum first English language album, Marc Anthony. On "I've Got You," penned by Rooney, Anthony's towering vocals are blended with contemporary dance rhythms for a delightful fiesta.

But Anthony uses this formula on Mended and milks it dry. It's as if he didn't have enough material to fill a full studio album so he shoves in a few useless songs here and there bloating the album with garbage. And it's all too bad, really. Anthony is such an expressive singer that wasting phony emotion on songs lacking in substance is a crying shame.

"I've Got You" (also appearing in Spanish), "I Need You" and "Tragedy," co-written by Rooney and Matchbox 20's Rob Thomas, all employ similar mid-tempo music coupled with lyrics drenched in affectionate lyrics. They all contain melodic and hooky tunes and so-so lyrics.

"Don't Tell Me It's Love," where Anthony asks a lover for a non-committal relationship, lacks fire mostly due to the cheesy whip-cracking heavy beats.

Corny ballads make up much of the album. Although carefully emoted vocals and full-bodied choruses give the ballads a lift, the sentimental lyrics are too heavy to help the songs succeed. On "She Mends Me" and "I Reach for You" the zest is there but unfortunately the music just isn't.

If anything, Mended establishes Anthony as a vocal powerhouse and a singer capable of retaining his ethnic character but lacking in the songwriting department.

REUEN ALFASO/WWW.PICMO.NET

Anthony's voice can mend bridges. Too bad his other characteristics can't do the same.

CLAUDIO BRESCIANI/AFP/GETTY

Now that his space flight was cancelled (sort of), Bass probably isn't smiling.

Just go already!

Lance Bass' planned trip to space out of sync

Last February, 'N Sync's Lance Bass announced plans to rocket into space this fall aboard the Russian Soyuz rocket. Skeptics who thought the announcement was a publicity stunt rolled their eyes at first but as the mission crept closer and closer skepticism turned into belief.

But it now appears final that the 'NSync-er's trip will be a no go. On Monday the Russian Space Agency notified NASA that Bass would not be flying on the International Space Station next month after all.

This is just the latest twist in a long series of events that have dogged Bass' planned trip. An irregular heartbeat during a health check and financial matters stalled the project several times. Indeed, the outing faced so much turbulence over the summer it grabbed almost as many headlines as Britney's faux bouts of exhaustion and showed things in space camp were less than in sync. But after each snag an announcement was issued that the problems were nothing more than slight bumps in the road, er … sky and that Bass would definitely be launching into space. Boy, Bass' people must feel stupid now.

Bass had hoped to blast off from Kazakhstan on Oct. 28, boosted by corporate sponsors and a seven-part television documentary. But TV producers failed to raise the estimated $20 million fare, and consequently kicked Bass off the upcoming crew. (As if Bass, who has earned a pretty penny from 'N Sync's 40 million albums sold worldwide, can't afford the $20 million price tag.)

In typical fashion, Bass' supporters have contended the decision is not final and that negotiations are continuing. Insiders, however, say NASA's letter on Monday formalized the matter.

The trip seemed strange from the get-go. Although Bass is considered the most business savvy among the quintet, he doesn't have much else going for him. Bass doesn't command the attention of frontman Justin Timberlake nor is he a proven stand-alone draw at the box office (On the Line grossed a dismal $4.4 million). In fact, as a solo artist, Bass barely seems to have enough star wattage to be able to light up the skies at night.

Furthermore, for sheer value of entertainment, the story isn't as fun and exciting as say, a Mariah Carey exhaustion or finding out who J-Lo's latest lover is.

Earlier this year, communication problems seemed to mire the trip. A Russian space spokesman stirred media frenzy when they never heard from the star's camp. Russians further clouded the air when they proclaimed Cindy Crawford their ideal celebronaut.

At 23, Bass would have been the youngest person ever in space. Boo-hoo. Do we really want a member of a boy band to be the youngest person in space?

Still, with the Soyuz rocket launch seven weeks away, there's a good chance that we'll be hearing about this never-ending story in the future.

Two weeks ago during training at Johnson Space Center in Houston, Bass expressed confidence that the trip was moving full-speed ahead. But if he couldn't travel this fall, he told reporters, "I would work my bun off trying to go for another mission." The next trip is scheduled for April 2003 (conveniently before May sweeps) so we may be hearing about Bass' trip for months to come.

By then, even lovers of Bass may be ready to sing "Bye, Bye, Bye."

Nikolas Markantonatos is a Collegian Columnist.

Berkshire Hill Music Academy offers opportunity for disabled students

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The white pillars to the old Joseph Allen Skinner mansion give it that regal feeling only a New England estate can possess. The rooms spread out from the center hall like quaint building blocks stretched across the property. Built in 1915, the estate, called "The Orchards," features nostalgic attributes such as a carved staircase and a back sun porch.

The lawn in front is everything one would expect from such a place. Tall, wide-rimmed trees send their branches across the sky like enormous guardians standing watch over the manor. A centered fountain in front of the main door captures one's focus right away with its dainty sculpture spraying up to the sky.

But it is not the physical beauty of this 22-room building that gives it its captivating abeyance. It's the music – for residing in the Skinner mansion these days is the Berkshire Hill Music Academy.

The Academy's goal: to provide funding to establish and support a pioneer program by offering a music-based educational opportunity for qualified students with disabilities ages 18 and older, to succeed in this environment.

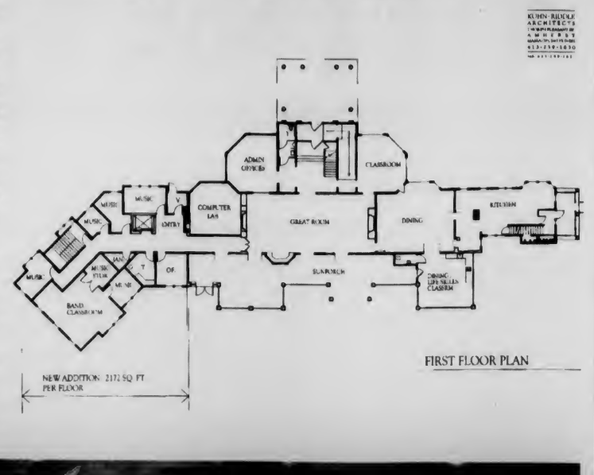
Purchased from Mount Holyoke College a few years ago, the mansion resides over 40 acres of land overlooking Mt. Tom along the eastern edge of the Berkshire Hills and providing for ample space for one to play, to live, learn, work and, most importantly, study music.

"All of those involved in the site search agree this is truly a special place for the Berkshire Hills Music Academy," stated an announcement from the Academy recently after the purchase in November 2000.

By 2001, the Academy finished its renovation of the mansion, even adding a 9,000 square foot wing to the existing building. Then it was time to put its theories to work. The first class of arrived one year ago, and since then, music has filled the house and become intertwined in its own being.

The Berkshire Hill Music Academy was first incorporated as a non-profit organization in the state in 1999 and has since sought to offer to its students a "transition" education with musical focus.

"Traditionally, students with cognitive disabilities have not had access to post-secondary/transition education that leads to meaningful employment opportunities," stated the Academy's official statement concerning its background. "In recent years, several schools and colleges have established successful non-credit 'transition programs' for students with severe learning disabilities."



Berkshire Hill Music Academy is one such institution, and one of its major goals is to identify individuals with various handicaps who show strong musical abilities. The Academy inspires and instructs such students to perform in music-related actives.

"Music is like soup – it makes you feel warm all over," a young woman with Williams' syndrome was recorded as saying in one of the Academy's brochures. "Music feeds my soul."

Academy students receive private instrumental music and/or voice lessons in hopes of readying them for participation in a chorus, band or even on stage in the theater, and instructors involved in the program have high hopes that families of such students will be pleased with their intent.

"To provide the opportunity for their children to receive an education based on their abilities, not their disabilities – an education that will allow them to develop self esteem while achieving their full potential, and opening vocational opportunities befitting their talents."

Those interested in learning more about the Academy can access their web site at www.berkshirehills.org.

FIRST FLOOR PLAN

(Top right) Sculpture at the Berkshire Hill Music Academy's main floor. (Bottom) "The Orchard," home of the Academy

Projects/Events grant deadline announced

By Hetty Nielsen
Collegian Writer

The University of Massachusetts Arts Council announced its next Single Projects/Events grant deadline. The deadline is noon on Wednesday, September 20 (all events held after Oct. 8).

The UMass Arts Council funds theater, music, dance, multimedia exhibits and other types of art events. Student groups, academic departments and other UMass organizations are eligible to apply for grants from the UMass Arts Council. Individuals are not eligible to apply. Groups can apply for up to $2,000 for events being held on campus. Over the course of the year, the council awards approximately $40,000 to support one-time events or series that feature all kinds of artistic exhibitions.

Grants must be submitted in the Council offices located at 101-103 Hasbrouck. Printed grant guidelines are now available at the Campus Activities Office in the Student Union Building and also in the Arts Council office in Hasbrouck. Upcoming grant deadlines are as follows: Single Project/Events, November 13 for projects beginning after December 3; February 5 for events taking place after February 18, and March 12 for events beginning after April 1.

Missed last night's Arts & Living meeting, silly goose? NO PROBLEM! Come down to the Collegian office (Campus Center basement) and talk to Jen, Lizzy or Nick for information about writing for this section.

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9
For more information call 253-7571
• Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-and many more
• Nutritonal Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
• Fitness Testing & Programming
Semester Special $160
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
• Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment
NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

NEED EXTRA CASH?
Sign up to receive emails about upcoming decision making experiments from the Department of Resource Economics!
To sign up go to:
http://www.umass.edu/resec/expecon
$100 Bonus Opportunity
If you participate in one decision making experiment during the Fall semester your name will be entered in a drawing for $100.
(drawing to be held at the end of the fall semester)

Forget your Pill? Now you can.
Check out Depo-Provera, the birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Depo-Provera* is 99.7% effective.

Not only is Depo-Provera 99.7% effective, but you need just one shot on time every 3 months to stay pregnancy-protected. So, unlike the Pill, Depo-Provera isn't your every day birth control.

Remember, Depo-Provera doesn't protect you from HIV/AIDS or other sexually transmitted diseases.

Some women using Depo-Provera experience side effects. The most common are irregular periods or spotting. Many women stop having periods altogether after a few months and some may experience a slight weight gain. You shouldn't use Depo-Provera if you could be pregnant, if you have had any unexplained periods, or if you have a history of breast cancer, blood clots, stroke, or liver disease. When using Depo-Provera, there may be a possible decrease in bone density. Ask your health care professional about prescription Depo-Provera.

See what Depo-Provera is all about. Call toll free 1-866-519-DEPO or visit Depo-Provera.com.

Depo-Provera® Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

Birth control you think about just 4 x a year.

Please see important product information on adjacent page.
© 2002 Pharmacia Corporation UX0021617O1 9/02

Addison Group Project mixes up funk, soul, groove, and jazz

Addison Groove Project coming to Pearl Street on September 13th

By Scott Enright
Expressed correspondent

Mixing up the funk, soul, groove and jazz seemed pretty easy to The Addison Groove Project in its new album, Allophone. It is impressive in its attention to quality in both sound and design.

After listening to the first three songs, my impression was that this album was an amalgamation of sounds I had heard from San Francisco's jazz group The Greyboy Allstars, Bridgeport, Connecticut - favorite funk band Deep Banana Blackout and Bronx, New York's electronic DJ Logic.

I was impressed with the harmonies of the horn section and the tightness of the group that was predominant in their music.

Still, I felt as though this was only another improvisational band creating music with no particular area of focus and no particularly interesting theme.

I found originality when I came across the song "Breath." It had a nice soulful flow. I was beginning to hear the sound that creates a distinction for the Addison Groove Project amongst other bands.

These guys want to be heard and it is obvious that they are trying hard to create a new sound that has not been played before.

They have taken inspiration from a diverse number of musical sources in the areas of jazz, rock, and funk. They have given this inspiration a common ground in their new album.

Miles Davis-esque sounds can be heard echoing throughout the song "hiphopanonamous," along with the pulsing drum and bass common to most hip-hop. Even some reggae roots can be found in the song "Just So You Know."

I was impressed with the diversity I heard on this album. It is obvious that The Addison Groove Project is beginning to define its own style within the area of improvisational music.

Allophone is a nice adventure if you are willing to listen to it in depth. When given the chance, this band will satisfy your taste for a funky soul-shaking good time.

Check out The Addison Groove Project at their upcoming shows on Friday, Sept. 13 at the Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton. Admission will be $10.00 and the show is open to all ages.

■ NFC

continued from page 12

quarterback Jim Miller (Chris Chandler should be starting by Week Five) and I have Thomas pegged as my "bomb of the year" pick. The defense will keep the team relatively successful, however, and they'll just miss the playoffs.

Minnesota will be better than last year (5-11), but unless Randy Moss decides to actually play hard during the games (don't bet on it), they have little chance of making the playoffs. The defense certainly won't carry the team anywhere and the running game will only be successful when opposing defenses are expecting the pass.

The Detroit Lions are just awful. I don't understand why the team isn't giving rookie quarterback Joey Harrington the starting job. They aren't going anywhere and Mike McMahon hasn't been anything special. Why not give the guy with the most upside the experience? It could pay dividends in the future. The team is at least two years away and should just have its name changed to "Easy Win" until then.

NFC South
Tampa Bay Buccaneers
New Orleans Saints
Atlanta Falcons
Carolina Panthers

I have always liked Jon Gruden despite his being a member of the Oakland Raiders organization. It will be much easier for me to root for him this year now that he is in Tampa. It may take a few weeks for the Bucs to play consistently well, but they will get on enough of a run to win the South over three teams with major question marks. I expect big things from Keyshawn Johnson this year.

The New Orleans Saints were either impressed enough with Deuce McAllister or sick enough of Ricky Williams that they traded the latter to the Miami Dolphins. McAllister seems more like a third-down back than anything else, but maybe Coach Jim Haslett saw something in his new starting tailback. I like quarterback Aaron Brooks, but am not confident that he can lead this team into the playoffs now that he has to carry the offense.

Atlanta will be a fun team to watch this year for one reason alone: Michael Vick. Vick has been handed the keys to the offense in his second year. Probably the best athlete in the NFL, the Virginia Tech alum will be a human highlight reel this year. Next year, he may be the league MVP.

The Carolina Panthers won in Week One on Sunday. They won in Week One last year. Then they lost every game for the rest of the season. Will history repeat itself? Probably not. But as you can see from my rankings, I'm not totally counting it out. With the emergence of Rodney Peete as the team's starting QB, I was left wondering where Andre Ware was. He'll get a shot soon, I'm sure.

NFC West
St. Louis Rams
San Francisco 49ers
Seattle Seahawks
Arizona Cardinals

The Rams have Marshall Faulk, the best running back in the league. The Rams have Kurt Warner, the best quarterback in the league. The Rams have one of the best receiving cores in the league, led by Torry Holt and Isaac Bruce. Oh yeah, and their defense is pretty good, too. They'll win the division and maybe set a few records along the way. I'm starting to worry that Coach Mike Martz isn't the genius he claims to be. He's made several boneheaded decisions in his last few games and his ego is hurting the team. Unless he changes his ways, this team may not make it to the Super Bowl this year, despite having the most talent in the league.

Jeff Garcia, a terrific quarterback, leads the 49ers. The San Jose State alum has been an MVP candidate over the past few years and is the latest great San Francisco QB. Along with the Vikings' Moss, Terrell Owens is one of the two best wide receivers in the game. Running back Kevan Barlow is an up-and-comer who will, along with Garrison Hearst, will be taking half of the team's rushing attempts. The defense has some question marks, which will keep them from taking the division title.

The Seahawks were unlucky in realignment. Moving from the AFC West to the NFC West placed them in a division with two powerhouses and will make them a third place team for a few seasons despite having some good talent. Running back Shaun Alexander is a legitimate workhorse, who could post 1,700 rushing yards this season. Once quarterback Trent Differ returns to the field in a few weeks, this team will make a run at the playoffs, but miss because of a tough schedule.

The Arizona Cardinals thought they had their savior in quarterback Jake Plummer. Instead, he's killing them with a huge contract and mediocre play. Even having one of the league's top receivers (David Boston) hasn't done him much good. The only worthy attraction to watching the Cardinals games this season from a UMass standpoint is the emergence of former Minuteman Marcel Shipp as the team's backup running back. If starter Thomas Jones stinks up the joint, Shipp has a real shot at being named the team's starter.

Postseason:
Wild Card: San Francisco, Washington
1st Round: Green Bay over San Francisco, Washington over Tampa Bay
2nd Round: Green Bay over Philadelphia, St. Louis over Washington
NFC Championship: Green Bay over St. Louis
Super Bowl: Green Bay over Denver

Awards:
NFC offensive MVP: Brett Favre-QB-Green Bay
NFC defensive MVP: Lavar Arrington-LB-Washington
NFC offensive rookie of the year: Jeremy Shockey-TE-New York
NFC defensive rookie of the year: Julius Peppers-DE-Carolina

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian columnist, not a homer.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Calming the troops

Coach Patty Shea and the field hockey team (0-3) will look to get on the winning track with a trip to Maryland this weekend.

WRITE FOR ARTS

Depo-Provera®
Contraceptive Injection
medroxyprogesterone acetate injectable suspension

Birth control you think about just 4 x a year

DEPO-PROVERA

This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against HIV infection (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases.

What is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

How effective is DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

This product is intended to prevent pregnancy. It does not protect against transmission of HIV (AIDS) and other sexually transmitted diseases such as chlamydia, genital herpes, genital warts, gonorrhea, hepatitis B, and syphilis.

What if I want to become pregnant after using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

What are the risks of using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

Who should not use DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

What other things should I consider before using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

What symptoms may signal problems while using DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

What are the possible side effects of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

How often do I get my shot of DEPO-PROVERA Contraceptive Injection?

Re-use

CB-7.5

Pharmacia & Upjohn Company
Kalamazoo, MI 49001, USA

Pharmacia &Upjohn

ALL STAFF MEETING

TOMORROW AT 6 p.m.

113 Campus Center Basement

BE THERE!

■ notebook

continued from page 12

UMass' Jason Peebler is tied for the conference lead in touchdowns with three on the season, despite having played one fewer game than the rest of the A-10.

powerhouse, and the Spiders' defense spun a web that their opponents ran right into to the tune of a 15-13 victory.

Senior Maurice Newbill, who earned A-10 Special Teams Player of the Week honors for his feat, blocked what could have been the game-winning chip shot field goal from just 18-yards away.

Boyd Ouden led the Spider offense, as he caught seven of the 10 balls that Richmond completed on the day, going for 162 yards and one touchdown.

Key plays were the name of the game, with both teams playing a sloppy game, turning the ball over three times apiece. Ramon Richeson was far and away the best defensive player on the field, as he made 23 tackles and recovered a fumble from the defensive backfield to earn Co-Defensive Player of the Week honors from the A-10.

The Spiders have been questioned since they entered the conference, but with a defensive system as effective as theirs, they have the patience to perennially be a powerhouse, and this year is no different. Don't count the Blue Hens out though - they showed they can play in the tight games in Week One, so don't expect a letdown following the loss to Richmond.

Perfection out of conference

While four in-conference clashes were going on, the remaining three teams waltzed through their non-conference games, winning by a combined 103-3.

Steve Anzalone led the Northeastern defense to a 31-0 trouncing of Ohio with 11 tackles, five for loss, two sacks and a forced fumble, earning him Co-Defensive Player of the Week honors of his own. The Huskies held the Bobcats to just 141 total yards in what was the Atlantic 10's first-ever shutout of a I-A opponent. The Huskies have not allowed a point this year, outscoring their assailants 79-0. Art Smith added to the debacle by returning a fumble for a 49-yard score in the first quarter. The game was a battle of the ground attacks, as just 36 passes were attempted combined.

Villanova solidified its place in the Top 25 as it completely shut down Colgate 20-0. A-10 standout Brett Gordon threw for 392 yards and one touchdown to lead the Wildcats as they prepare for a battle with Maine next week. However, the Villanova ground game showed how badly it missed departed NFL-er Brian Westbrook, as it ran for just 75 yards on 42 carries. The Red Raiders turned the ball over three times to hand the game to Nova on a silver platter.

Massachusetts trounced Northeast Conference opponent Central Connecticut in its opener 52-3 behind the strong running tandem of A-10 Rookie of the Week Raunny Rosario (116 yards) and Jason Peebler (126 yards) as new quarterback Jeff Krohn threw for four touchdowns in his Minuteman debut. UMass squares off against Springfield opponent AIC this weekend before its starts the conference schedule Sept. 21 at Northeastern.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

Sports a necessary healing tool in society

MATT BRADY

"So, are we playing Frisbee on Wednesday?"

As the organizer of one of the largest pickup ultimate frisbee games on campus, people are always asking me when we're going to play next. With an established Wednesday night game, the disc game in the Quad has grown to about 30 regulars with unknown players coming in nearly every time we play.

But this Wednesday is different. One year after the most horrifying attack on the United States in its relatively young history, this country is changed forever.

All over the television, there are specials paying tribute to the thousands who died in the World Trade Center attacks. Everywhere, even on ESPN, someone has a story.

Sports, as a part of this nation, mourned heavily along with every American one year ago, canceling all events and leaving massive sports venues completely empty on what was one of the most quiet nights in American history.

But sports are, by definition, an uptake - that is, they distract us from the hard times in life. How many people, after a bad day, feel the need to go pump some iron or throw around the football just to relax? How refreshing is it, after watching CNN discuss the bombings in Israel or the potential war on Iraq, to just sit back and throw on ESPN to watch a little "Sportscenter" or watch your favorite sports team beat up on the Tampa Bay Devil Rays or Florida Panthers?

After Sept. 11, the sports world took a back seat to the news channels for the first time since the middle of the 20th century. Suddenly, those of us who lived and died with the goings on of our favorite players didn't care quite as much about what was going on in the box scores, but instead actually looked at the front page.

Most of all, the definition of the word hero, took on a whole new meaning. Those players who perform such amazing athletic feats were still awe-inspiring, but "hero" was a title that no professional athlete was willing to accept anymore.

Amazingly though, sports were in a way more appreciated than they were before our innocence as a nation was taken from us. The World Series was one of the most dramatic spectacles of the year, and was a more entertaining and hard-fought contest than it had been in years. But it was the fact that the Series was a celebration of triumph and gave us as a nation all the drama we could handle that made the 2001 World Series something special to watch.

Of all the tributes that followed the World Trade Center attacks, none brought a tear to my eye like the fact that baseball began singing "God Bless America" during the seventh inning stretch rather than "Take Me Out to the Ballgame." It showed the unity of a nation celebrating all that is beautiful about that nation with just one simple change.

And in the World Series, we got to see the two most tearjerking versions of this gesture, as in New York, a member of the finest police force in the world stood before the crowd and led it in celebrating our nation's determination to remain free. In Arizona, it was not a voice, but the trembling beauty of a trumpet that brought tears to everyone's eyes who gazed upon the man who played it.

Sports are not life, it is true, but they are such an important part of life for so many people, and sometimes it seems that some of this nation loses sight of that fact. In every way that history has moved, sport has moved with it, and in some ways baseball has preceded history. As is often noted that the Civil Rights movement did not start in the back of a bus in Alabama or with the rise to power of Martin Luther King, Jr., but instead it began on April 15, 1947 on the dirt of Ebbets Field in the Flatbush section of the borough of Brooklyn, when a black man wearing No. 42 trotted out to take his position at second base.

And so as America and Americans changed, so changed the nature of sport. While people still turn first to the sports section of a major newspaper a lot of the time, they will never forget to glance at the front page before moving to their favorite section. There is one certainty of the tragedy that took place one year ago today, and that is that no one will ever forget.

But sports should not take a total back seat to the rest of the nation. After all, as many have noted throughout history, the sports section of the newspaper is unique in that it celebrates man's triumphs rather than accentuating man's shortcomings.

Don't feel guilty turning on the TV today to watch ESPN or playing Madden 2003. Some might tell you that you are being disrespectful, but the fact is that on as hard a day as today, we all need sports to have the numbing effect that takes away the heartache and despair that is caused by the memories of such a horrific attack.

Mourn. But mourn in your own way. Pay respect to those who died last year on this day, but do not let yourself set into a state of depression. We have come too far in gaining unity as a nation in the last year to step back into the sadness that enveloped the nation last year.

Appreciate the beauty of a summer day and the fact that you can bring a football outside or just run around in the sun. The freedom of this country is so beautifully celebrated through the innocence of our children – and in a way, sports are a direct connection to our childhood, in that we can still find joy in playing a child's game.

So while all of the specials come on TV, watch a few of them and remember what happened last year on Sept. 11. Then move on to ESPN and watch the same edition of "Sportscenter" eight times just in case you missed something the first seven.

Take a baseball outside and play some catch. Bring a volleyball out to the courts. Shoot some hoops in the horseshoe. Take a disc outside and toss around with your friends.

Life is far too short not to enjoy your time on earth, and as thousands of Americans who died one year ago would tell you if they could, enjoy life to the fullest while you still can.

Me? You'll find me in the Quad just like always tonight. And if Brent doesn't wind up face first in a bush, Joe doesn't wind up chasing a car that interrupts our game and Seanie doesn't snare a hanging throw over the middle, I'll be upset.

It won't be exactly like always, though. I'll be buss celebrating my freedom with a bunch of people who are a like a family to me. And there's no better tribute to those who died than that.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

www.dailycollegian.com

CREDIT CARDS
OCMP
Delivery EXPRESS
Burgers 1 Dogs

CLASSIC AMERICAN ROADSIDE DINING and the home of 2 BURGS for 2 BUCKS

Burgers
Hot Dogs
Chicken
Seafood
Fries
Shakes
Smoothies

287 RUSSELL ST.
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
585-0241

OFFICE WORKERS

Various office help needed: packing boxes, counting materials, labeling cartons, and answering phones. Preferred candidates will work quickly and accurately and be able to work at least 3 consecutive hours between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. on days that we have work. On-call hours available beginning mid-September throughout the academic year. $8.00/hr. Call 256-0444 to request an application.

Personnel
NATIONAL EVALUATION SYSTEMS, INC.
P.O. Box 226 Amherst, MA 01004-0226
NES®
personnel@nesinc.com E.O.E.

McMurphy's
welcomes
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

BECOME AN EMT!

For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheap Heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Co-operative. Call 545-0865 or contact the Commuter Services Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser. 3 hour fundraising event. Our program works! fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraisers Dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at ChapterSet@sigmalphalambda.org

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Saab 900 Turbo
Fast Car
Mechanic owned High mileage
Many New Parts, $2300.00
413-665-9331

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

CHILDCARE

Looking for child care Thursday evenings. Transportation, references, and experience required. Michelle 259-1118

Babysitters Needed - For

EMPLOYMENT

Commuter Services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.oasis.org then click on Family Services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance.
Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Northeast Foundation for Children
Program Administrative Assistant
Mission-driven, small, non-profit education organization seeks assistant with strong office and computer skills to support Foundation's whole school reform work. Interest in education a plus. Must have strong organization skills and experience with MS Word, Excel, and Internet. Strong interpersonal skills, flexibility and a sense of humor a must. Enjoy people. Send resume, cover letter and salary requirements to: Laurie Harrison Northeast Foundation for Children 39 Montague City Road Greenfield, MA 01301 Email: Laurie@nefoundation.org Fax: 413-774-1129 See our website for more stepdance.org for additional information and a detailed job description.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Part-Time Delivery and Warehouse
help for local furniture store.
Flexible hours. Tues.-Sat.
256-6184 ask for James

Lifeguards/WSI
The Town of Amherst, Department of Leisure Services and Supplemental Education (LSSE)
Aquatics Program is now accepting Lifeguard and WSI applications for the school year 2002-2003. Previous experience preferred, $8.19-9.48 hr. Applications are available from the Town Hall Human Resources Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst. Equal Opportunity Employer

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem, Please call 212-817-5530 or e-mail dormstory@hotmail.com

Bartender Trainees Needed.
$250.00 a day potential.
Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

Attention Students!
Protect Environment and

EMPLOYMENT

Get Paid!
Clean Water Action is hiring campaign organizers to:
*fight corporate polluters
*defend public health
*protect our air and water
*promote renewable energy
Good communication skills a must,
Paid Training, fun work atmosphere, flexible schedules, great pay, 10 mins.
from campus and bus route.
Call Megan 413-584-9830

Recreation Leader – After School Program
The Town of Amherst seeks Recreation Leaders for its After School Programs operated by the Leisure Services and Supplemental Education Department (LSSE). Camp Couseling, other experiences working with school age children, and/or related course-work in Elementary Education preferred. $7.80-9.03 hr; 5-15 hrs per week. Applications available from Human Resource Dept., 4 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or LSSE, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst or call S. Basniak @ 256-4065.
Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

Wanted: Co-manager to work at Greenough sub-shop. Pick up application and more information at center for student businesses in Student Union by 9/12.

WANTED: Funky, Sassy girls with the ability to dance, sing, & work a crowd.

EMPLOYMENT

Call (413) 537-8527 for more info.

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions, must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact. 860-257-9139 for more info.

WANTED: Technical Assistant for economic modeling software firm. Computer programming experience a plus. Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West St. Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jz@remi.com

WANTED: Business Development Assistant telephone sales and marketing for a policy analysis software firm. Knowledge of Economics a plus.
Please contact Regional Economic Models, Inc. 433 West Street Amherst, MA 01002. Fax 413-549-1038. jz@remi.com.

STAGE HANDS WANTED at Fine Arts Center. $6.75 / hr. Variable schedule – week day availability preferred 9-noon, 1pm-5 Applications at production services Rm 146 F.A.C.

Amherst Leisure Services Department is hiring officials for its Adult Volleyball League. The games are held Sundays at a local school. We are also looking for a Supervisor to run the program. League runs from late September-mid-December. To apply, go to Town Hall, Human Resources Department.

EMPLOYMENT

Work Study and Non-Work Study jobs available. For more information please contact Erika Cumps 256-4065x114 or at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

Research Interviews
Ideal for college students. Conduct surveys over the phone. No sales. Set your own schedule each week. 20+ hours/week. Evening/weekends. $7.50/hour. Hadley location. PVTA accessible. Field Marketing, Inc. 1-888-423-5381

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester.
Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Lessons,
Beginner to Advanced.
Learn a wide range of styles, Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Guitar lessons – All ages, styles, levels. lessons@mapsmusic.com 584-7750

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males, Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

2 bed condo available now. Big basement, on bus rt. Call 413-283-5315

Lockers for rent: cheap! $10 for the year. Come to Commuter Sevices, 428 Student Union.

FOR SALE

Dorm Fridge & Microwave for sale. $40-$60 Call 695-3648

3 Desks & File Cabinet for Sale $45-$200 See at www.pioneervalleyguide.com/furniture or call 584-7730

TO SUBLET

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

Sell Spring Break trips all the fun & all the protections
American Express worldwide
Guaranteed Best Buy
1 Free trip for every 10 paid or Cash starting with first booking you sell – we collect payments

TRAVEL

World Class Vacations

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break
Travel Free
Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre
Free Drinks/Lowest Prices
1800-426-7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers
Travel Free 2003
Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV
www.sunsplashtours.com
1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours
Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

Monreal Madness
Weekends
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs
10 or more discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-0076

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS / 3
3	NBSN
4	Fox Sport NE
5	PBS / 57
6	HSCN Movie Channel WB / 20
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	TV Guide Channel
9	FOX / 61
10	ABC / 40
11	NBC / 22
12	International Channel
13	UMATV
14	HSCN InterChannel
15	ESPN
16	ESPN 2
17	LIVE-19
18	ESPN Classic
19	Travel Channel
20	CNN
21	CNN HL
22	Weather Channel
23	Learning Channel
24	History Channel
25	A & E
26	Discovery Health
27	Food Network
28	NASA
29	Home & Garden TV
30	Travel Channel
31	Lifetime
32	CNBC
33	Tech TV
34	BET
35	UPN-38
36	USA
37	TNN
38	MTV
39	CMT
40	VH-1
41	TNT
42	TBS
43	E! Entertainment
44	Sci-Fi Channel
45	Court TV
46	Nick at Nite
47	Comedy Central
48	Cartoon Network
49	Game Show Network
50	TV Land
51	FOX Family
52	Univision
53	Galavision
54	Telemundo
55	College TV Network
56	C-SPAN
57	C-SPAN2
58	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

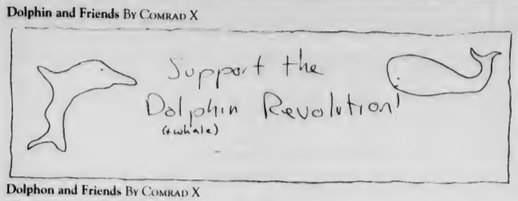
Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

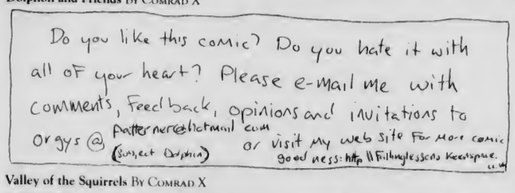
Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500



Student rate: $6.00 / word / per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents / word / per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

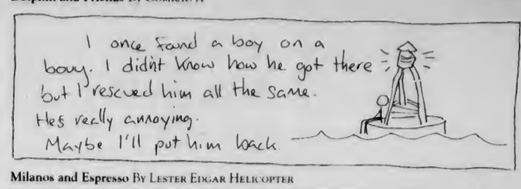


WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	32	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Draw Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WWJF		News		NBC News	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Akutsma: Credo		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News		Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WYBS	59	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "The Dawn Before" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	45	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Sex Defense		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Berets		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	25	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kocks	★★ "Packer" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Hoo				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	60	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	29	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 ... Teams to Be Announced (Live)							Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	39	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		U. Lo Bovis	Melting-Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	28	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	63	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	27	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	30	NYPD Blue "Twin Peaks"		Pretender "Pilot" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal ... Teams to Be Announced (Live)						Inside NBA
USA	26	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Blank Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley						★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	65	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13						Six Feet Under (In Stereo)
MAX	66	(5:15) ★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Set Enough	★½ "Mr. Mom" is mine" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. R						★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. PG-13
SHOW	68	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. PG				★★½ "The Cell" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett. R						Soul Food (N) (In Stereo)

Dolphin and Friends By Comrad X

Dolphon and Friends By Comrad X



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Dolphin and Friends By Comrad X

Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"The face of a child can say it all, especially the mouth part of the face."

-Jack Handy

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 77 LOW: 44	HIGH: 70 LOW: 45	HIGH: 77 LOW: 50

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Make sure to give a friend a hug today. Unless you have no friends, in which case a pillow will suffice.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The world is your oyster, just the kind of oyster without all those nice shiny pearls.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Things aren't going right for you today? When in doubt, turn to Spaceballs.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Fish gotta swim and birds gotta fly, but I don't know what that thing is stuck in your eye.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) That cute girl sitting next to you in your sociology class? She's got a boyfriend, so dream on, Sparky.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Time flies like the wind. Fruit flies like a banana. Think about it.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Sheep go to heaven, goats go to hell. So where are you heading to?
CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your chances of success are great today, so don't screw it up like you always tend to do.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Beware the roast turkey at the Dining Commons. You have been warned.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It's Wednesday, so what are you going to do now that "American Idol" is over? Better think of something quick.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) Your symbol is the scales, speaking of which, have you stepped on one lately? You're getting a little pudgy.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) Does it seem like the world's been avoiding you lately? It's probably because of that giant honey mustard stain on your shirt.

All staff meeting Wednesday at 6 pm

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Vegetable Barley Soup

Chicken Burrito

Popcorn Shrimp

Lentil Stew (vegan)

Garden Vegetable Chili (vegan)

DINNER
Vegetable Barley Soup

Roast Turkey

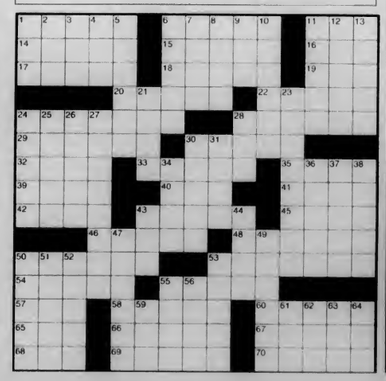
General Tso's Shrimp

Thai Seitan (vegan)

Today's Staff

Andy Vogt
Kristin Hull
Andrew Merritt
Shannon Farrington
Lizzy Nielsen
Scott Pihl

WWW DOT DAILY COLLEGIAN DOT COM



ACROSS
1 Fix, as in cement
6 Find the sum
11 Halfway
14 Purple shade
15 New Zealand native
16 A Gabor
17 Yens
18 "Game Jones"
19 Shiny metal
20 Tough question
22 Leggy bird
24 They follow us
28 Downcast
29 Woman's dress size
30 Dress style
32 Annexes
33 Is bold enough
35 Recedes
39 Applaud
40 Teachers' org.
41 Sleuth Wolfe
42 Averages
43 Fish homes
45 Essay by-line
46 Spa amenity
48 Spookier
50 Totally shocked
53 Fervent requests
54 Relinquish
55 Bogs down
57 It's charged!
58 Get sway from
60 Kind of pool
65 Hound for payment
66 Ahead of time
67 Author Jong
68 Crafty
69 Nudges
70 Hard status

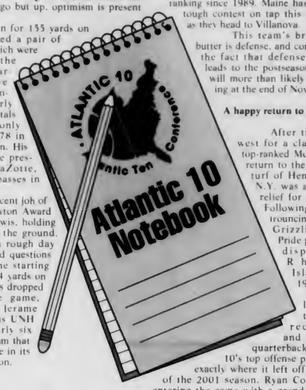
DOWN
1 Big bird
2 Impair
3 Moth or ant
4 First lady?
5 Tyrant
6 Gather together
7 Cowgirl Evans
8 Exit
9 40-cup brewer
10 Urban bird
11 Paris subway
12 Some vines
13 "Divine Comedy" author
21 Rein up a tab
23 Foliage
24 Eyeglasses, for short
25 "Hi!"
26 Mercator's tome
27 Kitchen appliance
28 Scale notes
30 Stadium
31 Clue
34 Unknown auth.
36 Contractor
37 Prickly twig
38 Flies high
43 Deposited
44 Waterless
47 Zonked out
49 Spring holiday
50 Sour substances
51 Horror-movie extra
52 Horse and donkey hybrid
53 Victims
55 Darkness
56 Between gigs
59 Tai neighbor
61 Retiree's kitty
62 Morse code click
63 Make sn "A"
64 Schoolboy

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	I	L	T	H		S	P	A	R		P	A	L	E
A	G	O	R	A		H	I	R	E		A	S	A	P
C	O	R	A	L		A	L	E	C		C	E	D	E
T	R	I	P	L	E	P	L	A	Y		K	A	Y	E
			O	L	E	S		C	E	E
M	O	H	A	W	K	S		G	L	O	R	I	E	D
O	M	E	N	S		B	E	E	N		M	A	D	E
O	A	R	S		F	L	U	E	S		L	A	V	A
R	H	O		F	O	A	M		R	I	G	E	L
S	A	N	D	B	O	X		D	E	E	P	E	S	T
		W	I	T		A	U	L	D
Y	O	K	E		R	A	B	B	I	T	E	A	R	S
O	V	A	L		A	H	A	B		A	L	G	A	E
D	I	L	L		C	O	T	E		P	L	A	I	T
I	D	E	S		E	Y	E	D		E	A	R	I	S

10-10-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO



Dukes back in the right column

Win first A-10 game since 2000

After an 0-9 A-10 season last year and being picked as the preseason favorite to finish in the cellar of the conference in the current slate, hopes were not at all high for James Madison. But after last week's 20-14 victory over New Hampshire, the Dukes broke an 11-game conference losing streak, and since the team has nowhere to go but up, optimism is present in Harrisonburg.

Rondell Bradley ran for 155 yards on 27 carries and scored a pair of touchdowns, all of which were career highs for the sophomore, who garnered A-10 Offensive Player of the Week honors. Bradley nearly eclipsed his career totals in the game, as he only had 31 carries for 178 in his freshman campaign. His effectiveness took the pressure off QB Matt LaZotte, who only threw 16 passes in the game.

The Dukes did a decent job of controlling Walter Payton Award candidate Stephan Lewis, holding him to 151 yards on the ground. Mike Granieri had a rough day throwing the ball amid questions about his merit in the starting role, and picked up 24 yards on 21 rushes. He also was dropped three times in the game, including twice by Jerame Southern. The porous UNH defense allowed nearly six yards per play to a team that averaged less than five in its opener against Hampton.

Clash of the titans

After the preseason rankings were released, the A-10 community licked its proverbial chops in looking at the Week Two schedule as favorite William and Mary was slated to travel to Orono for a matchup with No. 2 ranked Maine. A second week battle for conference supremacy? Who could ask for anything more?

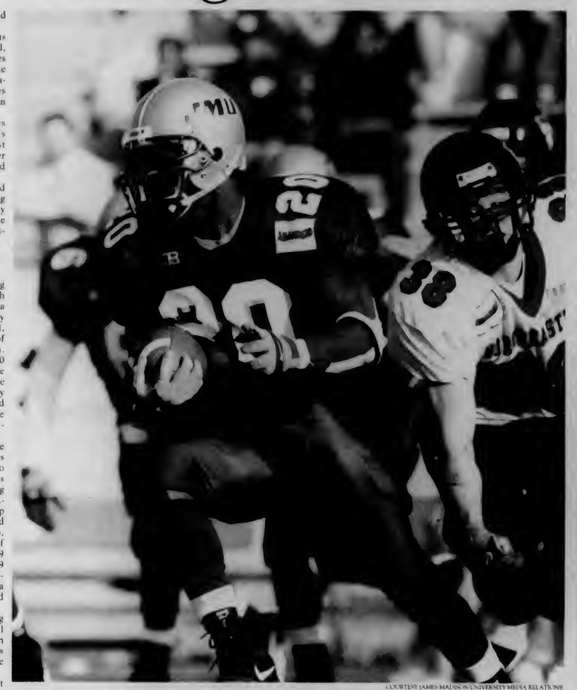
Unfortunately for those expecting one of the best games of the A-10 season, they were incredibly disappointed as Maine made little of a game out of the contest, going up 24-0 at the half. William and Mary did fight back on the shoulders of Payton Award candidate David Corley, but could only muster 14 second half points against an incredibly strong Black Bear defense.

The "Black Hole" run defense was stellar for Maine, as the unit, led by senior Rob Kierstead (nine tackles) and Buck Buchanan Award candidate Steven Cooper (eight), allowed the Tribe to run for just 76 yards on 30 carries. Corley struggled for the day as well, completing less than half of his passes and throwing a key interception. Maine also neutralized last year's first team A-10 receiver Rich Musinski, who grabbed just four balls for a grand total of 36 yards.

On the other side of the ball, Marcus Williams was dominating on the ground, running for 135 yards and a pair of scores on the day, while returning starter Jake Eaton picked up where he left off last season, completing 60 percent of his passes and running for more than 100 yards on the day.

Following the win, the Black Bears vaulted to the No. 6 slot in The Sports Network's I-AA Top 25, their highest ranking since 1989. Maine has another tough contest on tap this weekend as they head to Villanova.

This team's bread and butter is defense, and considering the fact that defense usually leads to the postseason, Maine will more than likely be playing at the end of November.



A happy return to home

After traveling west for a clash with top-ranked Montana, a return to the friendly turf of Hempstead, N.Y. was a sigh of relief for Hofstra. Following a 21-0 trouncing by the Grizzlies, the Pride promptly dispatched Rhode Island 37-19.

Despite losing its top two receivers and starting quarterback, the A-10's top offense picked up exactly where it left off the end of the 2001 season. Ryan Cosentino, entering the game with a grand total of one pass in his college career, threw 39 balls, completing 24 of them for 339 yards, three touchdowns and no interceptions. His main target was Ricky Bryant, a transfer from Ohio State, who grabbed nine balls for 131 yards and a score.

Trevor Dimmie, the Pride's leading rusher last season, only carried the ball five times in the game, but his partner in crime, Vemba Bukula, ran for 112 yards and a touchdown, a 44-yarder to set the tone for the second half.

The Rams' passing attack was anemic at best in the game, with Jayson Davis throwing for just 102 yards. He also ran the ball 28 times for just 98 yards on the day. Rhody was the surprise starter of the 2001 season, jumping out to a 7-0 start before dropping three consecutive games to fall out of the playoffs. The painful finish of last season seems to have carried over into 2002, as the Rams, who were the only team to hold Hofstra under 30 points last year, drop to 1-1 on the season.

COURTESY JAMES MADISON UNIVERSITY MEDIA RELATIONS

JMU running back Rondell Bradley posted the best game of his career and garnered Atlantic 10 Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Not so fast...

After an eye-opening win against Georgia Southern to open its season, Delaware seemed ready to shrug aside all the negative comments people had made toward it following the retirement of longtime coach Tubby Raymond. The Blue Hens jumped way up in the Top 25 behind new coach K.C. Keeler after the 22-19 victory.

Unfortunately for Delaware, nobody told Richmond that the Blue Hens were back as an A-10

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 9

Martz's mistakes could cost Rams again

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Philadelphia's Brian Westbrook, formerly of A-10 power Villanova, may challenge Duce Staley for the starting running back spot.

There is nothing like looking good immediately after writing a column. After I chose the Broncos as my sleeper AFC Super Bowl team last week, they go out and beat the defending NFC champion Rams, 23-16. Then, on Sunday, I am accused of being a homer because of my placement of the New England Patriots as the AFC East winners, and they destroy the "best team in the AFC" on "Monday Night Football."

Nice.

Anyway, here's how I see the 2002 season breaking down in the NFC:

NFC East
Philadelphia Eagles
Washington Redskins
New York Giants
Dallas Cowboys

The Eagles will only go as far as quarterback Donovan McNabb can take them. I would rather not have a team so reliant on one player winning the division, but the pick is basically by default. Keep an eye out for former Atlantic 10 standout Brian Westbrook to take over the running back position from Duce Staley at some point in the season. Seeing former Packer wideout Antonio Freeman attempt to reinvigorate his career could make for an interesting story.

I would love to have taken the Redskins to win the East, but I just think that they are one year away. They could even end up as my Super Bowl pick for next year. I do expect them to make the playoffs by beating up on the Giants and Cowboys, but new coach Steve Spurrier will need one year of adjustment to really form a dominant team. It is hard to ignore that defense, though. Lavar Arrington is primed for a big season, while cornerbacks Champ Bailey and Fred Smoot form one of the best tandems at that position in the league.

The Giants showed some toughness against the 49ers in Week One. Their defense is okay. Their passing game is okay. Their running game is okay. I'm not sure about the coaching staff. There is just nothing to get excited about here.

The Dallas Cowboys seem to be a big sleeper pick this year. They have added some good players on defense (Roy Williams, Kevin Hardy) and quarterback Quincy Carter is one year older. This is a team that will lose five or six games by less than a touchdown and go 5-11 or so. Don't overlook the curse of the "Hard Knocks," Bill Belichick didn't. Will the Cowboys have a successful season next year? Maybe. This year? No.

NFC North
Green Bay Packers
Chicago Bears
Minnesota Vikings
Detroit Lions

The Packers have improved their defense, running back Ahman Green has quickly become an MVP candidate and Brett Favre is as good as ever. Expect the Packers to have some trouble in the regular season because of a tough division (not including the Lions), but to really start to hit stride in the playoffs. Don't worry about the receiving core; a great QB like Favre can make anyone look good. Favre will exact some revenge on the Rams in the NFC Championship.

JIM PIGNATIELLO

Many fans may forget that the Bears actually won this division last year. Their front seven is deadly, and the running game really sparked last season behind Anthony Thomas. Expect a bit of a letdown from the Bears this year. I'm not sold on

Turn to NFC, page 8

WELFTEL NIG... ON 9/11: A CAMPUS REFLECTS
ARTS PAGE 5. ED/OP PAGE 4. PAGE 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE SEVEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 9.12.02

Students come together for memorial vigil

"We gather together so we don't feel so alone." - Students pay their respects to those affected by last year's Sept. 11 attacks outside the Student Union at yesterday's vigil.

By Jamie Loo and S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts campus united on the lawn outside of the Student Union yesterday evening to remember the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11.

Following a musical introduction by a University quartet, Chancellor John V. Lombardi briefly addressed those gathered.

"No one is exempt from this tragedy," Lombardi stated.

Lombardi felt the turn out was quite good. "Students have a particular sensitivity both a year ago and today.

"I think what happens in moments like this is that we recognize the same feelings. We gather together so we don't feel so alone. It's a time to connect to our roots. The first place is to reconnect with our homes and families and then to rejoin the community," Lombardi said. "When we come together part of it is to sort it all out."

Student representatives took turns speaking to attendees about how Sept. 11 had affected them, their families, their minority group, and the communities they move in.

One speaker narrated her recollections of Sept. 11.

"We weren't so tough that day or so smart," she said. "We finally shut up long enough to realize how fragile everything is...it was the day we forgot to live. It was the day we finally began to think. Now the experience is ours. We'll be talking about where we were on September 11...Will it be in textbooks for our children to see or in video clips in social studies class?"

After student speakers concluded their thoughts the groups dispersed, many leaving for home. More than 75 students moved into the Student Union Ballroom to continue discussions and reflections.

Students congregated at tables set up in the ballroom to write or discuss their thoughts about Sept 11., the anniversary as well as the campus vigil.

"It's good to have a little community," said sophomore Gary Bernice. A year later, Bernice said, there still isn't any closure. "Unresolved. I don't think it will ever be resolved."

Some did not so much feel the need to discuss, but simply to be in the company of others while honoring those lost.

"I think it's really important to remember what happened a year ago today, just to be quiet and be with the UMass community," said Lindsay Hall.

"Today I felt a lot of the same emotions as last year and many others seemed like they were too. But there were so many other students acting like nothing ever happened."

"I think people heal in different ways and there are still a lot of people healing, she said. "I wanted to attend something to remember."

Many conferred about how they felt after a year.

"I think I'm mostly relieved. Everything was falling apart last year and it seems like everything has stabilized. We're moving on," said Ira Athale a graduate student.

Junior Beth Ioki concurred. "I think everybody's joined together. I think people on campus are more open minded."

"I've seen a lot more dialogue on world issues. I've had the privilege of seeing a lot of people sit down, talk and ask more questions. A lot more of reality has come into play for a lot of people. The campus has gotten a lot more thoughtful," said Mariellen, a volunteer at the Office of Community Service Learning, alumni class of 2002.

Ryan White, a freshman from Attleboro, said one of his neighbors was on one of the planes. She lived three blocks from him. "I used to mow her lawn."

White said he remembers the way the town came together in remembrance. "Everybody had signs and pictures on their lawns in support of her family."

Students seemed to appreciate the community gathering.

"The music was really lovely and added a nice touch," said Jessica Lilly, a sophomore. "The girl who gave the Sept. 11 account also gave a really touching speech."

Her friend, sophomore Tammy Radlowski, agreed.

"I thought it was really good that they had people there who represented the other's who were going through this...not just Americans, but exchange students as well."

A float commemorating the victims of Sept. 11 completes its journey from Northampton to the Amherst Common

Chancellor addresses student body

CHRALD LINGOCKI/COLLEGIAN

Chancellor Lombardi spoke about reactions to last year's attacks. "No one is exempt from the necessity of coping with this tragedy," he said at yesterday's vigil.

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts Chancellor John Lombardi addressed a gathering of several hundred students at the Student Union last night, honoring the victims of Sept. 11.

"We're gathered here because we have a vivid memory of what happened a year ago," Lombardi said. "And like all traumatic events in our lives, what happened a year ago will always remain with us in all kinds of strange and profound ways."

Lombardi acknowledged that students are still healing a year after the events of Sept. 11.

"I don't think even a year later we have all figured out how to integrate this experience into our lives," Lombardi said. "I don't think any of us who are here today and many of us who were not able to join us will probably be able to do that kind of integration for quite some time if ever."

Lombardi concluded by thanking the UMass community.

"I come to you as a new member of your community baring my experiences from that time and sharing them with you and drawing strength from your presence and your traditions," Lombardi said. "I'm grateful that you're here and I'm thankful to be part of you."

Pentagon opts out of September 11th gala event

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Top Pentagon officials, including the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, dropped out of a Sept. 11 anniversary event last night after deciding that the event in Washington, D.C. was a fundraiser. 2,000 members of victims' families, performing artists Roberta Flack and Randy Travis, and retired boxer Muhammad Ali attended "America's Heroes of Freedom" at The Daughters of the American Revolution's Constitution Hall.

Michael-John Toste, who planned "America's Heroes of Freedom", was concurrently organizing the "World Summit of the Prophets" for Toste's Michael-John Ministries. Toste claims to have received financial advice from God and is a self-proclaimed "prophet and business consultant."

Toste maintained a website for his ministry and "World Summit of the Prophets" event, but he took his site off-line last week after volunteers with "America's Heroes of Freedom" started dropping out.

"I just felt that it was something I should put off," Toste said in an interview with the Washington Post.

Toste claimed that the Sept. 11 anniversary event and his religious activities were not linked, while maintaining that "America's Heroes of Freedom" was a non-profit event.

Kimberly Fletcher, events coordinator for "America's Heroes of Freedom" quit the event because she claimed Toste was using the anniversary event to publicize Michael-John Ministries.

Toste claimed that the "America's Heroes" event wasn't affiliated with any religion. Corporations, major organizations, and government officials helped fund and organize the event including 50 members of Congress. The USO remained an active participant in the event as well.

Pentagon officials haven't released a statement regarding Toste and his ministry in California. According to a Pentagon spokesman, officials can't represent the Pentagon or the Department of Defense at the event because it's a fundraiser.

The Pentagon can't instruct family members of Pentagon victims to not attend the event, but the Department of Defense had supported the event while Toste was organizing it. The Dept. of Defense distributed invitations to "America's Heroes of Freedom" to family members.

Toste claimed that the event was not a fundraiser and that his organization is not for profit.

According to the Internal Revenue Service, they haven't approved organization to receive tax-deductible donations as tax-exempt.

Information for this story was taken from the Washington Times.

UMass astronomers find new pulsar

Goodwin named dean of CNFR

Steven D. Goodwin

By Arkadiy Finn
Collegian Correspondent

Steven D. Goodwin has been named the associate dean of the College of Food and Natural Resources (CFNR) at the University of Massachusetts.

Goodwin replaces James B. Marcum and Mark S. Mooney, associate deans who retired from the University in June.

Goodwin received his bachelor's degree in zoology from the University of Maine-Orono in 1976, then went on to earn a master's degree in environmental science from the University of Virginia in 1980. In 1984, Goodwin earned his doctorate in bacteriology from the University of Wisconsin and began his UMass career as an assistant professor in the microbiology department.

The dean of the CFNR, Clive E. Wilkie has expressed optimism about Goodwin's appointment. "[Steve] Goodwin brings an energy and enthusiasm that seems boundless," Wilkie said. "His efforts will be crucial to the College and the University as we continue our ascendancy to ever-higher levels of quality, excitement, and stature."

Goodwin has a long pedigree in both education and research while ascending the University ladder. He has taught courses in general biology and microbiology as well as more advanced courses such as microbial ecology in the Department of Microbiology. In 1992 he became an associate professor and in 2000 earned a professorship in the Department of Microbiology. His accolades include Outstanding Teaching Awards from the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics in 1994 and CFNR in 2000.

For the past two years his focus has been on redesigning the format and curriculum of the introductory biology courses, Bio. 100 and 101. The changes made here included the addition of the Class Talk system that allows for greater interaction between lecturer and student in real-time during class and use of the Internet to additionally prepare students with student-designed web pages and Quick, an online quizzing system. "We got together a group of faculty members," said Goodwin. "Our goal: being more active students participation in large lectures." The Pew Charitable Trust has funded the redesign by providing a grant of $200,000.

His own research included work on microbial synthesis and degradation of biopolymers. In this process biopolymers, or macromolecules, are produced and released by various microorganisms until to be broken down by other microorganisms. The final effect being that a kind of recycling system for building materials of these polymers emerges.

Goodwin sees his new position as a chance to include his previous experiences in both teaching and research at the University level. "My new job encompasses administrative responsibility for both teaching and research within the College," said Goodwin. As associate dean of CFNR he will help to manage one of the bigger colleges at UMass, one diverse in researchers and educators.

The challenge of such work and the timing of his appointment have presented Goodwin with a unique opportunity. "To me the most exciting part of this job is the opportunity to interact with people doing both research and teaching," said Goodwin. "Also this is a very exciting time for the University with the new chancellor coming in."

According to the website, (www.bio.umass.edu) Goodwin authored or co-authored 33 journal articles amongst other various publications during his UMass research career. His research interests encompassed microbial ecology, anaerobic digestion and redox chemistry in groundwater, microbiology of solid waste disposal, compost microbiology and spore formation.

Goodwin's administrative credentials convey extensive experience with this side of education. He served as Director of the Graduate Program in the Department of Microbiology from 1992-1995 and as the Associate head for Undergraduate Affairs from 1995 to 2002 in the Department of Microbiology. He was named president of the Bio/Environmental Polymer Society in 2000 and has served on editorial boards of respected industry publications such as the "Journal of Environmental Polymer Degradation" and "International Microbiology."

COME TO THE ALL STAFF MEETING TODAY AT 6PM IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
110 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

UMass FOOTBALL

SATURDAY
SEPTEMBER 14TH
WARREN McGUIRK ALUMNI STADIUM

UMASS
vs.
A.I.C.
1:00 PM

VALDAMAR BROWER
ALL-AMERICAN

BOBBLEHEAD GIVEAWAY
GATES OPEN @ 11:30 AM

STUDENT TICKETS FREE

COCA-COLA FAN APPRECIATION DAY
THE FIRST 1,000 FANS RECEIVE A COMPLIMENTARY MINUTEMAN BOBBLEHEAD

FOR TICKETS CALL
545-0810
www.umassathletics.com

Humanities and Fine Arts
Alumni in the World
Dean's Seminar Series - Fall 2002

COME MEET LEADING UMASS ALUMNI
FROM THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY

September 17 & 18 - Bart Rosenblatt, '79
President/Producer, Neverland Films

Lecture: Tuesday, September 17
4:00 PM, Campus Center Room 917,
"Behind the Camera: An Insight into Feature Film Production"

Screenwriting Seminar: Wednesday, September 18
9:30-11:00 AM, 601 Herter Hall
(Limited seating RSVP to sharond@admin.umass.edu)

~ ALSO COMING THIS SEMESTER ~

September 23 & 24 - Kyle Cooper, '84
Founder/Creative Director, Imaginary Forces

Laura Scholl, '60, TBA
Senior graphic designer and lighting specialist, Sony Entertainment

Matthew Herman, '64, TBA
Executive Vice President, Production, Studios USA Television

There will be networking opportunities, lectures and seminars.

Other dates and times of events will be announced soon. For all event details, look for posters in your department, check out ads in the Daily Collegian, or contact Sharon Davenport at: sharond@admin.umass.edu.

Big E returns to West Springfield

Athletes, performers and police from the University of Massachusetts will participate in the Big E next week.

The Big E, or the Eastern States Exposition, the eighth largest fair in New England, will feature the UMass dance team, cheerleaders, the Minuteman Mascot and the Minuteman Marching Band on the lawn of the Massachusetts Building.

The UMass cheerleaders will perform from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, Sept. 13, followed by the Minuteman Mascot.

The UMass Dance Team will dance each hour on Saturday, Sept. 14, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The UMass Police will stage demonstrations on child car-seat safety and alcohol education on Sunday. The police will also present workshops on rape aggression defense on Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 11 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

The UMass Soccer Team will conduct a soccer clinic from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 16. The women's lacrosse team will conduct a lacrosse clinic on Sat. Sept. 21, from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Toast!, a UMass improvisational theater group, will perform Thursday, Sept. 19, from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

The Minuteman Marching Band will perform in Thursday, Sept. 19., at 6 p.m., flowed by their march in the Mardi Gras Parade at 7:30 p.m.

UMass engineering students will display a super-mileage vehicle on Sunday, Sept. 29.

Andrew Fagg of the department of computer science, and director of the Wearable Computing Group, will exhibit UMass computer systems.

Athletes will be available for autographs throughout the week. The UMass football team will be present from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 23. and Tuesday, Sept. 24. UMass women's crew team will be present Wednesday, Sept. 25.

On Thursday, Sept. 19., UMass Extension will exhibit In-Touch with Science, an interactive display. They will present Breakfast around the World and Five Pounds of Fat on Friday.

Tickets are $12, with discounts for multiple days and opening day (Sept. 13). The Big E is on Rt. 147 in West Springfield.

-Laura Kyser

JAMES SCHAEFER

Pick'n a bone

Mary Ellen Bisq of Hatfield fills out paper work at the Red Cross bone marrow donor testing in the Campus Center yesterday.

"Jeans 'n T-shirts" party coming up

By Jamie Loo
Collegian Staff

The annual event, "Jeans 'n T-Shirts," will be taking place this Saturday from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

"Jeans 'n T-Shirts" has been going on for over 25 years. Anthony Graham, a student, said the event continues to be one of the biggest college parties in New England, drawing in over 1,000 people each year. Graham said many alumni attend the event as well as students from as far away as Virginia. According to Graham, it was one of the first functions on campus for ALANA (African, Latino, Asian and Native American) students and was created to bring together the then-small community. The event's name came from the dress code, "jeans and t-shirts."

"The uniform was meant to be just jeans and t-shirts. It's an informal thing," said Graham. Though its roots are in the ALANA community, Graham emphasizes, "everybody's welcome."

Malcolm Beckwith, a community outreach worker in the Office of ALANA Affairs, says that gatherings like this are particularly important in the first weeks of school because of the amount of stress students are facing coming back. This year, ALANA students also returned to a new set of challenges – the removal of their academic support programs. Though the individual programs still exist, their primary missions have been changed from being academic support services to cultural support services.

"The school hasn't been too supportive of how these changes are affecting ALANA students," Beckwith said.

Beckwith said that students have been calling all summer and are coming into the office with a lot of questions about the programs and how the changes are going to affect them.

"People are scared. Advisors that have been advising them for three of four years are suddenly gone," Beckwith said.

Beckwith hopes the event will bring together the UMass community and will encourage more students to get involved in the ALANA community. He also hopes that it will give students a time to get together and relax.

"We wanted something more laid back for people returning to school," said Beckwith.

WRITE FOR NEWS!
OR ELSE...

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9
For more information call 253-7571

- Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-and many more
- Nutritional Consultation
- Tanning
- Sauna
- Juice Bar & Supplements
- Fitness Testing & Programming

Semester Special $160

- Stairmasters
- Precor Treadmills
- Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
- Lifecycle Upright Bikes
- Precor Crosstrainers
- Body Masters & Icarian Free Weights
- Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

PEPPER
MASHAY
LIVE W/
" I GOT MY PRIDE "
&
" DIVE IN THE POOL"
FRIDAY
9.20.02
DIVA'S Nightclub
492 PLEASANT ST. NORTHAMPTON MA
GEN. ADMISSION
19+ VALID ID REQ.
INFO: 413.586.8161
WEDNESDAY
SEPT. 18th 2002
From Las Vegas And Atlantic City Comedy Star
JERRY HALLIDAY
And His PUPPETS FROM HELL
Featuring
Sista Girl
" Bubblin' Brown Sugar with an ATTITUDE "
&
THE NOT SO HOLY NUN
18+ VALID ID REQ
21+ NO COVER
DOORS OPEN @ 9PM

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED-OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

One year later:

Our campus responds

At 9:02 a.m. yesterday morning, in Professor Grant Wilson's Astronomy 100 lecture, the relevant words of Carl Sagan were shared in a somber light as the campus paused to remember United Flight 175 and those lost one-year prior, on Sept. 11, 2001.

At 10:03 a.m., as the makeshift memorials on the lawn adjacent to the pond shifted in the wind, the bell in the Old Chapel continued to toll in memory of Flight 93 and draw students between classes to pause beneath its haunting refrain.

Throughout the day, the windows of the Student Union Craft Center were draped in simple white sheets, annotated only by the date.

The usual music flooding People's Market gave way to radio addresses and tributes.

The flags at Haigis sagged to half-mast under the weight of a year's worth of confusion, concern and fright.

Most importantly, though, as the gray morning wore on, we were out in full, going about our day with tasteful reserve and mournful eyes. The symbolic power in the image of a campus pulsing with activity was simple, of course, but newly energized by the one-year anniversary of this sobering tragedy:

We can't ever forget.

The remembrances and memorials here at the University of Massachusetts were simple, tasteful and appropriate gestures by those individuals and groups who moved forward with them. While the mass media largely reveled in showcasing the imagery of the attacks, our campus wrapped itself in the idea that stronger community ties and ideals can yield more beneficial results. That through pain can come extraordinary healing.

Through death, new life.

Chancellor John V. Lombardi, soon after taking the steps of the Student Union last night, did his best to summarize the feelings of a community he only recently entered. "What happened a year ago will always remain with us in all kinds of strange and profound ways. We remember where we were, we remember how we learned and observed, we remember how we reacted, we remember with whom we shared our shock, our surprise, our anger... I don't think even a year later we have all figured out how to integrate this experience into our lives.

"Every time there is a tragedy and a loss and a pain, we have to eventually embrace it, understand it and deal with it. We won't all do it the same way, we don't all react in the same fashion, we don't all see the same meaning, but no one is exempt from the necessity of coping with this tragedy..."

Nobody claimed exemption. In what could have been an easy day to turn the other way and forget, or to turn on our televisions and wash away in the blitz of imagery, our campus turned to the one place where the healing began some 365 days ago:

Itself.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Obey the voices... write for Ed/Op! Applications are closing soon! Please come down and talk to Regan and Jamie or e-mail us at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com.

A long gray day ...
but the sun is still shining

ADAM MARTIGNETTI

Writing, for me, is more than a profession, more than a way to make meager ends. Writing is cathartic. It's the way I make sense of the world. It's the way I release myself from the sort of oppressive concrete limits of physical reality. It's the way I put into words what I can't put into words – verbally that is. And it's certainly the only way I can describe yesterday.

Sept. 11, 2002, a year to the day after the terrorist attacks that rattled all of us to the core. I found myself in an Alice-like Wonderland.

I was tentative, uneasy even, unsure of my surroundings. I awoke later than I had wanted. My immediate thought was 8:46. 8:46. 8:46. The numbers just kept clanging in my head. They no longer even seemed to represent time, just 8-4-6. I wasn't sure if I should hurry to arrive at work before 8:46, or, if I should wait until it had passed. Shower. Breakfast. A sandwich for lunch. 8:15 now.

In that state of flux, I left the house to discover the world crying. Rain drops pattered my windshield in silence, as if out of respect for the day's many memorials. No windshields, no amount of crying would be enough though on this day.

I was thrown. My most distinct memory of Sept. 11, 2001 is not of planes, or radio broadcasts, or buildings collapsing. It's of me at West Dennis Beach on an overcast, drizzling day. Slightly hunched, a bit out of breath, in the middle of an afternoon jog, I went there to watch. I went there just to be; to see the seagulls and the gray sky and to touch the sand and to smell the air. I guess I went there to feel.

The world was mourning again. And I noticed that cars had their headlights on. I couldn't decide if it was a tribute to the victims or just a precaution in light of the weather. Still undecided, still in flux, I put my parking lights on, the black dial on my dashboard turned half way, a reflection of my emotional state.

"A plane has struck the World Trade Center, witnesses say." The phrase repeated in my mind like one divided by three. It was my first experience of Sept. 11, 2001, an Associated Press report that I read on the Yahoo news page. There was nothing further. No more details to speak of. Just a plane. The World Trade Center. And struck.

I relayed the one-sentence news story, in retrospect perhaps the most compelling sentence ever written, to my best friend over Instant Messenger. He hadn't heard yet. "Didn't say what type of plane, just a plane." "Wonder if it was an accident, pilot error." "Gotta go. Class."

"In that state of flux, I left the house to discover the world crying. Rain drops pattered my windshield in silence, as if out of respect for the day's many memorials."

He's off to a day at Bentley College. I'm off to a day at work. The world was off to a day of infamy.

I'm transported forward in time. Now, I'm on the Village Green in Dennis. The early 1800s church bell rings to "America the Beautiful." A middle-aged woman sits on a lonely curb by herself, her head resting in her folded hands. She has a lot to say, I think as I shut my door gently so as to not disturb her.

People have spent the morning placing flags around the green. It's remarkable, a striking juxtaposition between the multitude of miniature flags on the ground and the stately flag resting above at half-mast. Luckily, I'm there to take a picture because no amount of words could describe the scene's true emotion.

I fiddle with the camera a bit. Look around to see where the best shot may be. Finally, I decide to lay flat on my stomach. Take the picture literally from the grass, the flags, the flagpole, the gazebo, all of it. It's comforting somehow. The grass makes it real.

I'm almost done here. But a friend sees me. She asks me if I have a flag to put on the ground. The thought never occurred to me. "Me?" I said almost surprised that I could be a part of the display. "No, I don't." She hands me an extra that she has brought with her. I stake it among a group of others, making it indistinguishable to me or anyone else. Perhaps, that was the special part of it all.

And with that, I felt right again. The simple action allowed me to think of something that had not once entered my mind all day. I had a deadline at noon. I had stories to write, people to call, quotes to fasten. I had much ahead of me on Sept. 11, 2001.

For each one of us, Sept. 11, 2001 will always generate very specific, very personal memories. A gray beach afternoon for me. Perhaps a quiet campus pond for some of you. Perhaps other things that I cannot even imagine. We must find a way to honor these memories, to do them justice, but in the same light, we must also find a way to move on, to move forward with our days and with our lives.

Yesterday, I put a flag in the ground. At approximately 12:28 p.m., I finished writing my last story. By 1:00 p.m., the sun began to shine.

Adam Martignetti is a former Collegian columnist. He currently works for The Register newspaper on Cape Cod.

Commercial daze

KATIE LANDERS

I had to listen to TV commercials all summer. Being a lifeguard at an apartment complex, the radio is my only source of sanity. Of course by August I'd listened to Jack Johnson 15 times a day, John Mayer about 35, and Vanessa Carlton a whopping 40. I've heard every Top 100 song out and it revolves in my head continuously even when I'm going to bed. There is more to the FM stations, however, then just the played out songs. The commercials are just as thrilling. I'd like to take this opportunity to review them with you and see if you think they are absolutely absurd, although humorous.

Waves crash. A calm voice talks about the breezy beaches with white sand and blue water. You think Bermuda. You think maybe the Keys. How about New Jersey? Yep, cause that was on the radio about 15 times a day. Apparently the New Jersey tourism board has thought about scrounging up people to drive six hundred miles to hit up the beach and go to some crappy casinos. You might as well go to the Cape, and if you really want to gamble, get to Foxwoods or play Keno at your local bar.

Reasons why? A.) The Cape is a lot cleaner and nicer. Have you ever been down the New Jersey Turnpike? B.) If you go to Foxwoods, you can at least get home and sleep in your own bed. Plus, you're not generally trapped there and you won't lose all of your life savings. Go to Atlantic City and yeah, you could hang out with MTV. Yeah, right. New Jersey, the drive-through state. Exactly where I want to spend my next vacation.

The most humorous commercial by far that I heard this summer was for a baseball team. The Brockton Rocks. The Rocks are apparently a member of the Eastern Division of Northern League baseball. I'm not laughing at the team being some form of minor league baseball. I'm laughing at their whole attempt to attract a fan base. The slogan for the team is, "The Brockton Rocks. We hit and run." Hmmm, Brockton, a nice city I'm sure. Though I've never been there, they don't have the best reputation on the nightly news. Apparently the PR people think the slogan is catchy, and it is. I will give them credit for using tactics such as meeting players before the game and getting a chance to "see heroes up close." All well and good, but most of the players were probably just drafted out of high school and wouldn't even make a decent Division I team. They even compare ticket prices that are much lower than a certain big professional baseball team located in the nearest major city (i.e. the Red Sox). Well, I'm guessing you probably pay about ten dollars to go. I'd rather chip in the extra twenty and sit in the bleachers at a game against Tampa Bay.

I got a little time in with JAMN 94.5 this summer. I like to listen to it in my car. Whatever. Couple great ones there. Who else doesn't want to cruise the strip at Hampton Beach and go to Guido Murphy's for some cocktails? If it gets boring, I bet you could check out the Casino and see if Def Leppard is making an appearance. Or you could sit on the sidewalk of the boardwalk and watch the cars that cruise "the strip" for hours on end. Fireworks on Wednesday (I remember from when I was little). Anyone up for the fake shooting gallery?

I think that JAMN took the cake this summer for bad commercials. If you are sensitive to "personal topics", stop reading. Did you ever hear the male enhancement commercial? Apparently JAMN thinks its listeners are unsatisfied with their bodies. I certainly never heard these commercials on Mix or Kiss 108. I don't listen to Magic but I'm sure it wasn't there either. The best part is that they use some woman's voice to talk about how much better her partner is with this new wonder drug. I bet everyone will run for that...right before they pimp out and head up to Hampton.

I guess the moral of this article is don't listen to all the commercials. I guess it's a nice break from 14-year-old Canadians singing about how they're sick of their boyfriends dressing preppy. Eventually, like those over played songs they'll get in your head and rot your brain. In fact, I think I hear Vanessa Carlton walking a thousand miles right now.

Katie Landers is a Collegian columnist.

ATTENTION ALL INTERESTED WRITERS! THERE'S AN ALL-STAFF MEETING TONIGHT AT 6 P.M. IN THE COLLEGIAN NEWSROOM.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.12.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

A breeze of hope from shared student artistry

By Scott Enright
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Sitting under a shady tree with sand whipping into my face, I looked up and saw flags blowing harshly with the wind yesterday. Bound together by a rope, dozens of messages painted onto white flags demonstrated University of Massachusetts residential remembrance of Sept. 11.

This is the second time that a display like this has hung outside the Student Union steps. The last time was directly after the twin towers were hit.

The idea behind the exhibit was healing, and the way to do it was by getting people together and having them portray their perspectives as one voice. This was about embracing the effects that have helped to shape our lives.

The image of an eagle clutching a band-aid with its sharp claws, while placing it over a threatening crack in the globe, stood out. Dreams of global unity and prayers for those who have been lost throughout the world decorated the collage of feelings that gave itself to the wind.

The tone was not angry, nor was it hurtful. Instead, the tone was hopeful and held the attitude that our energy must be put in the right direction to better our world. This exhibit offered a direction.

Participating students stopped by to view their own work and to share their thoughts.

"This was a really good way to show a representation of what good we want to come from the events that occurred," replied contributing artist Trudy Smith, a junior Chemistry major.

"We want everyone to come together as one," spoke Kishana Hudson, a junior Economics major and also a contributor to the event.

When asked what hopes they had for people stopping by to view their artwork, Fabiola Loster, also a junior Economics major, proudly replied, "We hope that a lot of people may see this as a living example of 'United We Stand' instead of just hearing it as a motto."

Erica Pedalde, residential director of Cance dormitory in Southwest, was happy to share her insight about the creation of this project. She spoke of the power that a creation like this has to change the world; it is a way to initiate dialogue about the issues that are really important. It is a way to really get people together and to realize that this tragedy has affected everyone. Pedalde believes that raising awareness and building unity is the way to prevent similar events to that of the attacks from happening in the future.

COURTESY EASTERN STATES EXPOSITION

Big E is Back!

The Big E Eastern States Exposition comes to West Springfield Sept. 13 through 29. Look for next Thursday's Arts & Living Cover on all the excitement.

Theater troupe direct from Britain at Mt. Holyoke

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Shakespeare is coming to town. Well, maybe not good old William himself, but definitely one of his productions, his love of theater and his fellow countrymen as the Oxford University Dramatic Society (OUDS) will make its debut in the United States tonight when it performs Twelfth Night or What You Will at Mt. Holyoke College.

Directed by Alex Clifton, the show is a collaborative effort among the Massachusetts International Festival of the Arts (MIFA), the University of Massachusetts Renaissance Center and Mt. Holyoke's Department of Theatre Arts and will run from Sept. 12 through the 15th in Chapin Auditorium at Mary Woolley Hall. Before the theatrical extravaganza, however, guests are invited to attend a lecture by Thelma Holt.

Pause.

Now, when a lecture is announced, we all know, some tend to halt reading and assume the worst. It'll be nothing but a stuffy, long, dull mono-toned droning session, some might imagine. In this case though, you'd be best advised to think again, for Holt has all the animation and powerful expression she needs to fully engage an audience.

And the reason is simple. She began her career as an actress on stage in England, founding the Open Space Theatre and afterwards becoming Director of the Round House. Met in life with a series of successions in the theater industry tranging from executive producer of a number of star-studded plays to winning four Tony Awards for A Doll's House with Janet McTeer to becoming a Cameron Mackintosh Professor of Contemporary Theatre), she was awarded C.B.E. by the Queen of England in 1994.

Her topic of discussion this evening, held at 6:30 p.m. in the New York Room of Mary Woolly Hall, is "Internationalism in the Theatre," and as long-time associate and friend Donald T. Sanders put it, "If [Holt's] putting it on, it'll be good."

Sanders, MIFA Executive Artistic Director, explained that Holt is also one to partially thank for having the production make its national debut in the Pioneer Valley. You see, MIFA specializes in bringing major international productions to the valley, but it was only through his work with Holt that obtaining a show put on by OUDS became possible.

OUDS was founded 1885 in Britain by a man named Alec MacKinnon. It's official intent is to have theater troupe "free from club and class jealousies." Sound different from the usual motto? It should, because that's exactly on what the group places its highest pride.

Turn to SHAKESPEARE, page 8

Combining Latin and rap to stir up something new

By Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Angie Martinez
Animal House
Elektra Records

There are few female rap artists in the entertainment industry today. There are even fewer who have the potential to be either major innovators or forces in the entertainment world. With her sophomore release that meshes hip-hop and rap with Latin beats, Animal House, Angie Martinez proves that she has the potential to be both.

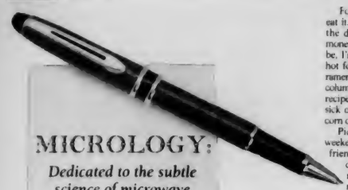
Since the mid-90's, Martinez has been an icon in the rap industry as the afternoon drive jock on New York's famed Hot 97. In 2001, she decided to put her own rhyming skills out and release her first album, Up Close and Personal, which was a long requested effort by both industry buffs and her fans on Hot 97. "Mi Amor," the CD's most successful single, did see some airplay, but nothing close to the pending success of Animal House's first single, "If I Could Go," featuring her label mate, Lil' Mo and Sacario.

Animal House showcases every single side of Martinez's talent. Her Latin roots are obvious in the beats of every track on the album. "If I Could Go" is unbelievably catchy and establishes a standard of sorts for the rest of the album. It combines a Latin-inflected guitar riff with the rap stylings of Martinez and the sweet vocals of Lil' Mo to produce a radio friendly hip-hop track that obviously remains true to Martinez's background and style.

The album showcases many other sides of Martinez, including the man-killer lyrics of "We Can Get it On" to arguably the best track on the album, the more sweet and sensitive "F___ed Up Situation." "f___ed Up Situation" reminds the listener vaguely of "Song Cry" by Jay-Z both in lyrical elements and musicality. It's a little slower, and the synthesizers create a "prettier" effect, rather than more of the straight up hard Latin beats that signify most of the rest of the album. It's a more insightful track about a failed relationship and the confusion that a girl feels and was definitely my favorite track on the album.

"So Good" is a more laid-back track, and the beats are reminiscent of a solid Latin Samba sound. It features up and comer Keon Bryce, and the two of them have obvious chemistry, some of the best chemistry Martinez has with the many collaborations she does on the album.

Martinez also includes a few short skits on the album that are good comic relief for in-between tracks. The skit "TRL" is epically funny, as it precedes Martinez's first single, "If I could go" and comes across as a tongue-in-cheek deal about her video being requested on the famed MTV show. "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" and "Been Around the World" are equally as funny.



Plenty of Martinez's famous friends are also showcased on the album, including Fat Joe, N.O.R.E., Kelis and Missy Elliott. However, the writing, producing

Turn to MARTINEZ, page 6

ELEKTRA ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

Angie Martinez getting ready for some well-owned recognition.

MICROLOGY:

Dedicated to the subtle science of microwave cookery in all its forms and varients

WITH JESSICA PELLETIER

Utensils needed for this recipe:
1 spoon
1 medium size mixing bowl
1 8-inch pie pan
An oven mitt or pot holders

The mix will, of course, require
2 large eggs
1/4 cup of oil
1/2 cup of water

Food. You know it, you love it and you eat it. And soon, you're going to get sick of the dining hall food or run out of extra money for delivery. Whatever the case may be, I'm sure there are times when delicious hot food would be a plus – the time when ramen noodles just don't cut it anymore. This column is dedicated to providing quick, easy recipes for those of you out there who are sick of using your microwaves to pop popcorn or reheat coffee.

Picture this. It's Thursday night. The weekend's almost here, and you're with your friends, watching a movie and sharing a dish of the richly moist, chewy brownies that just came from your microwave. Trust me, during the space of no more time than a Simpson's episode, you can be noshing your own warmly nostalgic snack. You'll waste less time and money than if you ordered out, and as an added bonus, there's no rushing to the stove to see if they're done.

Before we even get started, I'd like to reiterate that glassware or other non-metal parts have to be used for this recipe. Using metal cookware causes big, blue sparks and power shortages that you just don't need when you're trying to make something to eat. Disposable foil pans are bad too; there are certain ways you can use foil to cook in a microwave, but not here. A 10-inch pan will fit perfectly inside a Micro-Fridge microwave. However, any pan shape will work as long as the dish can revolve.

Don't forget something to grab the pan out of the microwave with, either. Upon testing the recipe, I did, and I was kicking myself as I struggled with two handfuls of Kleenex in my grip so as not to burn my hands. A towel, oven mitt or almost anything else works better than a two-ply tissue.

It doesn't matter what brand of brownie mix you use for this recipe. Advertising rules prevent me from endorsing any particular brand, but personally I'm a fan of the mix with the bizarre white puppet who has a penchant for being torso-probed by every human he comes in contact with. Certain online websites offer recipes for a homemade batter, but in the end the scratch recipe brownies taste relatively the same and require twice the work without results as consistent as a pre-made mix. If home-baked is your bag, though, friedmansmicrowave.com has a scratch recipe that works well if you have the extra supplies and are looking for a way to kill an extra 15 minutes or so.

The batter is prepared exactly the same as an oven-brownie batch, and the same rules apply – grease the bottom of dish, poke with toothpick or knife toward end of cooking and if it comes out clean, the batch is done. If you'd rather have something more like chocolate cake, just add another egg to the mix. And don't forget to turn the pan halfway through the cooking time, so it will "bake" evenly.

Once you've come up with the basic batter for the dish, you can experiment with any quick stir-ins or toppings you like. Try piling on semi-sweet chocolate chips and walnuts, bake as directed and then drizzle some caramel sundae topping for delicious turtle brownies. Another option would be to melt a cup of white chocolate, pour it over a batch of the already cooled pastries and finish with a layer of fresh raspberries.

Here's a quick fact for anyone interested: microwave ovens cook from the inside of the food to the outside – just the opposite from a conventional oven. When I cooked the recipe, I assumed the microwave that came attached to the Micro-Fridge was a frail insult to machinery, but it's really not. After I exceeded the original cooking time, my first batch came out solid on the inside and chewy on the outside. So don't worry if you have a lower wattage microwave; it still works. And if, by chance, one of your batches comes out a little overdone, just reheat the servings for 10 seconds before you dive into them, and they'll have softened enough to be enjoyed.

Jessica Pelletier is a Collegian columnist.

■ Martinez

continued from page 5

"Animal House is one of those albums that is great to blast at a party, or while you are getting ready to go out, as the beats are danceable and the album is upbeat and catchy."

and vocal talents of the Jennifer Lopez clone (I almost mistook her for J-Lo the first time I saw the video for "If I Could Go") clearly are exhibited on Animal House. Martinez wrote and produced every track on the CD. As a Latin artist, Martinez puts a totally new spin on the proverbial "Latin Invasion" into American mainstream music. Unlike artists like Shakira, J-Lo or Ricky Martin, Martinez combines her love for rap with Latin Beats to create something totally new, which is a difficult feat in mainstream music today. She is truly an innovator, combining no-non-sense rhyming with impressive production techniques. She also knows her limits, and when it comes to doing the vocal acrobatics and singing on the album, she leaves that to people such as Lil' Mo, who has a much better singing voice than Martinez.

Animal House is one of those albums that is great to blast at a party, or while you are getting ready to go out, as the beats are danceable and the album is upbeat and catchy. It's a great conglomeration of Latin music and rap, and Martinez proves herself to be a force and pacesetter in popular hip-hop and rap music.

ELEKTRA ENTERTAINMENT GROUP

Martinez, practically a clone to Jennifer Lopez.

NEED EXTRA CASH?

Sign up to receive emails about upcoming decision making experiments from the Department of Resource Economics!

To sign up go to:
http://www.umass.edu/resec/expecon

$100 Bonus Opportunity
If you participate in one decision making experiment during the Fall semester your name will be entered in a drawing for $100. (drawing to be held at the end of the fall semester)

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor

Busch / Busch Light 24 Bottles $9.99 + dep

Milwaukee's Best 30 Cans $10.99 + dep

333 Russell St Rt9
584-8174

WRITE FOR ARTS & LIVING

TRACFONEU

NATIONWIDE PREPAID WIRELESS

Buy Now and Get 1 YEAR OF WIRELESS SERVICE AND 150 FREE MINUTES

SPECIAL STUDENT RATES

As Low As 20¢* Per Min.

*Special student rates are only available to college students in select calling areas of the U.S. See tracfoneu.com for details.

TO GET THIS OFFER, ACTIVATE YOUR PHONE WITH PROMO CODE: 66094

$79.99 suggested retail price

Everything you WANT!
- Free voice mail
- Free caller ID
- Free call waiting
- Nationwide long distance included
- Pay-as-you-go
- Minutes don't expire with active service
- Rates include all wireless taxes & fees

Nothing you DON'T!
- No contracts
- No monthly bills
- No credit checks
- No deposits
- No age limits
- No activation fees

Win $5000 Cash

No purchase necessary. Open only to legal U.S. residents 18 or older. Void where prohibited. Subject to full official rules. Grand Prize (1): $5,000. To enter & view full rules, visit www.tracfoneu.com. Sweepstakes ends at 11:59 p.m. CT on 11/1/02. Sponsor: TracFone Wireless, Inc. Miami, FL.

VISIT WWW.TRACFONEU.COM FOR DETAILS

TRACFONE IS AVAILABLE AT RETAILERS EVERYWHERE OR ONLINE AT:
WWW.TRACFONEU.COM

© 2002 TracFone Wireless Inc. All Rights Reserved.

Big Y WORLD CLASS MARKET
We've Got It All!

WELCOME BACK UMass STUDENTS!

175 University Drive
Amherst · 413-253-0416
Monday-Saturday
7am-11pm
Sunday 7am-10pm

WE ACCEPT OCMP!

Prices Effective September 12th to 18th In Our Amherst Store Only.

From Our Kitchen

Sandwich Shop Hours:
7am to 9pm Every Day
Pizza Shop Hours:
9am to 9pm Every Day

Chicken Caesar Salad For Two BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Large 18" Cheese Pizza BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

To Order A Pizza Call: 253-7690

Best Pizza In Town!

Made Fresh Throughout The Day!

To Place An Order Call: 253-8098

Small Philly Steak & Cheese Grinder BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Just Heat & Serve!

Grilled Chicken Breast, 4 oz BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Come In and Sign Up For Your FREE Big Y Express Savings Club Card

Shakespeare

continued from page 7

"It's an experimental theater in Oxford that tours nationally and internationally," Sanders explained. "The reputation is that some interesting people have come out of there. It always serves as a workshop where classic texts can be done in a different way. It treats theater as a living art."

Proving important for the residents of Western Massachusetts, Holt has become somewhat of a patron to UMDS since receiving the Cameron Mackintosh Chair, and after practically three years in the planning, the 21-person troupe has arrived.

"They've become known for their contemporary spin," said Sanders.

"We thought it'd be great for the area – almost a 'hands across the water' thing. It's really something special."

Now "special," we all know, is a reasonably questionable term, but when one considers that up until this point the only possible places to see the troupe had been in Oxford, England or during one of its short tours in Japan, special seems like the most appropriate description one could offer – except, perhaps, for:

"It's just a fantastic opportunity," as Sander's re-phrased it.

Tickets are available by calling The Rooke Theatre Box Office at 538-2406 or at the door one hour prior to show time. Cost is $15 for general admission and $8 for students and senior citizens. Mt. Holyoke College students gain free admission.

INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR SPORTS?

ALL-STAFF MEETING TONIGHT 6 p.m.

OFFICE WORKERS

Various office help needed: packing boxes, counting materials, labeling cartons, and answering phones. Preferred candidates will work quickly and accurately and be able to work at least 3 consecutive hours between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. on days that we have work. On-call hours available beginning mid-September throughout the academic year. $8.00/hr. Call 256-0444 to request an application.

Personnel
NATIONAL EVALUATION SYSTEMS, INC.
P.O. Box 226 Amherst, MA 01004-0226
personnel@nesinc.com E.O.E.

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Busch / Busch Light 24 Bottles $9.99 + dep
Milwaukee's Best 30 Cans $10.99 + dep
333 Russell St Rt9
584-8174

BECOME AN EMT!
For more information check out www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885
Sign up for the fall class now!!!

LESS hours. More money. More challenge. More flexibility.
PART TIME OPPORTUNITIES FOR FREEZER & WAREHOUSE SELECTORS
Earn $10/hr in training with potential to earn $18/hr
You get MORE working LESS hours at C & S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., the nationwide leader in grocery distribution. We have flexible part time schedules to fit your busy lifestyle. So, if part time is the right time for you, come join our growing team.
FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES:
WESTFIELD: Days, Sat and Sun with the option of Mon 6am-12noon and Nights Thur, Fri with the option of Sunday 6pm-4:30am
HATFIELD: Nights, Thur, Fri & Sat 6:30pm-5am and Days, Sat & Sun or Both 7am-5:30pm
At C&S, we make sure your efforts are appreciated and rewarded with career opportunities and competitive wages. Please apply in person Mon-Fri 8:00am-4:30pm at:
FREEZER OPENINGS AT WESTFIELD: 53 Summit Lock Road, Westfield, MA 01085, or call 413-564-2043
WAREHOUSE OPENINGS AT HATFIELD: 142 Elm Street, Hatfield, MA 01038 (exit 21 of Interstate 91) or call 413-247-0551
C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.
www.cswg.com
EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

Budding Journalism Major
Spent summer writing for hometown paper.
Future holds editorial position at major pub.
NICOLE
Her byline always includes AT&T.

Freedom of Expression.

Sign up for AT&T Long Distance and get up to 4 hours of calling on us.*

Choose AT&T for Long Distance when you sign up for local phone service. Then call 1 877-COLLEGE to add the AT&T One Rate 7¢ Plus Plan and get up to 4 hours of FREE calling.

1877-COLLEGE x27354
att.com/college/newterm

AT&T College Communications
your choice. your world. your voice.
AT&T

Long Distance • Internet Service • Virtual PrePaid Cards • International Calling

*Free minutes consist of monthly long distance bill credits and an AT&T Phone Card worth up to 2 hours of domestic calling. Terms and Conditions apply. Bill credit offer expires 12/31/02. Go to www.att.com/college-newterm for complete details.

Good news, bad news for North Carolina St.

By Jon Page
TECHNICIAN (NORTH CAROLINA STATE U.)

(U-WIRE) RALEIGH, N.C. – North Carolina State won this weekend's battle against Navy in overwhelming fashion, but not without suffering some casualties of its own.

Senior defensive tackle Jerrick Hall, who was removed from the field via stretcher during the Wolfpack's 65-19 thumping of the Midshipmen, has been cleared by a neurosurgeon and is now listed as probable for the Pack's ACC opener against Wake Forest Saturday.

The news is also promising for junior Alan Halloway, who was initially believed to have torn his ACL. The defensive tackle is doing much better than expected and has also been upgraded to probable for the match-up with the Demon Deacons.

The same cannot be said for sophomore center Jed Paulsen and his strained ACL.

As of Monday, Paulsen's status for Saturday was doubtful.

"You hate to hear those letters [ACL], but they are getting quicker and quicker to recover from," said State coach Chuck Amato. "Some people have played without an ACL and he's tough enough to [play], but I'd say he's 99.9 percent out this week.

"I don't think there's any question that at some point Jed is going to need an operation. Whether he plays the rest of the season or he plays the last five games or the last three games – he's going to need to get his knee fixed."

With Paulsen out, the snapping duties fall to redshirt junior Branden Sanders. However, the coaching staff also plans to look at freshman Antoine Colvin and starting left guard Sean Locklear, who recently reminded Amato that he was a center in ninth grade.

Amato hopes to keep the rest of the offensive line healthy and has been pleased with their performance thus far.

"They are doing a good job and have become a very physical bunch of people up front," said Amato.

Reaping the benefits of the line's hard work have been running backs Greg Golden, T.A. McLendon and Josh Brown.

"[The running game] is helping us a lot," said senior Bryan Peterson. "Any great team needs to establish the run, and that's our main emphasis. Greg, Josh and T.A. have done a great job."

While Golden did not break as many tackles against Navy as he did in the Pack's prior outings, the converted cornerback racked up 88 yards on 18 carries, his highest output of the season.

"Greg is a football player," said Amato. "He can play a multitude of positions – he can play running back, wide receiver, corner or safety. He's just a skilled player. He doesn't just have track speed, he has football mechanics, and thank goodness we have him."

Golden brings more than skill to his position.

"Greg is an intense, trash-talking, cocky guy," said Peterson. "He's brought that from the defensive to the offensive side of the ball, and that's helping us."

As for McLendon, the freshman hopes to return to the Pack lineup against the Deacs, but should his shoulder continue to bother him, Brown will be ready.

After learning that McLendon would be unavailable against the Midshipmen, Amato urged Brown to step it up. The sophomore tailback did just that, piling up 77 yards.

Another backup that impressed Amato is quarterback Jay Davis.

"Each week I believe he's gotten better," said Amato. "I thought he really showed some poise. He showed that he can throw the ball when he can set his feet and pick out a receiver."

Davis should continue to see plenty of mop-up time if Phillip Rivers continues to perform at such a high level like he did last week when he accounted for six touchdowns.

According to Peterson, one of Rivers' favorite targets on the field, Rivers is just as likely to light up the scoreboard when playing college football video games on PlayStation 2.

"He plays with teams you would never want to play with and he still wins," said Peterson. "He's been killing me lately."

Even though Rivers leads the nation in passing efficiency, Peterson admits to playing with Louisville and teasing Rivers that Cardinals' quarterback Dave Ragone is the best quarterback in the nation.

All joking aside, Amato will have Peterson and the 19th-ranked Pack ready to face the Deacs on Saturday evening.

"Their offense, if running on all cylinders [is dangerous]. And defensively, they'll strike you: they play hard," said Amato. "This is important, it's the first conference game and the first game against a team in the state of North Carolina – and they're hungry."

It's gotta be the shoes.

Erin Lilly and the women's soccer team will play in the UAB Nike Classic this weekend.

www.dailycollegian.com

Your FUTURE BEGINS here!
DB Mart, a family owned convenience store chain with locations throughout New England and New York, is looking for people like you to begin a future as part of the DB Mart team! Not only will a career at DB Mart provide you with financial security today, but it will also prepare you for a successful tomorrow! DB Mart is currently hiring for the following position:
*Deli Manager
We are seeking a highly motivated, dynamic individual to run a busy convenience store! Food safety certification a plus!
DB Mart offers a full benefits package to both full time and part time employees, as well as outstanding bonus potential. Assistant Managers are paid hourly. If you're ready to start your future with DB Mart, please see Karen at 259 Triangle Street Amherst, MA. Phone: (413) 549-5606. Or visit us online at www.dbmarts.com or call our Job Line at (866) 408-JOBS.
It's where people on the go - go! dbmart

Warehouse Sale
Discounted up to 70%
J.CREW

September 9 through September 13, 2002
Monday - Thursday 9am - 9pm
Friday 9am - 5pm
free admission open to the public
Mullins Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst
200 Commonwealth Avenue
Amherst, MA 01003
We accept VISA, MasterCard, American Express®, J.Crew credit cards, cash, and personal checks (with proper identification).
Directions: Route 9 to Route 116 North. Head North on Route 116 for approximately one mile to first exit (University of Massachusetts). Turn right onto Massachusetts Avenue, then left onto Commonwealth Avenue. The Mullins Center will be on the left.

COUNTING CROWS
LIVE IN CONCERT
HARD CANDY

WITH SPECIAL GUEST
GRAHAM COLTON
SPECIAL TAPER SECTION
SAT OCT 5
MULLINS CENTER
NEW ALBUM HARD CANDY IN STORES NOW
TICKETS AT THE BOX OFFICE, AT ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500.
ONLINE AT ticketmaster.com concerthotline.com
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheap Heating oil! Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Co-operative. Call 545-0865 or come by Commuter Services, Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven CampusFundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs work. Fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact CampusFundraiser at (800) 923-8238 or Visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@nina.alphalambda.org

AUTO FOR SALE

97 Subaru Sedan Automatic Power window/cruise Control New Transmission $3400 413-546-2110

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

BABYSITTING

Babysitters Needed: For Commuter Services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.ashs.org then click on Family Services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at PP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving. Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Northeast Foundation for Children Program Administrative Assistant Mission-driven, small, nonprofit education organization seeks assistant with strong office and computer skills to support Foundation's whole school reform work

Interest in education a plus. Must have strong organization skills and experience with MS Word, Excel, and Internet. Strong interpersonal skills, flexibility and a sense of humor a must. Enjoy people. Send resume, cover letter and salary requirements to: Laurie Harrison Northeast Foundation for Children 39 Montague City Road Greenfield, MA 01301 Email: Laurie@re-sponsive.best.com Fax: 413-774-1129 See our website www.responsiveclassroom.org for additional information and a detailed job description.

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

National TV News program looking into possible overcrowded, cramped, or otherwise unacceptable conditions in univ. dorms. If you have or have had a problem, Please call 212-817-5530 or e-mail dornstory@hotmail.com

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

Wanted: Co-manager to work at Greenough subshop. Pick up application and more information at center for student businesses in Student Union by 9/12.

WANTED: Funky, Sassy girls with the ability to dance, sing, & work a crowd. Call (413) 537-8527 for more info.

Wanted: Honest, responsible, hard working student for evening product promotions. must be 21+ and have reliable transportation. Please contact. 860-257-9139 for more info.

STAGE HANDS WANTED at Fine Arts Center. $6.75 / hr. Variable schedule – week day availability preferred 9-noon, 1pm-5 Applications at production services Rm 146 F.A.C.

Amherst Leisure Services Department is hiring officials for its Adult Volleyball League. The games are held Sundays at a local school. We are also looking for a Supervisor to run the program. League runs from late September-mid-December. To apply, go to Town Hall, Human Resources Department. Work Study and Non-Work Study jobs available. For more information please contact Erika Cumps 256-4065x114 or at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

2 bed condo available now. Big basement, on bus rt. Call 413-283-5315

Lockers for rent: cheap! $10 for the year. Come to Commuter Sevices, 428 Student Union.

Dorm Fridge & Microwave for sale. $40-$60 Call 695-3648

FURNITURE

MATTRESSES & FUTONS Sealy and symbol mattress sets starting at: twin $199, full $249, Queen $299, King $419. Mattress only starting at: twin $119, full $149, Queen $179, King $269. Free frame and delivery with any mattress set. Futon frame and futon mattress starting at: twin $184, full $225. Free solid cover with any futon mattress and futon frame. Sleepy Hollow Bed Co. Route 9 Amherst. 1/2 mile EAST of Amherst College 253-2337.

INSTRUCTIONS

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Guitar lessons – All ages, styles, levels. lessons@magwares.com 584-7750

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

LOST

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOMATE

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group- Go Free! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

Monreal Madness Weekends Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs 10 or more discounts Montrealexpress.net 781-979-0076

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement (UMass)

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

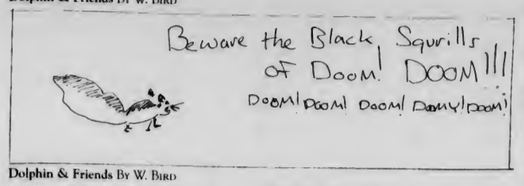
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Check your ad for errors. Again, budget limits us to one word per box.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment



HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1 ..... CBS / 13
2 ..... NBN
3 ..... Fox Sports NE
4 ..... PBS / 57
5 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
6 ..... WB / 22
7 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
8 ..... TV Guide Channel
9 ..... FOX / 61
10 ..... ABC / 40
11 ..... NBC / 22
12 ..... International Channel
13 ..... USA TV
14 ..... HSCN Info4 Channel
15 ..... ESPN
16 ..... ESPN 2
17 ..... UVC-19
18 ..... ESPN Classic
19 ..... Cinemax Cinedome
20 ..... CNN
21 ..... CNN HL
22 ..... Weather Channel
23 ..... Learning Channel
24 ..... History Channel
25 ..... A & E
26 ..... Discovery Health
27 ..... Food Network
28 ..... NASA
29 ..... House & Garden TV
30 ..... Travel Channel
31 ..... Lifetime
32 ..... CNBC
33 ..... Tech TV
34 ..... BET
35 ..... ESPN-SW
36 ..... USA
37 ..... TNN
38 ..... MTV
39 ..... CMT
40 ..... VH-1
41 ..... TNT
42 ..... TBS
43 ..... E! Entertainment
44 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
45 ..... Court TV
46 ..... Nick at Nite
47 ..... Comedy Central
48 ..... Cartoon Network
49 ..... Game Show Network
50 ..... TV Land
51 ..... FOX Family
52 ..... Univision
53 ..... Galavision
54 ..... Telemundo
55 ..... College TV Network
56 ..... C-SPAN
57 ..... C-SPAN2
58 ..... Weinberg Television

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

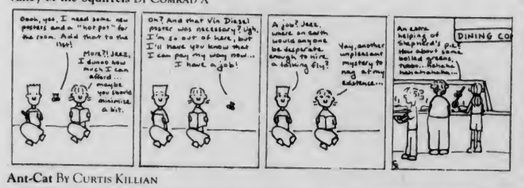
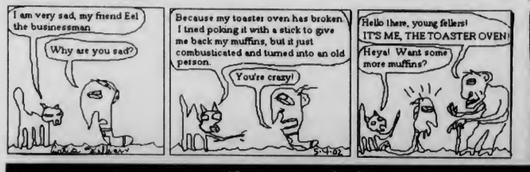
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)				Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Abulsions: Cradle		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of Jem"	News	Ent. Tonight		5th Wheel	Shipmates
WYBS	69	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PG) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	34	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography Frank Gifford		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	60	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	62	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Dr. Katz	★★ "Critical" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	32	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)								Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Spirited: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	50	3:16 MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAd2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Lil Jo Movie	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	46	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	65	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	44	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Brake"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	29	NYPD Blue "Twin Peaks"		Pretender "PTB" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		Terms Duffer's Day Off" (1986)
USA	59	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	25	5:45 ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein		★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) (PG-13)						Sol Fed Under (In Stereo)		Sterling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	26	5:45 ★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)		Get Enough		★½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. "R"				★½ "Sweet Nineteen" (2001, Romance) Kevin Pollak. "PG-13"
SHOW	28	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. "PG"				★★½ "The Cell" (2000, Suspense) Catherine Bell. "R"				Soul Food (TV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.



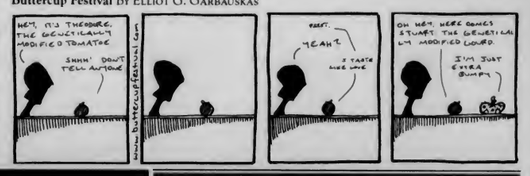
Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird



Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Quote of the Day

"Deodorant is so great. I wish more people would use it."

-Lizzy Nielsen

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Satutday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 43	HIGH: 78 LOW: 49	HIGH: 79 LOW: 56

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)– When in doubt, remember, you too can live under the red sky with Slash.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)– For all you freshman out there, it takes a subterranean to get rid of homesick blues.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)– That's a snazzy new leopard-skin pillbox hat.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)– The pumps don't work cause the vandals took the handles.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)– It's a hard rain a-gonna fall.

TAURUS (April. 20-May 20)– Please her, please him, buy gifts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21)– You've gone to the finest school all right, Miss Lonely, but you know you only used to get juiced in it and nobody has ever taught you how to live on the street and now you find out you're gonna have to get used to it.

CANCER (June 22-July 22)– Isis, oh, Isis, you mystical child. What drives me to you is what drives me insane.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)– Don't forget, everybody must give something back for something they get.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)– The sun's not yellow, it's chicken.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)– I'll give you more gold than your apron can hold, if you'd only let your hair hang low.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21)– You're that travelin' salesman that I have heard about.

THE ALL STAFF MEETING IS TODAY AT 6PM.

Sorry for the confusion.

Anyone interesting in writing for The Collegian should attend.

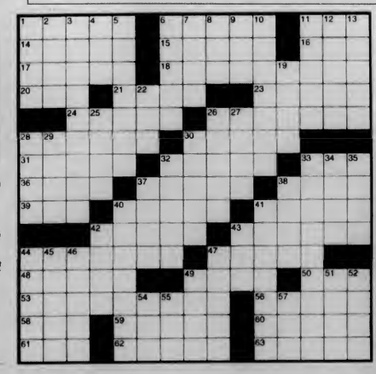
Got internet? www.daily collegian.com



ACROSS
1 Brownish-yellow
6 Luminous auras
11 Gun pellets
14 Huge
15 Toward the stern
16 Director Spike
17 Will
18 Rum source
20 FBI abbr.
21 Father's sister
23 Intended
24 Wander from place to place
26 Finches
28 Chicago suburb
30 Rockbound's kind
31 Sheiks, probably
32 Tire problems
33 Fish feature
36 Pitch
37 Jungle vine
38 The — Ranger
39 Ottawa's prov.
40 Sorority women
41 Fruit pastries
42 Legend
43 Wooden rods
44 Was in a bee
47 Short trip
48 Made public
49 Piano parts
50 Had dinner
53 Starting point
56 Type of surgery
58 Dine
59 Significant — purchases
60 Go inside
61 Still
62 Jack and Jill, e.g.
63 Flower parts

DOWN
1 "Hawkeye" Pierce
2 Slugger McGwire
3 Show on TV
4 Type of trip?
5 Fixes
6 Lacks
7 Neighbor on a fall behind
8 Fall behind
9 Ghost — chance
10 Maroons
11 Hold responsible
12 Poet Stephen Vincent
13 Gardener's purchases
19 Film
22 Alien craft?
25 Soldiers in gray
26 Tills
27 Modicum
28 Roman statesman
29 Press
30 Forest clearing
32 Meadow
33 Advance warning
34 Like the U.N.
35 Loch — monster
37 Earring's place
38 Grassy area
40 Huge kettle
41 Muses
42 Type of market
43 — -care center
44 Impertinent
45 Mrt
46 Spew
47 Yells insults
49 Type of jerk?
51 Swarm (with)
52 Misjudges
54 LAX info
55 Electrical unit
57 Aardvark morsel

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

E	M	B	E	D		A	D	D	U	P		M	I	D
M	A	U	V	E		M	A	O	R	I		E	V	A
U	R	G	E	S		A	L	O	N	G		T	I	N
			P	O	S	E	R		E	G	R	E	T
B	H	A	D	O	W	S			M	O	R	O	S	E
P	E	T	I	E		A	L		N	E
E	L	L	S		D	A	R	E	S		E	B	B	S
C	L	A	P		N	E	A		N	E	R	O
S	O	S	O		P	O	N	D	S		E	L	I	A
		S	A	U	N	A		E	E	R	I	E	R
A	G	H	O	S	T		P	R	A	Y	E	R	S
C	H	I	L	L		M	I	R	E	S
I	O	N	S		L	U	D	E		T	I	D	A	L
D	U	N		E	A	R	L	Y		E	R	I	C	A
S	L	Y		P	O	K	E	S		R	A	T	E	D

10-11-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Oriental Beef & Vegetables

Chicken Cutlet Sandwich

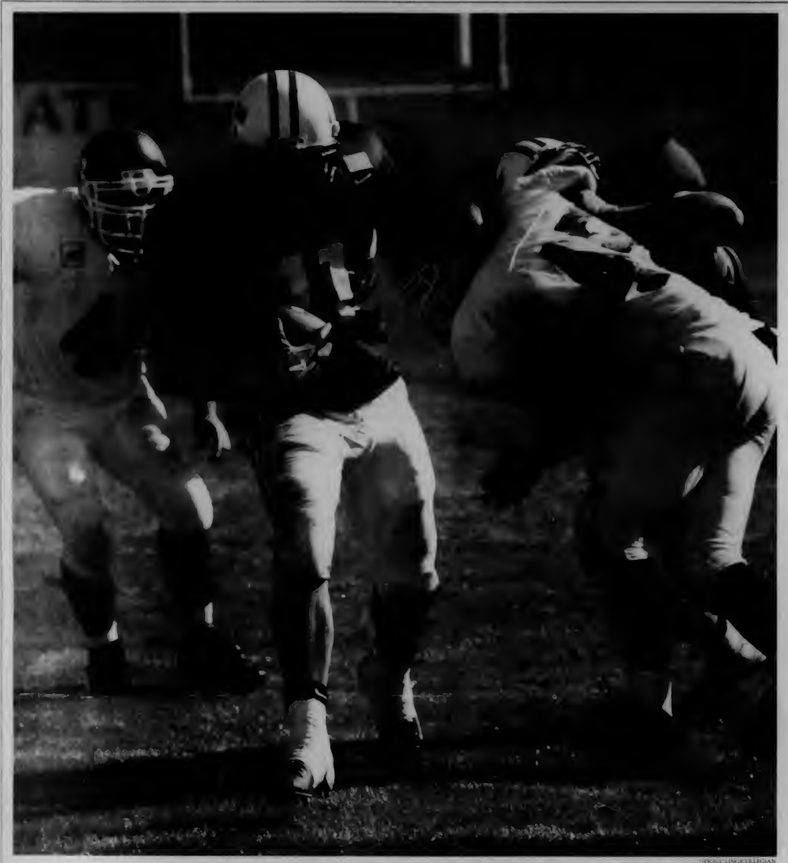
Teriyaki Cashew Tofu Oney Ga (vegan)

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Roast Turkey

Ginger Black Beans (vegan)



Ratatouille (vegan)

Matthew Despres
James Schaffer
Scott Eldridge II
Mike Kulak
Emily Richards
Pete Preston
Shannon Farrington

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

COURTESY LYN SCOLLEGIAN

Sophomore running back Jason Peebler (No. 11) was named the Dunn Brothers/UMass Athlete of the Week at Wednesday's UMass Sports Luncheon. The Modesto, Calif. native scored three touchdowns last week against Central Connecticut, including this three-yard run in the fourth quarter.

New faces make UM an A-10 contender

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There weren't many positive things to be said about the budget cuts that resulted in the elimination of seven Massachusetts athletics programs last year. However, there was a small silver lining when it came to women's tennis.

"I'm only coaching one team now, which gives me a lot more time to spend on them," said Head Coach Judy Dixon, who also coached the now-defunct men's tennis squad.

"I'm going to make it my job this year to spend more time with these kids than ever, to give them more attention than they've ever seen," Dixon said.

The University of Massachusetts is also one year removed from winning the Atlantic 10 title, the first in its history.

Dixon feels that this fall, she'll be coaching the most talented team she's ever had at the school.

The team will bring the experience of senior Lindsey Gillooly, who was redshirted last season due to a knee injury, and juniors Jafra Depontes, Alison Hagenbuch, and Susan Hyams, combined with an impressive freshman class that includes Camilla Knight (Plymstock, England) and Dorothy Iwanowicz (Hilton Head, SC), who Dixon expects will play in the four and six slots this fall, respectively.

Knight was ranked among the top 30 juniors players in England last year, also played for England in Under-14 and Under-18 doubles. She is expected to see significant doubles time this year.

Iwanowicz was rated first in South Carolina last year, and 19th overall in the South.

Rounding out the freshman class this year is Chelsea Gray (Madison, Maine), Jana Bartoloni (Charlestown, Mass.), and Meredith Thompson (Langhorne, Pa.)

As for the rest of the singles lineup, sophomore Sasha Edelstein is expected to take the No. 1 spot, followed by Depontes, Gillooly, junior Susan Hyams at No. 5, and a battle for the seven through 10 spots between the remaining underclassmen.

Dixon's goal for this year is a rather unusual one for collegiate sports – she'd like the Minutewomen to finish second.

"I know it sounds odd, but Richmond has eight scholarship players this year," Dixon said.

In addition to the returning members of the team that won the Atlantic 10 Championship last year, Richmond also added freshman Katie Karhohs from Michigan to make the squad more formidable. And a backseat to this year's edition of the Lady Spiders would certainly carry no shame.

Dixon and her crew have set their sights on a lesser goal, but one that would be a step up from last year, when the team finished seventh at the A-10 Championship.

The team has already gotten off on the right foot, having been named to the Intercollegiate Tennis Association's All-Academic squad. With all members of the team earning a GPA of 3.20 or better, the Minutewomen received the honor for the third time in four years.

The Maroon and White's fall schedule opens up with a trip to West Point, NY this weekend for the Eastern Tennis Championships hosted by Army. Then, the Minutewomen come back home to square off with Amherst in a cross-town battle.

Dixon also mentioned that her focus in the early part of the season will be on "team-building activities" to bring this young squad together.

While there is definite room for improvement, this year's edition of UMass Tennis shows plenty of promise, as Dixon indicated.

"You could really hope for good things from the team this year," she said.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Women's tennis coach Judy Dixon is gunning for a second place finish in the Atlantic 10 this season.

The final tune-up

Football faces AIC in last game before A-10s

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There are many goals for the Massachusetts football team this season – an Atlantic 10 title, a trip to the playoffs, and possibly winning a National Championship. But with just a non-conference win under its belt, the goal that is pertinent these days is a little more simple.

"We've made it of great importance that 2-0 is what we want to be going into the conference schedule, and I don't think we'll be overlooking anybody," UMass Assistant Coach Tom Masella said. "We've got to win this state before we go on, so I think our kids are going to be ready to play this week."

After an opening week druhbing of Central Connecticut, the Minutemen (1-0) are back in action this week against another non-conference opponent, Division II American International College, as they look to begin a season 2-0 for the first time since 1986.

"This will be a good test as we go into our conference schedule," Masella said. "They have a great QB and a whole bunch of receivers who can run after the catch. If they try to air it out, it will be a good test for our defense."

Out of Springfield, the Yellow Jackets (1-0, 1-0 Northeast 10) last played the Minutemen two years ago where they were defeated 21-0, but played a hard-fought slowdown offense and provided some defensive pop as well.

"Saturday's going to be a big game, and the next one and so on. All you have to do is look at the tape from two years ago," said Head Coach Mark Whipple, in his weekly Atlantic 10 teleconference. "I can look at the game with AIC, where they knocked the stuffing out of Marcel Shipp.

"They had about four sacks and our linemen didn't play well and some of those same guys will be here. They've got two linebackers that would play anywhere in our league. They've got some guys in the secondary and good receivers. They aren't an A-10 team, but they are a step above CCSU."

The Yellow Jackets are led by junior quarterback Tom Guy, who piloted them to a 20-13 victory over conference opponent Stonehill last week. Guy threw for 281 yards and a pair of scores as AIC held off a late surge from the Chieftains.

Keith Lessner caught five balls for 123 yards, including a 63-yard touchdown to get AIC up by 13. Tory Brown heads up the rushing attack, as he picked up 72 yards and the game-winning touchdown against the Chieftains.

On defense, Lee Mauricette, who made five tackles, three for loss, and one sack last week, leads the Yellow Jackets. Marcus Louison heads the linebacking core, and dragged down 11 Chieftains last week, one behind the line of scrimmage.

The secondary, spearheaded by senior safety Matt Natle (80 tackles last year), will have its hands full as it tries to handle the new-look UMass passing attack with Div. I-A transfer Jeff Krohn under center.

"They play more of a 4-3, they blitz a bit, but mostly play soft pass coverage," Masella said. "I think and expect [Krohn] to find the receivers and have a big game."

UMass' running game should definitely concern AIC as well, as the game-untested Minuteman backfield duo of Raunny Rosario and Dinn Brothers/UMass Athlete of the Week Jason Peebler combined for nearly 250 yards rushing last week. Also, the Minutemen will be bolstered by the likely return of the injured R.J. Cobbs.

"We get R.J. Cobbs back this week, who I think is our best tailback. He was No. 1 after a couple of weeks," Whipple said. "I think we have three guys that can run the ball, so we have great depth at that position. I'm not sure what I'll do this week. If we're running the ball, that means we're playing pretty well. We protected Krohn all right, but I am not going to say that was the 'Fearless Foursome' coming at us. If we can run it and mix it up, we have a chance to make some noise in this league."

As for the defense, there were a number of standouts last week, most notably Jeremy Cain (16 tackles) and redshirt freshman Shannon James (one interception), who Masella called "an outstanding player who is only going to get better as time goes on."

However, one of the most glaring weaknesses last week was the inability of the defensive line to get pressure on CCSU's quarterback Scott Dolch. Valdamar Brower, a Buck Buchanan Award candidate, has been slowed by an injury, but is expected to lead the D-line to take on Guy.

"[The offensive line] definitely has to pick it up and get after him," Masella said. "We'll find out this week if they're up for the challenge."

Whipple agreed that the defensive line, as well as the receiving core, was one of the two main areas that needed improvement going into Saturday's contest.

"We've got to improve and take care of the ball better and execute better on both sides of the ball. On defense, we didn't rush the passer. I thought our two strengths were our defensive line and our receivers, and those were the two worst areas on Saturday. We had no pressure on the quarterback on defense and didn't run the right routes on offense."

In a conference as tough as the A-10, every game can go down to the wire, so the Minutemen coaches know that they need to continue to improve and work out all the kinks before settling in to conference play.

"The one thing we've focused on this week is we're going to get better in all three facets of the game," Masella said. "We hope to be 2-0 on Saturday and going into a big game at Northeastern."

UMass kicks off against AIC at 1 p.m. on Saturday.

FALL TV PREVIEW
ARTS PAGE 5.
ANOTHER WAR?
ED/OP PAGE 4.
MEN DEBUT AT RUDD
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

FRIDAY ISSUE EIGHT 9.13.02

Reich: Union contracts must be funded

COURTESY LYN SCOLLEGIAN

Robert Reich, a candidate in the Massachusetts Democratic gubernational race, speaks at the Campus Center Auditorium.

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Higher education, health care and overall Massachusetts state economic growth were just a few of the issues brought up by Gubernatorial candidate Robert Reich in an open meeting yesterday afternoon.

Reich, former Secretary of Labor under President Bill Clinton, visited the University of Massachusetts, as it was Reich's first stop on his campaigning trail through Western Massachusetts.

Reich presented his opinions on higher education in light of recent budget and union cuts and expressed the need for promises to be kept by the government.

"First thing, fund the contracts," Reich said. "This campaign is much of a grassroots campaign. We need to create a real and true common wealth and if and when I get elected, UMass won't be cut, but rebuilt. If elected governor, you can bet I'll keep my word."

Reich further explained the need to recreate the state of Massachusetts by taking a closer look at funding and the ways the government has spent and allocated money. Reich continued by stressing that economic growth comes from social changes within society and its systems.

"Economic growth depends on society and the people within it. Social change is the only way that we can do it, and if we do it together, things will happen," Reich said. "Massachusetts did a lot of innovative things for years, but over the past 12 years, we've fallen behind. We depend on our students and people and human capital to bring forth talents, and if we don't invest in them, we won't have them."

Reich talked of his own theories to develop economic growth using a bubble-up effect. Reich said that investing in schools, jobs and health care are the only ways to increase economic growth.

"My democratic opponent believes in the trickle-down effect, but it doesn't work," Reich said. "I believe in the bubble-up economy. Investing in schools, jobs, health care and the environment are the only way you will have economic growth."

Students, faculty and members of the community had the opportunity to ask questions revolving around Reich's goals if elected. Issues surrounding tax cuts and increases as well as concerns surrounding the environment were asked. Reich responded by explaining that the environment and its protection are a high priority within the campaign, and he would restore faith in the community if elected.

"If you feel that your tax dollars are being washed down the drain, you will not support increases," he explained. "My responsibility is to rebuild trust within the state. Smart growth, the environment, air quality, energy, the watershed initiative – all need environmental remediation and justice, and I will provide it."

Reich explained where he plans to make cuts and combine efforts made by the state to save money. Allowing home health care and combining the state's main highway systems were two money-saving plans offered by Reich.

"Senor citizens want home health care, why not provide it? Instead of putting the elderly in nursing homes like we have been, give them home health care, and we'll save $41 million a year," Reich said. "If we combined the Mass Highway with the Mass Pike, we would save another 40 million dollars a year, saving us money and building back public trust as well as releasing funds for other areas such as state higher education."

Tax cuts were the last topic Reich discussed. He told the audience that he plans to follow the legislature's lead. He continued by explaining that cuts should only be made when the economy is strong enough to compensate for the cuts.

"I would follow what the legislature has done, but [I would continue] cuts only when the economy can provide support and compensation for those cuts," Reich said. "I want the public to trust the government again, and in order to do so, we need to combine long term social, cultural and environmental issues together in order to accomplish this."

Members of the audience expressed their own thoughts on Reich's views. Eddie Coldberg, of the Amherst Town Select Committee explained that he joined Reich's campaign due to his views on social justice.

"I read his book, and I was impressed with his ideas in human rights and political and social justice," Goldberg said. "I originally thought all the candidates looked the same, but when I saw what he was proposing, he changed my take on politics."

Members of the community were encouraged to get involved in the campaign. Reich will be speaking in an open debate in Springfield, Mass. on Tuesday, Sept. 17. Voting begins on Tuesday, and polling stations will be located in Hampden in the Southwest living area.

For more information on how to get involved, call 256-3342.

Researchers look at endangered language

The National Science Foundation (NSF) awarded grants to linguistics and psychology researchers at the University of Massachusetts. The researchers are using a cognitive approach to study language.

The NSF granted a three-year $184,924 award to Elisabeth Selkirk, chair of the Linguistics department at UMass and a three-year, $342,165 award to Lyn Frazier and Charles Clifton, professors in the linguistics and psychology departments, respectively.

Clifton and Frazier are researching psycholinguistics that combines linguistic and psychological theory and applies it to language studies. The professors will study how people understand spoken language.

Selkirk is focusing on prosody, which is the fluctuation of tone in a sentence that changes the meaning of a sentence. A person's intonation can imply sarcasm or genuine excitement, depending on the tone.

While Selkirk looked at English language comprehension, she also studied Japanese and a rare Moroccan language called Tashlit Berber.

Selkirk is also researching Berber, a language spoken in North Africa that pre-dates Middle-Eastern influences on North African culture. Although 40 percent of the population speaks the language, Selkirk is one of few linguists who have studied it.

"Berber is not a written language, and it is not used in schools," Selkirk said in a recent press release. "It is spoken primarily by people of lower socioeconomic status in rural areas. Berber-speaking people might not make an effort to have their children learn the language, so there is a chance this language might disappear in a couple generations."

Selkirk used computers to analyze the voices of people speaking Berber and compare Berber to other languages. Selkirk has traveled to Morocco to study Berber and will return there next spring.

Clifton and Frazier studied grammar in a social context to learn about language comprehension. According to Clifton, his research is unique.

"Very few places in the country have the kind of collaboration between linguistics and psychology that we have," Clifton said in a UMass press release. "We bring together two lines of theory – linguistic theory and cognitive theory – and two types of research methodologies – experimental psychology and linguistic analysis – to ask questions about spoken language that have seldom been asked before."

-Rachel Smith

Scientists harvest lice on "scalp"

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts toxicologist John Clark claims that head lice are becoming immune to treatment shampoos. Clark is using an artificial human scalp to study lice and develop more effective treatments for the problem.

"I get phone calls from parents and school nurses who are very stressed out, saying that the over-the-counter treatments just aren't working," Clark stated in a UMass press release.

Children who are diagnosed with lice are removed from school once the problem is identified and aren't allowed to return until treatments kill the lice. Since conventional treatments are becoming less effective, children are missing more school due to head lice, according to Clark.

Modern anti-louse shampoos are made from a chemical that isn't harmful to humans, but lice treatments used to contain toxic pesticides including DDT. Doctors used the more toxic chemicals for more than half a century, and the newer treatments are not as effective.

Weaker lice that the treatments kill don't live to reproduce, while the stronger lice that are immune to the treatments are reproducing and will eventually vastly outnumber the weaker lice, according to Clark. Researchers discovered a similar phenomenon with viruses that are immune to antibiotics.

"We need to look at alternative treatments and alternative compounds, because we may reach a point at which the treatments we're using now just won't work at all," Clark stated in a recent press release.

Modern treatments attack lice in the same way, by hampering the parasites' ability to process sodium. Clark is looking for a new way to irradiate lice while keeping humans safe. Specifically, he's looking for alternative chemical compounds that will kill lice.

Lice only live on human scalps, which could have posed a problem for Clark's research. Scientists and subjects weren't willing to harvest lice on their scalps.

"If you remove the louse, it dies," Clark added.

Fortunately for Clark's research, he acquired an artificial human scalp that can sustain lice. The scalp is a container of pumped-in human blood inside an incubator. The lice call an artificial membrane home.

According to Clark, the scalp is working and his research is progressing, but the shampoos currently on the market are still the best treatment for head lice.

GERALD LYN SCOLLEGIAN

Robert Reich has recently made numerous stops along the college circuit this week in hopes of rallying younger voters.

Campus Perspectives

Should the U.S. go to war with Iraq?

Caitlin Ott
Freshman
Pre-Journalism
"Why would we need to go to war to stop them from getting weapons?"

Dave Wenham
Freshman
HRTA
"It would just cause more problems."

Cara Russo
Freshman
Communications
"War in general is not the best answer."

Mark Mendoza
Graduate
MFA in Poetry
"The fear of Saddam having nuclear weapons is irrational."

Farhan Abbasi
Junior
Computer Science and Business
"Instead of feeding them missiles, let's feed their women and children."

Josue Souzanascimento
Sophomore
Sociology
"I don't want us bombing my Middle-Eastern brothers."

Men's Violence Prevention session convenes

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN STAFF WRITER

The University of Massachusetts division of Mentors in Violence Prevention (MVP) is preparing for a new semester of violence education workshops. Established at Northeastern University by Jackson Katz, a UMass graduate, MVP is a group of faculty, staff, administrators and students who are committed to raising violence awareness and opening dialogue between males.

The MVP program was implemented at UMass in 1994 and has grown considerably since then. In the past eight years, UMass graduate students and health education faculty have mentored at workshops presented in fraternities, residence halls, athletic programs and classes.

"The primary focus of MVP at UMass is to provide educational outreach and violence prevention in the UMass and Five College Community," said Tom Schiff, MVP program coordinator and health educator.

The MVP program motivates male students to play a critical role in solving problems that have been historically considered "women's issues," including rape, battering and sexual harassment. The program regards participants not as potential perpetrators or victims, but as empowered bystanders who can confront abusive and/or violent peers.

"The focus is on men as bystanders," noted Schiff.

"While we acknowledge that most men do not commit violence, most violence is committed by men."

Schiff proposed that one of the reasons men are so often the perpetrators of violent acts is that society holds a permissive attitude towards male violence from when boys are at an early age. Bullying and fighting are dismissed with the clichéd statement, "boys will be boys," a phrase that Schiff views as the epitome of ignoring violence.

"One of the reasons men are more prone to commit violence is that they have more permission. People don't speak out against it. There's a violence within the culture of masculinity; it's part of childhood for boys, part of how to be male and finding your place in that hierarchy."

To combat what he views as society's permissive attitude, Schiff proposes a variety of methods, such as helping to break up a fight, examining stereotypes of masculinity and femininity and not laughing at sexist or racist jokes.

"I think that we should look at violence as a continuum," Schiff explained concerning the latter. "Therefore, any time someone is objectified in some way, we know from research that it makes it easier for someone to envision them as being an object of violence. So when we participate in things like jokes or slurs, whether they are hurtful towards women, gay men or lesbians or people of other races, we see these people as being 'less than.' It is a form of dehumanization, and it contributes to violence."

Schiff was also adamant about working in coalition with women as another way to combat violence. He proposed supporting organizations like the Everywoman's Center as well as policy changes that help protect women on campus from sexual predators. While the MVP program deals with all kinds of violence, a majority of the workshops focus on violence committed against women.

"Although violence cuts across race, gender, sexual orientation and class on a college campus, women are much more likely to be targets of violence, whether it be sexual harassment, rape or assault," Schiff said.

The MVP program also educates by providing students with real life examples of a situation in which they might witness violence.

"The MVP program is based on intervention and prevention," Schiff explained. "In a situation where you witness relationship violence, say a man striking his girlfriend, you have a variety of options. We want to be clear that there is always a choice. Committing violence is a choice just like doing nothing is a choice ... and in some situations, even if all you do is call the police, you are choosing to do the right thing."

The MVP workshops are designed to provide men with the opportunity to have an open and honest discussion about violence and the issues men face surrounding it.

"Part of why the MVP program is so important is that I think most men are just as concerned about violence as women – but they may not have an outlet to talk about those issues. Violence is not often talked about by men or seen as a man's issue, but actually, since we're the ones committing the violence, it is a man's issue. What we're trying to do is create some opportunities for men to be able to address that in ways that are really positive."

For more information about the MVP program, contact Tom Schiff in Health Education at 577-5181.

www.dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a Broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
• Only professional [illegible] in Western MA
• Hands-on training [illegible]
• National certification [illegible]
• Lifetime refresher
• ID card
• Resume
• Open to UMass students
• Continuous [illegible]
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888
www.bostonbartenderschool.com

AUDITIONS
Monday, Sept 16th 7-10 PM
Skinner Hall, MHC campus
Seeking 2 Male Actors for [illegible]
A Full Length [illegible] at Mount Holyoke College
Mid November performance
Rehearsals will be 3 times a week, starting next week.
Flexible rehearsal time.
For more information please contact Victoria at 493-4577.
No monologues necessary. Casting will be announced via callback number.

MARY FORD
HAMPSHIRE COUNTY
REGISTER OF PROBATE
She'll do a great job for Hampshire County
Mary Ford Works for All of Us
Mary Ford, Former Mayor of Northampton
Photo by Paul Zind
Vote
TUE. SEPT. 17
Register of Probate & Land Court on Ballot
www.maryford.org

UMass graduates get urban teaching grant

The National Science Foundation (NSF) awarded the University of Massachusetts a $1.38 million grant for a three-year program designed to put graduate students in public school science classrooms in Springfield.

The UMass graduate students will assist 20 middle school science teachers pursuing master's degrees in education at the University design classroom projects relying on environmental research. Each grad will be awarded a one-year $21,500 stipend for their work. NSF is sponsoring the program to develop a stronger partnership between math and science education.

"This project benefits everyone," said Julian Tyson, a project leader from the program and a chemistry professor. "The Springfield teachers will have access to the University's laboratory facilities and expertise, UMass faculty will gain an understanding of the needs and cultures of the schools, laying a foundation for future collaborations, and the UMass fellows will develop a connection with the K-12 community, and perhaps even inspire some area youngsters to become scientists themselves one day."

Kathleen Davis, of the School of Education, and Morton Sternheim, professor emeritus of physics and founder of the Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) Institute, are the other leaders of the project.

Middle school teachers involved in the program are taking a one-year, six-credit course taught by Davis focusing specifically on teaching science. The course concentrates on introducing hands-on research projects as a teacher to a class.

Teams including UMass faculty participants, two middle school teachers and one or two graduate students will work together for the entire academic year, developing and carrying out research projects in which the middle school students will be active participants.

The project group plans to study the hydrologic cycle, water chemistry, atmospheric ozone, arsenic from pressure-treated decks and the ecology and behavior of birds in addition to factors affecting plant growth such as microgravity, pollen and seed cell growth.

At the end of the school year, participants in the project will share their research findings with each other and interested community groups in a middle school science conference in Springfield.

- Dan Lamothe

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

Eating Dirt
A goat relaxes and grazes on fresh grass at the Hadley horse farm off Route 116.

Opponent of pledge sings complaints at UC Berkley

By Kim-Mai Cutler
DAILY CALIFORNIAN (U.CAL-BERKLEY)

(U-WIRE) - Michael Newdow, who claims the Pledge of Allegiance is unconstitutional, sang to University of California-Berkeley students Tuesday night about church, government and gender-neutral pronouns.

Speaking and singing on behalf of the organization Students for a Nonreligious Ethos, Newdow told students to question and challenge societal norms.

He asked students to examine all ideas and beliefs, not only in religions but also in classrooms and scientific research.

"Challenge people constantly," Newdow said. "People just believe stuff without knowing all the details. When you get your professors, question them. Just because 1 billion people say something doesn't make it right."

Four years ago, Newdow, a physician, sued the Sacramento school district where his daughter went to school for requiring students to recite the Pledge of Allegiance.

The suit alleges that the pledge's "under God" phrase is unconstitutional. Newdow said his case was not based upon religious differences but rather upon the separation of church and state.

"This is not a case about God and not God," Newdow said. "This is a case about the establishment clause."

The establishment clause is the part of the First Amendment that says government cannot make a law "respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

Newdow said he is confident in the progress on his case.

Newdow also performed five songs, criticizing politicians for hypocrisy in supporting the current form of the Pledge.

"We know when doing battle, in all the different fights," Newdow sang. "One can't be burdened with reminders of the Bill of Rights. With Him there on our side, there ain't no way we'll ever lose. They had the Pledge-of-Allegiance-needs-some-old-religion blues."

Newdow also described other goals he hopes to attain. He is involved in a lawsuit that would prevent chaplains from performing services in Congress.

He said he hopes to add a gender-neutral pronoun to the English language. Instead of using "he" and "she," Newdow encouraged students to use "ree," "rees" and "erm" in place of "he," "his" and "him" or "she," "hers" and "her."

Newdow was well-received by the nearly full Chan Shun Auditorium in Valley Life Sciences Building.

"I definitely agree with everything he said," said UC Berkeley freshman Adam Mann. "(But) I still believe he's going to lose (the lawsuit). This is America and we believe in God very highly above most other things."

Other students said the musical portion compromised the lecture's more serious messages.

"He downplayed (his point) a bit," said UC Berkeley freshman Lyric Delire. "He made a mockery of it with the guitar-playing. It was good comic relief, but it made him seem less mature."

News of the Pledge case broke during the summer when a federal appeals court ruled the Pledge of Allegiance unconstitutional, saying the words "under God" make it an "endorsement of religion."

An outraged U.S. Senate responded to the ruling by passing a resolution, 99-0, in support of the current Pledge. The court then decided to reconsider its ruling.

In 1954, Congress added the words "under God" to the pledge during the height of Cold War anxieties about communism.

WRITE FOR NEWS

Forget free thought and speech.
College would be nothing without free checking.
Everything you need in a checking account.
• Balance your semester budget with Fleet HomeLink® Online Banking
• Automatically add to your summer savings with AutoSave
• No annual fee Student Credit Card*
• ATMs and branches located near campus and throughout the northeast
FREE
Forward. Thinking.® Fleet
Fleet Student Banking Package offer ends October 15, 2002. All Fleet HomeLink features are free except Online Bill Payment. The Online Bill Payment fee is waived for the first six months after you initiate your first bill payment. Thereafter, a monthly fee of $4.50 will be charged. *For Credit Qualified Applicants age 18 and older. Fleet and Fleet Forward Thinking are registered marks and Fleet HomeLink is a service mark of FleetBoston Financial Corporation. © 2002 FleetBoston Financial Corporation. All rights reserved. Member FDIC.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OF EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Long lines and red tape

Wake up, Whitmore

Every year the Princeton Review publishes a guide to undergraduate colleges and universities across the country to help guide students in making their choice of an institution of higher learning. As part of this guide, polls are taken from current students at said institutions on a variety of issues relating to academics, athletics and social life. UMass was on five of those lists this year. However, four of those lists would not be deemed as complimentary; the opinion of the fifth list would vary depending on whom you ask.

UMass was ranked 10th for an ugly campus, 15th for bad food and 17th for both bad dorms and level of marijuana use. Though none of these are things to be proud of (except maybe for the Cannabis Reform Coalition), they all don't elicit the anger, outrage and frustration of the final infamous quality that UMass has come to be known for. For the second year in a row, UMass was chosen as the number one school in the country for "long lines and red tape." To put it more simply, the administration and the way our school is run is very frustrating.

There is no rhyme or reason as to why schools make the list of awful administrations. Schools that have made either the good or bad lists concerning food, dorms and/or campus beauty also all appear on the list that our Whitmore administration heads. Even though pot heavy schools lead their counterparts 4-0 on the list of poorly run administrations, Indiana University, which ranks 6th on "refer madness," also ranks 18th on the list of schools with great administrations. In fact, the list of schools that "run like butter," includes another public school (University of Virginia) along with the academies of the Air Force and Navy, both federally run. Government doesn't get much bigger than that.

Aside from being the butt of many jokes, the bad ranking for the people over in Whitmore as well as those who run the entire campus both in Amherst and back on the state level should be a cause for concern. What reason is there for a high school senior to want to come to UMass when it is so blatantly clear that they will suffer four or more years of migraine headaches? Brilliant academic resources and research facilities, a well renowned sports program (again up for debate) and the rest of what is appealing at our school is seriously hampered by the fact that many of those advantages are hidden behind an infinite number of invisible barricades and glass ceilings.

Aside from barricading themselves in their offices, what can the bigwigs on the south side of campus do to help UMass avoid finishing dead last in the nation for three straight years? Perhaps they should ask their neighbors in the Pioneer Valley, as both Smith College and Amherst College finished 6th and 9th, respectively, on the list for efficient administrations. With budget cuts from Beacon Hill and union problems from everyone on campus, except students who are not RAs, new Chancellor Lombardi already has his hands full without further public relations problems.

UMass can start with simple things. Students head to Whitmore in dread, even to pick up such a joyous thing as an excise check. The 30-person-deep line at the teller windows this past week lasted 20 minutes, as less than half the windows were staffed. If UMass can't run something as simple as a bank window, things don't look that great for the rest of the campus.

Maybe the school should officially change the maroon in its school colors to a vibrant bright red. For without some changes, UMass could once again find itself topping that evil list for a third consecutive year.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Is it really so much to ask?

CAITLIN MCCARTHY

Sept. 11, 2001 was a day when everyone felt the same.

Sept. 12, 2001 was a day when everyone felt differently.

What does it take for people to stop being selfish? The sad part is that it comes so naturally. Our country just lost thousands of people for no reason. The Twin Towers were two famous landmarks that made the New York City skyline. The Towers were gone; the innocent people were dead; our country had been attacked; the unthinkable had happened. Oh, but let me think now. That pile of twisted metal and rubble that stood in the middle of a busy bustling street and contained millions of corpses underneath it wasn't around here. I felt like people stopped caring because most people that go to school here live in Massachusetts. Boston was still in one piece, so everything was okay.

Last year at this time I was a freshman, just like thousands of other kids around the country. I was just coming into this new environment – this foreign place that was so far from home. Don't get me wrong, I was really excited to be here, but I was still making my transition to college. Everything was new to me, and I had just a hand full of friends.

I can still recall what I was doing when the first plane hit; I was sleeping. I had no intentions of waking up early in the morning, except for the fact that I had to finish the paper that was due later that day. I was in a "3-room" in Southwest at the time, and the TV was on my roommate's side of the room. As I awoke, I said hi to her. She was sitting in bed and told me to look at what was going on. She still had the TV real low because I had just been sleeping. I was watching the newscast and could not believe my eyes. I really did stand there shocked for a minute, and then I started worrying and getting a little upset. I was asking my roommate what had happened and what was going on.

The first thing I thought of was my Dad. He was a trader on Wall Street, and I guess you could say that is about all I knew of what he actually did. I knew he had been switching offices and had been trading stocks in the building across the street from the Trade Centers. So I tried calling him and every one of the phone numbers I had of family members. I could not get in touch with anyone. Finally, a call went through to me on my cell phone, and it was my soon to be and current boyfriend asking me if I had family who worked in New York City. We talked for a couple of minutes. My eyes still were glued to the TV screen. It was like watching the best special effects action movie I had ever seen, and I just wished that the credits would play soon.

I am from New Jersey – only 20 minutes outside of the city and knew so many people that had relatives who worked there. My friends were crying online. My aunt called me crying and then finally my Dad. I was choked up to hear his voice, and he told me what had happened. He was on a ferry crossing the Hudson River on his way to one of the World Trade Center Towers for an interview that was supposed to take place. When they heard of the news, the ferry turned around. If my Dad's interview had been scheduled for an hour earlier, then he would have been in one of the Towers.

"It was like watching the best special effects action movie I had ever seen, and I just wished that the credits would play soon."

That day I felt very angry and confused. I felt so helpless and so far from my home and family. My friend and I went to the vigil held by the school. Afterwards, we sat by the pond and talked for a while. Her father had been in the city close to the events as well. Emotions ran wild, and we figured that most people felt the exact same way as we did. We were wrong; they didn't.

Sept. 11, 2002. I was prepared to feel alone again, like I was one of few people who would be mourning, and I was right. On campus and in town, out of all the passersbys I counted, I saw maybe five patriotic shirts, two of which belonged to my roommate and me. There were only three dorm rooms that were decorated, one of which was ours. My friend and I went to the vigil held at the Student Union that night. The crowd was pretty pathetic for a school with thousands of students. I can't say I wasn't expecting that kind of outcome though. At the vigil, the sky was so strange. It gave the evening an eerie feeling – an empty, gloomy feeling.

History unfolded in front of our eyes on that morning in September just one year ago. The world as we knew it and all of our young lives were changed. The harsh realities of the world were portrayed so beautifully. When I look back in the years to come and remember the lack of patriotism I was surrounded by on Sept. 11 and its one-year anniversary, I will still wish I was at home when it all happened. At home, everyone felt the same because we were hit so hard. I would have loved to have been surrounded by the emotions and feelings my family, friends and neighbors, because we all felt the same way.

We are all young adults preparing to go out into this cruel world. I just wish on days like Sept. 11, everyone could show that they have some respect and some sorrow for our fellow Americans who went through Hell and lost their lives or lost someone close to them. Although, I suppose that would be asking too much.

Caitlin McCarthy is a Collegian columnist.

Write for ed/op!

More Fenway foolishness slights fans

ROBERT CAREY

When the Red Sox came under new, more opportunistic ownership this season, a query was raised among Red Sox nation. It concerned whether or not new seats could be added above the left field wall without damaging the historical integrity of the park. I thought new seats were a great idea. In fact, I think there should be new seats in left field, right field and center. And they should be placed down the road in a new stadium, which should have been built years ago. But the mob of Red Sox faithful spoke, and Fenway will (for the time being) remain as is.

What is in the Boston mentality that gives it such a strong blinding sense of nostalgia? Most Bostonians would rather see Old Ironsides crossed off the Navy's list of commissioned ships before they accept the fact Fenway has reached the age of obsoleteness. Despite being a crumbling historical monument of painful and heart-crushing memories, it should seem obvious that Fenway is no longer a suitable Major League park.

Built at the turn of the century when any bow-legged farmhand could be considered a slugger, Fenway Park has been drastically altered through the years to cater to the evolution of the game. As a result of these modifications, Fenway is the only stadium in Major League Baseball where a wind favored fly ball to right and left field can land for a 290-foot home run and a well-scorched line drive is likely to result in a wall-scraping single or an out, thus making a game at Fenway, in part, a game of geometric chance.

Putting aside that no self-respecting Major League Baseball team should play a game in a park with so many, potentially detrimental nooks and crannies, there is an economic reason why Fenway should go. Tickets to a Sox game, on average, cost $35 – by far the highest cost for tickets in any big league park. The closest to it is Seattle's Safeco Field, which will run, on average, $15 less. Of course, the reason for these exorbitant prices shouldn't be hard to discern. Thirty thousand seats in a baseball stadium might have been an impressive number in the '20s. However, stadiums today are considered quaint if the maximum capacity is lower than 50,000. Thus, there is a restriction on the number of tickets management can sell per game. And as a result of this laughably small size, combined with the high maintenance bill that comes with a 90-year-old stadium, the owners have to compensate their losses. This was management's motive for adding new seats in the first place. However, because that motion was shot down, jacking up ticket prices becomes the next most feasible method.

Boston fans pay dearly to delas the demise of their beloved park. But why shouldn't fans love Fenway? It has provided the city with a lot of great sports memories: Dent's lazy fly ball to left and Fisk's World Series-winning home run. Wait a minute, the Fisk home run was in Game Six, not Game Seven where it might have made a difference.

Though it might house these cherished memories mentioned above, Fenway no longer has suitable facilities to house a Major League team in the 21st century. The clear-sighted and logical Red Sox fan knows what to do with Fenway: throw a wrecking ball into the Green Monster, move the team to Gillette Stadium and wait until a non-replicated stadium can be built. The overzealous contingencies of Sox fans that actively preach "Save Fenway" are a ranting mob. They won't be satisfied until one of the concrete pillars gives way, pancaking the bleacher seats with the grandstand.

But I think the majority of Red Sox fans just want to see one thing in Fenway before it goes. And that's another World Series trophy. For them, it's personal. They'll stubbornly watch pennant races fly off into the wind and ticket prices will soar until a World Series banner is brought back to Fenway. And the curse is finally broken. Perhaps, this is the reason for Red Sox fans' hopeless and unexplainable affinity for Fenway: a hatred for being considered cursed. Superstition aside, it is time to let go, move on and forget. The time is well overdue to bury the ghosts of the past and build a new stadium. Hey, it worked for the Patriots.

Robert Carey is a Collegian columnist.

Off to war? Have another pretzel!

YOUSEF MUNNAYER

Gradually over the past two months, the debate on American foreign policy towards Iraq has been getting more noticeable. It is only necessary to create debate before any major step, especially when it can lead to war. This nation has seen what happened in Vietnam and is not willing to do that again unless there is a very just cause we can all agree on – or most of us anyway. I think there are a few key issues that need to be analyzed before any decision can be made.

This whole mess started with weapons inspections. After the Gulf War, the United Nations had ordered weapons inspections on Iraq. Seems fair. Then after a few years of fruitless searches, teams of weapons inspectors comprised of members of different nations (including the United States) slipped up. In fact, word got out that one American might have been working for the CIA and spending more time looking for President Hussein then he/she was looking for Weapons of Mass Destruction (WMD). At that point, the Iraqi president decided he would not allow weapons inspectors to return unless the team was free of Americans. Of course the United States was not happy with this and wasn't going to let it fly past their veto in the Security Council.

Now here is the first question that comes to my mind: Would the United States be willing to allow a weapons inspection team consisting of Russians, Chinese and Iraqis (gasp) to spot inspect all American weapons programs and top-secret sites? I probably have a better chance of being elected prime minister of Israel.

But let's forget that for a minute and assume Iraq does have some sort of WMD (be it chemical, biological or nuclear), even though weapons inspections have come up dry. Do we really want to start a war with a nation that possesses WMD and is crazy enough to use them on a large population of our allies in the region? Consequences like this call for the utmost effort for a diplomatic solution.

It just doesn't seem smart to me. And people like former Head of Weapons Inspections Scott Ritter agree.

Also, let's assume that we do follow George Bush and Co. into a war with Iraq. What will happen then? Will we get bombed? Will our allies get bombed? Will we commit 250,000 to 400,000 young men and women to urban warfare to oust President Hussein? How long will we stay there? How many people will have to die?

The next possible scenario to think about is what happens after a successful campaign to oust President Hussein. Will there be an independent Kurdistan? Will that start a war with Turkey? Will the Shiites in the south unite with Iran? Will the United States fight Iran while they're in the area to save on gas? (Seems to be what this whole thing is about anyway.) If Iraq can cling together, what type of government will the United States establish? Maybe another little puppet regime like the one we threw together in Afghanistan. And maybe President Karzai could even visit the new Iraqi puppets for encouragement and photo-ops.

As I understand it, President Bush wants to put Iraqis in jeopardy along with thousands of Americans in the armed forces while shaking the unstable foundations of a region that is already utterly anti-American. And for what? Some stupid grudge. I can't seem to explain it any other way. It's not as though many other Republicans are supporting him. Democrats are surely not in the same boat – not even the same ocean. And his own state department is telling him he is nuts. Mr. Bush, it's time for you to grow up; you're no longer 31.

Wait. Something just dawned on me. Maybe this is all about democracy. Maybe, just maybe, President Bush wants to spread cheer and joy and democracy in the Middle East. I wonder if he was talking about that to PRINCE Abdullah from the KINGDOM of Saudi Arabia.

Though I frequently find myself disagreeing with Thomas Freidman's writing from the New York Times, I found this excerpt from his Aug. 21 column especially important: "Why is America pushing democracy only in Iraq? Maybe it's because America really doesn't care about democracy in the Arab world, but is just pursuing some naked interests in Iraq and using democracy as its cover."

Another important point alienating many Republicans from banging on Bush's war drums is the lack of international support. The only country behind us is the United Kingdom, whose media and populous are very skeptical of aggression towards Iraq, but whose prime minister agrees with the White House. I have also heard the arguments about using internal resistance organizations and militias against President Hussein.

This is much like what happened in Afghanistan with the Northern Alliance. However, let us not confuse Iraq and Afghanistan, because they are very different. A few weeks ago a man named Jalal Talabani publicly (through CNN) asked for American assistance in removing President Hussein. Talabani is the leader of Kurdish resistance groups, but that's not all. When I heard the name it rang a bell. I had heard of Talabani in a book I read this summer. It seems as though the CIA had helped him organize a coup against the Iraqi leadership in 1995 but backed out at the last moment, leaving many of his people to die mercilessly at the hands of Hussein's troops. This makes me wonder if Talabani's plea is nothing but a trap for Americans in northern Iraq. Maybe we have no friends supporting us on this, because we are running out of friends.

Yousef Munnayer is Collegian columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.13.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Fall TV

blasts back into action with new shows and old faces

By Lizzy Nielsen
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's that time of year again. Back at school, there's a twinge of orange in the leaves and there's a chill in the air, making fleece sweatshirts necessary for those late night walks. It's also time to find out what's going to happen with Rachel and her baby and Joey's proposal. But this season marks the end of an era for "Friends," and NBC needs to find some new powerhouse comedies to maintain the institution that is "Must See TV Thursday." This could indeed be NBC's last season as America's top rated network, as it declined after the departure of "Seinfeld." The removal of "Friends" is only shaping up to hurt it more.

NBC

As already stated, NBC needs to find some new ammunition to maintain the strength of the Thursday night lineup. "Good Morning Miami" has been placed in the coveted 9:30 p.m. Thursday slot between "Will and Grace" and "ER." However, the idea behind this new comedy is a bit questionable.

The plot line goes like this. Producer goes to Miami to get job. Job is below his qualifications. Producer meets pretty girl. Producer takes crappy job to work with pretty girl. Pretty girl is significant other of arrogant TV host. (And they say nobody can come up with great ideas for comedy. Hah.) "Good Morning Miami" premieres Sept. 26 at 9:30 p.m.

Well, a little more promising in the NBC fall lineup is the heavily promoted "American Dreams," which is about a '60s family next door with an aspiring dancer daughter and a disapproving father. The dramatic events of the '60s are used as a backdrop, creating the stage for a moving and attention grabbing new drama. "American Dreams" premieres Sept. 29 at 8 p.m.

CBS

CBS has been on the incline in the last few years with the success of "CSI: Crime Scene Investigation." So in looking to create more of the same trend, CBS is following in the footsteps of NBC and its successful spin-offs of "Law and Order" by introducing the spin-off "CSI Miami." Immediately following "CSI" on Thursday night is "Without a Trace," a new drama about an FBI missing persons unit. CBS has clearly decided to try to dominate the nighttime dramas as NBC has forever dominated the comedies. CBS is only introducing two new comedies with "Still Standing" and "Bram and Alice," about which no critics have had glowing reviews of as of yet.

ABC

ABC hasn't been very successful in the ratings since the days of "Home Improvement," but the network is looking to make a comeback and compete with NBC and CBS with the introduction of a few new dramas and comedies. "That was Then" premiers on Sept. 27 at 9 p.m. and is the story of a man who wakes up on his 30th birthday dissatisfied with his entire life. Upon wishing he could go back and fix things, he wakes up the next morning in 1988 and soon realizes that he should be careful what he wishes for. While I'm not sure how the plotline is going to fly, critics say that the late '80s-ness of the series goes over very well.

"Push, Nevada" is leading the pack with ABC's new dramas, premiering at 9 p.m. on Sept. 17. It's about an IRS accountant who receives a mysterious fax from a casino in Push, Nev. about a significant accounting error. (Banking on the tankage of Enron, anyone?) After getting rejected on the phone, the accountant goes to investigate the problems and meets a beautiful woman (obviously) who works at a "slow dance bar." Hmm. Well, definitely check out ABC next Tuesday night if you want to know more.

FOX

With the loss of its two longtime ratings-rulers "Ally McBeal" and "The X-Files," Fox is looking to rebound from last season's disappointing ratings with a new lineup of comedies and dramas to complement the success of such shows as "Malcolm in the Middle" and "The Bernie Mac Show."

"The Grubs" gets the slot after "Malcolm" on Sunday evenings and is the story of a family of losers. Sound familiar? It stars Randy Quaid and Carol Kane as underachieving parents of a son who enjoys blowing things up and a younger son, played by Michael Cera, who is inspired by his beautiful teacher to work and go beyond his unemployment-check-grubbing father and frightened-of-change mother.

"Cedric the Entertainer Presents" is the other show leading the pack of the fresh faces of the fall lineup. It's an old school variety show and joins Bernie Mac as one of the original Kings of Comedy on the Fox network. Kelly Kapowski, I mean Tiffani Theissen (there's no more Amber), returns to Fox in "Fastlane," a drama about a group of cops seeking revenge for the death of their co-workers.

Well, if nothing else, this season looks to be an interesting one on our nation's four major networks. There isn't too much copycatting, and there's certainly a variety of new stuff to satisfy any TV watcher's appetite.

Good ol' clean Friday night fun with Dale K and Hugh Grant

With school back in the swing of things, weekends can begin to regain their lively momentum once again. Something Every Friday presents hypnotist-comedian Dale K tonight at 8 p.m. at the Top of the Campus Center, room 1109, at the University of Massachusetts. Immediately following, About a Boy, the latest Hugh Grant flick from this summer, lights up the screen.

Dale K is a crazy hypnotist known for his audience participation and wacky antics. Audience members are hypnotized and forced to unleash their most hidden of talents, all in front of a large group of people. Whatever show Dale K ends up gracing the UMass campus with, it is guaranteed to be a hysterical and crazy ride, as is his signature selling point.

In About a Boy, Hugh Grant stars as Will Lightman. It's the typical story we've all seen before. Take the wealthy, arrogant, seemingly happy bachelor and bring in some unforeseen, life-altering event into his life. This, of course, ultimately leads to a wild tale of laughs and gasps before the reaching its everything-worked-out-the-better ending. The hero in these stories is usually transformed from a wisecracking, egotistical and mean-spirited dirt bag to a quiet, humbler nice guy.

Not quite so in About a Boy, though. Will begins his adventure by passing himself off as a single father, bumping shoulders with single moms and completely sure of his ability to break their hearts when they ask for a commitment. Factor in Marcus, a 12-year-old boy and somewhat of a misfit trying to find his own self, as that unforeseen lighting bolt. By the story's end, Will has friends, real friends, and is just as playfully selfish as he had always been. Bottom line: About a Boy encompasses all the charm of hope-regained classics such as The Family Man without transforming its main character into a sappy sucker.

Something Every Friday is bound to be loads of fun, as it is an alcohol and drug free alternative for students who wish to have some clean fun on Friday nights. With a hypnotist who gets a kick out of Foreign Hot Dog vendors and an ever-witty Hugh Grant, it's impossible to go wrong.

- Lizzy Nielsen and Jennifer Eastwood

MUSICAL CHEERS

WITH NIKA MARTIN

Partying hardy...already

So here we all are back at UMass. Back to the party life. Away from our parents. On our own. Hallelujah! Now I can turn into the drug-using alcoholic that you all know I am. Well, maybe not exactly, but I am a chronic dancer who is always looking for a party. And happily, I am back on campus and banging down those frat doors, pre-gaming and partying hardy. You know what I mean, a night of studying in the library with my closest friends, preceded by the consumption of a six-pack of Diet Coke. It's all good. And hell, it can only get better.

For instance, there's the "Bowl Dance" coming up tonight. And Saturday is "Tee Shirt and Jeans" in the Student Union. I'm going to break out the Levi's right now! But seriously, it's great to be back. And I really am going to all these campus events – and you should too! "The Bowl Dance" is a really fun time. It's a great opportunity to (literally) bump into old friends from last year or meet new ones if you are new to the school.

For those of you who don't know, the dance is in a great big dirt pit (with some sparse patches of grass) in the center of the Orchard Hill living area. There's a D.J. and lots of half-drunk guys and gals running around in tee shirts and tank tops on a usually rather chilly September night. You don't want to miss it. If you keep your eyes and ears open, you will find that UMass actually has a lot of these fun novelty events planned each semester. It's something to do that gets everyone out and really boosts the energy on campus. Show your support and have a great time. I know I plan to. (Wink, wink!)

Country music goes hip-hoppin'

Usually I am a pop/classic rock/country/jazz-mix type of person. I've never been a fan of Hip-Hop or the culture that generally surrounds it. However, lately, geez, I don't know. I've been spending more time with my friends than usual, which means being surrounded by their music a lot more often that I am used to. And by golly, they've turned this southern pop girl into a Jay Z/hip-hop wannabe Portuguese princess. It's great. I am totally loving the transition and finally get why all the people in Southwest have so much fun at parties...well, besides the alcohol.

You see, in Central, we have Bob Marley and, ooh if we're lucky, a little Nirvana or whatnot. Oh right; and we've got the pot. But that's it. Seriously, it's like a whole new scene.

At first I had these moral issues with hip-hop. I just couldn't deal with the woman bashing or the repetitious of "I think my gut is in my feet." All those really fast lyrics, usually referred to as "rapping," also didn't make my top list. But then I started thinking about what I was actually listening to.

For instance, anyone who likes the Rolling Stones' song "Under My Thumb" really shouldn't have much to say about the lyrics in most hip-hop songs. And what about the Stones song, "Sex Drive?"

I think it's all in the mindset and in what you are looking to get out of the music. If you want inspiration, this probably isn't the song for you unless it's your wedding night (insert snirk and head nod here). But if you want something to blast in your car, I guess you know where to look.

You see gentle reader, the moral of the column is not to judge your music by its content, but to see how music has changed so much, yet managed to remain just the same over the past thirty years or so. Explain that to mom and dad.

Nika Martin is a Collegian columnist.

The Bathroom Wall belongs in the toilet

By Johnny Donaldson
Collegian Staff

JIMMY FALLON
The Bathroom Wall
Dreamworks

With his boyish good looks and talent for mimicry, Jimmy Fallon has become Saturday Night Live's newest breakout star, going from bit parts to a coveted slot hosting Weekend Update to host of this year's Video Music Awards (VMAs). To capitalize on his burgeoning celebrity status, Fallon has put out The Bathroom Wall, a comedy album consisting of six novelty songs and eight tracks of stand-up, much of it achieving the level of mediocre.

Fallon is actually a pretty funny guy. His imitations leave me in awe when he kicked off the VMAs impersonating everyone from Eminem to Avril Lavigne (looking like a member of the long-lost twin group Nelson). I was in stitches. He indulges his talent here on "Troll Doll Celebrities" and "Troll Doll Jingles," both about troll dolls, naturally. In the former, he plays Robin Williams, Jerry Seinfeld, Gilbert Gottfried and Adam Sandler among others; in the latter, he demonstrates his penchant for musical parodies by taking on Coldplay, U2, Dave Matthews Band, REM and more. Neither track is particularly hilarious, but they are engaging – Fallon is pitch perfect, and anyone who aspires to nail a canon of impersonations of their own will want to be him. The rest of the stand-up consists of bits aimed at college life, which prove to be keenly observed but not altogether hilarious.

Coming before the stand-up are Fallon's songs, which are not straight parodies, but comically straightforward tunes pairing reasonably solid backing music with Fallon's own twisted lyrics. Kick-off "Idiot Boyfriend," Fallon's first person tale of a boyfriend that can't do right – gets into a funky disco groove, and Fallon has fun with a Prince-ly falsetto. "(I Can't Play) Basketball" mines soul-funk. "Snowball" takes on punk, and "Road Rage," a cocky '60s garage-rock thumper, proves to be the (musical) highlight. Fallon isn't the greatest singer, nor are the lyrics as clever as he thinks they are, but who woulda thunk that Fallon has such a sure grasp on the actual music?

By the time the album winds down to the end, it confirms its placement as a disappointment. Fallon – so winning, so talented, so charismatic on "SNL" – should have put out a funnier overall concept album. The result is a CD that sporadically amuses but will eventually be relegated to "forgotten status" in your CD collection.

Whitney most impersonating Jimmy Fallon foils at his first comedy album

the SOURCE

(the sors) n. key to discovering the weekly happenings of New England compiled by Nikolas Markantonatos

Concerts

SPRINGFIELD – Live entertainment at the Big E, which runs Sept. 13-29, is always a big draw – and with good reason. This year City High and B2K are slated to perform. In addition to the headlining acts on the Main Stage, talented performers will be everywhere, from the New England Center Stage to the Storrowtown Gazebo. A complete lineup of stage events follows.

Main Stage

Springfield Symphony Orchestra performs with artist Michael Israel on Sept. 13 at 8 p.m. City High on Sept. 14 at 8 p.m. Charlie Daniels on Sept. 15 at 7 p.m. Kohl & Company on Sept. 16-22 at 1 and 4 p.m.

Storrowtown Gazebo, at Storrowton Village

The Coats on Sept. 13-19 at 1, 3 and 6:30 p.m. Bounce, Ooo La La and Daniel on Sept. 20-29 at 1, 3 and 6:30 p.m.

Storrowton Village Meetinghouse

Dan Grady's Marvelous Marionette Medley on Sept. 13-29 at 12:30, 3:30 and 6 p.m.

New England Center Stage will hold martial arts and gardening demonstrations, vaudeville entertainment, dance performances and storytelling, among other events.

Harvest New England Demonstration Kitchen, sponsored by Uncommon USA, will be cooking up a storm as cooking demonstrations and contests are planned.

At the The Farm-A-Rama Stage musician/puppeteer Chris Rowland will entertain audiences with his amusing and educational shows that feature songs like "Squeeze, Squirt, Right From the Udder," and the "Crop Hop." Jack Golden, a.k.a. "Dr. Garbology," presents "Where Does Your Garbage Go?" a show that explains recycling and waste reduction. And get ready to play "On the Farm," a quiz show about agriculture and catch Farm Follies, featuring Hap, the Happy Farm Boy and his singing vegetables, including Elvis Broccoli.

They love to see you smile and at McDonaldland Stage, sponsored by McDonalds (duh!), they'll be waiting to see your pearly-whites shine. Ronald McDonald and all his friends will present a lively "Silly Day in McDonaldland" show each day of the Fair. Shows will be held adjacent to Mallary Plaza at 1, 2, 4 and 6 p.m. on weekdays with an additional show at noon on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Big E fairgrounds will feature a variety of roving performers, including a Mexican mariachi band featuring the "Ballet Folklorico Azteca de Mexico" dancers who are known to kick up their heels during the Mardi Gras parades; Randy Burns, a.k.a. The Mechanical Man, will perform his robotic act and BiggiE, the furry official Fair mascot will also be there. Have your picture taken with BiggiE on the Court of Honor or see him in the Daily Parade at 5 p.m.

For more information on the Big E, visit www.thebige.com or call (413) 737-2443.

NORTHAMPTON – Antonio Pompa-Baldi, piano, Smith College Music Series Emerging Artist for 2002-2003 and the 2001 Van Cliburn Competition silver medallist will perform Suite "Bergamesque" by Claude Debussy, "Barcarolle," Op. 60 by Frederic Chopin, Sonata No. 3 in E-Flat Major, Op. 135 by Josef Gabriel Rheiberger, and Sonata No. 2, Op. 36 in B-flat Minor by Sergei Rachmaninoff. The concert is at 8 p.m. at Smith College in the Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall. Tickets are $10 for the general public, $5 for students and seniors and are available by calling (413) 585-ARTS.

Art Exhibits

NORTHAMPTON – "Capturing the Essence: Paintings" by Varick K. Niles is open now through Sept. 27 for view at Smith College. Using watercolor, oil and acrylic media, Niles paints the "essence" of her subjects, which include flora and landscapes from Mass. and Fla. Exhibit hours are Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Alumnae House Gallery.

Shows

NORTHAMPTON – "Soul Repairs," a theatre production written and directed by Andrea Hairston and performed by Chrysalis Theatre, is the first in a series of science fiction works investigating repair as biological, physical and social activity. Hairston focuses on the fluidity of identity and community in the context of repair, while also considering the notion of reparations, combining elements of science fiction, fantasy, and festival drama. The show will be Sept. 19 at Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, Mendenhall CPA, Green St. Tickets are $12 for general admission; $10 seniors and Smith College faculty and staff and $5 for students and can be purchased by calling (413) 585-ARTS.

Conferences

NORTHAMPTON – Michael Comber of Oxford University will conduct "Oedipus Rocks: Sophocles, Hitchcock, and the Private Eye," a lecture sponsored by the classics and film studies departments and the lecture committee of Smith College on Sept. 20 at Smith in the Neilson Library Browsing Room.

Auditions and Contests

HARTFORD, CONN. – Connecticut Opera is seeking a variety of people to perform the supernumerary (non-singing roles) in its upcoming production of Pucini's grand opera, Turandot. Since these roles are all pantomime, they require no opera or singing experience at all. The directors, however, are casting according to the costume sizes and roles they have available. The actors needed are: one large male (sumo-wrestler type) to play the executioner, one tall attractive male to play the Prince of Persia, four men with strong upper bodies to play the executioner's assistants, two young women (dress size approximately eight) to play Turandot's handmaidens, four men to play Turandot's guards, three young dancers to play the temptresses in Act III, six young children (three boys, three girls) ages five to 10 at the top of Act I only.

Actors must perform in all three scheduled performances, Oct. 17 at 8 p.m., Oct. 19 at 8 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 20 at 2 p.m. In addition, actors are required to attend all rehearsals and possibly go to the studio for a separate costume fitting.

Auditions will be held at Studio 6, 224 Farmington Avenue, Hartford, Conn. on Saturday, Sept. 14 from noon to 2 p.m. If interested, contact Kent Loika, director of production at (860) 527-0713, ext. 306 or e-mail him at kloika@ctopera.org.

www.dailycollegian.comwww.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.comwww.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.comwww.dailycollegian.com

WELCOME BACK!

Computer Associates would like to welcome back the students of the University of Massachusetts.

See yourself in more than a job.
See yourself excelling.
See yourself here!

We would like to thank Tiffany Slade Suzanne West for their lasting contributions as 2002 Summer Interns

Computer Associates, the software that manages eBusiness, can offer you the opportunity to work with today's groundbreaking technology and some of the brightest minds in the industry. We have exciting opportunities in areas such as Software Development, Technical Support, Child Care, Sales Accounting, and Finance. For consideration, forward your resume today to: joinCA@ca.com (please indicate CODE C0100 in the subject).

Questions? E-mail us at: Campus@ca.com

Computer Associates Maintaining Partnerships with Universities and Students

The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club

UltimateFitness THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER

Located in the Stop & Shop Plaza on Route 9

For more information call 253-7571

- Full Aerobics Programs including:
  -Cardio Kickboxing
  -Sports Step
  -and many more
- Nutritional Consultation
- Tanning
- Sauna
- Juice Bar & Supplements
- Fitness Testing & Programming

Semester Special $160

- Stairmasters
- Precor Treadmills
- Lifecycle Recumbant Bikes
- Lifecycle Upright Bikes
- Precor Crosstrainers
- Body Masters & icarian Free Weights
- Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

NOW OFFERING AEROBICS ONLY MEMBERSHIPS

road

continued from page 10

"They go the way she goes," Rudy said about the Wolverines. "I think what we're going to do is adjust our back a little bit, maybe prevent balls from getting there to begin with."

"We're going to try to do some things to slow them down," Rudy continued about the Maroon and White's game plan. "We're going to work on our restarts, because it's always the equalizer. It'll be nice to score on some restarts."

On Sunday at 2 p.m., UMass will take on Alabama-Birmingham, the host team for this weekend's tourney. The Blazers currently stand at 1-2-1 this fall, with the scoring punch coming from sophomore midfielder Jenny Rynders.

In its last game this past Friday, the Maroon and White played by far its best soccer of the year, but still dropped a 3-2 heartbreaker to Boston University after the Terriers grabbed a late goal. The Minutewomen did, however, break their scoreless drought. Rudy said he saw significant progress from his troops following their last game, a 5-0 blowout by Rhode Island.

"I'm encouraged by BU," the 15th-year coach said. "We had enough chances in that game, and if we were older and a little bit more mature, we could have walked away with it."

While the offensive production has been somewhat lacking this season for the team, one of the greatest assets to the team has been the goalkeeping of Kelly Nigh. The senior captain has been solid this year, keeping the Minutewomen in contests with a total of 40 saves and an .816 save percentage. She is on pace to crush the single-season school mark of 141 saves.

The competition should without a doubt be stiff for the Minutewomen this weekend, but Rudy believes that despite the team's youth and its injury bug, he hopes to see increased improvement as the opposition becomes a bit more difficult.

"I'm seeing some decent things," Rudy said. "There are players making individual progress collectively. But boy, it's just a constant learn, and we're having to learn against teams that can school us."

fun

continued from page 10

Terps were ranked No. 1 in the country – mostly in part to their surging early pace. They have begun the year 4-0, including a shocking 2-0, shutout victory over field hockey powerhouse Old Dominion. ODU was predicted No. 1 in the nation in the preseason polls. Now they have a 3-1 record and Maryland has taken over the top spot.

Maryland is a young team, just like the Minutewomen. The difference between the two lies in the results. The Terps are undefeated while UMass is searching for that all-elusive first win of the season.

Coach Shea knows it doesn't matter what has been done in the past in the game of field hockey; it is all about who executes in the present game.

"It's a game of mistakes," she explained. "You have one implement (the stick) trying to manipulate another implement (the ball). Both teams will make mistakes, so whoever capitalizes on the opponents' faults will be successful."

What Shea is trying to achieve is simple. She wants her team to grow and dismiss any sort of insecurities a young squad would have. She wants comfort among her players. Going on the road and playing with nothing to lose against the best team in the country today will give the Minutewomen a chance to settle the anxieties ignited from striving for perfection, according to Shea.

"Being on the road can help a team get away from all the distractions of being at home or on campus," she said. "As much as you love playing at home, it is extremely difficult to play at home, especially during the first week of school. Going on the road could settle our team down. When we are on the road, the coaching staff knows if they are getting a good night sleep, if they are eating well and if they are studying in the rooms. It makes everything a little more calm."

Massachusetts finishes off the two-game road trip on Sunday when they face off with American University.

A member of the Patriot League, the Eagles are currently 3-1 on the year. Like Maryland, AU will be a difficult challenge for the Minutewomen.

"American is a pretty strong team," Shea said. "They have a pretty strong foreign contingence. They are always competitive, and they play in a great area for field hockey, so you can't help but be a strong team."

Coach Shea isn't so concerned with what the final scores of these two games in the Old Line State this weekend, she is more concerned with how her team responds to her plea for a relaxed mentality.

"What we have to avoid is when we take one step forward, we cannot take two steps back," she said. "It's just going to take time, we have a young team, and we have to take baby steps. Yes we want to win every game, but the outcome is not what we are looking for. We are looking for the process."

DERALD INGOGLIELLO/COLLEGIAN

Field hockey coach Patty Shea would like to see more shots like the one above from senior Sarah Bohonowicz.

DERALD INGOGLIELLO/COLLEGIAN

Here we go again!

The UMass football team looks to go 2-0 on Saturday as they duel with American International College at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Another collapse for the BoSox: it's time to go for hometown hero

TODD FOSTER

You can call it "the Curse," you can blame it on the Yankees, you can spin it anyway you want, the Red Sox just couldn't get it done, despite the fact that year after year, the Sox bring one of the MLB's finest from the free agent market to help them in their quest for the World Series.

In 1998, they brought in possibly the most dominating pitcher of all-time in Pedro Martinez. Since the day Martinez came to town, the Red Sox decided to overprice tickets, so greedy owners can pay high-priced free agents the insane amounts they ask for.

Johnny Damon, Manny Ramirez and Cliff Floyd have all been all-stars for other teams before they came to Boston. If the Sox are going after these high-priced players, how come they always come up short? Well, the Red Sox never fill their most necessary needs. Here is what the Sox need to do before next season to make it to the promise land.

Stalk Glavine

All right, Beantown added Floyd and Damon, but we also got Dustin Hermanson. He would have been a great third in the rotation behind Martinez and the most improved player in the MLB, Derek Lowe. Unfortunately, the Sox lost Hermanson for most of the season due to an injury he suffered earlier in the season. Why was he such a huge loss to the pitching rotation? Well, probably because the pitching staff is pathetic to begin with.

John Burkett, a 15-year veteran, is a consistent pitcher but isn't getting any younger. Casey Fossum, a second year hurler, is going to need some time in the league before he can be counted on to give a double-digit win season. Last, and certainly least, Frank "Meatball Master" Castillo looks like he's pitching a home run derby against teams that Jesse Burkett's Little Leaguers could beat. So, what does Boston need on its pitching staff? Well, talent would be nice.

Tom Glavine, one of the best pitchers over the past decade and native of Billerica, Mass., has expressed some interest in coming back home to finish his career. Are you kidding me? If the Sox had Martinez, Lowe and Glavine, the Red Sox would possibly have the best 1-2-3 in the American League. Face it folks, to compete with the Yankees, Boston needs a pitching staff like the one they have. I hate the Yankees more than any of you, but facts are facts.

Making the call to the bullpen

What is one of Grady Little's toughest decisions to make during the game? It would definitely have to be who to call from the bullpen, because the entire bullpen doesn't have a single reliable arm to go and in get three tough outs. What are they paying these guys for? How do they solve this problem?

First, the Sox have a lot of depth at the outfield and shortstop positions. Why waste that talent on the pine? Freddy Sanchez, one of the most promising shortstops in the minors, could attract a lot of attention from any team in search of a shortstop.

By trading Sanchez, the Sox could land a few talented, young pitchers that could be used in the bullpen to develop their skills and help Boston win some ballgames. What could be a better situation than to throw a new young pitcher into a tied game and see what he can do? If he can perform in the clutch, the pitching staff just gained a much-needed consistent setup man.

Second, the Sox should focus on grabbing a few veteran setup men like Bob Howry. Players like Steve Reed, Arthur Rhodes and other setup men don't get enough love in the salary department. You want to spend a lot of money? Then spend it on something like the bullpen.

The power of money seems like the only way to get talent nowadays. Ugueth Urbina, an overrated firearm, is a good closer, but isn't worth the big money. So, Urbina could possibly be on the move this spring if the Sox decide he isn't worth the money.

Who's on first?

First base has always been a position that has been loaded with talent in the most recent years. Every team that wins the World Series always has a solid first baseman. Could you imagine if Boston could land a first baseman like Mike Sweeney or Jim Thome? It would have the best batting lineup money could buy. Weaker teams like Kansas City and Cleveland are looking to rebuild their teams, so trade the young prospects and solid starters in exchange for a superstar.

Brian Daubach, Tony Clark, Rey Sanchez, Carlos Baerga and many other players fall under the category of used players that certain clubs would love to add to their roster.

If Little can't land a superstar first baseman, Cliff Floyd better learn the position quick. When Floyd was with the Florida Marlins, he played first base and left field, so he does have experience with both. How much does it help to have Floyd at first base? Now, they can have Floyd, Ramirez, Damon and the underrated Trot Nixon in the lineup everyday with the designated hitter's spot open to any big bat that Little feels like throwing in.

Dump the baggage

Nothing could make a fan angrier than wasting money on a player that doesn't produce, like Castillo and the struggling, but classy, Tony Clark. The trade value for players like these two scrubs isn't too high, but the Sox could still possibly land a young prospect and/or a hidden gem. So, take that money and spend it on someone who wants $200 billion a year, right? No, just because these people ask for the money doesn't mean they are worth it. Or why not try to grab someone just as good for less money?

Nomar Garciaparra and Shea Hillenbrand are two of the most underpaid players on the Sox and probably in the entire league. How come Nomar and Shea don't have huge contacts? They started with the Sox through the farm system, which seems to be non-existent over the past couple years.

By bringing players through your farm system, the players: (a) learn the team's style of play and (b) cost a lot less, because they are unproven. Plus, you don't spend as much in the free agent market

***

Well, the Sox obviously have a lot of work to do this offseason. As long as Little and company can land a few steady setup men, a first baseman, some young prospects and hometown hero Toni Glavine, you can count on the Sox trampling all over the Yankees next season on their way to the World Series. Right now, that's only a dream, but by next season, it could become a reality. Keep the faith, Beantown!

Todd Foster is a Collegian correspondent.

www.dailycollegian.com

OFFICE WORKERS

Various office help needed: packing boxes, counting materials, labeling cartons, and answering phones. Preferred candidates will work quickly and accurately and be able to work at least 3 consecutive hours between 9 A.M. and 5 P.M. on days that we have work. On-call hours available beginning mid-September throughout the academic year. $8.00/hr. Call 256-0444 to request an application.

Personnel
NATIONAL EVALUATION SYSTEMS, INC.
P.O. Box 226 Amherst, MA 01004-0226 personnel@nesinc.com
NES®
E.O.E.

UMass Student Legal Services Office

CALL TODAY

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students

545-1995

TechCavalry
help is on the way!

Computer Troubles?

We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com

Tape this ad to your computer!

Affordable

Rings Bracelets Candles Earrings
India Print Bedspreads Chains
Great Clothing And Gifts
Happy B'day Cards
Baskets Paper Lampshades
Area Rugs
Posters
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
Incense Bead Curtains

The Mercantile
GreatGifts
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5:30 Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops Northampton 108Main St.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER A UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigmaalphalambda.org

Searching for E! www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Mazda 626LX Very good condition $1700/6.0. 549-5240

99 Audi A4 Quattro. Lowered 18-inch wheels and much more. $17,500 413-522-3312

91 Subaru Sedan Automatic Power window/cruise control New Transmission $1400 413-546-2110

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

EMPLOYMENT

ACTIVISM Looking for a job that works with your academic schedule? Want a job that means something to you? Call Clean Water Action Today! We are now hiring people with good communication skills to learn basic grassroots organizing. Flexible Schedules. Great Pay. Fun People. Just 10 min. from campus. Call Megan 413-584-9830.

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Northeast Foundation for Children Program Administrative Assistant

Mission-driven, small, nonprofit education organization seeks assistant with strong office and computer skills to support Foundation's whole school reform work. Interest in education a plus. Must have strong organization skills and experience with MS Word, Excel, and Internet. Strong interpersonal skills, flexibility and a sense of humor a must. Enjoy people. Send resume, cover letter and salary requirements to: Laurie Harrison Northeast Foundation for Children 39 Montague City Road Greenfield, MA 01301 Email: Laurie@responsiveclassroom.org Fax: 413-774-1129 See our website www.responsiveclassroom.org for additional information and a detailed job description.

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day.

Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

STAGE HANDS WANTED at Fine Arts Center. $6.75 / hr. Variable schedule – week day availability preferred 9-noon, 1pm-5 Applications at production services Rm 146 F.A.C.

Amherst Leisure Services Department is hiring officials for its Adult Volleyball League. The games are held Sundays at a local school. We are also looking for a Supervisor to run the program. League runs from late September-mid-December. To apply, go to Town Hall, Human Resources Department. Work Study and Non-Work Study jobs available. For more information please contact Erika Cumps 256-4065x114 or at cumpse@town.amherst.ma.us.

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

HELP WANTED

Weekly cleaning $6.50 hourly-references call 549-0413 8-11am

HOUSE FOR RENT

Clean new house $425 plus. No pets/smoking 478-6411

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

2 bed condo available now. Big basement, on bus rt. Call 413-283-5315

FOR SALE

Dorm Fridge & Microwave for sale. $40-$60 Call 695-3648

Fujitsu laptop microsoft office '97 Ethernet $500 549-1155

INSTRUCTION

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

Guitar lessons – All ages, styles, levels. lessons@mapwares.com 584-7750

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica from $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

Monreal Madness Weekends Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs 10 or more discounts Montrealexpress.net 781-979-0076

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

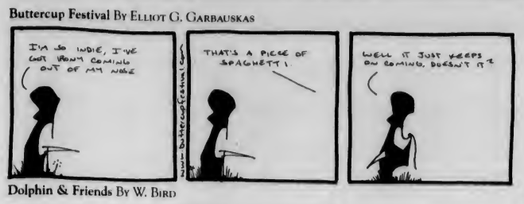
Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 9:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. M-F 545-3500

Student rate: 10 cents/word Regular rate: 15 cents/word

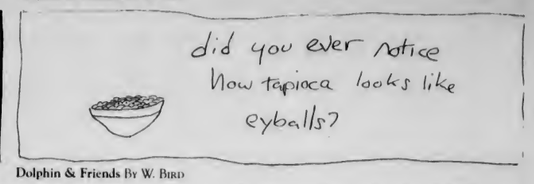
Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN



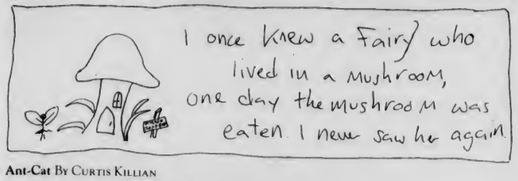
Housing Services Cable Network

1. ....CBS/3
2. ....NBSN
3. ....Fox Sport NE
4. ....PBS / 57
5. ....HSCN Movie Channel
6. ....WB / 20
7. ....HSCN Movie Channel
8. ....TV Guide Channel
9. ....FOX / 61
10. ....ABC / 40
11. ....NBC / 32
12. ....International Channel
13. ....UMATV
14. ....HSCN InfoChannel
15. ....ESPN
16. ....ESPN 2
17. ....UVC-19
18. ....ESPN Classic
19. ....Classi-fy-Guyd
20. ....CNN
21. ....CNN HL
22. ....Weather Channel
23. ....Learning Channel
24. ....History Channel
25. ....A & E
26. ....Discovery Health
27. ....Food Network
28. ....NASA
29. ....Home & Garden TV
30. ....Travel Channel
31. ....Lifetime
32. ....CNBC
33. ....Tech TV
34. ....BET
35. ....MTV
36. ....CMT
37. ....VH-1
38. ....TNT
39. ....TBS
40. ....E! Entertainment
41. ....Sci-Fi Channel
42. ....Court TV
43. ....Nick at Nite
44. ....Comedy Central
45. ....Cartoon Network
46. ....Game Show Network
47. ....TV Land
48. ....FOX Family
49. ....Univision
50. ....Galavision
51. ....Telemundo
52. ....College TV Network
53. ....C-SPAN
54. ....C-SPAN2
55. ....Bloomberg Television

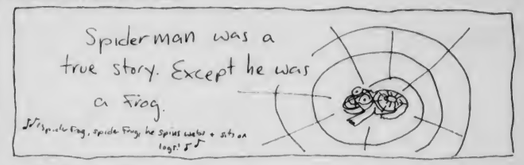


WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	27	(12) Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyen				In the Life
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	According...Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Fe$ity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Fe$ity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Autumn: Gods		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife Kids	According...Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News		Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	11	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	29	Money line		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	39	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Ka-ia	★★ "Hacker" (1996, Suspense) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	26	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)					Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Urban Ai02	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		MJ to Mo's	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	69	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Sponge b	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers		All In Family	All In Family
SOFT	68	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	67	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Jumpy and Wes "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	53	NYPD Blue Twin Peaks (N)				Pretender "PTB" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA	Tonight Show
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger				JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	8	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) "PG-13"				Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Telling Niches (In Stereo)
MAX	65	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)				Set Enough		★½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. "R"				★½ "Sweet Novembe" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. "PG-13"
SHOW	66	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. "PG"						★★½ "The Cell" (2000, Suspense) Calis Blanchett. "R"				Soul Food (TV) (In Stereo)	Resurrection Blvd.



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

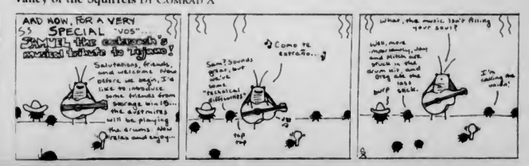


Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Dolphin & Friends By W. Bird

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Milanos & Espresso Lester Edgar Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"..."

-Silent Bob

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 81 LOW: 52	HIGH: 82 LOW: 57	HIGH: 79 LOW: 53

Horoscopes

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – Explore the area today. There are some beautiful places just under your nose. And Antonio's doesn't count.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You will inevitably slack off and forget all of your responsibilities. Good job by you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – If you're reading this, you're probably in class. What did you do THAT for?

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Underwear first, you idiot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Do some laundry, you look like a slob with that mustard stain.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Pick up a Collegian and find direction in the horoscopes. Wait…nevermind.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – The sexiest person ever? Possibly…

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – Freedom, love and happiness are the most important things in America. Don't take any of them for granted.

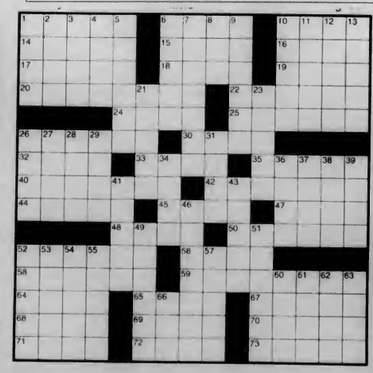
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Find your inner Zito.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – This is your horoscope.

CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – Don't cross the streams, Ray.

LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – Twenty-one days. Just remember it.

www.dailycollegian.com



ACROSS
1 Referee, slangily
6 Flood controls
10 Glance over
14 Improvise
15 Melville work
16 Cottontail
17 Hardware buys
18 Winter forecast
19 Coaling of trost
20 Secretary or clerk
22 Hardened to 24 Many wines
25 Not a soul
26 One-celled animal
30 "Othello" plotter
32 Were rivals
33 Not phony
35 Kids' toys
40 Distinguished
42 Eyelash enhancer
44 Take a break
45 Seafood choice
47 They give a hoot
48 Canyon phenomenon
50 Optical prescriptions
52 Short jacket
56 Novelist Jean
58 Grownups
59 Pisn
64 "Cheers" regular
65 Non-AKC dog
67 Blender setting
68 Forest part
69 "Got it!"
70 Growl
71 Former superpower
72 Singer Vikki
73 Painter's prop

DOWN
1 Western author Grey
2 Gouda alternative
3 Object on radar
4 Stream
5 Sponge up
6 Gave medicine
7 Concussion result
8 Pasture sound
9 Planting
10 Bush
11 Egypt's capital
12 With weapons
13 Strapped for cash
21 Hunger for
23 Secluded corners
26 Say for sure
27 Play charades
28 Eye, to Pierre
29 "Giant" author Ferber
31 Soprano Gluck
34 Write with acid
36 Computer-screen graphic
37 Playing marbles
38 First name in mysteries
39 Back talk
41 Put forth effort
43 More proficient
46 Turkey cooker
49 Type of dust or ray
51 Go by, as time
52 African native
53 Dumpster outputs
54 Entices
55 Gantry of fiction
57 Out-and-out
60 Popular fish
61 Certain decades
62 Richard of "Runaway Bride"
63 Cheer
66 Can. neighbor

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	C	H	E		S	N	O	B		S	L	A	M
M	O	U	N	D		P	E	R	U		N	U	D	E
B	A	R	G	E		R	O	D		F	A	R	A	T
O	T	T		V	A	I	N		F	O	R	A	G	E
		M	I	S	T		P	O	P	E	Y	E
A	T	T	A	C	H	E		L	O	T
M	A	I	N	E		B	U	N	S	H	A	D	E
A	R	N	O		A	M	I	S	S		B	E	L
H	A	Y	R	I	D	E	S		A	V	O	W	S
			P	O	E		C	A	R	O	U	S	E
S	C	R	I	P		M	E		P	I	G
C	O	Y	E	S	T		M	A	T	S		W	O	N
A	N	N	A		I	C	E	S		E	R	A	S	E
S	A	I	D		N	O	M	E		N	I	G	H	T
A	R	G	O		G	O	O	D		P	E	A	S

10-13-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

YOUR COMIC COULD GO HERE! BUT IT'LL PROBABLY STINK, SO NEVERMIND.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Spring Vegetable Soup

Corned Beef

Fish & Chips

Spinach Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Curried Chick Peas (vegan)

DINNER

Spring Vegetable Soup

Veal Parmesan

Boston Scrod

Tofu Fajita (vegan)

Matt Brady
James Schaffer
Jennifer Eastwood
Melissa Hammel
Shannon Farrington
Gerry Auger

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Maroon and White eyeing classic performance

Minutemen open play at Rudd Field for invitational's return

By Katie Landers
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team is looking to start the weekend off right today in the opening game of the University of Massachusetts Classic. Today they face Iona College and close out the Classic on Sunday against Michigan State. The Classic is returning after a one-season hiatus and will have two Division I programs that never played in the invitational before.

The Minutemen open at the new Rudd Field today with a season record of 1-2 after a tough loss last weekend to Boston University. Senior forward Jeff Derein has been the leader on offense with three goals in three games. The competition has been tight in each game, but UMass has come up short as of late. Head Coach Sam Koch is looking for a turnaround this weekend before the Maroon and White starts games in the Atlantic 10 conference.

"I really feel this group is going to be a really good team," Koch said. "Players are playing for the right reasons."

The hardest matchup this weekend should be Sunday's game against Michigan State, a team that is remarkably similar to UMass. The Spartans lost to Indiana in the third round of the NCAA Tournament last year after a stellar season. UMass has never played MSU before, and although the Spartans are the favorites to win, the Minutemen are looking to topple them on Sunday.

"We want to make sure they go home with a loss," Koch said.

MSU has put home eight tallies on 41 shots while holding opponents to just four goals in three games. Midfielder Jordan Gruber is MSU's top scorer. The sophomore has scored half of his team's goals, and is making a strong return to the team after starting only two games last season and posting four goals.

The Spartans tend to hammer hard during the second half, where the majority of their shots take place. However, the Minutemen could get some help from the East Lansing team that has already committed 50 fouls.

Today's game against Iona could be what UMass needs to jump start the Classic. Iona prides itself on being a young team that is looking to face two top college programs. The roster currently holds 10 freshmen. A tough streak has started for the Gaels who come to Amherst this weekend 0-3 on the season. Head Coach John McLean said that although UMass has respect as a highly ranked team, Iona has not been doing additional work at practice to prepare for the Minutemen.

"I've got to be realistic," Coach McLean said. "We're playing against two big programs. We're getting ready for our conference."

Iona College plays in the MAAC Conference and went 1-7-1 last year. McLean is looking forward to putting some of his younger players against the older and more experienced Minutemen.

Iona has scored on just two of its 24 shots, with both goals coming from junior Lance Rashford. Forward Giovanni Treglia hasn't scored any goals but could help edge the Gaels toward a victory.

"He hasn't done too much so far, but he has been speedy," McLean said.

Coach Koch recognized that although meager in performance, as a "wounded lion" Iona could still pull out some surprises with a powerful defense. Both Iona and MSU could present challenges in the first half of the Minutemen's season.

The UMass Classic will open this afternoon at 4 p.m. on Rudd Field against Iona, and the Minutemen will face MSU on Sunday at 1 p.m.

Andrew Merritt contributed to this article.

GERALD UNGO/COLLEGIAN

This weekend junior Prah Myers and the rest of the Minutemen play host at the annual UMass Classic.

Sweet road Alabama

Minutewomen search for relief down south at the Nike Classic

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

Road trips for many college teams can sometimes be a less than pleasurable experience. The unfamiliar hotel beds, greasy fast food dinners and bumpy bus rides can make most collegiate athletes yearn for the familiar confines of their campus.

But for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, this weekend's 1,100-mile journey to Birmingham, Ala. is almost a relief.

The Minutewomen, mired in a three-game losing streak to open up the 2002 campaign, headed to the Yellowhammer State yesterday for two matches at the Alabama-Birmingham Nike Classic. Head Coach Jim Rudy emphasized that his team will finally be able to focus on soccer without any outside distractions.

"There's nothing to disrupt us [this weekend]," Rudy said. "We've been unable at any point to follow the NCAA routine."

In its past two contests, the Maroon and White has had ceremonies prior to competing, which according to Rudy has caused some "emotional baggage" to form. UMass honored former standout Stephanie Santos last Friday in a small memorial and officially opened its new home, Rudd Field, on Sunday in a grand affair.

The Minutewomen face possibly their toughest challenge of the season today when they clash with No. 9 Michigan at 5 p.m. The Wolverines are a dangerous bunch, but UMass isn't about to back down from its formidable opponent.

"We want to be competitive; we want to play well," Rudy said. "I think they're pretty excited to play against a team of Michigan's level. They're just anxious to get on the road and get a road trip under their belts."

Michigan enters today with a perfect 4-0 record and is coached by former Minutewoman and three-time All-American Debbie Rademacher. So far, her squad has run roughshod over its competition in the early part of the campaign, outscoring the opposition 12-3.

The Wolverines are led by USA Under-21 National Team member Abby Crumpton, who so far this season has scorched opposing defenses in her team's four matches. Crumpton has already tallied six points on the young season, and Rudy knows that containing her will be an integral part to his team's success.

Turn to ROAD, page 7

GERALD UNGO/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Erica Wideberg shows a little hustle, diving around the defender to gain control of the ball

For trip to Maryland, UMass set to have fun

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

There has been a week to heal the wounds. There has been a week to readjust. There has been a week to learn something so biologically enforced in humans that it's second nature.

This week in practice the Massachusetts field hockey team did not learn how to improve their skills or how to execute plays – they learned how to have fun.

"We need to be more loose out there and just play," Head Coach Patty Shea said. "Sometimes you get paralysis by analysis, and we don't want to worry about our mistakes anymore."

Shea's request for her team to loosen up is due in part to their dreadful 0-3 start to the 2002 season.

The culmination of the Minutewomen's problems occurred last Wednesday when they traveled to Chestnut Hill and suffered the worst defeat of this early season, a 3-1 loss to Boston College. In the contest, UMass was only able to produce one shot on goal. The Eagles had 14. The Minutewomen's performance in the match was a clear case of a team that was too tentative and afraid to make the same mistakes in their previous losses in the first two games.

"We have a young team, and with a young team, the players worry about making mistakes," Shea said. "However, I need to see the team play with a reckless abandon and just go for it."

The Maroon and White has a chance to "go for it" this weekend as it travels to Maryland to play two games in the Maryland Invitational. Today in the first contest, UMass will be battling a team that sparks fear in most field hockey programs across the country, the Maryland Terrapins. However, for the Minutewomen, the challenge is well accepted.

"Maryland is a very well-coached, very well-skilled team with a lot of passion and a great tradition," Shea said. "If we want to be the best, we must play the best."

This week, in the first STX/NFHCA poll of 2002, the

GERALD UNGO/COLLEGIAN

Co-captain Stacey Blue and the Minutewomen play No. 1 Maryland today.

Turn to FUN, page 7

BEDINGFIELD ARTS PAGE
HATE THE MUSIC? ED/OP PAGE 4.
SACKS SCHOOL RECORD TIED. SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ISSUE NINE 9.16.02

Activist plans trip to Japan

By Jamie Loo
Collegian Staff

Known for her vigilant activism and dedication to social justice, 26-year-old Martina Robinson, is a notable face on campus. This fall, she hopes to bring her energy and enthusiasm for social justice overseas.

"[Disabled] people need to have standards raised for them," Robinson said.

This past weekend Robinson held a small fair at the Belchertown Common to raise money to go to the Disabled People's International World Assembly in Sapporo, Japan from Oct. 15-18. This is the sixth assembly, which takes place every four years and creates an opportunity for disabled activists to gather and exchange ideas about how to improve conditions for the disabled all over the world. This year the conference has a special mission in mind.

"It's a global gathering of disabled people to help design the Global Disability Civil Rights Agenda for the next few years," Robinson said.

This agenda will eventually go before the United Nations and will be similar to the 1959 Declaration on the Rights of the Child and the Women's Rights charter. The conference will also have workshops about disability awareness and several keynote speakers. It is the responsibility of each delegate attending the conference to raise the $2,500 for the conference. Robinson has raised a little over half of this amount so far.

"It's been a really long and interesting experience raising money. I've spoken to so many people I would have never spoken to before in my life."

Robinson said one of the highlights of her Saturday fundraiser was to work with children, a group she tends not to interact with very much. The community has been very supportive of her fundraising, with various local businesses donating their time and products. Local musical group, Few and Far Between, played outside of the Black Sheep in Amherst on Saturday and donated the money they earned for Robinson's trip.

"One little boy who works in my office collected pennies for me," Robinson said. "People I don't even know have been sending me money."

Diana Robinson, Martina's mom, as well as her aunt and grandmother all came to Belchertown from Harrisburg, Pa. this weekend to help Martina with her fundraiser.

"She's a very determined lady and always has been since she was four," said Diana Robinson, Martina's mother. "Once she puts her mind to something she'll do it no matter what."

Diana Robinson said she always knew Martina would end up doing great things.

"When I was 11, I decided I wanted to be a community organizer," said Robinson.

Robinson, who was born with cerebral palsy, said she remembers the 1988 takeover of Gallaudet University, a school for the deaf, in Washington, D.C. The school was shut down for a week because students and other advocates took over the campus to protest another hearing person's appointment to the university presidency.

"I remember I was glued to the TV. I saw every kind of disabled person converging on D.C. to support these students."

Robinson said it was very powerful for her to see them standing up for themselves. It was at that moment that she decided she wanted to be an organizer as a career.

"Sometimes my mom says she should've unplugged the television," Robinson laughs.

Robinson has taken the semester off from her graduate studies in the UMass community health program to prepare for the conference. Since being at UMass, Robinson has worked with many different organizations on campus to promote awareness about social justice issues. Some of these groups include, G.F.O. the campus globalization movement, the Office of ALANA Affairs and the Radical Student Union among many others. Every Sunday, Robinson also attends the Amherst Peace Vigil.

"Martina is amazing," said friend, Emily Davis. "She's the most organized person I know when it comes to activism."

Davis, a junior BDIC major, will be accompanying Robinson to Japan. It will be Davis' first time in Japan and she said she feels honored to be going with Robinson for this conference. Davis, who only recently got involved in community activism said Robinson is one of the many people who has inspired her.

"She's persistent. All you have to do is spend one day with her to find that out," Davis said. "Martina is an example that more people should be doing what she's doing... It makes me feel like I should be doing more."

Robinson said she expects her trip to Japan to be remarkable. According to Robinson, while most developed countries have strict access laws for the disabled, Japan and other Asian countries are far behind. The Americans with Disabilities Act, requiring public places to provide such services as parking spaces, ramps, and elevators, protect access laws in the U.S. Robinson said the conference has posed a particularly interesting challenge for the city of Saporro, whose organizers have had to look everywhere for accommodations for the attendees. Robinson, who usually travels around in a motorized wheelchair, said she will need to have a manual chair while there because there most likely won't be many access ramps. Some of the questions that she has been asked by the hotels have been slightly offensive, but she's been taking it in good humor.

"They ask me questions like how much do you weigh, can you stand up," she said. Robinson said it's primarily so they can figure out if they can carry her up the front steps of the hotel.

When she returns from Japan, Robinson plans on devoting her full attention to her own activism project. She hopes to build non-profit hotels in major cities such as Washington D.C. so that people in the country can have access to their state legislatures and other opportunities in the cities. But not until after she gets some rest.

"The week I get back I plan to be asleep," Robinson laughs.

For more information on the conference and Martina Robinson go to: www.geocities.com/cripactivist and www.dpi.org.

JESSE LYON/COLLEGIAN

Martina Robinson was at the Belchertown Common over the weekend raising money to fund her trip to the World Assembly for Disabled People in Sapporo, Japan. Robinson was accompanied by her family. Martina Robinson, Diana Robinson, Elizabeth Brown, Eileen Watson, Emily Davis (clockwise).

AHA recommendations for college students' health

By Christopher Theberge
Collegian Staff

A recent article in the journal Circulation [2002 Jul 16;106(3):388-91 Volume 106 #3] insists that physicians begin assessing their patients' risk for cardiovascular disease beginning at age 20. The recommendations are part of the American Heart Association's (AHA) strategy to increase awareness early, thereby decreasing the risk of a first heart attack or stroke later in life.

"The imperative to prevent the first episode of coronary disease or stroke remains strong because many first-ever heart attacks or strokes are fatal or disabling," said Thomas Pearson, M.D., Ph.D., chairman of the consensus panel that updated the recommendations.

New research findings and expert opinions in the field of cardiovascular health encouraged the latest update of the AHA's "Guide to the Primary Prevention of Cardiovascular Diseases" published back in 1997. The guide was created because primary prevention is essential in delaying the onset of cardiovascular disease. In a public health perspective, healthcare providers can offer education to patients, thereby preventing the development of risk factors associated with the disease. A clinical approach is also used to identify and alter risk factors, thereby preventing the onset of heart disease.

Primary prevention allows healthcare providers to assess specific risk factors for disease development and categorize people according to those risks and the number of them that they have, according to the article. Increasing the awareness of the levels and significance of risk factors routinely checked by your healthcare care provider, is the risk factor screening's purpose.

Recommendations include: risk factor assessment beginning at age 20, knowing your family history of heart disease, recording blood pressure, body mass index, waist circumference and pulse at least every two years, and finally measuring cholesterol and blood sugar levels at least every five years, or every two years if risk factors are present.

The screenings will allow providers to create a global risk, estimation that will be used to determine a person's risk for developing heart disease. The risk estimation combines all risk factors and determines an individual's risk of developing heart disease within the next 10 years. Age, sex, smoking status, blood pressure, total cholesterol, HDL ("good") cholesterol, and in some risk scores, LDL ("bad") cholesterol and diabetes are all considered risk factors. It is recommended that adults over 40, or those with two or more risk factors have their 10-year risk for heart disease estimated every five years. If the number of risk factors increases, then individuals should have it done more often.

Cardiovascular disease (CVD) has been the No. 1 killer of Americans since 1900, except 1918. CVD claims more than 2,600 people each day, an average of one death every 33 seconds. Current estimates suggest that more than 61 million Americans have one or more types of CVD. CVD is not just an "old person's" disease either; almost 150,000 Americans killed by the disease are under 65 years of age.

College students can benefit not only from having regular screenings, but also by following the advice from the American Heart Association. There are a number of risk factors associated with heart disease and most are preventable. These include: avoiding tobacco, including second hand smoke, keeping ones blood pressure less than 140/90 mm Hg; less than 130/85 mm Hg in people with disease or heart failure and less than 130/80 mm Hg in people with diabetes, and an overall healthy eating pattern (striving towards a variety of fruits.

Turn to AHA, page 3

All union membership meeting to be held in Student Union ballroom

By Dan Lamothe
Collegian Staff

Membership from six unions at the University of Massachusetts will overflow the Student Union Ballroom Wednesday to discuss their current contract plight and potential options that they can take against it.

"It will be the first all-union membership meeting ever at UMass," United Auto Workers Local 2322 President James Shaw said. "One union isn't going to win this fight. It's going to take all of us."

According to Shaw, over 2000 people participated in the "coffee break" protest held on Sept. 5. "We're looking for around the same thing again," he said.

The purpose of the meeting is to get all of the membership from University unions on the same page.

"We have some information to communicate to people. We want people to understand the thing we're facing and to hear our strategy," Shaw said.

The meeting will also give members of the union a chance to speak out on strategies that the union leadership has developed, with microphones set up in the crowd.

"The leadership is working very hard to make plans, but we also want to hear back from people in the assembly," Shaw said. "The unions are driven by the people."

"I'm hoping to find out where our membership is at and how far people are willing to go," said Donna Johnson, president of the University Staff Association for clerical workers. "We're going to listen to their ideas and their suggestions and concerns that they might have."

Johnson believes that many University employees are concerned with taking the time to participate in events like the coffee break out of fear of discipline.

"They're fearful to take their contractual rights," she said.

"Yes, there may be some discipline that occurs because of some of these reactions, but that the union will be behind them," Johnson said. "Solidarity isn't just a word."

Due to the uncertainty of the numbers that could show up for the event, the unions have a "contingency plan" for an alternate second site outside the Student Union. They also plan on handing out postcards to their memberships to fill out and send to the legislature.

The next plan of action for the unions is a "lunch break" protest planned for Sept. 25. Similarly to the coffee break protest, the event is planned for all 27 public college campuses in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, with potentially thousands taking part throughout the state.

"I use my membership meetings to gauge where membership is and what they want us to do," Johnson said. "We're gauging our membership to make sure that's where they want to go with this."

The protests stem from anger that University workers have over not getting pay raises this year after Governor Jane Swift vetoed a bill that would have funded the contracts UMass employees negotiated more than two years ago. The pay freeze is affecting all contracted University employees. They have not received a raise since July 1, 2000.

The unions on campus have banded together in a coalition called Higher Education Unions United and are planning numerous activities to "get the contracts funded." Coalition leaders hope that by putting pressure on University President William Bulger and Chancellor John Lombardi, they will take a stand supporting the workers. Their best scenario hope is to get their financial contracts funded now, while state legislation is still in special session.

Spokespeople from Bulger's office say that the context of the agreement changed when the economy crashed last fall.

"As we stand now, we are on solid, stable financial ground," John Hoey, a spokesman for President Bulger's office, said. "Our focus is on remaining on it. The President's support for the staff and faculty is clearly documented."

Turn to PROTEST, page 3

Charity golf tournament for local children

By Amy O'Neill
Collegian Staff

The Town of Amherst Leisure Services will be putting on the first ever Outdoor Challenge Camp for Kids Benefit Golf Tournament at Hickory Ridge Country Club today beginning with lunch at 11:00 am.

The goal of the golf tournament is to provide 20 needy kids with an opportunity to attend the Outdoor Challenge Camp. The weeklong camp, which has outdoor activities ranging from rock climbing to canoeing to hiking, is based out of Hampshire College.

"This camp is specifically designed to be a challenge for kids," said Barbara Bilz, Director of Development for the Town of Amherst Leisure Services.

Each summer, 150 teens participate in the Outdoor Challenge Camp. These campers come from all races, religions and economic segments of the community. Five different sessions are put on throughout the summer for kids ranging from 11 to 16 years of age. Outdoor Challenge provides area teens with a unique opportunity to develop a multitude of physical, cognitive and interpersonal skill through participation in adventure-based programming, according to the Hickory Ridge Golf Course web page.

The registration fee for the Golf Tournament is $100 and includes lunch, which is served at 11:00 am, 18 holes of golf including cart, dinner, a silent auction and a raffle following the end of the tournament. There will also be a hole-in-one contest, longest drive contest and closest to the pin contest in which prizes will be awarded.

Over 40 prizes between the auction and the raffle have been donated from merchants all over Amherst including, The Monkey Bar, Pinocchio's and Foxwood Casino. An autographed Jim Plunkett – a former Oakland Raiders player jersey, has also been donated.

Currently the number of people participating in the tournament is approximately 72, but people still interested can come down to the Hickory Ridge County Club by 12:30 pm today. There are no requirements to participate but "it would be nice if you know how to golf," Bilz said.

People, who would like to donate to the fund but cannot participate in the tournament, can contact Bilz at 256-4065 and donate any amount they like. $5,000 has already been awarded from the computer software company, The McKesson Foundation, but $5,000 more is still needed to send the 20 kids to camp.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

VOTED #1 IDEAL EMPLOYER BY BUSINESS STUDENTS, UNIVERSUM UNDERGRADUATE STUDY, 2002

Investors need assurance to make decisions.
Help us help them and the companies whose stock they buy, and we'll help you build a career.

For opportunities and information go to:
www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere

Look beyond the numbers.

Chancellor to address the Senate for first time

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Chancellor John Lombardi will address the Faculty Senate at its inaugural meeting on Sept. 19. Following Lombardi's address will be a question and answer period. There will also be a special motion introduced to thank former presiding officer Frank Hugus for his work in the senate. In addition, elections for key positions, including a new presiding officer will be held.

The Faculty Senate will thank Hugus for 27 years of service to the Senate.

"The Faculty Senate expresses its sincere appreciation to Presiding Officer Frank Hugus for his 27 years of service in the Faculty Senate," says the Senate's press release. "Seven years of service on the Rules Committee, five years of service as Presiding Officer of the Faculty Senate and two years of service as Secretary of the Faculty Senate. His colleagues congratulate himon assuming a new position in the Campus Administration."

Positions to be elected at the meeting include not only Hugus' former position, but also the position of Rules Committee delegate to the Board of Trustees, two-at-large positions and the chairmanship.

Nominations will be accepted from the floor at the time of the meeting for a new presiding officer.

Jenny Spencer, of the English department, and Alexandrina Deschamps of Women's Studies are both nominated for the position of delegate to the Board of Trustees. Further nominations will be accepted from the floor.

Two nominations for the two at-large members of the Rules Committee are Richard Bogartz from the Psychology department, and Jerome Mileur of Political Science. Again, further nominations will be accepted from the floor.

The position of a Rules Committee Chair will be nominated from among the four at-large Rules Committee members.

Following nominations there will be a special report of the Committee on Committees concerning the nominations to Faculty Senate councils and committees. The Committee on Committees met on April 19, and completed nomination elections for all appointments not to be separately nominated on the floor. These include such positions as appointments to the Graduate Council, Academic Priorities Council, Status of Women the Status of Minorities councils, etc.

The General Education Council will then present a report concerning recommended courses. The council is recommending the designation of seven new courses. Those courses include: "My DNA" from Biochemistry, "Fictions of the Grail in Literature and Film" from the French department, and "American Politics through Film" from Political Science.

The College of Food and Natural Resources (CFNR) will motion to have Faculty Senate approve changing their name to the College of Natural Resources and the Environment (CFRE). According to the college's report the name change is a result of the transfer of the department of Sports Studies and Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration (HRTA).

"The college had increasingly felt that the current name of the College of Food and Natural Resources did not adequately reflect the departments within the college or the mission of the college."

Following the transfer of the Sports Studies and HRTA the college is made up of the following departments; Entomology, Environmental Sciences Program, Food Science, Natural Resources Conservation, Building Materials and Wood Technology, Landscape Architecture and Regional Planning, Microbiology, Plant and Soil Science, Resource Economics and Veterinary and Animal Sciences.

According to the Campus Chronicle both Sport Studies and HRTA have each applied for name changes as well, under their new college placement within the School of Management.

Sport Studies is asking to be called Sport Management, while HRTA has requested to be renamed Hospitality and Tourism Management.

"The new term [hospitality] better reflects this industry," said HRTA head Frank Lattuca. "It seems to be a common name being used by other hospitality programs [because] it's not just hotels, restaurants and travel agencies. It's casinos; it's attractions; it's club management; it's event planning and management."

The Senate will conclude with its usual announcements and remarks by the Chancellor, and the Interim Provost.

The Faculty Senate will meet on Thursday, at 5:30 p.m. in 227 Herter Hall.

■ protest

continued from page 1

Lombardi speaks out

Chancellor John Lombardi, meanwhile, commented on the union protests in a press luncheon that he hosted Hillside at the Chancellor's House last Friday.

"They have every right to be angry," he said. "Who wouldn't be angry?"

"What the legislature will do depends on what the economy does. Once the economy even gets plausible, we'll see the legislature eager to look at raises," Lombardi said.

Lombardi also said the legislature needs to work on raises for the following year, though. He believes that the University will begin to lose significant ground if raises cannot be granted for the next academic year because professors and faculty will begin to leave for jobs in other places.

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

The UMass Fencing Team was aggressively promoting their club and enrolling new members throughout the week at the Campus Center Lobby. A large fraction of UMass students pass through the lobby's hallway every day en route to their classes and most clubs on campus set up booths to lure interested students.

University and greek system to address student's accident at fraternity house

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A student fell from a balcony or roof of a University of Massachusetts fraternity house Friday evening.

The University will hold a meeting Tuesday evening to discuss the events that led to the student's accident and what repercussions will befall the Greek system Currently all students and administrators involved in the Greek system have been asked not to discuss the incident with the press, directing all questions to the Director of Greek Affairs for the University, Michael Wiseman.

According to several members of the Greek system, who asked to remain anonymous, the student is not a fraternity member and has been released from the hospital.

Members of the Amherst town police department did not release a press statement Friday, saying that the student's injuries were not serious enough to merit a release of information separate from that which the University will eventually release.

Wiseman was unavailable for comment at the time of this release.

Reports of the student's accident brought back memories of sophomore Thomas Degnan's fall from the Butterfield roof on April 27, 2001, after which he was seriously injured. Degnan, a resident of Marshfield, was attempting to retrieve a pirate flag from the roof of the building and slipped on his way back in.

He fell 35 feet and landed on a cement patio on the first floor. He was released from the hospital after staying for several months.

His fall, as well as a number of other incidents, was the catalyst for a number of major changes for the dormitory at the beginning of the 2001 school year. The dormitory was "re-programmed" to become an all freshman dormitory. The University also removed the building's dormitory.

In 1997, there was an incident involving then junior Adam Prentice. Prentice, a 21-year-old of Hyannis, fell to his death from the roof of the greenhouse at Morrill Science Center on Sept. 27, 1997. The cause of death was listed as being caused by massive bleeding and reports indicated that Prentice was intoxicated at the time of his death.

Prentice's fall on Homecoming Weekend of that year caused former Chancellor David K. Scott to reinstate the ban on tailgating, which was lifted on a trial basis in 1992.

The issue has once again become controversial as newly elected Chancellor John B. Lombardi pledged his support to lifting the ban against tailgating at games. Lombardi supported returning tailgating privileges to the community in moderation, asserting that it would bring bigger crowds and more revenue to the football games on campus. He explained that while no campus has unrestricted alcohol privileges because that would be "a disaster" that it would be beneficial for the University if the privileges were reinstated.

"We worked on this at the University of Florida, it wasn't easy," Lombardi said. "Eventually though we figured it out. Those who want to make the campus alcohol free should start with the faculty club."

Melissa Hammel contributed to this story.

■ AHA

continued from page 1

vegetables, grains, legumes, low-fat or nonfat dairy products, fish, poultry, and lean meats). Other suggestion include; reducing saturated fats to less than 10 percent of calories, cholesterol to less than 300 mg per day, and trans-fats, limit salt intake to less than six grams per day (2,400 mg of sodium), limit alcohol intake to no more than two drinks per day in men, one drink per day in women among those who drink alcohol.

The Journal also states that cholesterol should be lowered to appropriate levels. Total cholesterol less than 180 mg/dL is optimal; less than200 mg/dL is desirable. LDL cholesterol less than 100 mg/dL is optimal while 100-129 mg/dL is near optimal or above optimal. A HDL greater than or equal to 60 mg/dL is desirable.

Exercise is cited in the article as crucial to decreasing one's risk. At least 30 minutes of moderate-intensity physical activity on most, and preferably all, days of the week. This is in order to achieve and maintain a desirable weight.

College students can possibly delay or prevent heart disease by increasing the amount of physical activity they do and by following a healthy diet, while avoiding tobacco products. In addition, visiting with your physician and being screened regularly is very important as well.

News meeting at 5 pm Tuesday night.
Come down to the Collegian offices.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

DVP Open House
(Distinguished Visitors Program)

Wednesday September 17 @ 8:00PM

Campus Center Room 915

Refreshments will be served

Help us decide who speaks at UMass!

Contact Jill for more info: umassdvp@yahoo.com

$$$$'s for STUDENTS

KELLY SERVICES has Immediate Openings at The Famous Candle Company in South Deerfield.

All shifts available, including PART TIME!!!!

Great benefits include direct deposit, discounts on first quality products, and FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!

These are TEMPORARY, LIGHT INDUSTRIAL POSITIONS scheduled to bring you right through the HOLIDAY SEASON!!!!

SIGN ON BONUSES!!! REFERRAL BONUSES!!!
ATTENDANCE BONUSES!!

Call Now, and Work Tomorrow!!!
(413) 665-8306 Ext. 5231
(413) 586-2925

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Voting counts

Students should wake up

Massachusetts politics is an ever-changing battlefield, and this fall we're going to war again.

Robert Reich, Tom Birmingham, Shannon O'Brien and Warren Tolman are part of one of the most hotly contested Democratic primaries in recent memory. Tolman is also making state history by being the first gubernatorial candidate to run for office under the state's Clean Elections law, passed by voters in 1998. Whichever Democratic candidate wins, will face Republican candidate Mitt Romney, as well as Libertarian Carla Howell, and Green party candidate Jill Stein this November. On Tuesday voters will also be deciding between Jim Rappaport or Kerry Healey to be Romney's running mate.

While the majority of students on campus probably don't care about politics or the governor's race, it's undeniable that decisions made by the legislature have affected us. It's that one required class you didn't get again. It's the loss of one of your favorite professors or academic advisors to early retirement or layoffs. It's the long walk back to Southwest, alone in the dark, because there is no longer an escort service.

The triumphs and struggles of the University of Massachusetts are all indirectly linked to what goes on under the golden dome of the Massachusetts State House. The governor appoints our university president and trustees – who we expect to lobby for us on the state level. This means, if we have a governor who doesn't support our school, we will more than likely get apathetic trustees.

On the Amherst campus alone, we have the voting power of at least 25,000 people. In past elections, many candidates have recognized this voting power and have come to the campus to drum up support. Our ballots can have a resounding effect on elections, if we would only go out and vote.

The presidential election troubles of 2000, when the Supreme Court decided the president, have cast doubt over the public about whether our votes really count. We all began to ask if our system of electing our leaders was truly effective and if going to the polls actually made a difference. It's an ongoing debate, but right now voting is still the most direct way we, as citizens, can be a part of the democratic system. We need to continue to have faith in our votes, otherwise not only are we endangering the democratic system, but our livelihoods as well.

The events that have unfolded on this campus over the past year should be a wake up call to students of the importance of voting in state elections. The people that we elect have direct say, in what happens to us financially on this campus. A few votes can go a long way in improving the quality of the University and the Commonwealth.

Vote or not we're going to have a new governor on November 6.

The question is, will it be a governor who will help make things better or worse for UMass? It's up to you to decide.

Information from Boston.com was used in this opinion.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Are you a music bigot? It's time to try something new

ROBERT CAREY

There is no genre of real music that I hate. It doesn't matter if it's jazz, rap, rock, punk, techno, bluegrass, or even Irish folk music. I like them all. Anything with a beat, rhythm, or melody that's strong enough to send a tingling sensation down my spine is good enough for me to listen to. In fact, I live for that feeling. I'm addicted to it. I'll scour music bins for hours looking for something that will have my ears ringing in new and exciting ways. My bank account is empty, my money is tied up in CDs and speaker systems that surround my room and rattle the windows of my car. There's no cure for the disease I've got now. The bewildered stares and awkward expressions I get from people, when I blast "Tool" and "John Coltrane" in direct succession of each other – is not enough to deter me from my personal musical preferences.

Given the state of my condition, I've always wondered why people generally restrict themselves to just one or two genres of music. Genres herd people into groups, but that's fine; it merely shows that people with the same interests share the same preferences in music. But when these groups of people clash and berate each other over their musical predilection, that's when I get a bit peeved.

In my opinion, a person has to look beyond the classifications of a song. One should judge a song, the way one should judge a person: based on its individual merit.

There is a sort of musical racism. When someone has decided that they don't like a certain genre of music they most often say things like, "I hate all country music" and "All German techno sucks." When someone makes these allegations it's obviously a falsehood. In order for it to be true, a person would have to listen to every song in that particular genre, that they didn't like in the first place. Then conclude that they hated every lick of every song that they heard. There might be genres that people can't relate to in general, but I challenge anyone to listen to an entire genre of music, and honestly admit that they hated all the songs.

Along with genres, a person should be careful not to discredit a song based on age. Songs that stand the test of time are well aged like fine bottles of wine. And anyone who claims to be a musical connoisseur can't be, without paying homage to the greats of the past. Contemporary music is rarely the climax of musical art, and there is always something that came before it that's usually much better. If one is looking to expand their musical horizons, the past is a great place to start.

In my opinion, a person has to look beyond the classifications of a song. One should judge a song, the way one should judge a person, based on its individual merit. And though it might sound redundant, the truth is that music is the universal expression of the human soul. Any song that reflects the deep inner workings of the composer is all right as far as I'm concerned.

If there is one genre of music, regardless of time period, that I have always hated, is music that's soulless. This tawdry, dry, and insipid music is easy to recognize with even the least of trained ears, and even easier to discredit. It can be found lurking in almost every popular genre of music these days. The artist is usually controlled by corporate wealth that plasters their talentless faces on TV, magazines and billboards. These performers are exploited through money-bought fame to sell consumer goods, while producing cheap, gaudy and low quality entertainment for mass consumption. It therefore becomes, very easy to see what type of music is soulless, simply by looking at the person who performs it.

A certain list of objective questions can be asked to determine the depth of the performer, and their musical ability. For instance, do you see the performer on more soda commercials than albums? Is the person concerned with portraying an image to a certain age demographic, and putting on a show with lewd choreographed dance moves, more than maintaining the integrity of the music? Are the songs of the performer written by Berkeley grads that has become apathetic towards the medium through which they have chosen to express themselves? If so, then this performer has lost all artistic credibility, or never had it to begin with. Here, I feel, a discernable line can be drawn between good music and bad. Anything else can't arguably be called bad music, but there's no excuse for liking art that's soulless.

Robert Carey is a Collegian columnist.

collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com
collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

9 Las Vegas Sun. Dist. by UFS

No use worrying over what hasn't happened

SEAN JACQUET

Every year around this time college and high school seniors have to answer the same question: What are your plans for the future?

Some have the answer. They know exactly what they want to do and how they plan to do it.

The rest of us, which is the overwhelming majority, have no clue what we want to do, and are equally oblivious to how we're going to do it.

While there may be some solace in realizing you're not alone staring blankly at the future is nonetheless intimidating. If you don't know, you better make up something quickly, because the future will be here sooner than you think. If you're not prepared, the future will pass you by before you've even had a chance.

In Saturday Night Fever, John Travolta's character asks for a pay advance on Friday so he can buy a new shirt to disco in. It's usually reminds him paydays is Monday, because he always spend their entire Friday paycheck on booze, drugs and women, and are broke on Monday. You've seen that in the future, he tells a pre-Look Who's Talking [sic] Travolta. "Fk the future" responds an angry Travolta. "No," says his boss, "the future fks you."

Now, all sexual imagery aside, Travolta's boss is correct. If you piss away the present, chances are the future won't be so forgiving. Unlike Travolta, I'll never be a great disco dancer, star in Battlefield Earth, or marry that chick from Jerry McGuire, so I'll have to look for more conventional paths to success.

I'm not going to win the lottery, or strike gold with a crazy get rich quick scheme. Nobody is going to give me any handouts. I'm going to have to do it on my own, and that's what scares me the most.

With less than a year left until graduation and a career path in mind (I want to be a news-paper reporter), some would say I'm in pretty good shape. At least I have a goal I can focus on. But that certainly doesn't curb my apprehension toward the future.

"Good things happen and bad things happen, both without warning. Life would be boring if you knew what was going to happen."

There are a number of little things about the future that concern me as well: a good job, salary, a nice car, clothes, an apartment, rent. You know, just a short list of the things I and every other graduating senior will have to worry about after graduation. Parents, grandparents, professors, relatives, and friends don't help either. Their constant questions only heighten anxiety.

I wish I could relax. Some people can. The carefree, happy go-lucky, seize the day types. The present is a gift and so on. I've never been one of those people. In fact, I'm jealous of those kinds of people. I've always worried over things I have little control over, a trait I can thank my mother for. I wish I could live each day like it was my last because the only thing I fear more than the uncertainty of the future is someday realizing I wasted my past.

So, I guess there's a constant struggle to find a happy medium between wisely preparing for the future, and living it up while you still can. The future vs. instant gratification. College students are faced with that choice all the time: study for this test, or go to McMurphy's? Many students opt for the latter, as I would, if only I was 21.

Still, the future scares me. It is the uncertainty that gets most people. Even with a successful track record, many wonder whether they can keep it up. Such is the case with me. Despite a healthy academic record, and a busy extracurricular schedule, I simply can't be sure collegiate success will translate into the "real world."

Certainly, I will face stiff competition from talented people who attended more prestigious schools. We'll all be vying for fewer and fewer spots in a bloated job market. Indeed, time and time again, I have been reminded reporters make very little money. My father once joked that reporters only make $12 an hour. I don't plan on being rich, but I do hope to maintain a middle class lifestyle while doing something I love.

But does worrying help at all? It's counter-productive, and downright harmful. Think about it. You're getting all worked up over something that hasn't happened yet. The future is scary, but you can't use that as an excuse to back down from the challenge.

You can't predict the future. That's half the fun. But your values, dreams and goals change over time. I have no idea what kind of person I'll be in ten years. Good things happen and bad things happen, both without warning. Life would be boring if you knew what was going to happen.

There's little use worrying over those things you can't change. I've realized the futility of my anxiety toward the future. All I can really do is change the things I can, leave alone the things I can't, and know the difference between the two. (I know that's a summary of an AA saying, but there is certainly wisdom there).

When I begin to get worked up, all I can do is convince myself that worrying will get me nowhere. I just need to keep working my butt off and take care of business on my end.

I can work hard, get good grades, write for the paper and have fun doing it. When the time comes, I'll send out my resume, and await response. If I've done everything correctly, and if I'm deserving, I'll get the good job, the high salary, the nice house and the car.

Do I fear the future? Not anymore. I can't afford to. Sure, there are uncertainties, as there are with anything. But you can't hope the future treats you well. You must attack the future unafraid. Refuse to be intimidated. I have confidence I will succeed and persevere. I look forward to the challenge.

Will I make it? Hey, I can't predict the future.

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

I have been reading The Daily Collegian for the past four years and I must say that Ms. McCarthy's article on Sept. 13 entitled "Is it really so much to ask?" is by far the most offensive column I have ever read. The column is simply a self-righteous attack on our community at UMass.

The crux of the argument in this column seems to be that the UMass community was largely apathetic towards the events of Sept. 11 2001 because everyone is too "selfish." First of all, I think that the reaction from our campus was appropriate and inspirational. My opinion aside, this accusation of selfishness on her part seems like nothing more than hypocrisy, since the column shows a very self-centered tone from Ms. McCarthy. Let me explain what I mean.

Ms. McCarthy starts by saying that the UMass community didn't care about what happened on Sept. 11, 2001 because "most people that go to school here live in Massachusetts." Are we to believe that Ms. McCarthy is insinuating that Massachusetts residents did not suffer loss on Sept. 11? Let's remember that two out of the four planes hijacked on that day departed from Boston's Logan airport, carrying a large proportion of Massachusetts residents. Is that not a significant enough loss? What about the people from Massachusetts whose family and friends from other states were lost or unaccounted for in the tragedy? Doesn't their loss count? Why should Ms. McCarthy fragment the unified grief that our nation felt that day by turning it into some sort of competition of which state suffered more? I guess it's because she's from New Jersey and her state is closer to New York and lots of people from NJ were killed on 9/11/01. If that's the case, it seems very self-centered.

The column then goes on to detail the mourning that Ms. McCarthy went through that day. Her shock. Her fear. Her grief. Her anger. Her confusion. Do you see a trend? She says that the loneliness she felt in her grief was cemented by the fact that very few people in the wake of the attacks were wearing patriotic T-shirts or decorating their dorm rooms in Amherst. This argument doesn't make sense to me. I guess all I can say is that I'm glad that patriotism gave Ms. McCarthy comfort on that terrible day, but maybe she shouldn't be so selfish and think that everyone grieved that way. And as for her comment that the UMass vigil on Sept. 11, 2001 was "pretty pathetic," all I can say is that it's a hurtful accusation. I was at that vigil and I was moved by the outpouring of love and support I saw there.

The truth is, not everyone felt the same on Sept. 11, 2001. Not here at UMass, not in New Jersey, not anywhere. Some people were scared, some shocked, some grief-stricken, some numb and everything else in between. Just because some people found solace in vigils, patriotism and the like doesn't mean that that is the only way to grieve. I had friends who couldn't tear themselves away from the TV to even eat, let alone go to a vigil. Some people I knew immediately drove home to be with their families. Other people couldn't find a way to express their feelings for a very long time. Sept. 11, 2001, was arguably the most horrible day in United States history, a day nobody was prepared for. So how dare you presume to know the hearts of the people around you? A friend of mine once told me, "Seek first to understand others and then to be understood." So, maybe if you would reach out towards your fellow person you would understand the pain that EVERYONE was feeling that day. But hey, I suppose that would be asking too much.

Kindra King
UMass graduate student
Biochemistry and Molecular Biology

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.16.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

"WHO SHOT YA?" and

By Michael DaSilva
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

A recent article printed in the Los Angeles Times alleges that rapper Notorious B.I.G./Biggie Smalls (a.k.a. Christopher Wallace) is responsible for the death of Tupac Shakur. After both Tupac and Biggie were killed within a six-month period during 1996-97, the rap world was dumbfounded. Close to six years later, it seemed that time had healed the East-Coast/West-Coast battle of hate and vengeance. It appeared as though both camps had learned the hard lessons of what can happen when a beef is drummed up by the media, record labels, DJs and everyone in between—all in an effort to represent their respective coasts and, at the same time, sell records. A poignant moment arose at the MTV Video Music Awards a couple of years ago when the mothers of Tupac and Biggie came out on stage together to exude an energy of peace, respect for their son's lives and a sense of closure. Now the recent allegations that Biggie ordered the hit on Pac are causing controversy.

Although the two had once been tight, at the time of Tupac's murder his angst towards Biggie and the east coast was at its boiling point. Before all of the drama began, Biggie and Tupac were closer than childhood friends. Anytime Pac was in town (New York City) he would roll with Biggie and the two would get lost together having their kind of fun. This included smoking, drinking and kicking the dirty dozens (a lyrical contest in which one rapper tries to outwit the other with his words and flow). Tupac felt like he was teaching Biggie about the game, and the two shared a common background –coming from poor neighborhoods and broken homes –and a mutual love for hip-hop.

The animosity began when Biggie finally "made it," and released his first major album debut, 1994's Ready To Die off Bad Boy Entertainment. Because Tupac and Biggie had been so close growing up in the game of hip-hop and Biggie had now finally recorded a solo album without asking Tupac to contribute to the project, Tupac became offended. At the time, Pac was with the rap group Digital Underground, and took it as a slap in the face that Biggie had not called him and asked him to be on the record. It was during that same year that another incident would add salt to the wound.

While Biggie was producing and recording his entourage's (Junior Mafia) debut album in New York City's Quad Studios, Tupac decided to come over and pay a visit. During Pac's attempt to take an elevator up to the top of the building to go visit Biggie in the studio, he was robbed and shot. Luckily, Tupac survived the incident, but became understandably furious about the incident. He felt that Biggie either knew about what had went down that night or was directly responsible for it. Biggie and his entourage denied any links to the shooting. That's when things began to dwindle.

The feud continued when Biggie soon released "Who Shot Ya?" a heated verbal assault. Although the track didn't specifically call out Tupac, it contained suspicious lines: "Who shot ya?...It's on n——, f— all that bickering beef. I can hear sweat trickling down your cheek." People from Biggie's entourage like Lil' Cease claim the track was recorded before the shooting took place, but nevertheless, the song added fuel to the already blazing fire as everyone in the hip-hop industry, including Tupac, assumed that the song and its timely release was a referenced hint as to who was responsible for the Tupac shooting that took place on that fateful night. Pac answered with a track called "Hit 'Em Up," in which he literally claims to have slept with Biggie's wife. On that track, he also personally attacks Biggie, his record label, his crew and anyone having to do with Biggie.

Things only got worse when, at the time, Suge Knight (Death Row Record's CEO) openly insulted Sean "P. Diddy" Combs (Bad Boy Record's CEO) on stage at "The Source Awards." Soon enough, the environment of hip-hop was becoming East Coast vs. West Coast. Whether it be magazine editors, radio DJs, or the hip-hop artists themselves, everyone having to do with hip-hop during that period (1994-1996) hyped up the East Coast vs. West Coast feud. These vain actions would set the stage for a horrific and tragic ending.

On the night of Sept. 7, 1996 Tupac along with Suge Knight and an entourage that included bloods (The Bloods and The Crips are two rivaled Los Angeles gangsters and gangsters, attended the Mike Tyson fight at the MGM Grand in Las Vegas. While walking through one of the lobbies, Tupac spotted a rivaling Crip who had weeks prior robbed one of his bodyguards. As the casino's hidden video security cameras show, Tupac, Suge, and their entourage jumped and beat up this Crip— a man named Orlando Anderson. Two hours later, while Suge and Tupac were driving down Flamingo Road in Las Vegas, a white Cadillac pulled aside them. Thirteen shots were fired, and Tupac was fatally wounded. He died from his wounds six days later.

Orlando Anderson, the man who was beaten down in MGM grand that night was questioned by authorities and later let go. He was mysteriously murdered two years later in what the authorities call an "unrelated crime." Up until now, many theories have been floating around, none of which included Biggie as mastermind behind the murder. Some believed that it was actually Suge Knight who set up the shooting of Tupac that night. This is believed to be true because at the time, Suge had been stealing money from Tupac's recordings and owed Pac lots of money. Furthermore, Pac was planning on leaving Death Row Entertainment (Suge's Record Label) and word got back to Suge, which had presumably infuriated him.

However, a recent claim paints a very different picture. According to an article in the LA Times, a new theory has emerged. There are gangsters and underground people now surfacing who are claiming that Biggie Smalls was in Las Vegas that night. These same people claim that after Orlando Anderson was beaten down in MGM Grand, he went to the Treasure Island hotel where Biggie was staying and proposed a deal to him. For a one million dollar bounty, Orlando Anderson and other Crips would go out and kill Tupac. Further, they claim that Biggie even provided the murder weapon.

Friends and people from Biggie's entourage deny the claims, saying that Biggie was on the East Coast that night recording a track in a studio in New Jersey. They say the allegation is bogus, and that if Biggie was in Vegas that night he would have been at the Tyson fight. Furthermore, they challenge the people making these allegations to provide evidence proving that Biggie was staying at the Treasure Island hotel in Las Vegas that night.

Where does that leave this case? The true facts of what really went down that night remain uncertain. So much time has passed since the crime took place and a number of key and important people have deceased. As did Orlando Anderson, the alleged shooter. And I'll take my bets to Atlantic City that the odds of Suge Knight coughing up the truth are about as likely as us not going to war with Iraq. The whole thing, much like the death of J.F.K, is surrounded in a world of he-said/ she-said circles, theories, conspirancies, suspicions, and, most of all, an unbreakable mystery.

While it's uncertain whether or not the cases of Big and Pac's deaths will ever be solved, one thing is for sure; that what happened between two men, Tupac Shakur and Christopher Wallace is an absolute tragedy. The devil took hold of two lives and spun them out of control using greed, envy, fame and lies to destroy something that was so promising. What Tupac Shakur and Biggie Smalls meant to the youth of America, and perhaps even more so to young black America, was something unparalleled. They were luminaries that shined throughout the ghettos in which they were raised. They were living examples of ways out of the belly of the beast-ways of achieving a better life for oneself and one's family. They gave hope to all aspiring youth who had a love for hip-hop and dreamed of being part of the game.

Tupac Shakur and Biggie Smalls are arguably the two greatest rappers of all time. But they weren't just rappers, they were lyrical prophets, living day examples of triumph over an oppressive socio-economic system. They both went from rags to riches by following their hearts and dreams and

Turn to CONTROVERSY, page 6

Daniel Bedingfield stuck in corporate loop with debut effort

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Daniel Bedingfield
Gotta Get Thru This Island Def Jam

It's nearly impossible to tell whether an album will be great or not after listening to just one song. Record labels make sure a lead single is a knockout track by giving it the proper powerful melody, an irresistible hook and if they can afford it, hiring an elite producer. Powered by an aggressive promotional campaign, the song skyrockets to the top of the charts and album sales consequently rise too.

So consider yourself warned: Daniel Bedingfield's latest Gotta Get Thru This falls into this corporate scandal. The title track, serving as the lead single, is so hot it's enough to compete as a late summer song anthem. Sped-up lyrics and a staccato beat shot the song into the top 20 of the Billboard Hot 100 charts and the album cracked the top 50 Billboard album charts. But strip away the funky beat and slow down the lyrics (as on the acoustic version included on the album) and there's nothing more left than silly and sappy lyrics sung by a modest voice.

The 22-year-old London native, who wrote and produced much of the music on Gotta Get Thru This, didn't rely on Swedish producers or American hip-hop remixers for help, but Bedingfield obviously doesn't have enough talent alone to craft a good album on his own. He built the debut in his bedroom like an indie rock record, with a cheap computer and a microphone. All this to sound just like your run-of-the-mill pop star.

There aren't any songs with nearly as much charge as the title cut. Instead, there's a deluge of soggy ballads ("Honest Questions") and up tempo R&B ("Blown It Again," "Girlfriend") that aren't as tasty as the UK garage hit that made the album omnipresent.

On "If You're Not the One" and "He Don't Love You Like I Love You," besides possessing obnoxiously long titles, Bedingfield sounds like his influence for the songs is BBMak.

On "Without the Girl," produced by Bedingfield and Ali Stanton, Bedingfield adopts a Prince-esque falsetto over a trombone and swishing tempo changes reminiscent of Ricky Martin's "Livin' La Vida Loca."

"James Dean (I Wanna Know)" contains a hand-clapping beat coupled with a French techno flavor of swirling techno and synthetic bleats. "Blown it Again" passes with middling success, mostly due to the piano instrumentation.

It's apparent on Gotta Get Thru This Bedingfield is trying too hard. He's certainly the latest in Britain's two-step craze (American teen pop over British beats) to cross over but his assets don't set him apart from any other pop star.

COURTESY MATTHEW DONALDSON

British artist Daniel Bedingfield doesn't get thru anything with his lackluster debut despite the success of its first single "Gotta get thru this."

Wilco defies rock critics with beautifully crafted Yankee Hotel Foxtrot

By Matthew Despres
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Wilco
Yankee Hotel Foxtrot
Nonesuch Records

Let us end the Kid A comparisons here, now and forever.

While a few, momentary bars, beeps and skittish fades draw near the borders Radiohead and its ilk have coolly self-determined in the last few years, what comprises the interior of Wilco's Yankee Foxtrot Hotel is something beautifully and uniquely its own – an oft-kilter, melodic study on the life processes of discovery, pleasure and inevitable loss.

Though birthed into the hands of Jim O'Rourke (Sonic Youth, Stereolab), discarded by record label Reprise and eventually caught by Nonesuch, Yankee Hotel Foxtrot is far from simply being a product salvaged by one edgy knob tweaker and a sympathetic record label. Rather, it's an exercise by the remaining members – singer/writer Jeff Tweedy, bassist John Stirratt, keyboard/guitar player Leroy Bach and drummer Glenn Kotche – in dismantling hopeful enchantment note by note and, by that same method, dreaming it all back from the ground on up.

The lead track "I am trying to break your heart," is a working collaboration between both of those philosophies. At first a stunted waltz from the subliminal carnival in Wilco's subconscious, it evolves into a collage of drum, piano and guitar – held together by an honest, forlorn lyric and delivery. Here, as is the case with most of the album, O'Rourke maintains a professional distance in the spaces provided by Wilco's blueprints – the much ballyhooed beeps and buzzes are unobtrusive undercards; the songs, as they should be, the main event.

"Jesus, etc." – a true centerpiece, is what every song aspires to be: from provocative lyrics and tight interplay to smooth choruses that bookend fragile verses, everything is in its right place. Likewise, "Heavy Metal Drummer" is everything any songwriter evolves into – an adult bent on rediscovering the past that sparked his/her path in life. The former is a beautiful, string-colored and particularly relevant moment ("all buildings shake / voices escape singing sad sad songs"), while the latter is a simple love letter to misplaced youth, adorned with the charm of adolescent script ("I miss the innocence I've known / playing Kiss covers beautiful and stoned").

Much of the album is rooted in a similar, present reality. "Ashes of American Flags" is heralded by an apparition of bells and the echo of a guitar beckoning from missed innocence, while lyrically Tweedy updates us with both the bare truth his immediate environments casts ("I wonder why we listen to poets when nobody gives a fuck / how hot and sorrowful this machine begs for luck") and the landscapes in his own mind ("I know I would die if I could come back new"). It has the sound of a song in search of itself, and to be witness to that in this day of growing separation between musician and audience is both rare and exciting.

Though largely a piece by and of itself, YHF also walks unafraid with its influences on its sleeves. The gritty guitar work in "I'm the man who loves you" is a virtual amalgam of every note George Harrison played with The Beatles (think Revolver) while "Radio Cure" traces a line left previously by P.J. Harvey's Stories from the City, Stories from the Sea. Consider it their re-working of her "We Float" and the song does just that – in, out and ultimately over, it overcomes the harrowing distance of which it directly speaks. Elsewhere, the band performs tightly and with confidence as Tweedy offers up lines that sum up the collective feeling behind every musician in the last half century ("how can I convince you it's me I don't like / In every sense of the cliche, Yankee Hotel Foxtrot is an album that coolly defies the often burdensome girth of the rock critic's pen. Beautiful as a whole, YHF fills a void left cool by the here today, gone tomorrow pace of acts pegged as The Next Big Thing. In truth, the proper fit has been shimmering anxiously, in various sizes and shapes, for some time now, waiting for the perfect moment to step forward from the shadows. That moment sparked some eight years ago with the group's conception and came to maturity sometime last fall. On the strength and will of 11 precisely crafted and imperfect (read: perfectly human) pop songs, YHF will surely endure, past the distance that "has no way of making love understandable" and well into the foreseeable future.

■ controversy

continued from page 5

sharing them with the youth of America. Unfortunately, the same evils that keep down the ghettos and hoods of America in which both Biggie and Pac triumphed over and were able to escape, eventually came back to be the same evils that ended both of their promising lives. Let us not look to these recent allegations of he-said/ she-said garbage that disrespects the lives of both Tupac and Biggie. Let us not get caught up in that game in which ambitious people have motives as to making claims and allegations. But let us transcend to a higher place and honor the lives of Tupac Shakur and Biggie Smalls. Let us remember the God given and awe-inspiring talents in which both mutaht possessed, and learn from what transpired between two of the greatest rappers of all time, and more importantly two of the greatest friends.

If we don't learn from their lives, then they lived in vain. Whether it be Sac feuding with Jay-Z or two local cats from rival Ling neighborhoods, let's squash the beef. Look beyond the earthly logic and what seems monumental but is really trivial, and put aside the hate. As for the people making the recent allegations, let it go, and let the two greatest rappers of all time finally rest in peace.

Chumbawamba switches gears

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Chumbawamba
Readymades

Much like The Baja Men, who made it big with the song "Who Let the Dogs Out" and then slowly faded into the musical landscape, Chumbawamba also suffers from the same curse. They too are best known for one immensely popular song, "Tubthumping," and have since had a similar fate as The Baja Men for being unable to reproduce their former success.

Chumbawamba's latest CD, Readymades, features the single "I Don't Try this At Home," but don't be surprised if you can't find it on your radio dial. The melody is likeable, but not fluffy and boisterous like their one hit that defined them in the music business. Another thing that made their debut on the major music scene (even though they were already established overseas) more noticeable was the intellectual and witty political repartee that they previously rang about. It's hard to find such depth in the tracks on Readymades if they are in existence; the song lyrics have been excluded from the liner notes, replaced only with randomly bland historical tidbits (how many listeners are thrilled to read about a British Naval strike in 1797?), and the vocalist's diction is anything but clear. Sure, the lyrics to their hit "Tubthumping" may not have made much sense, but at the very least it wasn't a distraction to the listener when trying to understand them through the vocalist's European accent.

On the other hand, Readymades is going for a whole other slant for this album then they did on any of their previous ones. They've put aside the saccharine pop sound that has become a staple of radio-friendly music, and have taken on a faint quality of techno for their latest outing. As such, lyrics are not a crucial ingredient to the songs; rather the "danceability" of the material is what comes more into play here. In this respect, Readymades is ready to roll out to nightclubs everywhere. From the Moby-inspired "Porcelain" sound of the haunting opening track "Salt Fare: North Sea" to the album closer "After Shelley" (which could probably be inserted as underscoring to any cat commercial), there's very little resemblance to much of their earlier works. Chalk this up to the fact that the band members of Chumbawamba, also like the aforementioned Baja Men, alternate between albums, just for the reason of offering new sounds for each outing. The eight members who collaborated and created this album are not trying to "sell-out" and mimic the grandiose sales of "Tubthumping" as their record label would most likely prefer, but instead go against the grain with the techno sound. It certainly is an acquired taste, and after listening to an entire CD of it such as Readymades, a lot of it begins to sound the same, with only very slight variations on the overall theme. Yet Chumbawamba's desire to grow as musicians and put out something wholly different (which doesn't necessarily mean better) is to be admired. That notion of nonconformity, in itself, could be the political message that Chumbawamba is missing from the songs on Readymades but is actually saying with the album as a whole: "We will do the kind of music we want to do and that's that."
More power to ya'.

write for Arts.

ΔΔΔ DELTA XI PHI ΔΔΔ
invites you to our
INFORMATION SESSIONS
Tues. 9/17 & Wed. 9/18 at 7:30pm
Campus Center 811
www.deltaxiphi.com

Advancement
Let us take you there.
There's a reason we're called Travelers.
Join the company that has plenty of room for advancement. Travelers is one of the leading insurance companies in the United States. Our superior financial strength and consistent record of strong operating returns means security for our customers... and opportunities for our employees. We give you the opportunity to get in on the ground floor with an exciting Leadership Development Rotational Program. So make the right move with us and enjoy world class benefits from day one.
Actuary, Finance, CSE and CS Majors
We are coming to campus
Resume Drop - Tuesday, September 17, 2002
Pre-Interview Session: Tuesday, October 22, 2002
Time: 6:00 PM
Place: Faculty Club
Interviews - Wednesday, October 23, 2002
For more information on our opportunities, visit our Web site:
www.travelers.com
Travelers
Travelers is an equal opportunity employer and invites culturally diverse applicants to join our team. We actively promote a drug-free workplace.

This is the story of seven strangers...

Lizzy Nielsen

Puck. Ruthie. Montana. Loyal. Irene. If you're a "Real World" fan, then these names mean something to you. If not, well, this column probably doesn't interest you, so you might be better off taking out your Biochem book or staring into space as opposed to reading what I have to say.

I became a fan when I was a freshman in high school, which was the Seattle season of "The Real World." I had a crush on Nathan. I hated Stephen. I was curious what Irene disease did to Irene's head, because she used to be so cool. I wanted to be Lindsay. Nowadays, I watch every single "Real World" marathon that comes on. I can watch the episodes over and over again and they never seem to get old. Not every episode is exciting, but the drama-filled moments are what make the show worth watching. You also gotta give it to the casting directors. They sure know how to place people in a house that are going to hate each other. So I'm going to do a top 10 "Real World" moments in celebration of the new season in Las Vegas premiering tomorrow night at 10 pm.

Number 10: Naked pool jumping in Hawaii.

How better to break the ice with your new roommates than going skinny dipping with them two seconds after you meet? Such was the case with Teck and Ruthie upon their meeting outside the gorgeous Hawaii house during season eight. We'd learn later on about Ruthie's exhibitionist tendencies, but how better to spend time locked out of your house than doing belly flops in the buff with people you don't know?

Number 9: Tonya and Cara blow up in the elevator in Chicago.

Cara was an interesting case. I started off season 11 liking her, but as it ended, it was revealed that she was about as real as Tonya's rack. I was never a huge Tonya fan, but kudos to her for ripping Cara her well-deserved second butt hole for how she was handling the whole Kerri "Bloody Mary" skit situation.

Number 8: The Mardi Gras episode from New Orleans

Who knew that Danny was such a little party animal? Seemingly innocent and sweet Danny with his fanny hanging out the window and kissing everyone on the house's parade float was absolutely priceless. Luckily Danny had a fairly understanding boyfriend in Paul. Anyone other girls wish Danny was straight? He was so adorable.

Number 7: Justin and Tonya. No more.

I know this isn't exactly a "Real World" moment, but on the season 11 reunion, a collective gasp from fans everywhere could be heard when the immensely co-dependant Tonya announced that she was no longer with Justin. Somebody telephone Hell to see if the devil has taken up ice hockey.

Number 6: Los Angles blanket pulling.

I don't remember this one quite as well, but I am lucky to work with a bunch of "Real World" freaks in the Collegian newsroom. David got kicked out of his house for pulling off Tammy's blanket and exposing her underwear on national TV while the ever-irritating Beth ran around screaming rape. To think we've gone from underwear sensitivity to skinny-dipping in just six short seasons. Interesting.

Number 5: The most painful thing that I could possibly comprehend.

Who remembers the London season when Neil was on stage performing, and he went to kiss a female fan and she bit his tongue off? Holy ouch. There isn't too much to say besides that.

Number 4: The infamous Miami shower scene.

Who could forget Mike, the waitress, and Melissa in Miami? To this day, it's still denied that anything ever took place in that shower, but who could forget Sarah trying to push Flora through the bathroom window so they could get a peek, and the window just wasn't ready for Flora's jelly so it shattered the windows and the mood in the bathroom. It's moments like this that makes the "Real World" so addictive.

Number 3: The Real World San Francisco

I'm going to include season three as one generic moment because there were so many memorable aspects of San Francisco. From Puck's bizarre and disgusting, but sometimes amusing behavior to the forcage of AIDS/HIV into American pop culture, this was a season that revolutionized TV and pop culture as a whole.

Number 2: Ruthie's Alcohol poisoning.

We all knew from day one that Ruthie had a bit of an alcohol problem, but seeing Amaya in the shower with Ruthie trying to hold up her head was nothing we ever really expected to see. Can't really say too much about this one, other than its kind of scary to see what happens when you have too many shots of mouthwash soup.

Number 1: The slap heard round the world in Seattle.

Nobody knows quite what happened to Irene. She went a little nuts, and apparently it was the Lyme disease. Anywho, upon her deciding to leave the house she decided to offer everyone some words of wisdom including calling Stephen gay. Well, needless to say, Stephen didn't like this and took Irene's stuffed dog and tossed it into the harbor. Then as she was driving away, Stephen decided to establish his manhood and slap Irene across the face, which nearly got him kicked out of the house.

Well, you can agree or disagree however you want about the moments I picked. The "Real World" is the root of reality TV, and "Survivor" and "Temptation Island" wouldn't have been possible without it. The "Real World, Las Vegas" premiers tomorrow night at 10 pm. It's sure to be another season of catfights, orgies and mud drinking. As a fan I wouldn't want it any other way.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian Columnist

Interested in writing for arts? Come down to the Campus center basement and talk to Lizzy, Jen or Nick.

Domino'S Pizza
Two Weeks Only
ONLY $1.99
Buy Any Pizza Get The Second Pizza For $1.99
GOOD Sunday Monday Tuesday Wednesday Thursday ONLY
EXPIRES 9/19/02
OPEN TIL 4AM
256-8911

Minuteman defense ties school record in sacks

Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week, Jeremy Cain (No. 10), breaks through the Yellow Jacket offensive line, grabs hold of AIC quarterback Tom Guy and brings him down for one of his three sacks in the 42-13 victory for the Minutemen. He and the rest of the UMass defense had 11 sacks on the day, tieing the school record, which was set at Buffalo in 1995.

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Aside from the buzz about the addition of a Division I quarterback to the Massachusetts football team, the biggest story coming into the 2002 season was the new defensive system that came with new coordinator Tom Masella. In the first game, against Central Connecticut, Masella played a more reserved blitzing system, rarely coming at the CCSU quarterbacks.

Not so in Week Two.

Masella's 3-4, blitz-from-anywhere system was all over AIC quarterback Tom Guy from the second play of the game, where junior keremy Cain dropped AIC's big gun for a five-yard sack. Cain's first of the game and second of the season. By the time the dust had settled on UMass' 29 point victory, the Minutemen had sacked Guy 11 times, tying the school record, set at Buffalo in 1995.

"We knew we'd have trouble protecting the passer," AIC Head Coach Art Wilkins said. "Coach Masella is really, I hate to say genius at this point, but he has an outstanding defensive scheme that makes it very difficult to protect."

Guy was duly impressed by the number of looks the Maroon and White were lining-up in.

"They threw a lot of different stuff at us that we had never seen," Guy said. "Like Coach Wilkins was saying, their defensive coordinator did a great job, he had guys flying at us from everywhere, had a lot of guys confused."

"I" Brower led the way for the Maroon and White defense with his first four sacks of the season, while Cain and Mike Ziccardi added three apiece for the Minutemen. All in all, the front seven dropped Guy for a grand total of 88 yards in losses, the largest contributing factor in holding AIC in negative numbers on the ground.

Cain's performance, which added up to eight total tackles (seven solo) with five of those for loss, earned him Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week honors, the second week in a row that a Minuteman has received an award from the conference.

The blitz scheme made a marked difference in the defensive pressure over last week's performance, when the defensive line struggled to penetrate against CCSU.

"They weren't doing three step drops, and they thought they could block us, but we have a lot of talent on this team and I just think we can do that to anybody," said Brower, who was a preseason All-American. "As a collective effort, we had a lot of pressure on him. I think that's going to happen against any team that doesn't do three step drops because we have a lot of talent and a lot of speed."

As a whole, the defense had many issues, especially in the defensive backfield, where Guy threw bombs of 68, 50 and 49 yards. Two of those went to Keith Lessiter, who set a McGuirk Alumni Stadium record by racking up 204 yards receiving on 10 grabs. Guy went just 26-of-49 on the day, still bombed for an impressive 422 yards and a pair of touchdowns. Guy's completion percentage was damaged by the fact that, in addition to being sacked 11 times, on numerous occasions he was forced to throw the ball away, several times as well.

"We hit him enough and he hung in there," Wilkins said. "We had pressure on him, but he made plays."

But it was "bend but don't break" for the UMass defense, as it only allowed the Yellow Jackets 13 points despite allowing them to enter the red zone four times on the day.

"We're pretty good in the red zone ourselves," Wilkins said. "Mostly, it's pressure that got to us. The difference in the game was the pressure they could exert, which is part of the whole defensive scheme."

■ Cobbs

continued from page 10

back with great success in high school, grabbed the attention of Whipple and his staff as a running back last season when, as a member of the practice team, Cobbs was assigned the task of imitating former Villanova, and current NFL, star Brian Westbrook.

"He's a talented guy," Whipple said. "When it came down to it, when he played Westbrook for Villanova last year, we had Glover and him in the backfield and we kept looking at him and saying 'Oh my God, he's making some plays,' so I certainly think he's certainly got great ability."

Whipple and his staff knew Cobbs was one of the most talented athletes on the team from the time when the staff first recruited him in New Jersey.

"We sold him on the fact that he could be an NFL cornerback," Whipple said. "I really like the kid, and I remember the day that [running backs coach] Mike Cassano went and saw him play basketball and he went to do an alley-oop and hit his shoulder on the backboard, so he said if we get him, we've got a good one. He was our starting corner, he is the best athlete on the team."

On Cobbs's third series, he was even more impressive, taking three carries for 41 yards. On his second carry of the drive, he burst through the middle of the line, breaking tackles for a gain of 17. He topped that on his next rush, as he took an inside run to the outside directly through a hold for a 17-yard touchdown scamper.

But Cobbs was not the only redshirt freshman to have a superb day running the ball. For the second consecutive week, Raunny Rosario performed tremendously well in playing second fiddle, running for 105 yards on 14 carries – meaning that for the second consecutive week the Minutemen had two running backs go over 100 yards in a game.

Cobbs and Rosario added the exclamation point on UMass' final drive, as they combined for 15 carries and 91 yards, capped off by Cobbs's third venture into paydirt, a 10-yard run that he finished off by bowling over senior receiver Adrian Zullo, who jumped for joy after being helped up by Cobbs.

"It's a good problem to have, we have three guys that we feel really good about running the football," Whipple said. "They're so young. We've got three guys that haven't really played. They've certainly showed that they have the ability to make people miss."

■ frustration

continued from page 10

Minutemen with a bang. Deren broke free of the Iona defense, and slid it to Myers who flicked it to the far side at 48:35 to give the Maroon and White a two-goal advantage.

The Gaels came back just 19 seconds later on a goal from freshman Abdullah Begai, who knocked a misplayed ball in from just outside the goal box. Iona scored again at 67:31 on a laser shot free kick from sophomore David Kinneman. The match stayed tied until Burwell's corner kick gave the Minutemen the edge.

"They surprised us," senior Derek Rhodes said. "We got ahead, and then we got a little complacent, thought it was going to be easy. Then they get a quick one, and they're right back in the game."

The Michigan State contest also had a late hitch that no one could have enjoyed. Due to the possibility of inclement weather, the match was moved from Rudd Field to the Boyden fields, which left players on an uneven, slick surface and the spectators standing high above the proceedings on the side of Commonwealth Avenue. While Koch hoped that the venue change wasn't the reason for the lack of quality play Sunday, he did admit that the Minutemen move the ball better on the brand new, picture perfect turf at Rudd.

"I thought there were definitely some areas of improvement this game," Koch said. "Even though we gave up three goals, there were times when we played much better. Still, there are some glaring mistakes, and some things we need to work on."

And while there are still plenty of matches scheduled for the Minutemen this season, the Atlantic 10 season begins in three weeks, with a contest against Dayton on Oct. 4. With that date fast approaching, there is still much for the Maroon and White to work on.

The Minutemen will have two days to improve on those faults before taking on New Hampshire at Rudd Field on Wednesday. Opening touch is scheduled for 3:30 pm.

Minuteman goal keeper Enzo Altomare suffered through a 3-0 defeat to Michigan State at the UMass Classic.

www.dailycollegian.com

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
VEGGIE POTATO SKINS 8.95 4.48
NACHOS ESPECIAL 8.95 4.48
SWEET POTATO FRIES 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
Judies
TOCMP Welcome Here
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
www.judiesrestaurant.com
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

MCMURPHY'S
Saturday, Oct 12th
SOCO NIGHT
GAMES AND PRIZES
Welcome Back Students

You can still register
GCC introduces LATE START
- Introduction to Philosophy
- Mathematical Problem Solving
- Oral Communication: Public Speaking
- Principles of Psychology
- Psychology of Death & Dying

GREENFIELD Community College
For more information (413) 775-1801
website: www.gcc.mass.edu

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Montreal Madness Weekends
$89 + 15 security fee complete
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs
10 or more group discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-0076

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigmaalphalambda.org

Searching for E! www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee Laredo
Air Conditioning
CD Player
Great Condition
Asking Price: $4,800
Contact Sabrina 413-478-6912

1996 Ford Escort LX 63K A/C
Alloys great condition
Mike 413-534-8246

1990 Mazda 626LX Very good condition
$1700/6.0.
549-5240

99 Audi A4 Quattro.
Lowered 18-inch wheels and much more. $17,500
413-522-3312

91 Subaru Sedan Automatic
Power window/cruise control
New Transmission $1400
413-546-2110

AUTO FOR SALE

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

EMPLOYMENT

ACTIVISM
Looking for a job that works with your academic schedule? Want a job that means something to you? Call Clean Water Action Today! We are now hiring people with good communication skills to learn basic grassroots organizing. Flexible Schedules. Great Pay. Fun People. Just 10 min. from campus. Call Megan 413-584-9830.

Bartenders wanted. No experience. So Deerfield Bar w/ live music. Call Betsy 665-2301

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Clean new house $425 plus. No pets/smoking 478-6411

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

INSTRUCTIONS

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Have you been rippled-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TO SUBLET

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplash-tours.com

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica from $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.spring-breakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Hearing Services Cable Network

2	ATBS / 3
3	NESN
4	Fox Sport NE
5	PBS / 57
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	WB / 22
8	HSCN Movie Channel
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX / 61
11	ABC / 40
12	NBC / 22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN InfoChannel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN 2
18	UMCS49
19	ESPN Classic
20	Outdoor Sports
21	CNN
22	CNN HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	Discovery Health
28	Food Network
29	NASA
30	Home & Garden TV
31	Travel Channel
32	Lifetime
33	CNBC
34	Tech TV
35	BET
36	UTN-36
37	USA
38	TNN
39	MTV
40	CMT
41	VH-1
42	TNT
43	TBS
44	E! Entertainment
45	Sci-Fi Channel
46	Court TV
47	Nick at Nite
48	Comedy Central
49	Cartoon Network
50	Game Show Network
51	TV Land
52	FOX Family
53	Univision
54	Galavision
55	Telemundo
56	College TV Network
57	C-SPAN
58	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement - Jylkut

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

| | | |

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass runs over competition, again

In his first NCAA game, redshirt freshman R.J. Cobbs stung the Yellow Jackets for 158 yards on 23 carries Saturday. He crossed the goalline three times in UMass' second victory of the season.

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Massachusetts head coach Mark Whipple had one goal for his team heading into the first two games of the season. Come out of the "preseason" with a 2-0 record.

It wasn't much to ask, considering his team was playing two teams with many fewer scholarships, in Central Connecticut State and American International College.

UMass	42
AIC	13

Despite making some mistakes that would have cost them against better opponents, the Minutemen followed up last week's 52-3 win over CCSU with a 42-13 win over AIC on Saturday at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

"The bottom line was to try to get to 2-0," Whipple said. "The last two teams that went 2-0 [1981, 1990] ended up winning the championship."

UMass had never started 2-0 under Whipple.

The Minutemen jumped out to a quick 6-0 lead after Krohn connected on four straight passes to bring the ball to AIC's 34-yard line.

The passing game's early success opened up a running lane on a Raunny Rosario draw. No. 20 hesitated through the line and then accelerated into the end zone.

Safety Anton McKenzie caused AIC running back Tory Brown to fumble the ball as he was about to score on the next drive. The play kept the Yellow Jackets off the scoreboard and gave the ball back to the offense.

UMass increased its lead to 12-0 on drive number three with a seven-yard slant from quarterback Jeff Krohn to receiver DeShon Hardy.

Two touchdown runs by R.J. Cobbs and one TD reception by Neal Brown pushed the UMass lead to 35-13 at the half.

"We lost some focus in the second half," Whipple said.

After describing his first game in maroon and white as mediocre, Krohn was a bit more pleased with this week's 20-for-33, 243-yard, two touchdown performance, but still saw plenty of room for improvement.

"I was a little better," Krohn said. "I still have to be more consistent in the second half. I was a little bit flat still."

After running for over 250 yards in week one, UMass totaled 292 yards on the ground against AIC.

Converted cornerback R.J. Cobbs, who was sidelined with a knee injury in week one, led the team with 158 yards rushing and three touchdowns. Redshirt freshman Raunny Rosario, last week's Atlantic 10's Rookie of the Week after a 117-yard performance, broke the century mark again this week with 105 yards on 14 carries.

Last week's rushing leader, Jason Peebler, who rushed for 127 yards and scored three touchdowns in week one, played just a handful of plays due to a spur on his back.

The defensive line, which had trouble pressuring the quarterback against CCSU, was all over AIC signal-caller Tom Guy. The UMass front seven sacked Guy 11 times in the contest, tying the team record set in 1995 against Buffalo.

Defensive tackle Valdamar Brower led the way with four sacks, while linebackers Jeremy Cain and Mike Ziccardi added three each.

Not all was perfect for Whipple's squad, however, as question marks about the team's defensive backfield came up after Guy threw for 422 yards and two touchdowns.

"I think Guy is a really good player and their receivers made some really great plays," Whipple said.

AIC's top receiver, Keith Lessner, burned the Minuteman secondary, especially young corners Gerard Washington and Leroy Brooks. Lessner caught 10 passes for 209 yards – the most ever by a UMass opponent, and a new record at McGuirk.

"Any time we've [got] a shot to go up top we're going to go for a touchdown," AIC Head Coach Art Wilkins said. "Sometimes we get it and sometimes we don't. We got a couple of them today. We got into the red zone a lot, but their defense played really well."

Obviously, the Division II team's ability to go deep worries Whipple as his team prepares for its first game against an A-10 rival next week, but he also credits Guy's ability.

"[The deep ball] is a concern," Whipple said. "Guy would play in our league without question. He's really smart. He is a really good quarterback."

Guy thought his receivers were more worthy of praise than himself, however.

"Our wide receivers could have been just a little bit better than their defensive backs," Guy said. "Their defensive backs are really good, we just have really good wide receivers. They got open and we just kept going after them."

Now that the team's "preseason" is over, Whipple has a better understanding of where his team is at and what his Minutemen need to work on before Saturday's matchup against a tough Northeastern team.

"I thought this was a much better test than last week," Whipple said of the AIC contest. "We certainly have a lot of things to work on, a lot of things to clean up."

Cobbs has all the right answers

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Entering this season, the Massachusetts football team had many questions to answer, not the least of which was how a young, inexperienced core of running backs would perform in game situations.

Last week, that question was partially answered, as Dinn Brothers/UMass Athlete of the Week Jason Peebler scored three touchdowns and ran for 126 yards. But with Peebler questionable this week with an injury, how would his counterparts step it up?

"We didn't play Jason much this week because he was hurt all week," Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "We didn't know until yesterday afternoon [if he was going to play]."

With all the questions being thrown at the backfield, the answers came resounding back, as redshirt freshman R.J. Cobbs ran roughshod over the AIC defense to the tune of 158 yards and three touchdowns on 23 carries in his first collegiate action.

"I was pretty comfortable," said Cobbs, who was initially recruited as a cornerback. "I had a few jitters in my stomach, but I was ready to go. I trusted my linemen and they told me everything was going to be all right. I just stayed confident and did what I had to do and just ran the ball."

In just his second drive as a Minuteman, the 5-foot-11, 190-pounder showed incredibly well in speed, agility and balance as he alternated between running up the middle and cutting the ball back outside. On that drive, he carried the ball seven times for 34 yards, including an acrobatic dive for seven yards on first and 10 from the AIC 11-yard-line when he appeared to be trapped on the outside for no gain by the Yellow Jacket defense.

Cobbs, who played both cornerback and running

Turn to COBBS, page 7

Frustration looming

UMass drops one at Classic

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's not time for doubt yet, but for the Massachusetts men's soccer team that time is beginning to draw near.

After defeating Iona in the first game on Friday, the Minutemen dropped their match with Michigan State yesterday, finishing off this year's UMass Classic. The Maroon and White come out of the weekend with a less than satisfactory 2-3-0 record to show for its effort.

Michigan State kept UMass out of the net all day and took the game by a score of 3-0. The first half was scoreless and evenly matched, but the Spartans took the lead on a goal from junior Craig Hearn at 62:18. Hearn provided the only tally that Michigan State would need when he found himself in the middle of a volley that landed the ball at his feet. The junior chipped it over the head of UMass goalkeeper Cofin Burns, who strayed just far enough from his line to give Hearn the opening.

However, the Spartans weren't done yet.

Just over two minutes later, senior Brett Conley went on a breakaway, split the last two UMass defenders in his path, and put another chip shot over Burns, who found himself tempting fate once again, wandering too far off his line.

Michigan State ended all doubts at 89:45, when sophomore Jordan Gruber used a breakaway pass from Konley, and slid it past Burns to make the score 3-0.

Burns did show moments of brilliance, however, taking charge in the box during a few tense moments, and making some spectacular acrobatic saves. The junior found himself in the fire early, when Michigan State received a penalty kick midway through the first half, but Spartan sophomore Kellen Kalso launched his shot over the crossbar.

"Unfortunately he got caught off his line twice," Head Coach Sam Koch said. "I thought he held on to the ball well, but he was too far off his line for chips like that. But, that's all experience, and I'm pretty sure he won't make that mistake again."

On a positive note, the young Minuteman defense showed promise, and besides being exposed on the Michigan State goals, it played the Spartans with poise and intensity.

However, the Minutemen displayed an overall lack of energy and cohesion, with most plays being easily broken up. Even the normally feisty Jeff Deren looked frustrated at times.

"We don't like to lose, and I'm depressed about the result," Koch said. "I thought we played well in the first half, a couple breakdowns in the second half, and they're too good a team to let that happen."

The Minutemen had good reason to be frustrated with themselves this weekend.

UMass had to hold off a weak Iona team on Friday after taking an early lead. Sophomore Martin Burwell found himself as the recipient of a fortunate bounce when his corner kick spun off the hands of Iona goalkeeper Patrick McAllen and into the net for the deciding tally, making the score 4-3 with 7:04 remaining. The clutch score gave the Minutemen their first regular season win at Rudd Field. Burwell became the seventh Minuteman to find the back of the net this season.

The Maroon and White opened the scoring early, when Deren ripped a shot past Iona keeper Patrick McAllen to make the score 1-0. Scoring stalled for the rest of the half until UMass freshman Ernie Billitier made a nifty inside move at the top of the box, and left the ball for senior Yuri Morales, who put it through McAllen's legs for the score.

The Gaels struck back quickly, though. A cross from junior Lance Rashford found freshman Giovanni Treglia, who pushed it past UMass goaltender Enzo Altomare. The half ended with UMass leading Iona 2-1.

Junior Ptah Myers opened the second half for the Turn to FRUSTRATION, page 7

GERALD LINCOLN/COLLEGIAN

Senior Jeff Deren leads the break against the Gaels on Friday. He scored the first goal of the match in the Minutemen's 4-3 victory over Iona.

B STOP THE VANDALISM ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ★★★★★ ISSUE TEN ★★★★★ 9.17.02

Booted vandal shatters security

23 windshields vandalized in campus parking lots

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Twenty-three car windshields were smashed during the early morning hours of Sunday, Sept. 15. Ten cars were parked in lot A of North Village family housing. The other 13 were parked in the Southwest purple lot number 22. Each windshield was smashed by what appears to be a man's work boot.

Residents at North Village, a University of Massachusetts Family Housing area, awoke Sunday morning to the arrival of the UMass Police Department (UMPD) investigating reports of damage to several vehicles in the area. Students discovered their cars later that morning in lot 22.

Amherst town police on duty found the cars at North Village just after 3 a.m. Sunday. Resident Leslie Schleipman, a graduate student and mother of three said she was up until 1:30 a.m. that morning, but did not hear or witness the crime.

"We're used to noise all night. I didn't hear anything," said Schleipman.

Ten of the thirteen cars parked in a row just outside the first tow of apartments had smashed front windshields.

Family housing residents first questioned why the last three cars in the row outside apartments in section A were not damaged.

"We think whoever did it may have set off the alarm on... the Volkswagen and may have been scared off, so that they didn't get to the last three cars in the row," said Schleipman.

North Village is located across from next to the Puffton Village apartments and near the Hobart apartment complex.

"I am personally insulted. We pay $70 a semester, per car, to park here. And they piss on our cars; they're here all the time, we don't call the cops, and we let them use our parking lot. They come in droves," said Audrey Figarella a part time UMass employee, and former student. "We're used to the noise, and them cutting through our backyards, but this is Amherst, for Christ's sake."

"What's next? This semester seems to be particularly bad," said Shannon Klebart, an undergraduate student and resident of North Village.

"They crossed the line," said Schleipman. "[It's] got to stop. I don't have insurance on one of the cars. This [replacing the windshield] is costing me $200 out of pocket. Someone took a movie and a weeks worth of food away from my child."

Schleipman's family was one of two families to have two cars damaged in the assault.

A Ford Escort's windshield was left undamaged despite the criminal's obvious attempts to smash that windshield as well.

"It looked like someone did a dance on the windshield," Figarella said. UMPD took boot prints from the Ford Escort, and fingerprints found on one car's hood. Figarella added that the boot prints found on the cars appeared to be, in her estimation, all the same size, and from a single person.

Members of the North Village community who were victimized by the crime expressed that they saw an escalating amount of noise, vandalism, and theft in the area in recent years, as well as a decline in the appearance of UMPD officers in the area. Each resident whose windshield was damaged has filed a police report.

"We want this person caught," said Schleipman. Adding that the site not only upset parents and adults on Sunday but their children as well.

"I'm exhausted," admitted Figarella, whose mother had to come up from Springfield to drive her two oldest children to school Monday morning. Figarella was forced to cancel her 18-month-old sons doctor's appointment without a way to get to there. It "blew my whole day," she said.

"I sent notes with my kids to school, just in case they were upset," Figarella said. "We try to protect our kids from this, we don't want our kids to think that you go to college to become a drunk and destroy property."

Klebert added that she wondered whether students realized that children lived and slept in these homes. "All these windows are kids' bedroom windows."

The women's first response was one of "despair, then anger," making some question whether they could "make it."

"It makes me think, 'I can't do this,'" Figarella said.

Schleipman wondered who would take responsibility for the students' behavior, especially in the event of no culprit being found and charged.

"I'm appalled. I'm ashamed to be part of the UMass community," said Schliepman.

The anger exhibited in the crime brought Schliepman and Klebart to wonder what kind of anger drove a person to commit such an act.

"I began to realize that this is the 'columbine generation.' A lot of young, white angry males, and

Turn to WINDSHIELDS, page 3

BYRON ANDOLINA/COLLEGIAN

A protective tarp hangs off of a Volkswagen with a broken windshield in Lot A of the North Village apartment complex. Ten windshields were broken in Lot A, one of two parking lots on campus where windshields were shattered early Sunday morning.

Rape in Central reported

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A female resident in Chadbourne Dormitory reported that she was sexually assaulted in a first floor bathroom early Monday morning. The alleged predator is still at large.

The victim told police that she was grabbed from behind while in the bathroom and sexually assaulted by a man in a ski mask at around 4:50 a.m. She was eventually able to elude her attacker and escape to her room, where she called the University of Massachusetts Police Department, according to UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons.

The girl was treated and released by University Health Services.

The attacker is described as a tall, very thin male dressed in black clothes. Because of the ski mask, the victim was not able to get a look at the attacker's face.

Lyons and the UMass Detectives Bureau is asking anyone that was in the general vicinity of the area at the time of the incident to call the bureau at 545-0893. Several other options exist to contact UMass police about the incident. Tips can be emailed to UMass police at umpdmail@admin.umass.edu or phoned in to the anonymous UMass tips line at 577-8477.

The rape, the first at the University this academic year, comes on the heels of a year in which five rapes were reported. Last April 18, three men allegedly attacked a girl at around 10 p.m. near the Fine Arts Center. In another case, a female student reported that two men sexually assaulted her early on a Sunday morning May 5. In that incident, one of the men held the victim down while the other assaulted her. The two men fled when she began screaming. Two students reported being assaulted while walking in the "maze" near McGuirk Alumni Stadium October 22.

Quick thinking resulted in the arrest of three individuals. Police pulled over a vehicle on Route 9 where the individuals in the vehicle matched the descriptions of the suspects in the attack.

The University provides several resources to help victims cope with sexual assault. The Everywoman's Center in Nelson House offers 24-hour counseling with a rape hotline at 545-0800. The UMass police department also offers a 24-hour hotline at 545-2677 that can be used as a steppingstone to refer victims who request help to counselors, officers, or other professionals.

COURTESY DAVID RICHARDS/DEFENSE IMAGERY

U.S. Air Force engineers set up a tent at Prince Sultan Air Base at Al Kharj, Saudi Arabia in 1996.

Saudi foreign minister gives U.S. permission to use its military bases

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Prince Saud al-Faisal, the Saudi foreign minister, announced that his country would allow U.S. forces to use its military installations during an invasion of Iraq if the United Nations backs the United States' use of force.

Prince Saud said that Saudi Arabia would honor any resolutions the U.N. passes in a recent interview with CNN. If the U.N. finds that the United States has grounds to invade Iraq, the Saudis will be "obliged to follow through," the Saudi minister said.

Saud said that he is still morally opposed to a United States invasion of Iraq, but his statements this weekend mark a change in Saudi foreign policy since late summer.

There are signs of change among members of the United Nations as well. The U.N. expressed concern this weekend over Iraq's continuing non-compliance with various resolutions. Iraq refuses to comply with Security Council resolutions concerning prisoners of war, human rights, and disarmament.

Arab foreign ministers met with U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan Saturday to discuss Iraq's noncompliance with U.N. resolutions that have been passed as far back as a decade ago. A Lebanese minister speaking on behalf of the Arab ministers agreed that Iraq should fall in line with the U.N. regulations.

"We want Iraq to implement the Security Council Resolutions which will end the crisis," Mahmud Hammud, a Lebanese foreign minister said in the New York Times.

President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt also announced plans to help persuade Iraq to comply with U.N. weapons inspectors.

The Bush administration is urging the United Nations to set a firm deadline for Iraq to comply with standing U.N. resolutions. Secretary of State Colin Powell said that the deadline would be "short" and probably "a matter of weeks" in an interview on CBS yesterday.

According to Bush administration officials in the New York Times, the Oval Office wants a U.N. resolution about Iraq that will allow for military force. The U.N. may require multiple resolutions.

France suggested a two-pronged resolution; one that details Iraq's deficiencies, and one that suggests viable consequences for their refusal to comply with the United Nations. Secretary Powell will meet with the U.N. in New York Monday and will probably begin drafting a resolution concerning Iraq.

Iraqi foreign minister Naji Sabri al-Hadithi is still requesting that the U.N. lift sanctions against Iraq in return for Iraq's compliance with the Security Council's resolutions.

"Iraq's sovereignty must be respected, and the inspections must result in the easing of sanctions against Iraq and the elimination of all weapons of mass destruction in the Middle East, particularly in Israel" al-Hadithi said in an interview on German television.

According to Bush administration security advisor Condoleezza Rice in an interview with ABC News, Iraq doesn't have a choice in the matter; they must comply with all U.N. resolutions.

Information for this article was taken from the New York Times.

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Monday, Sept. 9, 2002

1:59 a.m.: Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) and the Amherst Fire Department were dispatched to a potential fire at Lincoln Apartments. The alarm sounded because the pull station where the alarm originated had water damage.

9:33 a.m.: A person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton after a medical emergency in Clark Hall on Stockbridge Rd.

10:37 a.m.: A fire alarm sounding in the Allond section of the Isenberg School of Management originated from workers turning on a humidifier. The humidifier sent dust up into fire detectors.

1:35 p.m.: A medical emergency in Herter Hall on Presidents Dr. was reported. The Amherst Fire Department transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

3:21 p.m.: A caller stated that an unknown subject scratched words into the paint of her vehicle on Southwest Crt.

4:08 p.m.: a one-car motor vehicle accident near Cance Dormitory on Fearing St. resulted in the windshield smashing, the air bags deploying, scratches and fractures to the front bumper and undercarriage damage to the car when it hit a outdoor staircase. The operator received minor injuries from the air bag deploying.

5:06 p.m.: A caller reported a dead duck near Butterfield Dormitory. EHS was notified.

11:52 p.m.: A caller in Melville Dormitory on Massachusetts Avenue reported a disturbing cell phone message. Police issued her a harassing phone call brochure with the caller.

Tuesday, Sept. 10, 2002

1:20 a.m.: Five people were reported stuck in an elevator in Webster Dormitory on Orchard Hill Dr. Emergency Housing was dispatched to the site.

1:24 a.m.: Officers reported that two males inside a vehicle were hanging around in the west side of Lot 44 on Sylvan Dr. They were pretending to use the help phone.

1:37 a.m.: People stuck in the elevator of Webster Dormitory called back to report that one of the five people was claustrophobic. An officer responded to the scene and all five were safely removed from the elevator.

1:48 a.m.: A disturbance was reported in Leach Dormitory on Eastman Ln. The Amherst Fire Department transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

7:35 a.m.: A caller on Fearing Street reported that the side window on the cap of her truck was smashed.

2:13 p.m.: A two-car accident at the Haigis Mall was reported. An Amherst Fire Department ambulance transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

3:28 p.m.: A minor two-car accident was reported in Lot 50 on Washington Road. Paperwork was exchanged between the operators and damage was estimated at less than $1000.

4:05 p.m.: A caller reported vandalism to a car. Paint scrapes along the lower sections of both sides of a vehicle, a dent to driver the driver's side of the bumper and passenger's side of the fender, a broken passenger side mirror and a scratched front window all occurred to the vehicle.

5:27 p.m.: A caller reported that his Qualcomm cell phone was stolen off of his desk overnight.

11:05 p.m.: Officers responded to a report of a marijuana odor coming from a Washington Dormitory room on Fearing Street.

Wednesday, Sept. 11, 2002

12:14 a.m.: An officer reported a possible larceny of vehicle parts in progress. The owner was contacted and the situation investigated.

10:02 a.m.: A fire alarm sounded in the Fine Arts Center. The building was searched and no problems were found.

5:41 p.m.: A caller on Fearing Street stated that she looked out of her window to see a green Honda Civic run into a parked vehicle, pushing that vehicle into the truck in front of it. The incident is under investigation.

6:33 p.m.: A caller from John Adams Dormitory on Fearing Street stated that someone from a floor above him dumped a bucket of urine that landed in his room.

6:33 p.m.: A driver's side window was smashed in a car in Lot 13, with a CD player stolen. The dashboard was damaged and the face of the CD player was stolen out of the glove compartment.

10:33 p.m.: The police arrested Boris Kurimik, 19, of 204 Lagrange St. in Newton, Mass., in Patterson Dormitory on Sunset Avenue for possession of a Class D substance, marijuana.

Thursday, Sept. 12, 2002

10:59 a.m.: Police arrested Christopher Hiltunen, 22, of 28 West Avenue in Salem, Mass., in Gorman Dormitory on Butterfield Terrace on a warrant for supplying people under the age of 21 with alcohol.

11:44 a.m.: A medical emergency in Stockbridge Hall was reported. One person was transported by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Friday, Sept. 13, 2002

12:15 a.m.: A traffic stop on Massachusetts Ave. and N. Pleasant St. resulted in Michael Garrauuri, 23, of 140 Silver St. in Greenfield, being arrested for operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Saturday, Sept. 14, 2002

12:08 a.m.: Police broke a fight up at the conclusion of the Orchard Hill Bowl Dance. The crowd was dispersed.

12:15 a.m.: Police responded to a two-car accident near Washington Dormitory on Fearing St. The damaged cars were left, and one vehicle was towed.

12:24 a.m.: A medical emergency was reported in Mahar Auditorium on Presidents Dr. One person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

1:36 a.m.: Officers reported a small dent in a car in Lot 50 west of Patterson Dormitory after a male rolled over the car.

2:00 a.m.: EHS responded to a small fire in Butterfield Dormitory. A small extinguisher was used to put out the fire.

2:09 a.m.: Police pulled over a car on Massachusetts Ave. for a crosswalk violation. The stop resulted in the arrest of Jared M. Toren, of 18 Bingham Dr. in Marlboro, New Jersey for Operation under the influence.

12:25 p.m.: An ambulance responded to a call from the athletic fields near Totman Gymnasium. A runner was reported dehydrated and lethargic. Upon arrival, police found two people in need of assistance. One of them was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

9:52 p.m.: Liquor law violations in Lot 50 west of Patterson Dormitory resulted in the arrest of Barnaby John O'Toole, 20, of 346 Route 149, Marston Mills, Mass. Mills was charged with possession of alcohol by a person under the age of 21.

11:59 p.m.: A medical emergency in Cance Dormitory was reported. The Amherst Fire Department transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Sunday, Sept. 15, 2002

12:42 a.m.: Police responded to the smell of marijuana coming from a Pierpont Dormitory room on Fearing St.

3:02 a.m.: Three people called while stuck in an elevator on the 11th floor of John Adams Dormitory on Fearing St. Emergency Housing was dispatched.

3:21 a.m.: Police responded to an altercation between four to five males on N. Pleasant St. near the Lederle Research Tower.

3:24 a.m.: An officer reported that she was about to stop a vehicle on Massachusetts Ave. matching the description of the vehicle involved in the fight.

3:32 a.m.: The Amherst Police Department responded to vandalism at the abandoned building at the end of Butterfield Ter.

5:52 a.m.: An officer responded to a report of ten vehicles in Lot A of the North Village Apartments with smashed windshields.

9:12 a.m.: Police responded to a call of a suspicious vehicle in Lot 32 E on Massachusetts Ave. The right rear window on a car was broken, with the stereo missing.

7:33 p.m.: A resident of Brown Dormitory on Eastman Ln. reported that her laptop has been stolen from her room.

9:02 p.m.: A caller reported that the power was out in Marcus Hall on Natural Resources Rd. and that there are chemicals in the refrigerator there that must be kept cool. EHS responded.

11:35 p.m.: AN officer found a vehicle with a stereo missing in Lot 13 on Olympia Drive. The operator reported that the stereo was already stolen about four days before that.

ESTHER DANZIG/COLLEGIAN

Thirteen windshields were kicked in in Lot 22, a purple lot in Southwest, early Sunday morning.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1930. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

$$$$'s for STUDENTS
KELLY SERVICES has Immediate Openings at The Famous Candle Company in South Deerfield.
All shifts available, including PART TIME!!!!
Great benefits include direct deposit, discounts on first quality products, and FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!
These are TEMPORARY, LIGHT INDUSTRIAL POSITIONS scheduled to bring you right through the HOLIDAY SEASON!!!!
SIGN ON BONUSES!!! REFERRAL BONUSES!!!
ATTENDANCE BONUSES!!
Call Now, and Work Tomorrow!!!
(413) 665-8306 Ext. 5231
(413) 586-2925

You can still register
GCC introduces LATE START
• Introduction to Philosophy
• Mathematical Problem Solving
• Oral Communication: Public Speaking
• Principles of Psychology
• Psychology of Death & Dying
GREENFIELD Community College
For more information (413) 775-1801
website: www.gcc.mass.edu

Diesel shoes.
downtown Amherst

New sorority opens
Delta Xi Phi begins semester

By Laura Kyser
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst's new multi-cultural sorority will kick off the semester Tuesday and Wednesday this week.

The Iota Associate chapter of Delta Xi Phi will host their first info session Tuesday, Sept. 17, and Wednesday, Sept. 18, at 7:30 p.m. in room 811 of the Campus Center. With food and fun icebreakers, the founding sisters and prospective members will discuss furthering their mission of multi-cultural awareness and the pledge process.

The UMass chapter of Delta Xi Phi is the ninth chapter of the sorority, and the first chapter on the east coast.

"We wanted a different kind of sorority," said Jeanie Gorlovsky, senior accounting major and vice president of Delta Xi Phi.

There are sororities and fraternities on campus who welcome people of different backgrounds, Gorlovsky said, but none that make multi-cultural awareness their mission. "Our mission is to unite women from different backgrounds and ethnicities," Gorlovsky said.

Last year, Delta Xi Phi held "Celebrating Our Diverse Rhythm," a multi-cultural performance and dance party, and they plan on a second celebration in November.

The sorority partners with Safe Passage of Northampton, a women's shelter, and held a fundraiser for the shelter last year.

Last March, the members also participated in the Annual Hunger Cleanup, a national service-a-thon fundraiser, raising money through pledges for three hours of service work with other student groups.

The women met challenges in founding the chapter, Gorlovsky said. Compared with other sororities, Delta Xi Phi is young, founded in 1994 at the University of Illinois - Urbana-Champaign, and is just beginning to be known.

"Other sororities are so old and historic that it's hard to be a new comer," Gorlovsky said.

The women first founded a sorority that agreed with their values on the Internet in September of 2000. However, they could not be inducted until nearly two years later, in March of 2002.

The four founding sisters have been involved in multi-cultural issues throughout their years at UMass.

Gorlovsky worked with the PRIDE Alliance and Hillel. She also served as the Collegian Diversity Editor and media coordinator for MassPIRG's Hunger and Homelessness project.

Tanisha Wilson, a senior Psychology major, has worked with the Multi-cultural Association of Psychology Students (MAPS) in addition to serving as a teaching assistant and a residential assistant.

Maya Perepelitsky, a junior Psychology major, has also been involved with the psychology department.

Betty Alban graduated in 2002 with a degree in Psychology. Working and living in Springfield, she remains an active alumnus, helping to organize and recruit prospective members.

"We all share an interest in uniting people of different backgrounds," Gorlovsky said. "There are still a lot of people who are ignorant that we all come from different backgrounds."

Their mission is to make others "more open to meeting people from different backgrounds and ethnicities," she said.

Members hope to plan a holiday tree and a fundraiser for battered women and children this year, in addition to their multi-cultural celebration.

Following the Tuesday and Wednesday info sessions, which are open to the public, applications for pledging are due Friday. Interviews will be held Saturday and prospective sisters will be notified Sunday.

■ windshields

continued from page 1

it's scary," said Schleipman.

Neither Horhay Gomez nor Sally Mieski, directors of Family Housing at the Wysocki House was available for comment.

Bret Sakowicz, a junior psychology major, discovered his car's smashed windshield around noon on Sunday and was instantly angry.

"I got mad and threw my keys, and my girlfriend started crying when she saw it, I guess that about sums up my initial reaction," said Sakowicz. "It makes you think twice about safety on campus."

Sakowicz was able to see a bright side to the incident. "Fortunately it was not the only car, otherwise I'd feel targeted. The circumstances could be worse, I guess."

In the state of Massachusetts, windshield is fully covered by insurance companies because a damaged windshield is considered a safety issue. However, for those without insurance, a new windshield can cost upwards of $200.

In what appears to be an unrelated incident, a single vehicle parked at the Immanuel Lutheran Church on North Pleasant St. was broken into on Saturday. Detective Knightly of the Amherst Police Department stated that the car was broken into through a smashed windshield. The car's contents were strewn about and the glove compartment was open. Boot prints were found on the cars hood. The owner of the vehicle has not claimed the car yet.

Anyone with information concerning these investigations is encouraged to contact either the UMPD or the Amherst Police Department as soon as possible.

ESTHER DANZIG/COLLEGIAN

'Skate or Die'
Josh Brennan ollies near the Fine Arts Center yesterday.

Write for News!

Anyone already involved or interested in writing for the News Department is welcomed to come down to the Daily Collegian today at 5 p.m. for our weekly meeting.

Stories and beats still need to be covered... Come get involved and make a difference!

THE ROAD TO RETIREMENT MAY SEEM SMOOTH, BUT IT'S LITTERED WITH TOLLS.
Fees. Charges. Hidden costs. Over time these things can erode the retirement savings you're working so hard to build. Contact us, a company known for keeping costs low. It ain't a free ride, but it's close.
TIAA-CREF.org or call (800) 842-2776
TIAA CREF Managing money for people with other things to think about.
RETIREMENT | INSURANCE | MUTUAL FUNDS | COLLEGE SAVINGS | TRUSTS | INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT
TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distribute securities products. For more information, call 800-842-2776 ext. 5509 for prospectuses. Read them carefully before investing. © 2002 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF), 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. 02-0006

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt.9 2 miles East of Town Center
On the bus route
TEL 256-6446
Semester Special $179
Join now
for our 15 week Semester Special ($179) & get a free HFC T-shirt
•FULL SIZED INDOOR POOL •AQUA AEROBICS •CYBEX/ NAUTILUS CIRCUIT •CYBEX FREE WEIGHTS •FULL COURT BASKETBALL •VOLLEYBALL •INDOOR TENNIS •YOGA •AEROBICS •STEP •JACUZZI •SAUNAS •CARDIO VASCULAR EQUIPMENT
MasterCard VISA

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED-OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

A dry campus?
Stop the vandalism

Can we get a show of hands please? Everybody who thinks getting drunk and breaking other people's things is stupid, raise your hands. That's right get them up there, don't be shy.

We know who you are. We know that even those of you that dwell in the capricious melting pot that is Southwest, where intoxicated vandalism is almost ritualistic, are deep down, good and smart people that think that destruction is, how you say... "whack."

Then why is it that this stuff keeps happening. Why is it that on Monday morning we are forced to listen to reports of nine kicked in windshields in the Southwest living area.

Why is it that last year, hardly a weekend went by without news of a broken window, a meaningless brawl, a wrecked soda machine, a garbage filled dorm lobby, a busted up bathroom or a urine soaked carpet.

C'mon people, we all know you can hold your liquor. If you can't, simply put, you are a sorry excuse for a college student. So why then do many of the 20,000 plus students at this University have to bear the gross vandalism caused by a few.

Now we aren't saying that UMass should consider becoming a dry campus. Believe us, that isn't even in our thought process. But if this kind of thing keeps up and escalates, as it has over the past year, The Collegian won't have to say anything.

The administration will take action, as it did with the ban on tailgating in the early 90's. UMass has at its disposal a capable, college-wise Chancellor who comes to Amherst from the University of Florida, a big time party school in its own right.

He comes here with promises of improvement in every facet of the University, including student life. He's already mentioned lifting the tailgating ban, but continued abuse of campus facilities is a dagger in the back of that proposal.

Why not take advantage of a Chancellor who clearly cares about student's enjoyment and entertainment? But made clear by repeated acts of defacement on campus, some students aren't thinking about what they might gain from a little restraint.

We surmise the fun factor of a little destruction is just too tempting to pass up. But think about what that says about our school.

We are aware that this type of thing goes on at most schools throughout the country, but that doesn't mean it needs to be fueled at UMass.

It's okay for UMass to stand out for something positive for once. But we doubt some students are thinking about positive implications at all. They're probably too busy thinking about the next windshield to kick in. And that, for the rest of the student body that is in Amherst to learn as well as experience, is a shame.

Staff editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

APPLICATIONS FOR ED/OP ARE CLOSING TOMORROW AT 5PM!

PLEASE MAKE SURE ALL COMPLETED MATERIALS ARE E-MAILED OR PLACED IN JAMIE OR REGAN'S MAILBOX BY THAT TIME.

Racism a "hairy" issue

Gillette really is "The Best a Man Can Get."

I have no hair right now. None. That in itself is no big deal, really. It'll grow back. But I never thought I could learn life lessons this way.

I have no plans to make my baldness a permanent thing – it's strictly a one-time, gag kind of thing for me. For one, my head is freakin' cold nearly 24-7. For another, it feels like sandpaper. I never thought I'd have so many problems just yanking a baseball hat on and off my head.

So I'm done. This is a one-time deal, I promise.

The other side of this, though, is the feeling of sticking out. I've never had a problem with the way I look or with who I am, but this hasn't happened much to me before, either. I've gone from being my tall, dark and handsome self to looking, as a former Collegian columnist said it, like a thumb. Except I'm a thumb with big ears.

I expected reaction. I wasn't surprised my grandmother looked like she was going to faint when I took my hat off. I wasn't surprised when my mom rolled her eyes, or when my cousin's eyes hugged out of his head.

But I was surprised when I felt like random people in line at the drug store were giving me dirty looks for random reasons. It felt weird when the Jehovah's Witnesses dropped by while I was home Friday and they seemed to cower a little when I answered the door.

Is it really that ugly? Are people a little taken aback by it? Or am I just that sensitive to looking like a thumb?

Realistically, I'm thinking it's a little of all these reasons. Physically I've never felt like I stick out that much in society. I'm pretty average looking: putting aside my dead sexy looks, I'm a shade under six feet tall, white, and dark-haired. I have all four limbs, reasonable intelligence, and no noticeable mutations. Those traits always seemed pretty normal.

At least until lately.

At the end of the summer, a few weeks before my current cue ball syndrome, I went to a park on the other side of town to find some full court basketball. Good full court games are heck of a lot easier to find during the school year, where pretty much any time I want I can hop in my car, drive down to Southwest and find a game. So I was dying to play in something that resembled a real game.

It really looked promising when we got there – there were a bunch of guys shooting around, and it basically looked like they just needed a few more players to make the necessary ten for a game, and that with us there we'd be on our way. We shot for sides, picked the teams, and got the game rolling.

Then odd things started to happen. My race started to matter. Rarely have I ever felt out of place playing basketball because I'm white – especially up here at UMass. It rarely ever seems to come up as an issue.

It wasn't the case that day, though. I had teammates who "froze me out," refusing to pass me the ball simply for their own personal reasons. I had opponents take my legs out from under me when I dribbled and jumped around the basket. I had players refer to me in such loving terms as, "white boy," "gringo," "white faggot," and "Caucasian motherf—er." Once stuff like that started floating around the court, I knew the actions of the other players were no accident.

For pride's sake, my friend and I finished out the game. It's sort of an unwritten code to not walk out on a game once you start it. But we left as soon as it ended. The fun was gone.

It shook me up pretty good, I guess. Coupled with my current "hairy" situation, and I think I've caught a small glimpse on what prejudices against people for the way they look can really be like. "He's not with us," one of the guys on the court actually said that day.

I can't picture living life dealing with something like racism every day. It's easy to blow it off when it's something like a meaningless pick-up game, but it still hurts. What if it had been coming from someone offering a job? Or from some hick cop profiling me as I drive down the highway?

"Is it really that ugly? Are people a little taken aback by it? Or am I just that sensitive to looking like a thumb?"

Racism may have faded a tad, but it's still very real. That's not something people realize every day. Overall ignorance may have improved some, but people still deal with prejudices on a regular basis.

I almost wish that everyone ran into one situation in their lives like I did – maybe then people would realize how easy the way that they act can affect people. Maybe then they'd realize how horribly empty it can make someone feel to be pushed aside for no other reason than for things they can't control.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian columnist.

© Denver Rocky Mountain News. Dist. by NEA Inc.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

In the article "Off to war? Have another Pretzel!" Yousef Munnayer tries to point out that war against Iraq would make no sense. He asks if the United States would be willing to allow weapon inspection teams inspect America's weapons program. Well, the U.S. isn't the one who gassed over 40 Kurdish villages killing thousands of men, women, and children. Other villages that were lucky to escape lethal chemicals had all men between the ages of 15-70 rounded up and killed. It is our responsibility to put an end to terrorism, so that the thousands who died in 9-11 did not die in vain.

Saddam's list of crimes goes on and on. He praised the September 11 bombing and pays 25 thousand dollars per suicide bombing. As Bush said to the UN, Iraqi citizens "have been subjected to arbitrary arrest and imprisonment, summary execution, and torture by beating, burning, electric shock, starvation, mutilation, and rape."

Mr. Munnayer states that Hussein might just be crazy enough to use chemical weapons. This is all the more reason that he must be stopped. A recent report from the International Institute for Strategic Studies concluded that Iraq could have a nuclear bomb within months if it acquires missile material, and that Saddam has met with nuclear physicists several times over the past few years.

It is time that we stop Iraq before it gets any more powerful, before more innocent people are tortured, and thus it is time that we topple the regime. By using our powerful Air Force we could destroy strategic targets, minimize casualties, and help make this world a safer one.

Giled Skolnick
Student

Empty patronization

WENDY BLAND

At times in my life, times which happen far too frequently and will most likely continue to occur, I am forced, by the rules of politeness and conversation, to have a meaningless, empty conversation with some patronizing adult I only have the barest acquaintance with. Most often the people with whom I have these painful discourses with are the parents of classmates of mine who I despise. I despise the parents more than their obsequious children for their complete inability to encourage said issue to grow up vaguely interesting and even just a little unique.

They discover me in the supermarket, or worse, at my job, where I cannot escape. After the beginning, "Wendy! How are you and various members of your family?" and the "I'm great Mrs. or Mr. so-in-so, how are you and various members of your family?" comes the part I dread; the skilled interrogation to any younger person by a responsible adult who is required, by common law, to carry out.

It will go something like this: "So, where do you go to college?" They will ask, desperate for a conversation line that will make them seem like a warm, caring individual. "UMass." I will answer, teenage-like in the face of adult patronization.

This is an answer people are very happy to hear. They will always have a relative who went, goes, or is hoping to go to this university. They will make jokes about Zoo-Mass. They will inform me that drugs will interfere with my studies. Then they will inquire what, exactly my major is. "Plant and Soil Sciences." I will tell them. Then, to add to the confusion already showing in their faces, I will continue; "Science track, with a concentration in Floriculture. I also have a minor in Philosophy and Entomology." They will be confounded. They expected English or something of the sort. There is nothing for them to relate to here.

"They have a duty to the social order. They will nod and smile and change the topic."

Who would ever major in Plants? And Soils? Is that actually a science? What is Entomology? Something with words?

But they must continue patronizing me. They have a duty to the social order. They will nod and smile and change the topic. One way which they seem to prefer in reaffirming their superior position in the world is to inquire of my class, often by underestimating how old I am. "So, you're, what? A freshman?" They will ask, even when they only know me because I was a classmate of their repulsive offspring. "I'm a junior," I will reply patiently, reminding them that I graduated with their obnoxious Connor, or whomever. I will use this opportunity to inquire about the previously mentioned progeny, who will be attending some ridiculously over-priced private institution and majoring in something with a much shorter title than that of my area of study. Something, like economics, or political science which sounds very impressive, upper-class and has the added benefit that no one really knows what those people study (except, of course, those that study it) and thus no one will try to get into a conversation about it with their parents.

Hopefully, before the offensive adult can continue for too long about how wonderful their heir is, I will have some excuse to leave them to their happy contemplation of how they have contributed to the world by producing a successor for their exhausting job of trying to patronize every individual on the planet, one person at a time.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.17.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Future holdings for the princess of pop

On a recent episode of "TRL," a fan was asked whether Britney Spears was hot or not. The girl screamed, "Dead hot."

That oxymoron certainly befits her current status on the pop scene. She's still kicking, but she doesn't have the kick she used to. And in Spin magazine's March issue, readers named Spears sex goddess of the year – and also worst solo artist. Call it "not alive, not yet dead."

Indeed, this year has been a checkered one for the 20-year-old Spears. A pop star knows he/she has made it if the media dissects every itty-bitty quote he/she utters, follows his/her every path, blows minor issues out of proportion and exaggerates or fabricates stories for increased drama. Britney, consider yourself part of that pack.

Since she first burst onto the scene at the very end of 1998, Spears has been working non-stop recording and promoting her butt off. Her record label, Jive (Backstreet Boys, 'N Sync), has used an extraordinarily aggressive marketing campaign to promote her music, completely saturating the market. Her coquettish charm, infectious hits (and that quintessential teen pop album Oops...I Did It Again) cast a spell on the world. She shimmied her way into our lives and hasn't left ever since.

A 'CRAZY' YEAR

Drama began when everyone's favorite blond tart split with longtime beau, 'N Sync's Justin Timberlake, 21. Since then, she's faced one negative headline after another. She had a disastrous opening of her New York brasserie NYLA (stands for "New York" and her home state of "Louisiana," her favorite places); she was caught holding a cancer stick (which she says she was holding for a girlfriend); she faced back-to-back negative incidents in Mexico (she brandished her middle finger at some photographers and cut short a concert due to bad weather); her parents officially divorced; and her recent songs haven't generated much airplay and some dates on her tour failed to sell out. All of which has tarnished her once glisteningly perfect image.

And while Spears was blurting oops all the way to the bank, musical trends have moved in a different direction, as fans have embraced the likes of Pink and Avril Lavigne, whose more rock-leaning pop provides a more grown-up alternative to her kiddie fare.

The result? With her third and latest album, Britney has sold 3.8 million copies, not bad for most, but pretty sluggish compared with the turbo-charged chart success of her two previous records (Baby...One More Time and Oops!...I Did It Again), which have each sold 10 million copies. So Spears' has smartly opted to take six months off to rejuvenate. (It's surprising, though, that live decided to hit the brakes. Seemed as though they were pushing the gas pedal until the fuel completely ran out.)

And quite frankly, we need a break from Britney almost as much as she needs a break from us. A break from the endless marketing tie-ins through merchandise (and those heavily rotated Pepsi commercials), the plethora of magazine covers, the MTV airplay, the movies and the never-ending scandals.

IS SPEARS OVER?

Although I'm not nearly ready to echo the New York Times Magazine's recent claim that the 20-year-old's "star has fallen," by now it's fair to say Spears' starlight doesn't shine as bright as it once did. She remains one of the world's biggest stars, but the over promotion has backfired. It's sad that you're most likely to hear Spears' Pepsi ad on Top 40 radio than her actual music.

Madonna, admittedly a woman who Spears has been compared to one too many times, was also written off by critics who dismissed her as nothing more than a fading teen idol in the '80s. It wasn't until the Queen of Pop released 1989's spiritually redemptive Like a Prayer that made people sit up and take notice of her talent. Ironically, that was Madonna's fourth studio album – the same number Spears will next be working on.

"With Like a Prayer, Madonna doesn't just ask to be taken seriously, she insists on it," said a review in Rolling Stone. And quite frankly, that's a tone Spears should consider taking on her fourth album.

Turn to BRITNEY, page 6

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ONE HOUR PHOTO
Directed by Mark Romanek
Starring Robin Williams
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

Robin Williams wears pale blonde hair shorn close to the scalp throughout One Hour Photo, which does the effect of blending him into the background – and opens him up as an actor. Williams' electrified live-wire persona has been blanded out and cut as short as his hair, and he gives a performance as restrained as his performances in fare like Patch Adams and Death to Smoochy were histrionic. With last spring's Insomnia (and to far less success, the purplish Smoochy), Williams erased any and every memory of the schmaltzy streak he found himself on. And in One Hour Photo he gives an intense, tightly controlled performance as an alienated man obsessed with a young family.

Seymour "Sy" Parrish is the lead photo clerk at SavMart, a generically impersonal mega-department store in a generically pleasant suburb. Sy is middle-aged and paunchy, genial and... bland. The customers who leave their film for Sy to develop – new parents, cat-loving old ladies, amateur pornographers – pay no attention to him; their entire conversations consist of nothing but pleasantries, if anything at all. Sy lives in a spartanly decorated apartment with no family. Divided from real social interaction, Sy spends his nights watching "The Simpsons" without laughing, living in desolation. But Sy takes his job very seriously. And he especially likes to treat the Yorkins, who have been developing with Sy for nine years, very well.

In the Yorkins, Sy sees the idyll for the suburban family: handsome, successful husband Will (Michael Vartan), lovely wife Nina (Connie Nielsen) and cute as a button son Jakob (Dylan Smith). Sy, who has developed a twisted fascination for this image he perceives (his wall is plastered with prints of Yorkin family photos, in a monument to disturbed obsession), likes to imagine himself as kindly Uncle Sy. But the life of the Yorkins is hardly idyllic – Will and Nina's marriage is crumbling because of his emotional neglect. And when Sy sees Will do something to crumble that faultless vision, he loses the last ounce of sanity he has held in reserve. We know something bad has happened from the beginning, because Sy is in police lock-up, being interrogated by a detective. The suspense comes from finding out what Sy did.

The director is Mark Romanek, the music video director whose credits include the infamous video for Nine Inch Nails' "Closer." Romanek directs a bit over-methodically. He favors shots of the skewed – a cracked windshield, a gory nightmare – that seem over designed to be arty. Romanek, has vision, yes, but maybe too much; he should rein in his tendencies toward the fussy. Working with cinematographer Jeff Cronenweth, he turns the SavMart into an unfamiliar world; the entire store seems to be colored only in sterile blues and whites, with the photo counter seemingly a mile from the rest of the store. It heightens the feelings of alienation that Romanek makes crystal clear.

One Hour Photo strays further into pulp territory, but it's also a far subtler stalker thriller than has come along in a while (the teen-gloss Swimfan looks even more sodden now). Romanek may be this side of too meticulous crafting his atmosphere, but he's smart enough to know that he shouldn't go for the most obvious pay-off. There are no shots of flying entrails, no "adrenaline-pumping" chases, no

Turn to ONE HOUR, page 6

It's a long road in reaching the big time
The Color Red, not there, takes a crucial step

By Sean Holmes
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

THE COLOR RED
Clear
RCA

So many bands become successful virtually overnight that it is sometimes easy to forget how hard it can be and how long it can sometimes take to break into the music business and actually sign with a major label. Most bands take three or four years of hard work before they break into the business and put out an album. Even then, it sometimes requires another two or three years before they hit the big time.

If this all seems like a long time before releasing a major-label album, the band The Color Red must have felt like they were waiting an eternity. Hailing from Riverside, Calif., the band just released its first major-label, full-length debut, Clear, this past August – eight years after first coming together.

During those eight years, the band went through numerous lineup changes, recorded one EP on a very small, independent label and gained valuable experience performing live, opening for the likes of No Doubt, Lit, Papa Roach, Korn, The Offspring, 311 and The Deftones. All those years of "trial by fire" training on stage with no knobs or production behind which to hide gave the band a maturity level that really strengthened their musical chops and cohesion. Clear is a logical culmination of all the years of hard work.

The Color Red consists of brothers Jon and Marc Zamora (vocals and bass, respectively), Billy Meyer (guitar), Adrian Verloop (guitar) and Dave Schartoff (drums). Their sound is in the post-grunge, nu-metal, alternative-rock vein of loud, heavy guitars, pummeling riffs, very few solos and a baritone-voiced, growling singer. But despite the obvious modern-day influences, there are also traces of Jeff Buckley and Radiohead mixed in. Jazz, indie rock and thrash metal are also in steady rotation on the group record player.

"Sore Throat," the first single off Clear, is the most memorable song on the album. Tight, catchy and kick-ass, "Sore Throat" shows everyone in the band at the top of their game. Meyer and Verloop provide some tight, intriguing riffs around which Zamora pleads with a heartfelt melody during the verse and then screams his lungs out during the catchy chorus. The band shows off their high-level musicianship a little bi implementing a very engaging and perfectly executed start-stop time section in the middle of the song – right after the second chorus.

The Radiohead influence can be heard within one of the album's other highlights:

Turn to COLOR RED, page 6

After a successful life and a dark sixth season:
BUFFY'S LUCKY NUMBER SEVEN

©CARTOON CTN

The cast of Buffy sets out on its seventh season. With intense new plot lines coming into play, some fans predict it will be the best season yet.

By Erik Taylor
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

For those of you who watch Buffy The Vampire Slayer, you know what it is and why you like it. This drama/comedy/horror/action/sometimes musical consistently offers strong storylines and flushed out characters set in a universe where demons, ghosts, witches, evil gods and vampires run free.

These various agents of evil gravitate to Sunnydale, a small Californian town, because of the Hellmouth. The Hellmouth serves two purposes: (1) It serves as a buffer between Earth and a Hell dimension and (2) It supplies the show's writers a means to create a slew of problems for their little slayer and her pals.

The Slayer is a female warrior chosen in every generation to fight against evil. Since the job description requires a lot of work, Buffy has her loyal gang of Scoobies to help her in her battles.

Rupert Giles is Buffy's Watcher, her mentor and father figure.

Xander is the bumbling best guy-friend with a penchant for falling in love with demons.

Willow is the super-powerful Wicca who tried destroying the world last season.

Tara, Willow's girlfriend, is the sorceress of the group, but a bullet exploding through her chest toward the end of last season pretty much ensures that character is gone.

Dawn is Buffy's kid sister who was magically inserted into Buffy's life as a cosmic key given to Buffy so she would protect it (her, in this case) with her life. (It is confusing; just accept it).

Anya is the 1000-year-old Vengeance-Demon who just returned to her demonic ways and ex-fiance to Xander.

This leaves us with Spike, the evil vampire with a government chip in his herd, rendering him incapable of hurting a human being. Being an extremely violent creature, it leaves Spike a neutered vamp with an extremely bad attitude.

Although it all sounds confusing to those who do not watch the show, each episode opens with a quick recap of past events important to the episode to catch up those who are lost. The show's main story arcs mostly all of a given season, building up steam to tense, climactic season finales.

With the events from last year's resurrection of the dead

Turn to BUFFY, page 6

Starting the week on a healthy note:

Exploring the myth of the "Freshman 15"

Coming to college and remaining healthy and shapely can be a challenge. Year after year, people enter college to enhance their minds but seemingly neglect their bodies. The onslaught of new responsibilities, options and time constraints often cause healthy habits placed on the back burner.

Everyone has heard the stories about gaining the "Freshman 15," whether fact or fiction. Few studies have been conducted to determine if students actually put on weight during their first year of college. However, a study published in Addictive Behavior in 1985 found that women attending college gained weight 36 times faster than those of the same age not attending school.

Although this is only one of the few studies that tackled this issue, it does provide some evidence that students gain weight during their freshman year. This trend though is not impossible to break. With some simple adjustments to daily activities, one can begin the fight against the "Freshmen 15." Two major components involved are exercise and nutrition.

EXERCISE IMPACT

Studies show Americans in general are becoming more and more obese, but why? One major cause is lack of exercise.

"It is estimated that 43 percent of adults do not exercise regularly and 29 percent report no physical activity during leisure time," said Dr. Priscilla Clarkson of the University of Massachusetts Exercise Science Department.

With such a small percentage of the country getting adequate exercising, should we be surprised individuals experience a weight gain during college? The answer is clearly no. Even more alarming are the increased health risks later in life without adequate physical activity.

Exercise has shown to reduce the risk of many chronic diseases, including coronary artery disease, stroke, cancer and diabetes. So what measures should be taken to avoid such problems?

The American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) and Center for Disease Control (CDC) have developed guidelines for exercise. The accepted amount is currently 30 minutes of moderate exercise most days of the week. Moderate is defined as exercising at a brisk pace, and examples are hiking, jogging and cycling.

"ACSM and CDC also state that the exercises can be accumulated and not have to be done for 30 minutes [at once]," explained Clarkson. "For example, 10 minutes in the morning, 10 minutes at noon and 10 minutes in the evening would be sufficient."

This may not seem like a lot of time, however, since most Americans do not currently get the recommended amount of exercise, this is a minimum level of activity to attain some health benefits.

With the understanding of how busy college life can be, here are some tips on how to maintain a healthy weight and lifestyle with exercise.

Walk to class versus taking the bus. It may take an extra 5 minutes, but it will burn many more calories, which do add up.

Take the stairs rather than the elevators. Campus has many tall buildings; they are a perfect chance to get extra exercise throughout the day.

Intentionally park further away in the parking lots when you do drive. Chances are you will find a spot faster and still be on time.

Following these tips and developing a good exercise routine is a great start to combating weight gain. Yet, exercise is only part of this story.

- Joseph Cannon

NUTRITION IMPACT

A new environment

Making the transition from high school to college can be very stressful. The fear of entering a new school, leaving friends and family and gaining personal freedom can be overwhelming.

"Many students have difficulty adjusting to college life for a variety of reasons and find themselves reaching for food – not for hunger, but for comfort, loneliness or to relief stress," said Robin Levine, Associate Director of the Center for Nutrition in Sport and Human Performance and Registered Dietitian.

"Find other ways to socialize if it's not meal time," he continued. "Take a walk, sit by the pond or go and get the campus recreation schedule and go shoot some hoops."

All-you-can-eat

Freshman are required to be on the Residential Meal Plan. The dining halls have an all-you-can-eat principle. If you treat the dining hall as a buffet every time you enter, then you will probably gain weight.

"Look at all of your options at the meal before selecting what you really want," said Dianne Sutherland, Registered Dietitian for UMass Food Services. "If you take too much food, you may feel obligated to eat it all or you may feel guilty if you don't eat it. Take only one plate per meal, not two or three plates."

Remember you can always go for seconds.

Eating slower is never a bad idea either. It takes about 10 to 12 minutes for satiety to kick in. Try eating foods that are good sources of fiber. Dietary fiber slows down the absorption of food and promotes the feeling of "fullness." In addition, foods high in fiber, such as fruits and vegetables, are usually low in calories.

The dining commons offer a variety of healthy options as well. Sutherland explained that students should limit their intake of fried items, while selecting foods that are grilled, baked or steamed. The salad bar is a great place to get low fat deli meats, veggies, fruit, yogurt and hummus. The sandwich and sushi bars are also excellent choices when watching calories.

Nutrition Facts are available at the cashier's desk for a majority of prepared food items.

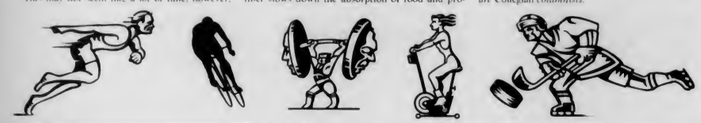
Ordering out

"Having food delivered or making a quick stop at a local fast food restaurant is always tempting," said Christopher Mohr, doctoral student and Registered Dietitian. "However, it won't always be the best if your goal is avoiding weight gain. Keep in mind that if you order out, there are always better options on each menu."

Instead of ordering a Whopper or Big Mac, Mohr advised to opt for a grilled chicken. In the case of pizza, instead of choosing pepperoni and sausage as topping, order plain cheese or any vegetable.

"Another idea to is not allow yourself to become so hungry that by the time you pick up your food or it is delivered to your door, you can't maintain some self control," Mohr said, explaining that one would not consume an entire pizza or whatever the case may be in one sitting.

If you stock your refrigerator and shelves with healthy food items, you will be less tempted to spend your money on delivery.



Don't skip meals

Levine and Sutherland both agree breakfast is the most important meal of the day. Skipping breakfast has not only been shown to decrease academic performance, but may lead to overeating. Continuous munching, on top of regular meals, can cause weight gain. If the three-meals-a-day regimen is not for you, a great alternative is consuming four to six smaller meals throughout the day. Packing bagels, fruit or "grab-n-go" lunches in your backpack are excellent ways to do this.

Weight gain cannot be attributed to only one factor; rather it is a complex issue related to both environment (i.e. exercise and nutrition) and genetics. With the combination of exercise and nutrition, a happy, healthy and shapely life is attainable.

- Christopher Theberge

Joseph Cannon is a UMass senior in the Exercise Science Department. Christopher Theberge is a UMass graduate student in Human Nutrition. Both are Collegian columnists.

■ Color Red

continued from page 5

"Wrong Replacement," in the ethereal arpeggios dissolving into pedal tones. A song like "Your New Sell" makes for a great, straight-ahead, hard rocking number.

Despite the presence of some strong and memorable songs, the album is ultimately a mixed bag, because it lacks the consistently cohesive and melodic songwriting that mark the previously mentioned songs. Many of the other tracks fall into a murky hole of endless minor chords with no direction, as the writing seems focused too much on riffs rather then melody or lyrics and makes the album, at times, a little dull. The band really does nothing to distinguish themselves from the hoards of other alternative rock bands that have flooded the modern rock scene over the last few years.

They do, however, demonstrate very strong collective musicianship, as all the members prove to be competent players. The real standout, though, is drummer Dave Schartoff who shows amazing dexterity and an ability to put together some interesting and complex patterns. Schartoff has even been compared to the renowned Danny Carey of Tool – high praise indeed.

Though at times intriguing, Clear shows a band still working to find a unique sound and more concise songwriting. The Color Red is a band to keep an eye on, though, because there is potential for great things oozing out of every crevice of this group. The musicianship and maturity demonstrated here give them an edge that could elevate them in the coming years.

Fans of The Deftones, Korn and Sickleback are encouraged to check this band out. The Color Red will also be playing at Green Hill Park in Worcester on Sept. 22 along with Disturbed, Nonpoint, 3rd Strike, Flaw, Hatebreed and Black Label Society.

■ Buffy

continued from page 5

Buffy, season six's two-hour-long premier set a dark tone that carried through the year. Willow turned evil and killed someone (one named Warren, who wasn't innocent but was still a human being). Tara got shot in the chest, Anya returned to her demon ways and Spike attempted to rape Buffy. With all these events reeking havoc in Buffy's world, what do we expect from the next, and possibly last, season of Buffy?

It has been noted that show creator Joss Whedon is taking the show back to its roots. Jokingly referred to as Buffy: Year One, season seven promises to be its best year. Sunnydale High School has been rebuilt (it was destroyed by Buffy and her pals while trying to slay the mayor/demon). What's more, Spike returning from Africa with his soul intact, Buffy acquiring a job at the high school and the return of the evil slayer Faith (Eliza Dushku) are all things to be expected this season.

Early throughout each season, a "Big Bad" sits in the shadows, pulling the strings that carry each episode to the climactic season finale. Most of these major villains will be, in one episode early on for a very terrifying reason, Willow, after the murder-ous events from last season, is in England with Buffy's Watcher Giles, trying to heal her addiction to dark magic. Spike's new soul won't be producing another Angel to vampire with a soul) anytime soon. His reluctance to have a soul is emphasized with him trying to literally carve it out.

With all of this to look forward to, it could be possible that one of televisions best will be getting better. The new season begins next Tuesday at 8 p.m. on UPN.

■ Britney

continued from page 5

Britney Spears would be best advised to take a brief leave of absence from the public view.

"She remains one of the world's biggest stars, but the over promotion has backfired. It's sad that you're most likely to hear Spears Pepsi ad on Top 40 radio than her actual music."

WHAT'S NEXT?

Hopefully the hiatus will give Spears a chance to catch up with her life, take a look back, embrace the past along with her many accomplishments, deliver her from the bubble gum and lead her into thought-provoking songwriting. But where exactly should Spears go now that she's at, err... a crossroads?

Along the way of entering womanhood and to presumably gain credibility, Britney, excuse me, Britney decided to adopt a risque image. The once-sacred one needs to ditch the hooker look and return to her wholesome image.

Second, story after story has Britney disappointing fans waiting outside some personal appearance by running past them, or looking bored at some scripted press event. Instead of running away from fans, she should adopt a meet-and-greet attitude. In other words, ditch the outsized presence and mega-stardom. "TRL," the show that practically made Ms. Spears, has been denied appearances from the teen queen as of late. Did someone forget her roots? Unless it's absolutely necessary, a star should never deny the truth – for tabloid mongers will eventually dig the dirt and spread it faster than you can say "Crazy." Case in point: her breakup with Timberlake could have humanized her image if her publicist hadn't spent months denying they ever broke up. (Kudos, however, for granting an interview with People magazine last month dispelling rumors of a Mariah-like meltdown and weight gain.)

Spears may never be able to go diamond (sales of 10 million copies) again, but many of today's top acts (Janet Jackson, Whitney Houston) can't hit those high numbers either. But if Spears wants to make sure she's not completely forgotten in this here-today, gone-tomorrow pop world, she should plan on releasing a new record for late 2003, just in time for the always-healthy music selling holiday season. Hopefully by then she won't be a girl, but a full-fledged woman. Booking a high-profile concert in New York's Madison Square Garden on New Year's Eve – a year and a half after her last concert appearance may be a wise move too.

We know Spears is all about the grittier new image, but a NASCAR racing flick as her next project? Sounds more like another ad tie-in placement than an artistic move. Spears should seriously consider pulling the plug before she begins screaming, "oops...I did it again!"

When recording her next album, Spears should seek out new producers. From Glen Ballard to, hell, Pink and Christina Aguilera Svengali Linda Perry. She should also go with her instincts to start writing more herself – unless, of course, her own songs turn out to suck.

Finally, the absolute best thing Spears can do is to truly disappear for a full six months: no new singles, no videos, no ads, no public appearances (an occasional, but low profile, appearance is allowed).

Don't count out the pride of Kentwood and her photogenic belly button just yet. If the music is there the fans will come back screaming. And contrary to popular belief, she's had more than a few good hits. So the odds are in her favor. But unless Spears choreographs her moves as carefully as she does in her stage shows, she may be dropping a few key pieces to sustain celebrity longevity.

Nikolas Markantonatos is a Collegian columnist.

DELTA XI PHI
Multicultural Sorority, Inc.
invites you to our
INFORMATION SESSIONS
Tues. 9/17 & Wed. 9/18 at 7:30pm
Campus Center 811
www.deltaxiphi.com

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training from industry professionals
• National certification available
• Lifetime job help
• 100 hours
• Day, eve
• Graduate Massachusetts, Rhode Island & Vermont
• Licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888
www.bostonbartender.com

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
NOW HIRING!!
IF YOU THINK YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES, WE WOULD LIKE TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT JOINING OUR TEAM OF PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS.
WORK IN A SAFE, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT AND EARN THOUSANDS OF $$$$$$'S
18+ - NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
SOUTH HADLEY - 413/532-3621

■ One Hour

continued from page 5

idiotic, done-to-death staples of the genre. Just a portrait of lonely human despair.

In Swimfan, Erika Christensen looks like a curvy cover model and has the sneer of a petulant high school brat. Williams has an anonymous, amiable gaze that he holds for a beat too long; it gives him the look of a vaguely creepy loner desperately longing for a friend. Williams' entire performance seems to be built from that gaze. Sy Parrish is welcoming and friendly – the kind of store clerk that manager's die for. His faux smile, put on like make-up, hides a world of loneliness and hurt, and Williams conveys that loneliness and hurt without resorting to acting class trickery. Parrish is disturbed, but not a monster – Williams doesn't bellow or sneer or act "menacing." He acts pathetic. And that makes him far more frightening.

Romanek can't help but distancing himself from the material. He's too showy, without being showy. He calls attention to his direction with too much skewed "this-is-not-Hollywood" imagery. But he draws the audience in more than he pushes them away. Romanek may be too systematic a director, but One Hour Photo is the creepiest thriller in a while.

Parity of NFL a joy for fans

Two weeks down and everything's back to normal in the NFL.

Wait – the Rams lost again? The Panthers won again? Three of the eight undefeated teams are from the AFC West? Can we double-check all these things?

Football has been glorious to watch this year, unless of course you are a die-hard Rams fan, in which case you have been tortured both weeks. And if you are a fan of one of the sad-sack teams of the AFC North, then I have no pity for you, you chose your fate long ago.

The question isn't whether or not the NFL has been a blast this year. It is why the NFL has been pure entertainment this season. It's fun to watch games go down to the wire and to see teams that were 14 point underdogs pull out a nailbiter.

The one word that comes to mind is one that was tossed around an awful lot less than a month ago: parity.

The NFL has done a fantastic job with its salary cap structure, which means that no one team can corner the market on marquee players and put together a dynasty without superb coaching or extremely dedicated players. Isn't that a novel idea, having good coaching, hard work and cohesiveness being a rewarding commodity?

What that amounts to is that any team can beat another team on any given field. Even the Bengals have the hope that they can throw Jon Kitna under center to rejuvenate the offense and win back-to-back games. The fact is that anything is possible in this NFL.

Which brings us back to that word, parity. Does anyone remember why it was discussed so often less than a month ago? For those of you with incredibly good memories, you probably know that I'm talking about – that other sport...what is it called? Batball or something like that?

Parity within Major League Baseball was one of the primary goals of the labor talks that threatened the, and I use this term loosely, "national pastime." Baseball is into its stretch run but nobody cares because there is no pennant race.

Why? Well, in part at least, it is due to the lack of parity within baseball. True, with the length of baseball's season, large leads in a race for a spot in the playoffs easily develop. But half of the teams in the majors were out of the pennant race before it even started. Everyone in this area will talk about how the Red Sox suck, and for the size of their payroll, they do suck, but can you imagine how bad things would be if you lived in a city that housed the Devil Rays? The Orioles?

Baseball did right by getting the luxury tax put in place, but in truth, how much will it do? It likely will not lower salaries or ticket prices, and while revenue sharing will help the smaller market teams, it will likely just make them a little more competitive rather than raising them to pennant hopes.

On the other side, the NFL is thriving under its system. Having teams who can win on any Sunday may be horrible news for bookies, but it is for the best for sports fans. Who wants to watch a game, a series or a season if they know what the outcome is going to be?

When the postseason arrives for baseball, the game will be back in the limelight, which, for a baseball purist like myself, will be a refreshing trend. Don't get me wrong, even I agree that football should get the majority of the focus of the sports world. Otherwise, there would be a higher percentage of sports fans watching ESPN than college students snoozing at 9 a.m. on a weekend.

But it will be nice when there is a series more meaningful than the Blue Jays and Tigers to wet the appetite of a baseball fanatic. And baseball's regular season is at least a little more suspenseful than some of its counterparts' as only four teams from each league make the second season, as opposed to the NBA's and NHL's systems where any team still breathing after 82 games makes the playoffs.

But the truth is that football has perfected the balance between having too many and too few teams in its postseason. Most teams are in the race for at least half of, if not three-quarters of, the regular season, and with only 16 games played per season, each Sunday is that much more important.

Baseball has spread itself far too thin and there is way too much disparity between the best and worst teams. Owners have lost what little contact they had with the fans and players are losing it as well. And fast.

If it wasn't true before, now more than ever is football taking over this country as the true national pastime, and, quite frankly, everyone seems much happier.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

■ slammed

continued from page 10

out of position and putting a shot just outside Nigh's reach.

"Our kids still felt like, 'we can tie this up,'" Rudy said. "We went forward like banshees."

The enthusiasm was short-lived, however, as the Minutewomen allowed the Wolverines' Michelle Pesiri to sneak through the defense 41 seconds after Crumpton's goal to give Michigan an insurance tally. The Wolverines added a penalty kick at 88:00 for their third and final score of the match.

The Minutewomen were outshot 29-5 for the game and did not attempt a corner kick, but Rudy saw glimpses of promise during the second half.

"Our kids listened, changed up well, and did a great job of picking up tactical information," Rudy said. "We played the second half so well, at least 43 minutes of it." The 15th-year coach praised the play of Nigh, who made nine saves on the afternoon. The junior goalkeeper currently ranks third in the nation in saves with nearly 12 per game.

Alabama-Birmingham proved to be a formidable opponent for the Minutewomen as well, and they had the added misfortune of having to cope with a late change in itinerary. Rudy was informed Saturday night that his team's flight had been cancelled, so a last-minute booking forced UMass to play its game early with a running clock.

After they gave up two goals to the Blazers' Tara Kidwell in the first 34 minutes, the Minutewomen stormed back to cut the deficit in half, as freshman Adair Blyler picked up her first collegiate goal at 37:30. But UMass couldn't withstand the pressure of the hosts, as UAB tacked on three second-half scores to pull away.

"The Alabama game was very reminiscent to the Rhode Island game," Rudy said. The Minutewomen stayed close with the Rams in their game on Sept. 6 until the second half, when the offensive floodgates were opened in the 5-0 loss.

Nigh made 10 stops in goal for UMass, and freshman Kristen Rutland registered her first action of the year, making two saves in limited playing time. The Blazers' Lisa Nowoslawski was relatively untested in the crease, as she was forced to make only one save on the afternoon.

The road doesn't get any easier for the Minutewomen during the next couple of weeks, as they have three more tough non-conference opponents to contend with before opening their Atlantic 10 schedule against Xavier and powerhouse Dayton. All Rudy can hope for is that his team overcomes the injury bug and emotional difficulties it has struggled with.

"It's not easy or pleasant," he said. "The people who are tough are going to survive and get through it.

"I hope that's everyone."

There's only one way to go. Up.

As you begin your ascent to the top, remember, it's what you learn along the way that assures your success. At Ernst & Young, we give our recruits total access to the tools they need to gain knowledge and learn more about the marketplace. And because leadership skills are so important, we give them the opportunity to challenge themselves by working with leading companies in leading industries. The result? An atmosphere that's stimulating, innovative and creative. Talk about a place where you can really take off.

FORTUNE® 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

©2002 Ernst & Young LLP

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3693

ACTIVITIES

Montreal Madness Weekends
$89 + 15 security fee complete
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs
10 or more group discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-0076

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Meal plans for sale
lunch/dinner great food central location and cheap prices
549-6202

Cheap Heating oil!
Join The Pioneer Valley Oil Co-operative. Call 545-0865 or come by commuter services, Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 , this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact Campus Fundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigmaalphalambda.org

Searching for E!
www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Volvo 240 DL SDN 160K $600 Runs well CD player, new parts 413-559-4849

1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee Laredo
Air Conditioning
CD Player
Great Condition
Asking Price: $4,800
Contact Sabrina 413-478-6912

1996 Ford Escort LX
63K A/C Alloys great condition
Mike 413-534-8246

1990 Mazda 626LX
Very good condition
$1700/6.0. 549-5240

99 Audi A4 Quattro. Lowered 18-inch wheels and much more. $17,500
413-522-3312

91 Subaru Sedan Automatic
Power window/cruise control
New Transmission
$1400
413-546-2110

1993 Escort Hatchback, red, 5-speed, very good condition $2300 549-4511

CHILD CARE

Babysitters needed: for commuter services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.cshrc.org then click on family services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

EMPLOYMENT

ACTIVISM
Looking for a job that works with your academic schedule? Want a job that means something to you? Call Clean Water Action Today! We are now hiring people with good communication skills to learn basic grassroots organizing. Flexible Schedules. Great Pay. Fun People. Just 10 min. from campus. Call Megan 413-584-9830.

Bartenders wanted. No experience. So Deerfield Bar w/ live music. Call Betsy 665-2301

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed.
$250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

Kitchen assistant wanted Monday-Friday lunch. Free Meal plan. 549-6202

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester.

FOR RENT

Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

Lockers for rent: Cheap! $10 for The year. Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Clean new house $425 plus. No pets/smoking 478-6411

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500./mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

MISCELLANEOUS

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Have you been ripped-off by a retailer? Contact the Student Legal Services office regarding your rights as a consumer. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK!
Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE! Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@suncoast-vacations.com to find out more info!

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs From Florida! Get Group- Go Free!! Springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! WWW.INTER-CAMPUS.COM OR CALL 1-800-327-6013 GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES! CANCUN, JAMAICA, FLORIDA AND BAHAMAS PARTY CRUISE! FIFTEEN YEARS EXPERIENCE! FREE TRIPS FOR CAMPUS REPS!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 3
4	NBN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN InfoChannel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-n-Travel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Outer Limits Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to purchase an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

| | | |

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Trip to Maryland no help for UMass

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Massachusetts field hockey Head Coach Patty Shea has kept the same philosophy since the pre-season for her Minutewomen. Taking on a role as a "player's coach" she has breifly stated many times, "we have to risk making some mistakes to become great."

It is hard to say if the Minutewomen are taking the risk but it is safe to say that they are making mistakes. Over the week-end, UMass ventured on its first road trip of the 2002 season – taking a long bus ride down to College Park, Md. Friday to play in the Terrapin Invitational against a very solid Patriot League squad in American and the No. 1 team in the nation, Maryland.

Maryland	4
UMass	0
American	2
UMass	0

Heading into the Invitational, UMass was 0-3, searching for its first win of the season. The Maroon and White would return to Amherst Sunday night much deeper in the hole that it had dug for itself. The Minutewomen now carry a dismal 0-5 record (0-0 A-10).

In two games at the Invitational, the Minutewomen went scoreless – losing to Maryland, 4-0, and to American, 2-0. The recurring problem of a lackluster offensive attack was more prevalent than ever for UMass.

In the first defeat of the week-end, against Maryland, one stat summed up the difference between a team on the rise and a team looking for any sort of positive identity.

The Terrapins out-shot the Minutewomen by a spectacular 27-1 difference. It was the second time in as many games that UMass was only able to muster up one shot on goal (they were outshot by Boston College 14-1 last Wednesday).

"We get down in the zone and do not shoot the ball," Shea said. "We have to get down there and execute."

The Maryland defense was able to keep the pressure off their young goaltender and let the offense go to work. As a result, Terrapin sophomore goalie Kerry Hearsey posted her third straight shutout.

Similar to a style that Coach Shea is looking for in her players, the Terrapins played a quick, snappy run-and-gun game that spun the Minutewomen in circles.

Maryland Head Coach Missy Meharg has plenty of talent to work with, as she operates with a 17-woman rotation. The constant supply of fresh legs allows her team to flourish by consistently attacking the goal. There is no need to save energy. The result for UMass, a squad with a much smaller bench, was a barrage of shots flying toward its zone.

The Minutewomen were burned especially by Maryland senior All-American Carissa Messimer. She scored her fifth and sixth goals of the season. Her first one that went through the cage was the spark that lit the fire on UMass. She put Maryland on the board four minutes into the game.

The Terrapins continued their stellar play when junior Colleen Barbieri netted one past UMass goaltender Ashley Egland – making the score 2-0.

Egland faced her toughest challenge of this early season and she played it like a pro. In facing 27 shots, she saved 11.

All of Maryland's four goals came off penalty corners, which are the hardest plays to predetermine for a netminder. The Terrapins had the edge in the penalty corners department as Maryland had 15, while UMass had 2.

In the second half of the contest, the Minutewomen were unable to get over the hump and failed to put any pressure on Maryland. The Terrapins scored two goals in the second frame including one from Messimer en route to their 4-0 victory.

"We played well [Friday] and I am very pleased with the tremendous improvement from the Boston College game," said Shea. "Now, we need to focus on minimizing the corner goals that we allow. We had our opportunities early to score, but were unable to capitalize."

Sunday, in the second game of the Invitational, UMass hoped the tenacity deep down inside would emerge. Fumed from their defeat on Friday, the Minutewomen attempted to shutdown the American squad defensively. However, any sort of improvement was absent.

In the first half both teams went scoreless. It wasn't until the 49th minute that either team scored, when American's Melissa Snyder blasted one into the UMass cage – giving American the late lead. The Eagles scored an insurance goal with just 36 seconds remaining and UMass was suddenly out of contention for their first win of the season.

"Today was a very disappointing performance," Shea said. "We had a fair amount of chances, but could not capitalize. American had two scoring opportunities and were able to convert each time."

SOPHOMORE ASHLEY GILBERT

Sophomore Ashley Gilbert and the young penalty corner squad has struggled for opportunities all season.

Alabama slammed

DAILY COLLEGIAN/CVIV CLAUSEN

Adair Blyler (No. 14) of the Minutewomen notched her first career goal, but it was the only one for the Minutewomen as they were outscored 3-0 and 5-1 on their trip to Alabama this weekend.

Minutewomen drop to 0-5 after losing two in Yellowhammer State

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Looking to find relief from what has been a draining start to the season, the Massachusetts women's soccer team traveled to Alabama in search of its first victory of the season.

Two losses later, the Minutewomen (0-5, 0-1 A-10) left the Yellowhammer State frustrated and looking for answers after a road trip that prolonged the team's worst beginning in school history. UMass dropped Friday's UAB Nike Classic match to No. 9 Michigan by a count of 3-0 and could not rebound on Sunday as it was throttled 5-1 by host Alabama-Birmingham.

"We're going through the season from hell," Head Coach Jim Rudy said. "We just have so many other issues that are keeping with us."

"Mentally and psychologically, we're a very vulnerable team," he added.

Prior to the match against the Wolverines, Rudy said that he hoped his team would be competitive, and it appeared UMass would do just that. Despite being outshot 15-1 and surrendering nine corner kicks to Michigan in the first half, the Minutewomen remained unscathed and entered the intermission in a scoreless deadlock.

"The first half, we absorbed a lot of pressure," Rudy said. "They dominated; we were holding on and holding out."

UMass came out of the gates in the second half, and although it continued to be outshot by the Wolverines, Rudy's team still was able to compete with one of the best squads in the nation. Michigan's All-American Abby Crumpton, however, broke the tie in the 87th minute, giving her team a 1-0 lead and negating the Maroon and White's hopes of an upset. Crumpton took what Rudy called a "very difficult ball," catching Minutewoman netminder Kelly Nigh

Turn to SLAMMED, page 7

Cross country makes home debut

Young teams grab second and third

By Reid Davenport
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

This past weekend, both the men's and women's cross country teams endured the oddly hot atmosphere in Amherst during the two teams' only home meet of the season. Despite the humidity, both teams pushed their way toward the finish lines.

The Minutemen ended up placing in second out of three teams competing and the Minutewomen placed third. Junior John Jacobson finished the 4.5-mile course in 24:44, coming in seventh place, while sophomore Andy McCarron was in eighth with a time of 24:56. Junior Mike Ahearn placed 12th in 25:02, freshman Paul Voone finished 14th in 25:13, freshman Jeff Way was 18th in 25:26 and senior Ted Breen finished 20th in 25:37.

"We're a really young team," said sophomore Josh Williams, who placed 16th in the 4.5-mile course. "For a lot of us this is our first year and I think we really have come together. We have a good future as long as we keep pushing each other."

The Minutewomen, despite having multiple runners in the top 20, only managed to place third. In the 3.0-mile race, sophomore Alexis Anzelone placed seventh with a time of 19:13. Senior Julie McGee was eighth in 19:17, senior Elizabeth Mitchell finished ninth in 19:18, freshman Emma Horton ended up 12th in 19:34; junior Tricia Silva finished 15th in 19:40, sophomore Amanda Dahlberg came in 19th in 20:20 and junior Kate Markopoulos was 20th in 20:24.

"Overall we were disappointed with the results," Anzelone said. "But we really worked hard. We're a generally young team and if we are going to win then we are going to have to push ourselves hard."

Other obstacles for the Minutewomen, aside from the lack of experience, included a runner who was too ill to race Saturday and another participant who passed out after a race. However, both the men and women's teams are looking ahead to the Meet of Champions in The Bronx, New York on Sept. 28.

"This week we'll start off with a short relaxing period from this past meet," Williams said. "And then we're going to train hard to prepare ourselves for the Meet of Champions."

Both teams have this weekend off, but are looking ahead to the big meet on Sept. 28.

"We know the week will be rough," said Anzelone. "We are really going to need to support each other and train hard if we're going to do well at the Meet of Champions."

DAILY COLLEGIAN/CVIV CLAUSEN

The Massachusetts cross country teams were forced to endure the humidity in their only home meet of the fall

WRAP UP OF WORC[illegible] SKATEFEST ARTS PAGE 5.

WAR AND PEACE. ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ELEVEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 9.18.02

Kincaid brings Mr. Potter to the Rand Theater

By Laura Kyser
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Author Jamaica Kincaid filled the Fine Arts Center Rand Theater with a diverse group of community members for her presentation on Wednesday, Sept. 17, at 4:30 p.m.

Professors, students, Amherst residents, and even a cooing baby squeezed into the theater to hear Kincaid read from her newest book, Mr. Potter.

Kincaid said her new book has been called "daring" by critics, although she thinks differently.

"It must seem daring to start a book with 'And,'" she said. In writing, "conjunctions are considered beneath even peasants," she said.

The repetition of the word "and," drove reviewers to tear their hair out, she said, "which is a pleasing thing to think about."

The audience laughed easily at her commentary.

With a red sweater tied around her waist over bouncy red plaid bottoms, Kincaid spoke in a light voice about her work.

"I always think no one ever reads what I write," she said. "At the time I'm writing something, I always think it's a mistake."

"It's a very good thing to think you're wrong because so many people think they're right," Kincaid said. "Maybe if you think you're wrong, you'll be right."

Kincaid read from her book with a matter-of-fact rhythm that matched her prose, with a slightly British accent.

Kincaid was born in the small island nation Antigua, the setting and subject of her story, "A Small Place."

Antigua was a British colony until 1967, two years after Kincaid left her mother, stepfather, and three brothers for the United States. She left the island at seventeen and worked as an au pair in Westchester, New York.

Kincaid studied photography at the New York School for Social Research. She also studied at Franconia College in New Hampshire.

Kincaid first wrote for The New Yorker in 1976.

She is the author of The Autobiography of My Mother, printed in 1996, and the National Book Award nominee My Brother. She has also written Talk Stories, Lucy, Annie John, At the Bottom of the River, and My Garden.

Kincaid won France's Femina Prize in 2000. She also won the 1992 Lila Wallace-Reader's Digest Fund's writer award.

In 1997, Kincaid won the Anisfield Wolf Book Award for the diversity her work represents.

Kincaid writes frequently about being a woman and about the devastation of colonialism, which she experienced first-hand in Antigua.

Kincaid married Allen Shawn, the son of her editor, William Shawn, and had two children.

She and Allen Shawn both work as professors at Bennington College in Vermont.

Kincaid also teaches creative writing at Harvard University.

The Department of English Troy Lecture Series and the Lois Toko Fund sponsored Kincaid's visit, along with the English Department's Master in Fine Arts Visiting Writers Series.

The Troy Lecture Series sponsors the visits of speakers who are known for literature addressing civic responsibilities. Kincaid's literature has addressed racism, sexist oppression, and the conflicts between the developed nations and in Third World countries.

Information from www.emory.edu/ENGLISH/Bahri/Kincaid.html was used in this article.

DAILY COLLEGIAN/CVIV CLAUSEN

Author Jamaica Kincaid spoke about her new book to gather students and community members in Rand Theater yesterday evening.

Rumsfeld addresses security at UN

COURTESY OF DEFENSELINK.MIL

The Honorable Donald H. Rumsfeld answers questions at a Pentagon press briefing.

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

U.S. Secretary of Defense Donald H. Rumsfeld conducted a press briefing in Washington Monday concerning diplomatic relations with Iraq. Marine Corps Gen. Peter Pace, Vice Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, joined Secretary Rumsfeld at the briefing.

According to Rumsfeld, U.S. President George W. Bush addressed the United Nations last week asking that they consider "the new national security environment" as the U.N. evaluates its diplomatic policies toward Iraq. Under Saddam Hussein's leadership, Iraq has refused to comply with various U.N. resolutions for over a decade.

"Iraq, of course, has refused to remove or destroy its weapons of mass destruction and long-range missiles," Rumsfeld said.

Rumsfeld appealed to members of the anti-terrorism coalition within the U.N. for political support.

"The United States since Sept. 11 of last year has crafted a coalition of some 90 countries, close to half the countries in the world, in the global war on terrorism," Rumsfeld said. "And you'll recall I've talked about the fact that it's like an iceberg in that a great deal of what's taking place in the world is below the surface of the sea."

According to Rumsfeld, he will testify before the Armed Services Committees in both the House and Senate concerning the situation in Iraq, but he won't be there for an intelligence briefing. However, intelligence committees will be reviewing documents starting this week.

"What will be taking place in the next few weeks in the Congress will be attempting to connect the dots before a tragedy happens, not after a tragedy happens," Rumsfeld said.

Rumsfeld reiterated that the United States is still deciding what to do about the situation in Iraq; the President is not necessarily gearing up for an invasion.

"The President has not decided to do anything with respect to Iraq, except to make the case to the Congress and to make the case to the United Nations that the United Nations resolutions are being defied and have the effect of damaging that institution's relevance and standing in the world, and that they ought to address that," Rumsfeld said.

Although Iraq has since notified the U.N. that they will allow weapons Inspectors back into the country, the Bush administration is continuing to push for a Security Council resolution that includes military action.

According to U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan at a press briefing yesterday, the letter Iraq foreign minister Naji Sabri presented to the United Nations is a "beginning, not an end."

SGA discusses questions of student safety on campus

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Security has topped the list of priorities for the Student Government Association after this past Monday night's sexual assault in Chadbourne Dormitory.

In light of recent cuts in security on campus, members of the SGA stressed the need for action to be taken. Speaker Dan Saunders explained that the SGA is working in correlation with the Administration and Campus Police in an effort to figure out security flaws on campus and where to begin to fix them.

"I think it's blatant that the SGA condemns this act and if others think differently...I won't even finish my sentence," Saunders said. "Our past administration did the best they could, at least I like to think they did, and we got pounded in relation to last year's assaults on campus and how the administration dealt with them. I'm confident that this administration will react differently and in a more physical manner."

Members of the SGA Executive Cabinet have also stressed the need for better security on campus. President David Carr explained prior to the attacks that increasing security within campus dormitories to be one of his top priorities as president.

"I feel that we need to do something about getting security into dorms," Carr said. "The other days, I just walked into a dorm without being [asked for identification] while the individual on security duty and their advisor watched me just walk in. There is something wrong with that."

Saunders explained that the SGA has been working closely with Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor and that she is more than willing to work on new security efforts. Saunders continued by explaining that where to start and what students want to see happen is now the question.

"We need public and private safety. Someone entered a private area of ours and that is not something that should ever happen," Saunders said. "The first thing we need to do is figure out what we want from security and our officers, and second, what we're willing to give for that."

Issues surrounding more surveillance cameras, increased escort service and sound devices for those who feel the need to carry one were a few ideas suggested. However, Saunders stressed that in order to see change, the student body has to come forward and vote on referendum questions involving possible security changes, or call the SGA and give their opinions.

"We have to ask ourselves if we want cameras and sacrifice our liberties, or do we want sound devices to carry," Saunders said. "We as a campus need to come together and decide what liberties we are or are not willing to give up. Students should be concerned and make an effort to come and vote or make a phone call."

The SGA explained that its next move towards security is making students aware and having them take responsibility by walking in pairs and notifying others of where they are going. Saunders further explained that he hoped an open forum on safety and student expectations would be in the future as well safety fliers on campus.

"Instead of pointing fingers and blaming the administration, we need to understand that this awful act happened and what are we going to do to prevent it from happening again," Saunders said. "Open forums and fliers that say 'Be Safe' might be the start. It's up to the students now to let us know what level they expect us to go with security."

Aside from dealing with security on campus, members of the SGA are gearing up for Senate elections, which will take place Sept. 25 and 26. Nomination papers for the Senate elections are due in the SGA office by 5:00 p.m. today.

"We have 74 seats open in the Senate and over 60 people have taken papers out," Saunders said. "There is a contested seat in a lot of areas. Southwest is slacking but we're hoping to change that tomorrow, but we're working on all cylinders up in the office."

Saunders continued by explaining that areas in the Senate such as the Asian, Latino, African and Native American Caucus (ALANA) are looking to have filled up their seats in the Senate and are looking to play an active role this year.

"A bunch of people took out forms from the ALANA Caucus so they should be up and running well, which we really need," Saunders said. "We set ourselves up for a great, great year and now we need to have a great, great year."

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Wednesday

A protest of the dismantling of minority support programs will be held at noon on the Student Union steps.

A Five Colleges Student Alliance for Israel meeting will be held at Hillel House at 8:00 p.m. New students are welcome

The Radical Student Union will be presenting a second showing of Paying the Price: Killing the Children of Iraq in room 803 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m

The Hillel House courtyard will be open to students to help build the sukkah. The event starts at 3:30 p.m. and all are welcome to come help build and design the sukkah.

Delta Xi Phi multicultural society will be holding a second information session at 7:30 p.m. in room 811 of the Campus Center.

Kolot auditions will be held at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House recreation room.

Those interested should come with a one-minute song of their choice to perform a capella.

Thursday

A Jewish drama information session will be held at Hillel House at 7:00 p.m.

The Jewish Student Union General Meeting will be held at the Campus Center at 8:00 p.m. All those interested in helping to plan parties and events are invited to attend and refreshments will be served.

Friday

Reform and conservative Erev Sukkot services will be held at 6 p.m. at Hillel House, followed by dinner at 7:15 p.m. Dinner will be at no extra charge for UMass students.

A Shabbat dinner for Jewish students who live off campus will be held at 6:30 p.m. at Jillian and Nellie's house.

Events of the week

Wednesday

A protest of the dismantling of minority support programs will be held at noon on the Student Union steps.

Friday

The Campus Activities office will showcase comedian Eric Nieves. The New York comic has appeared on shows like BET's "Comic View" and "Showtime at the Apollo" and will be performing at 8 p.m. in room 1109 of the Campus Center.

Monday

Kehilat Hillel Haazinu morning service will be held at 8 a.m. at Hillel House.

The Campus Activities office will showcase comedian Eric Nieves. The New York comic has appeared on shows like BET's "Comic View" and "Showtime at the Apollo" and will be performing at 8 p.m. in room 1109 of the Campus Center.

Monday

Beginning on September 23, the UMass Department of Germanic Languages will be presenting a set of films under the heading "Shadows and Sojourners." The set of 15 films is themed around the images of Jews and anti-fascism in East German film. The presentations will run through December 15 and will attract a number of speakers and lecturers.

The Stonewall Center will facilitate the Western Massachusetts premiere of the controversial documentary FRED. The film will be shown at 7 p.m. in room 227 of Herter Hall. Admission is free.

Kehilat Hillel Haazinu morning service will be held at 8 a.m. at Hillel House.

Tuesday

The Stonewall Center welcomes ALANA students and allies to its fourth annual barbecue event from 4:30-6:30 p.m. at the Stonewall Center patio.

An informal question and answer session about a free trip to Israel will be held at 7 p.m. at Hillel House.

Compiled by Rahwa Asmerom

Saturday

A Sukkot service will be held at Hillel House at 10:30 a.m. followed by a light lunch.

Sunday

The UMass Tzedek Social Justice initiative will be sponsoring an apple picking and pie-baking event at Hillel House at 1 p.m. The pies will be donated to the Amherst Survival Center. Drivers are needed.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1930. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Any group with activities applicable to the Diversity Calendar should send notice of its events to the News desk at The Daily Collegian via thedailycollegian@yahoo.com by noon every Tuesday. Press releases can be sent via email or to the newsroom, Attn: Diversity/News.

Participating merchants:

A.J. Hasting, Inc.
Alfredo's Photographic Gallery
Always in Bloom
Amber Waves
Amherst Computer Works, Inc.
Amherst Optical Shoppe, Inc.
Atticus Bookshop
Bananarama
Bart's Ice Cream
Bertucci's
Bistro 63 Monkey Bar & Grille
Black Sheep
Blue Sky
Copy Cat Print Shop
The Creative Needle
Details
Fiber Arts Center
Footwear Den
For the Record

Get FREE Stuff: Tastes, and Sample Sizes
DRAWING: September 19th

Celebrate Downtown Amherst !

Welcome Students!

AMHERST AREA Chamber of Commerce

Wednesday, September 18

3:00 - 6:30 PM

Downtown Amherst
Free Stuff!
Chance to win:
$500 Downtown Shopping Spree
$225 OCMP Meal Ticket

Sponsored by:
PeoplesBank
Amherst Chamber of Commerce

Participating merchants:

Hair East
Henion Bakery
Hip Hop Fashion
Holeshot Tattoo
Jeffrey Amherst Bookstore
Jungle Red Salon
Knowles Flower Shop
La Veracruzana
Levels
Lots for Littles
The Mercantile
Mobil Station
Peter Pan Bus Line
Regency Hair Stylists
Silverscape Designs
SouperBowl
STA Travel
Starbucks Coffee
Subway

Sign up at as many merchants as you wish, more entries = more chances to win

DELTA XI PHI
Multi-Cultural Sorority, Inc.
invites you to our
INFORMATION SESSIONS
Tues. 9/17 & Wed, 9/18 at 7:30pm
Campus Center 811
www.deltaxiphi.com

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

UMPD sponsors RAD programs for women

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts Police department will hold Rape Aggression Defense (RAD) classes for women of the community, free of charge, for the fifth year in a row.

Registration for the classes will be held on Sept. 19 and 20 at the UMass Police Station from 6 to 9:30 p.m. each night. The course consists of four classes totaling 14 hours. For students to finish the program they must attend all four classes. If the class does not fill, it then opens up to local women not affiliated with the University. In years past the class has been capped at 20 students, but Detective Kidwell of the UMPD may allow this fall's course to expand to 25 due to the "high demand." Registration is first come, first served.

Kidwell has been an instructor with RAD since 1993, and is certified to teach new trainers.

The RAD program is designed, according to its Web site, to teach women about "awareness, prevention, risk reduction and avoidance while progressing into the basics of hands-on-hands defense training." Its objective is to "develop and enhance the options of self-defense, so they may become viable considerations to the woman who is attacked."

The first night is a classroom discussion focused on strategies to protect one's self, and avoid dangerous situations. According to Kidwell this includes everything from how to behave at the mall, to safety within your own home, including what you can do to windows and your car to improve their protective capabilities.

The second and third nights are entirely physical work where students learn physical defense strategies. The fourth and final night of the course is when students take part in an attack simulation. Two instructors lead the students through drills where they simulate an attack.

"During the last class one of the male instructors is dressed in head-to-toe padding to simulate an attack, and do it 100 percent," said Kidwell.

The male instructor who becomes the attacker is specifically trained and cannot be harmed. Students are instructed to use all that they have learned, and not worry about injuring the padded instructor.

"They do it 100 percent, whereas in activities like martial arts the fighting is static," said Kidwell. "Students all wear helmets, knee and elbow pads."

Towns such as Amherst and Belchertown, as well as three of the other four colleges in the Five-College area offer the RAD class. (Smith does not offer the RAD program to students.) UMass's is one of the only programs that is offered for free, something that has caused problems for the UMPD's budget.

"It's an expensive program to run," said Kidwell. She explained that instructors must attend annual training to maintain their certification. The cost to certify a single instructor runs close to $2,000. This year is the first year that the UMPD has been able to pay for two of its instructors to be re-certified, while the other two instructors within the department pay for their certification out of their own pockets. Before this year, each instructor was responsible for his or her own fees. According to Kidwell, part of the expense of financing the re-certifications is that each year the annual training is held in a different part of the country, since RAD is a national program. Last year's training was held in Chicago. UMPD is operating the RAD program despite it not being in this year's budget. Budget cuts to the department have totaled close to $7,000.

Kidwell says that the department will just "try and make ends meet." To help the RAD program she has tried grants, and asked for alumni support.

However, for RAD students, taking the class at UMass holds additional benefits. Once a woman completes the course, she is given a manual that becomes her lifetime membership certificate. If she later feels the need to retake the course, or even just part of the course, she is able to do so at any RAD facility within the country for free. Other members usually pay the original course fees, but UMass RAD students are given the course and membership entirely free because the UMPD and their officers absorb the instructor's training and course fees.

"It's awesome for students who don't live here in Massachusetts. They can go to the Web site and learn that the course is offered in their home town and take it again for free," said Kidwell.

The RAD program has also been extended to a Children's Defense program, which is popular among Family Housing's children.

Kids aged five to 11 of both sexes can enroll in the class, also done by the UMPD, to work on "personal empowerment and safety."

"They learn to kick, punch. They are vulnerable," said Kidwell.

The children's course is comprised of five classes, each only an hour and a half long. The children are separated into two groups, ages five to seven and eight to 11. The UMPD borrows a PVTA van and picks the children up from Family Housing, dropping them back off after class. Family Housing Director Sally Mieski has also found funds within the Family Housing budget to give the children snacks and t-shirts when they complete the class.

RAD classes are open to all children in the UMass community at varying times during the year, and like the adult version, are free.

Those interested in RAD courses should contact Detective Kidwell at the UMPD RAD office at 545-9593. Classes for men are available upon request.

EDITED BY LUCY KLIGAN

And you thought Morrill used to be confusing.

Construction in the Morrill throughway, started at the beginning of the week, causes students to take unplanned detour

Wanna go to the Biggest Party of the Year?

Pick AT&T Long Distance and you could win a trip to the MTV Studios.

AT&T College Communications
your choice. your world. your voice.

MUSIC TELEVISION®

1 877 COLLEGE

AT&T

Get a FREE MUSIC CD of your choice when you select AT&T.

NO CALL OR PURCHASE NECESSARY TO ENTER OR WIN. ELIGIBILITY: Open to legal residents of the 48 United States, District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands who are 18 or older as of 9/1/02. Void in Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands, Hawaii, Alaska, and where otherwise prohibited by law. Two Ways to Participate: A.) To enter by signing up for AT&T Long Distance, AT&T One Rate® 7¢ Plus Plan and/or the AT&T AnyHour International Savings Plan: Call 1-877-COLLEGE between 12:00:00AM Eastern Time ("ET") on 9/1/02 and 11:59:59PM ET on 10/31/02 (hereafter referred to as the "Promotion Period") and provide the required information to the operator or IVR prompt to receive one entry into the sweepstakes. Limit one entry per household for each plan. B.) To enter by mail: Hand print your name, complete address, zip code, age, daytime telephone number, email address, college or university name, school status (pr/h) (if applicable), and the words "AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion" on a plain 3"x 5" paper and mail it in a hand addressed #10 envelope with first class postage to: "AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion", P.O. Box 13084, Bridgeport, CT 06673-3084. Limit three entries per person and per household for the duration of the Promotion Period. Prizes/Odds: (1) Grand Prize: 4 days/3 night trip for winner and (3) guests to the MTV New Year's Eve Party in New York City on 12/30/02-1/2/03 consisting of round trip coach air transportation from nearest major airport in the U.S. to winner's residence, suite hotel accommodations for (4), ground transportation (to/from hotel and the airport), and a total of $1,000 spending money (Approximate Retail Value "ARV"=$5,000). Actual value of prize may vary depending on winner's city of departure. Insurance and all applicable federal, state and local taxes on receipt and use of prize, if any, and any expenses not specified above are the sole responsibility of winner. A random drawing will be conducted on or about 11/14/02 from among all eligible entries received. Odds of winning the Grand Prize will depend on the total number of eligible entries received. Subject to the Official Rules available by visiting http://www.att.com/cc/faqs/rules or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope by 11/1/02 to: AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion, PO Box 13106, Bridgeport, CT 06673-3106. Sponsor: AT&T, 340 Mt. Kemble, Morristown, NJ 07960 Promoter: DVC Group, Inc., Morristown, NJ 07960 CD OFFER: Consumers who have signed up for the AT&T Long Distance, AT&T One Rate® 7¢ Plus Plan and/or the AT&T AnyHour International Saving Plan during the promotion period, in addition to being entered into the Sweepstakes will be sent a Sony online gift certificate which may be redeemed at www.sonycertificates.com toward a select CD from the Sony Music "Hot New Releases" Catalog (Approximate Retail Value "ARV"=$15), while supplies last. The Sony online gift certificate will be included in the AT&T fulfillment package. Terms, conditions, and restrictions may apply to the use of the online certificate and P.N. Limit one CD per person, e-mail address, immediate family member, or household. Please allow 6-8 weeks after redemption for delivery.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Speak up, UMass

Protect our campus

Two weeks into the school year, and we are already being terrorized. Yesterday's news of a rape in Chadbourne should have the whole campus worried. Male or female, we all have a responsibility to look out for one another. We are the ultimate community of over 20,000 people.

So, as a community we should do everything in our power to be proactive, to try and stop these assaults before they go any further. But what can we do? This is the challenge to you the students, faculty, staff and visitors.

Speak out.

In short, you know what doesn't look right. If something makes you wary, then it is probably worrying someone else. Peculiar faces, odd mannerisms. With several thousand on-campus residents, this is not at all a clearly defined thing. But as residents and classmates, you start to recognize faces and can pick out who fits and who doesn't.

Follow well-marked and well-lit paths. While Monday morning's assault was in a residence hall, past experience tells us to be cautious when traversing the campus. It is even more difficult now. With construction changing the routes of once-familiar walks and altering the course of travel, new dark corners, poorly lit sidewalks and streets, and buildings that you may or may not have traveled through, are part of the daily routine.

Take the extra five minutes necessary to get to a road with streetlights. If you can take a companion, do so. While a motorized escort service was axed in last year's budget cuts, calling 5-2123 will still provide you with a walking escort if need be. Take advantage of these services.

In the residence halls extra steps need to be taken. We need to become responsible neighbors. As a campus we should be proactive. Last year we saw five assaults, this year we have heard of the first. Let's not add to the total. Propped and unlocked doors are just a few areas where we can cause change. By "coining" doors – jamming the latches with pennies or other thin objects – security is cut off. Some buildings have as many as seven or eight ground level entrances. It is impossible to monitor them all, which is why they are locked from the outside. By propping them open, even if it is just to step outside and smoke a cigarette, an unguarded way to get into buildings has been established.

"Piggy-backing," or letting people follow you into a building, can be equally dangerous. Obviously if you recognize the people as friends or residents then the concern is less; however, as responsible residents it is our place to avoid inviting the masses into our homes. I doubt any of us would let the group of people walking down our hometown streets follow us in our front doors. The same should translate to our housing here.

Call the police. They know what to do, they are trained to do it, and they can act faster than any Resident Assistant or security receptionist. This is a big problem that we should be doing everything we can to stop dead in its tracks.

It is a sad thing that we keep seeing the atrocities of rape and sexual assault on campus. It is sickening to think that it could be the person down the hall, the student who you see in your morning lectures or your co-worker at your part-time job. At the same time, it is necessary to take extra steps, be responsible, and not to assume that everything will go away.

It happened before and it has happened again. There is little we can do to change the regrettable truths of the past, but hopefully we can prevent them from blemishing our future.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Laboring for the truth

I count myself among a fortunate few college students. I've been lucky enough to enjoy the job I've had throughout my college career. While retail work is obviously not the most enviable task in the world, as a four-year veteran, I can say that the work definitely has its challenges, as well as its rewards. In my case, the rewards are a discount on clothing, an unbelievable boss, and incredible flexibility with my schedule. (What other job allows you to take days off in the middle of the week without a problem?)

The downsides are obvious: crappy pay, working a lot of nights, weekends, and holidays (there is a price to that flexibility), screaming children, and rude customers. Until recently, I've never had aggressive people in my store (aside from one fight that broke out between two customers a few Christmases ago). The most a person has ever been upset about is the price of an item, or more likely, that the sweater which they've worn 4000 times is starting to unravel, and they don't know why we won't take it back. Even at their most irate, though, customers have never taken to vandalism and public protest. (I must preface this next part by saying I was not present for these events, but have consulted my boss for verification of what fellow employees relayed to me.)

Monday evening some signs were discovered attached to the windows of my store. They were pieces of paper with writing bashing our company, insulting both our employees, as well as our customers. The signs were promptly removed, but did require the involvement of mall security and our district manager.

What exactly were the signs claiming? It was nothing more than the standard fare that clothing stores receive: signs that berate all of those affiliated with the company for supposed "sweatshop" practices. With the protest-happy campus of "Berkeley-East" as my readership, I figured I'd set a few things straight about such accusations.

There's nothing glorious about how many products that we use are made. Most people would never want to see the kitchen of their favorite restaurant, let alone the factories where their household goods are created. It is true that the process of making clothes is outsourced to other countries where labor is cheaper; it helps to keep the cost of the items down. I don't see crowds lining up to pay people $6.75 an hour so that each of their T-shirts will cost $500. As thus, the labor is done in third world countries where both the labor and the cost of living is cheaper.

With the protest-happy campus of "Berkeley-East" as my readership, I figured I'd set a few things straight...

REGAN MCKENDRY

Activists love to claim that this is exploitation of foreign workers, enslaving them rather than employing them. It may come as a shock to these protesters, but the vast majority of those employed by so called "sweatshops" are more than just happy...they're appreciative of the money, of the work. Without companies having factories in these third world countries, many of their employees would have no means of an income at all. Some money, no matter how little, is better than no money.

Another forgotten aspect is this nation's history. Before the rise of the great American society, this land was filled with numerous factories and other hard labor jobs. A number of Bay State cities made their claim to fame through their factories and products: Holyoke with its paper, Haverhill with its shoes, Lawrence and Lowell with their textile mills. A century and a half ago, the labor conditions were less than stellar, the hours were long, and the pay was sub-standard. Yet that is part of the development process. As societies grow and make the change from an agrarian culture to an industrial one, a side effect is large amounts of unskilled labor positions that must be filled by people who, having grown up as farmers, must then change almost instantaneously to factory laborers. These countries that contain the current sweatshops are currently in a phase similar to what the United States experienced in the late 19th and early 20th century.

Getting back to the protests though, I have to ask what these irate people expect to accomplish. As an employee of a large clothing retailer that is often a target of left-wing extremists, I know what really goes on. Who would you be more likely to believe anyways: an employee with access to the information or some wacko hippie spewing out meaningless dribble? The customers feel the same way. They view the protestors simply as noisy obstacles in their way to the merchandise they want to purchase. How do these people earn a living, if all they do is spend their days harassing innocent people and writing angry letters of complaint anyway? Do they even have jobs?

Seriously though, protestors seemed to have missed a very simple point. The true way to hurt a company is simply to not give them your money. If you disagree with the Walt Disney Company's views towards homosexuality, then don't vacation at the Magic Kingdom. If where Shell gets its petroleum from makes your blood boil, use another brand of gasoline. And if a clothing store, whether it's Abercrombie and Fitch or Wal-Mart, makes their clothes in a manner that you deem unacceptable, then get the materials together and make your own. Hey, at least it will give you something to do with your time.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

TODAY IS THE LAST DAY FOR COLUMN APPLICATIONS

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Caitlin McCarthy's column from last Friday, "Is it really so much to ask?" First of all, I want to thank you, Caitlin, for sharing your thoughts with the entire UMass community.

This past year has been a difficult time for all of us and although I don't think that any of us will ever be the same, it does appear that we are, in fact, on the road to recovery. I did want to clarify a few things, though, and before I do, I would like you to know from what perspective I am approaching this.

Like you, I am from New Jersey (only about 20 minutes from the city as well) and I, too, was shocked by the events of 9/11, as I'm sure we all were. I was in bed when the first plane hit and CNN, acting as my alarm clock, alerted me to the news. I still don't know how to explain my reaction. It was raw and visceral. I felt angry, confused, traumatized. These acts were perpetrated against all of us, but I remember feeling that these acts had personally offended me. New York is the city of my birth, my hometown; I had taken photographs with some relatives from Israel in front of the towers just a few weeks before. I thought, "Someone had the audacity to attack my country, my city, my home?" I remember praying that survivors would be found and patiently waiting for the day when the streets ran with the blood of the people who had plotted it.

How do I feel today? Pretty much the same as I did on September 12 of last year. I've been in mourning for the last 370 days. But with the mourning comes a renewed sense of importance.

I don't want you to think that because the vigil last week was not as heavily attended as you would like, or that in all the passersby that you noticed, you only saw "maybe five patriotic shirts," that America has stopped caring. I don't need a T-shirt with an embossed picture of firemen raising a flag over Ground Zero to describe how I feel about this country. I'm happy to hear that your father missed his interview at the World Trade Center. Just like you, I know people who were headed there and who work there. Some of those people eventually got out; others never did (and while

I mention the Twin Towers, I don't want anyone to think that I intend to deflect attention from those who died at the Pentagon or on any of the planes). I mourn all loss of life, regardless of whether it came from New York or New Jersey or Massachusetts or some of the 80 other countries that lost people.

Looking back on those photographs just a short while ago, the towers now stand out like ghosts. What I do know now, that none of us knew last year, was that these people would be America's very first casualties of war in this nation's newest conflict.

Surely we have to remember the pain that we went through that day and the many families that were destroyed because of it, but something much more powerful emerged just as we were at our weakest. On September 11, 2002, I woke up and went to classes and didn't see people acting like nothing had happened. I saw the flags at Haigis flying at half-staff, students and faculty walking around with heads held high. They weren't proud of the attacks; they were very much aware of the events of one year ago and were proving not only to themselves, but to everyone, that we are stronger, wiser, and more capable now than we thought we were in our darkest hours.

I didn't attend the ceremonies last week. What did I do instead? I decided that that day had to be about more than simply looking back, vowing "we will never forget." It had to be about looking forward, as well. I went for a run around the campus, I donated some money to one of my favorite charities, I lit a candle in memoriam, and I said a prayer. I went to my classes and went to work and tried my very best because our perseverance and our success in the face of such great adversity is the very minimum that we owe to all those who died that day.

Michael Levin
UMass student

Defenders on the defense

As I sit at the Army ROTC recruitment table, I worry about our future. Ours, in the sense of our nation's. September is usually one of our biggest months in the program. We have some of the year's more exciting lab training like rappelling and helicopter trips to Westover AFB for FLRCs (Field Leadership Reaction Courses for those not in on the Army lingo) in an attempt to clue in any newcomers (MS1s) and welcome back our returnees with a high-speed kick off. Students passing by after classes are over would always stop by with a few questions, and we would even receive a few enrollments each day. With my hours spent at the table so far this semester, I see interest dwindling. If I do want to see active recruitment, however, I need look no further than the "world peace" group at the table across from us. Funny, as a cadet, as a soldier, I thought I already was seated at the world peace table.

World peace is a wonderful idea. The favorite beauty pageant answer of all-time, in fact. And, apparently, at this school, an idea more highly regarded than that of actually working towards it, as those at my table work toward that goal. Call me a pessimist, or whatever you will, but in reality there has never been a war, battle, or international dispute solved by signing petitions. I see my fellow students look over at the men and women in uniform on one side and scatter to the world peace side opposite us, to sign their name to the list, fulfilled in their hearts by their good deed for the day, and go along their merry way after contributing to their country's good will.

LINDSEY ELDER

My worry about the delusion of my fellow students, who think that things just go away on their own, is not half as upsetting as the treatment some of our cadets and service members receive, treated as though we were the enemy. Not too long ago it was the draft-dodgers who were seen as lacking credibility; now, however, it appears that those who step up are considered questionable. I know how easy it is to blame everything on the government, the military, or distant nations for things that make our society more difficult to deal with. But, always consider that no decision is as easy as it seems. As a UMass student it is hard enough to decide what classes to take, or whether it's a Wings night or a calzone night. Consider how hard it is to make decisions on the fate of the nation.

September 11 has come and gone, and yes I got a few more smiles than usual as I walked through campus this past Wednesday in my uniform for lab. However it still disappoints me to be looked at as the enemy as I pass by small "peace rallies" scattered here and there. For a while the image of the soldier reclaimed its rightful glory, following the event of national tragedy and in the aftermath of rebuilding and protection missions. Now, however, the perception is going right back to the way it was before on this campus and its brethren schools; of we being the ones looking for trouble and only making things worse. We do not make problems; we solve them. We do not seek out recourse; we just act accordingly.

I remember one year ago I was not the enemy; I was the answer. People that I had never met before, but that recognized me from around campus, asked me in a panic how the draft worked and if they could be taken away. Today, however, my best friend who is a fellow Cadet has received death threats again this year from fellow students, and anti-military graffiti on her building has become a regular occurrence. People that have nothing more to worry about than a rainy day take the time to harass someone that took an oath to give her life to serve in protection of their rights, freedoms, and safety if necessary.

So what's my point, you ask? How does this affect you? I am not writing this as a plea for everyone to do their part in the service; it's a lifestyle and choice not meant for everyone. I'm not saying that my friends and I need a pat on the back for doing our part. I already have more pride in what my friends and I do than I could ever have without being thanked. A wise man once told me, "those who are good with excuses are seldom good with anything else," and I think of my fellow Cadets, in the Army and Air Force programs here at UMass, as well as the hundreds of our students who serve in the National Guard and Reserves, as those who are stepping up to our nations call without making excuses or reasoning what would be in our best interests. What I ask is before you look at those that take action as the cause of the problem, remember that solutions are only reached when something is done. And, although I don't agree that war is always the best course of action, I do agree with the words of Aristotle that in some cases, "We make war that we may live in peace."

Lindsey Elder is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Skatefest celebrates diverse music and ideologies

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN STAFF

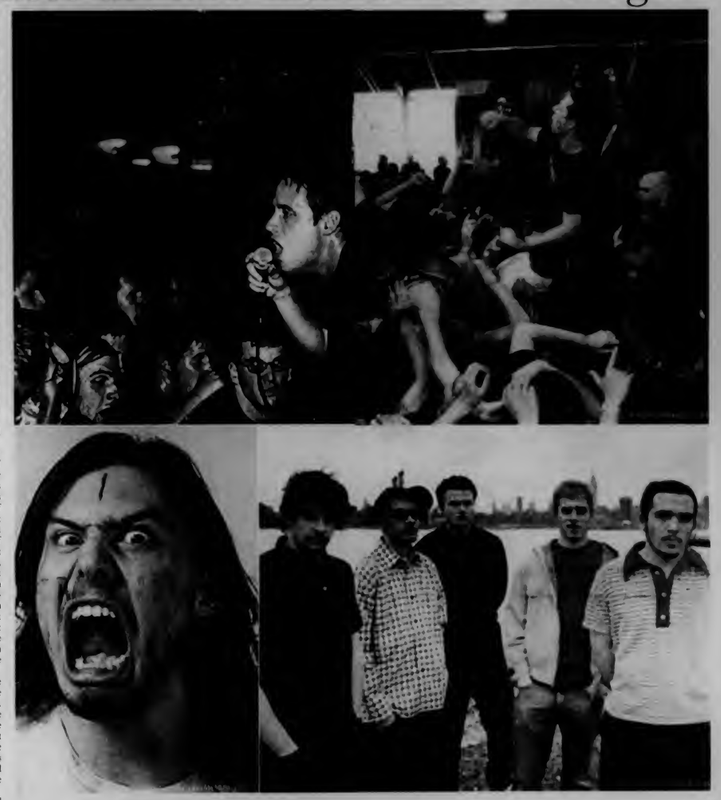
SKATEFEST
Palladium
Sept. 13-15

WORCESTER – The fifth annual SkateFest returned to the Palladium in Worcester this weekend to celebrate the different music and ideologies that go along with the skating lifestyle. With 60 of the year's hottest hardcore, punk, and hip-hop acts rotating between two stages, SkateFest 2002 has evolved into an event that rivals the Vans Warped Tour.

The performance kicked off Friday night with the Plea For Peace Tour, an ongoing event intended to promote education and awareness through politically conscious music. The New York metalcore outfit Shai Hulud set the show in motion with an intense, adrenaline powered set. A mosh pit was quickly formed as the band charged through crowd favorites, "This Wake I Myself Have Stirred" and "Love Is the Fall of Every Man." Shai Hulud is well known for their complex yet focused style, intelligent lyrics, and brutal yet melodic sound. Vocalist Geert Van Der Velde shouted out the words while being held up by the crowd. With his insightful lyrics and powerful command of the mic, Van Der Velde is able to identify with his audience in an empathetic, sincere way – an ability that surpasses that of today's average angst-filled rocker. By the time the band started to play their famous "Set Your Body Ablaze," the crowd was climbing on top of each other to scream into Van Der Velde's mic. The set ended with a playful rendition of "Linoleum" by punk rockers NOFX, followed by Hulud's own "Solely Concentrating on the Negative Aspects of Life."

Hardcore legends Snapcase took the stage next, giving a passionate performance. Renowned for their message of individuality and self-realization, the five-piece band from Buffalo, N.Y. have been releasing thought-provoking albums for over a decade. The band psyched up the crowd with the energy-filled "Caboose" but then played a limited number of songs off older records. The set was geared toward giving the audience a taste for the new material, as tracks from their upcoming release "End Transmission" dominated the playlist. The newer songs were much darker, filled with discordant guitar riffs and rich, pulsing bass tones that propel the music forward at a slower pace. The new songs were surprisingly well-received by the crowd.

The International Noise Conspiracy (INC) performed next, lightening up the show's atmosphere after back-to-back extreme sets. Led by the charismatic Dennis Lyxzen, best known for his role in the now-terminated Swedish punk band Refused, INC specializes in upbeat rhythms and catchy melodies. After watching the band come out dressed in identical red pants, cutoff black shirts, and matching hairstyles, I decided that there is nothing more entertaining than seeing a band in uniform (provided they are not wearing orange jumpsuits and clown masks). The most intriguing thing about this band is Lyxzen's carefree behavior and quirky stage antics. He sways his hips during songs and prances around the stage, then jumps off the speakers just because he can. With song titles like "Capitalism Stole My Virginity," INC takes over where Refused left off, although this time the revolution is something you can dance to.



Headlining Friday night's Performance was Thursday, the relatively new hardcore act who have rapidly and inexplicably (especially to them) ascended to mainstream status. Throughout the show, it became painfully obvious that much of the audience was here only to see Thursday, and knew nothing about the show's cause or the other bands playing. Despite the crowd's reaction and the band's stellar performance, the songs seemed redundant and boring, while signer Geoff Rickly's emotion seemed forced and contrived. If you haven't been exposed to a lot of hardcore, you might be impressed with Thursday. There isn't anything particularly wrong with them. But when considering the numerous other talents that hardcore has to offer, there isn't anything particularly special about them either.

On Saturday and Sunday the fest continued with an impressive lineup of local and national bands. Boston MC Mr Lif, whose bold, incendiary style has received attention from critics and fans alike, gave a standout performance. Lif performed tracks off his most recent release, a concept album titled Emergency Rations. The premise? Lif has been kidnapped by government agents in the middle of a performance, and is now missing. This idea doesn't seem so far-fetched once Lif begins a lyrical onslaught against U.S. policy, taking on issues like the Florida election scandal, racial profiling, and First Amendment violations. The most notable song Lif performed was "Home of the Brave," a critique on U.S. foreign policy leading up to and following the Sept. 11 attacks.

Boston bands American Nightmare (AN) and The Hope Conspiracy gave the most noteworthy performances. With a sound that returns to the more traditional roots of hardcore and a fierce live show, AN. showed the crowd what hardcore is all about. Meanwhile, The Hope Conspiracy (featuring ex-members of Harvest and Piecemeal) showcased their ability to successfully mix abrasive metal chords with hardcore lyrics.

The bands Bleeding Through and Unearth appeased the metal gods by giv-

Turn to SKATEFEST, page 6

(clockwise from top right) Shai Hulud, Glassjaw, Andrew W. K., and Nathan Gray, lead singer of Boy Sets Fire

Addison Groove Project perfects blend of rhythms

By Jack Eskin
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

THE ADDISON GROOVE PROJECT
Pearl Street Nightclub
Sept. 13

NORTHAMPTON — When it comes to jamming and improvisation, there are a few wrong directions that bands are susceptible to taking. They can either fall into a tedious coma of redundancy by repeating the same rhythms over and over again during the entire show, or they can fall in love with their instruments so much that they actually start to masturbate with them, and become cosmically lost in some baroque, 15-minute nonsense solo that is more tiring than inspiring.

At last Friday's Addison Groove Project concert in Northampton, none of these mistakes were made. To the contrary, every single maneuver the band made was brilliant. The two-hour plus set that the six-piece funk/jazz band played was a perfect blend of balance, spontaneity and energy that kept excitement levels high throughout the entire show.

What was truly amazing about Addison's set is how quickly and continuously they changed their rhythms and sounds, and yet how they were still able to build their sets into a series of climaxes. After breaking out of the gate with the rousing "Beat Me," the band kept changing the focus of their sound through the entire first set. This ranged from the funky wa-wa peddle riffs and the sharp, soulful vocals of lead singer and guitarist Brendan McGinn in the driving rhythm of "Neo-Geo," to the sped-up chiming of keyboardist Rob

Turn to ADDISON, page 6

(CAPTION BEGAN ON) Foregoing the tired trend of performing an encore, the Addison Groove Project ended their performance at Pearl Street on a high note.

Avril Lavigne and the seven dwarfs

Avril Lavigne, the 17-year-old "Punk Princess" from Ontario, has dominated the music scene since the release of her Arista Records album, Let Go, on June 4. Her overplayed "boys suck" anthem, "Complicated," has overcrowded the air waves, and her so-called original style, which consists of a loosened tie, baggy jeans, and large boxer shorts which invade the lower portion of her torso, has enticed guys and has made her a role model for girls. She has topped the charts for weeks upon weeks and she currently possesses the No. 3 spot on the Billboard Hot 100 for her aforementioned single.

Now, let me ask you one question: Why don't Evan Taubenfeld, Mark Spicoluk and Matthew Brann share the credit and the spotlight with Avril?

What's that? Who are those guys, you ask?

Oh yeah, I forgot to mention – that's her band. You know, these boys are the reason why Miss Lavigne is livin' large and having the privilege of seeing her young, pretty face plastered all over "TRL." Without Evan's guitar, Mark's bass and Matthew's drums, there would be nothing "punk" about Lavigne whatsoever, besides her potent desire to dress like a member of the male species.

Let's take a look back to the recent MTV Video Music Awards. Lavigne played at the top of Radio City Music Hall during the pre-show and had the privilege of being mocked by host Jimmy Fallon. As Fallon slapped on a wig and a tie to try his best to look like her, three young boys joined him on stage as they imitated the boys in Lavigne's band.

Turn to AVRIL, page 6

skatefest

continued from page 5

ing separate (but identical sounding) performances, while rising band From Autumn to Ashes played an emotional set that received a tremendous crowd response. Their songs evoked genuine emotion from the crowd, with lyrics based on real situations and music that was completely crushing. The set ended with "Short Stories With Tragic Endings," a song about the singer losing a close friend to suicide and wanting to take his own life to end his pain. Just when the audience was thinking about how From Autumn to Ashes would end its set, Melanie Willis, a friend of the band, gave an ethereal vocal performance, rescuing the audience and the band from the depths of despair.

Featured band Boy Sets Fire stole the show with their high-energy routine. They opened with the song "After the Eulogy," in which singer Nathan Gray, accompanied by fans in the audience, screamed the word "rise" over and over to the beat of the "take action" anthem. With a deeply rooted political consciousness and the urgent need to communicate their views to their audience, Boy Sets Fire launched into their songs with a personal vendetta. Gray openly spoke out against the bombings on Afghanistan, then led the crowd in a sing-along to the infectious "My Life in the Knife Trade," a song about betrayal.

Co-headliners, Glassjaw played a standout performance in which singer Daryl Palumbo captivated the audience with his unique vocal style. The band played songs from their critically acclaimed Everything You Ever Wanted to Know About Silence, as well as from their upcoming album. While the old songs were perfectly executed, the newer songs seemed to lack the emotion Glassjaw is famous for, perhaps due to the constant lineup and label changes the band has endured. After Glassjaw finished performing, a large majority of the audience went home. Leading me to my next point.

Andrew W.K. is one of the best kept secrets in rock and roll. With his strict adherence to his "party hard" philosophy and unending enthusiasm for what he does, Andrew W.K. is one of the most genuine artists out there. Maybe partying is a pointless cause, but it is something Andrew W.K. really believes in. Who cares how ironic it is that Andrew W.K. was put on the Skatefest roster when the show features predominately straight edge bands and fans? Andrew W.K. believes in his ideology of partying to the fullest in the same way Boy Sets Fire believe in rising up against oppression. Andrew W.K. was probably the best way to end a show in which band after band pushed their politics into the crowd. With catchy songs like "It's Time to Party," "Party Hard," and "Party Till You Puke" Andrew W.K. was the perfect end to the fest. Even though you feel like you're listening to songs that some high school kid composed in his basement, you can't help but smiling when you see him up there, pounding on that keyboard and belting out those songs from the bottom of his beer gut. While other bands are busy lobbying to eradicate the two-party system, Andrew W.K. is trying to change the world, one party at a time.

Avril

continued from page 5

COURTESY ARISTA RECORDS

We hate you the way you are: You're trying to be cool, you look like a fool to us/ Tell us/ Why you have to go and make things so complicated?

Does this say anything to you? Are Evan, Mark and Matthew too metaphorically little to be presented as young adults, or too worthless to be allowed to join Lavigne as she accepted her very own award for "Best New Artist?" Yeah, she thanked her "boys," but why didn't they have the chance to come up to say a little something for themselves? Oh, that's right! The title "Avril Lavigne" doesn't include the talented musicians that made her what she is today.

Many might argue that Lavigne is not the only chick in the business who receives more attention than her male band mates. Although that does hold some validity, it doesn't change the fact that her band receives zero recognition. Let's take a look at the band Garbage. Scottish lead singer Shirley Manson is definitely the prettiest part of the band, but her male entourage definitely receives the same amount of musical credit as Manson. Yet, the band is called Garbage, not Shirley Manson. What's the difference though? Does a title really make that much of a difference as to who gets the majority of the credit? I guess it does in Lavigne's case.

So next time you hear one of Lavigne's songs on the radio (which will probably be within the next five minutes), don't turn it off so soon. Listen to everything behind the pretty voice and recognize that there is something more to Lavigne than her boxer shorts sticking out of her oversized pants.

Then turn it off. That part's not that "complicated."

Sumara Marblestone is a Collegian Columnist.

Addison

continued from page 5

Marsicher and the blaring saxophones of Ben Groppe and Dave Adams in a jazzy, illuminating version of "Use Me." They tied the first set together by playing a rocking rendition of the song "Beantown," which featured DJ Caster tearing some funky grooves on the turntables and ended in a rhythmic bang.

By the time the first set had finished, Pearl Street was a sauna. In a venue that small, the air can either make or break a show. If the energy is not there, than the moisture and the heat can be exhausting, but when the excitement levels are high like last Friday, it creates a feeling of warmth and unity in the atmosphere that is irreplaceable.

The band maintained its transitive form by coming out in the second set with a much more space-like and melodic feel in the song "Hang-Ups" that differed from their jazzier first set. This featured the intense thumbing of bassist John Hall whose skill did not take center stage for most of the show, but was truly impressive when it did. The epic reached nearly ten minutes, but eventually the band lost the jam's driving, deep heavy groove. Then, it immediately dove into the upbeat "Juniper," which reintroduced the sweet brass section making it the center of attention. After that transition, Groppe and Adams remained the driving force of Addison for the rest of the night. This pathway was a brilliant one, not only because the two sax players had amazing charisma and were getting down just like the crowd, but also because the beautiful blending of the tenor and alto set and uplifting tone throughout the rest of the concert as they ran through uncanny renditions of "Phrenic," "Peas," and "Breathe."

The band ended their set with a chaotic version of "Pablo's" that culminated in a shredding, passion-filled five-minute tenor sax solo by Ben Groppe that served to be the greatest climax of the night, and ended in a thunderous crash.

Then once it ended, the band made the best decision it had all night, which was not to do an encore. In al the years that I have seen concerts, the Addison Groove Project is the first band to be brave enough to avoid the encore. Encores have become such a staple in live performances that all the spontaneity has been taken out of them, and they have become almost cliche. They can draw away from the climactic feel of the ending that the entire performance has been working towards if they come off dull or uninspired. However, last Friday, after the band had finished, it just walked off stage, and allowed the profound impact of what it had done to sink in with its audience.

Forget free thought and speech.
College would be nothing without free checking.

Everything you need in a checking account.

- Balance your semester budget with Fleet HomeLink℠ Online Banking
- Automatically add to your summer savings with AutoSave
- No annual fee Student Credit Card*
- ATMs and branches located near campus and throughout the northeast

FREE

Fleet

Fleet Student Banking Package offer ends October 15, 2002. At Fleet ... months after you initiate your first bill payment. Thereafter, a monthly fee of $4.95 ... Fleet and Fleet Personal ... or registered marks and Fleet HomeLink is a service mark of Fleet ...

MISSED THE FIRST ARTS & LIVING MEETING? STILL HAVEN'T DECIDED TO COME DOWN TO GET INVOLVED WITH THE ARTS SECTION? WELL, YOU'RE IN LUCK! A SECOND ALL-STAFF ARTS & LIVING MEETING IS SCHEDULED FOR TUES., SEPT. 24 AT 7:30 P.M. IN THE COLLEGIAN OFFICE (CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT).

CREDIT CARDS · OCMP · Delivery EXPRESS

CLASSIC AMERICAN ROADSIDE DINING ...and the home of 2 BURGS for 2 BUCKS

Burgers
Hot Dogs
Chicken
Seafood
Fries
Shakes
Smoothies

Burgers & Dogs

267 RUSSELL ST
ROUTE 9 HADLEY
585-0241

McMurphy's welcomes Live Music

THE GUITAR DUDES every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

GERALD LINGUILLEGIAN

Junior Jeremy Cain won the Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week Award following an eight-tackle, three-sack performance against AIC.

notebook

continued from page 10

of the year and dropped the team to No. 14 in the ESPN/USA Today poll.

Something has to give

When Northeastern hosts Massachusetts this weekend, the A-10's best defense will square off against its best offense. The Huskies (2-0) have started the year with two consecutive shutouts. The last time NU began a season with such dominance was 1935.

Boasting four Atlantic 10 Preseason All-Conference defensive players, Northeastern leads the conference in passing defense (78.5 yards/game), rushing defense (46.5), total defense (125), and turnover margin (plus-2.5). Senior defensive linemen Steve Anzalone leads the way with six tackles for a loss, including two sacks.

UMass will counter with the conference's most potent offense. Led by a strong, young, three-headed running game and transfer quarterback Jeff Krohn, the Minuteman offense is ranked first in the conference in total offense (532 yards/game) and scoring offense (47), second in rushing offense (273) and fourth in passing offense (259).

Northeastern has lost 16 straight to the Maroon and White. The Huskies haven't beaten their in-state rival since a 31-14 win at home on Nov. 19, 1983.

The Huskies are ranked No. 17 in the ESPN/USA Today poll, while UMass is receiving votes.

Can the Spiders hang?

Richmond, which vaulted into the Top 25 with a thrilling win over No. 9 Delaware last weekend, will have to prove its true worth this weekend against No. 7 Furman.

A Division I-AA powerhouse, Furman went 12-3 last year (7-1 Southern Conference), despite stiff in-conference competition from perennial powerhouses Georgia Southern and Appalachian State.

The Paladins are coming off a 57-7 win over Elon that saw them score on their first six possessions. Furman is led by senior quarterback Billy Napier, who completed 80 percent of his passes against the Phoenix and tossed for a career-high four touchdowns.

Richmond has not put up impressive statistics in its first two contests, placing in the bottom four in the A-10 in nearly every category, both offensive and defensive.

The Spiders lead the conference in just one major category, penalty yardage (40.5 yards/game), not exactly something to put the fear of God into their opponents.

Did you know?

Of the 11 teams in the Atlantic 10, there are seven ranked in the ESPN/USA Today Top 25 and three more are receiving votes. The only team with no recognition from the poll is 0-3 New Hampshire.

Northeastern was the only team that never received votes in the 2001 polls. The season ended with Hofstra, Maine, Rhode Island, Villanova, and William & Mary ranked by both the ESPN/USA Today and Sports Network polls.

Former Villanova running back Brian Westbrook was drafted in the third round (91st overall) of the 2002 NFL Draft. It was the highest an Atlantic 10 player had been drafted since Darren Sharper was selected in the second round (60th overall) of the 1997 Draft by the Green Bay Packers.

tennis

continued from page 10

performance in West Point, N.Y. this weekend.

"I didn't think I'd be playing all that great," said Price, who expected some rust from the offseason.

All she did was win the tournament.

Price, who was ranked second in the No. 2 flight, crushed top-seeded Anna Marie Underwood from West Virginia, 6-0, 6-3. Price was simply unstoppable against the favorite, making every shot she wished with few problems.

"I was playing really, really well," Price said. "I wasn't making any mistakes."

She went 4-0 on the weekend, losing just one set throughout the tournament. The Columbia, Mo. native took out Stony Brook's Patricia Gomez (1-6, 6-2, 6-2), Lehigh's Maria Anorga (6-0, 1-0 retired), and Providence's Cheri Lapane (6-1, 6-2) on her way to the championship match.

There was simply no stopping the underclassman from winning the title.

"I was really pumped up," Price said. "I guess I wanted first [place] really bad."

Roommates Edelstein and Price admit to having similar styles of play. Neither likes to wait around volleying for too long.

"I'm aggressive," Edelstein said. "I will go for it. I won't wait for the other person to lose the point."

Price agreed.

"I don't like long rallies," she said. "I like to make the first move."

"It's about being willing to make something happen. Usually the more aggressive player wins."

The strong opening weekend earned both players league honors. Price was named the Atlantic 10 Player of the Week, while Edelstein was named the conference's Rookie of the Week.

Collegian Sports:
Bet the over.

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor

Busch / Busch Light
24 Bottles
$9.99 + dep

Millwaukee's Best
30 Cans
$10.99 + dep

Monday - Saturday
9am - 11pm

333 Russell St Rt. 9
584-8174

$$$$'s for STUDENTS

KELLY SERVICES has Immediate Openings at The Famous Candle Company in South Deerfield.

All shifts available, including PART TIME!!!!
Great benefits include direct deposit, discounts on first quality products, and FLEXIBLE HOURS!!!
These are TEMPORARY, LIGHT INDUSTRIAL POSITIONS scheduled to bring you right through the HOLIDAY SEASON!!!!
SIGN ON BONUSES!!! REFERRAL BONUSES!!!
ATTENDANCE BONUSES!!
Call Now, and Work Tomorrow!!!
(413) 665-8306 Ext. 5231
(413) 586-2925

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
NOW HIRING!!
IF YOU THINK YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES, WE WOULD LIKE TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT JOINING OUR TEAM OF PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS.
WORK IN A SAFE, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT AND EARN THOUSANDS OF $$$$$$'S
18+ - NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
SOUTH HADLEY - 413/532-3621

THE ROAD TO RETIREMENT MAY SEEM SMOOTH, BUT IT'S LITTERED WITH TOLLS.

Fees. Charges. Hidden costs. Over time these things can erode the retirement savings you're working so hard to build. Contact us, a company known for keeping costs low. It ain't a free ride, but it's close.

TIAA-CREF.org or call (800) 842-2776

TIAA CREF Managing money for people with other things to think about

RETIREMENT | INSURANCE | MUTUAL FUNDS | COLLEGE SAVINGS | TRUSTS | INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distribute securities products. For more information, call (800) 842-2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before investing. © 2002 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF), 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. 02 0006

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Montreal Madness Weekends
$89 + 15 security fee complete
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs
10 or more group discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-0076

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Meal plans for sale
lunch/dinner great food central location and cheap prices
549-6202

Cheap Heating oil!
Join The Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 545-0865 or come by commuter services, Room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 , this semester with a proven
Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event.
Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks.
Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact Campus Fundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigmaalphalambda.org

Searching for E!
www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Volvo 240 DL SDN 160K $600 Runs well CD player, new parts 413-559-4849

1993 Jeep Grand Cherokee Laredo
Air Conditioning
CD Player
Great Condition
Asking Price: $4,800
Contact Sabrina 413-478-6912

1996 Ford Escort LX
63K A/C Alloys great condition
Mike 413-534-8246

99 Audi A4 Quattro. Lowered 18-inch wheels and much more. $17,500
413-522-3312

91 Subaru Sedan Automatic
Power window/cruise control
New Transmission
$1400
413-546-2110

CHILD CARE

Babysitters needed: for commuter services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.csihq.org then click on family services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

EMPLOYMENT

ACTIVISM
Looking for a job that works with your academic schedule? Want a job that means something to you? Call Clean Water Action Today! We are now hiring people with good communication skills to learn basic grassroots organizing. Flexible Schedules. Great Pay. Fun People. Just 10 min. from campus. Call Megan 413-584-9830.

Bartenders wanted. No experience. So Deerfield Bar w/ live music. Call Betsy 665-2301

Drivers & Kitchen help wanted apply at DP Dough in Downtown Amherst.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed.
$250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

Kitchen assistant wanted Monday-Friday lunch. Free Meal plan. 549-6202

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester.
Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

Lockers for Rent: Cheap! $10 for the year! Come to Commuter Services 428 Student Union.

Clean new house $425 plus. No pets/smoking 478-6411

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500/mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwaves.com 584-7750

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TO SUBLET

Roommate wanted in 3 bedroom apartment. 615 Main Street Aspen Chase Apartment complex. If interested call 413-262-1290

TRAVEL

Sell Spring Break Trips
All the fun & all the protections
American Express Worldwide
Guaranteed best buy
1 free trip for every 10 paid or Ca$h starting with first booking
you sell- we collect payments
World class vacations

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages.
TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up!
TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK!
Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee!
REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE! Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@suncoast-vacations.com to find out more info!

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! WWW.INTER-CAMPUS.COM OR CALL 1-800-327-6013 GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES! CANCUN, JAMAICA, FLORIDA AND BAHAMAS PARTY CRUISE! FIFTEEN YEARS EXPERIENCE! FREE TRIPS FOR CAMPUS REPS!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free
Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre
Free Drinks/Lowest Prices
1800-426-7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers
Travel Free 2003
Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV
www.sunsplashtours.com
1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours
Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun
www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NBC/4
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB/20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN InfoChannel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-tv-Travel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Harvey Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

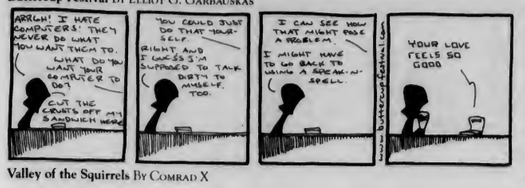
Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.



Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford Red	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's Finest River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 3 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 3 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WGVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Draw Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News		Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Joint Shoot Ide	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Ide	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Altitudes: Cradle		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGCB	50	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Draw Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Ed "Finale" (N)		Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'jem"		News	Tonight Show
WTBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal		Altitudes: Cradle		Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	15	The View (In Stereo)	Law & Order	Self-Defense		Biography Frank Gifford		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	Money line		Crossfire		Live From		Larry King Live		Overnight		Crossfire	Money line
COM	19	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Cleole	★★ "Packer" (1996, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Hicci				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	52	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal	Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	18	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	39	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		U. Lo Movis	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	55	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Fold by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	45	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	28	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	25	NYPD Blue "Twin Peaks"		Pretender "P'tip" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		"Titanic Blueprint of a Disaster" (1986)
USA	59	Walker, Texas Ranger		LAPD "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	60	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13				Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	62	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Set Enough	★½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. R				★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. PG-13
SHOW	65	★½ "Cecil B. Demented" (2000, Comedy) John Canady. NR				★★½ "The Out" (2000, Suspense) Colin Hanchett. R				Soul Food (MV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Quote of the Day

"Too many long for yesterday, but yesterday's over now."

-The Pietasters

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 77 LOW: 50	HIGH: 82 LOW: 54	HIGH: 76 LOW: 51

Horoscopes

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Don't get out of bed today, it's not worth it. But since you're reading this, you're probably not following my advice.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Despite what you may think, that piece of pizza found under your futon doesn't qualify as dinner.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – No matter how bad your day is going, it doesn't compare to R. Kelly's day.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Your horoscope was cancelled today. Sorry.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – The answer to 3 Down in the crossword puzzle below is PESO.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Please refer to Virgo for your horoscope; what's the difference, anyways?
PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – It's Wednesday, so that means Guitar Dudes for cool people, or in your case, "The West Wing."
ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – Go to Sylvan and make one of your fellow UMass peers feel better. That's an order!
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Si tu estas leyendo este horoscopo, no tienes una vida.
GEMINI (May 21-June 21) – There's no "I" in "team," but there's an "I" in "win." True words to live by.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The answer to 56 Down in the crossword puzzle below is KILO.
LEO (July 23-Aug.22) – Although it might seem like a good idea at the time, think before you steal someone's Bacardi at a party.

To submit your comics call 545-1809 and ask for Matt Despres

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Chicken Nuggets

Macaroni & Cheese

Sesame Noodles & Pea Pods (vegan)

Vegan Nugget

DINNER

Cuban Black Bean Soup

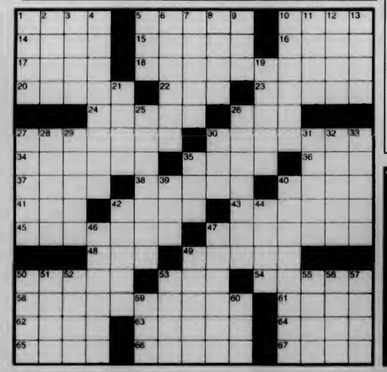
Honey Garlic Roast Pork

Baked Stuffed Fish

Tofu Steak (vegan)

Jamaican 3-Beans (vegan)

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
Wed: Raggae Night
Thurs: Fear Nuttin' Band
Sat: The Equalities
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
549-6900
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 People with beats
5 Time period
10 Abominable Snowman
14 With, to Pierre
15 Highborn
16 Lab culture medium
17 Cowboy star LaRue
18 Foundation
20 Inundate
22 Casual top
23 Stands up
24 Turkish coins
26 Pantry item
27 Duds
30 Fixing (an election)
34 Mountain flower
35 Endorsers' needs
36 Stag's mate
37 Yours and mine
38 Give the slip
40 Assuage (pain)
41 Application
42 Women
43 Fixes potatoes
45 Most profound
47 "Get outta here!"
48 "Now — seen it all!"
49 VCR button
50 Not fresh
53 Hunter's weapon
54 Giraffes' features
58 Kitchen appliance
61 Travel choice
62 Reality unit
63 Accuse
64 Dot in the sea
65 Oaf
66 Mortel-airplane wood

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-17-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

67 Grub

DOWN
1 Leg part
2 Famed office
3 Mexican money
4 They're learned
5 High school subj.
6 Threshold
7 Relentless reeds
8 Sherlock's must
9 Chick's mom
10 Swerving off-course
11 Swelled heads
12 Container weight
13 Annoys
19 Pulls along
21 Very serious
25 Let go
26 Movie theaters
27 Not whispered
28 Take a break
29 Blender button
30 Valentine color
31 Boise locale
32 Facial features
33 Silly ones
35 Settle up
39 Computer abbr
40 Abstruse
42 On the —; honest
44 Final word
46 Swipe
47 Snake toxins
49 Countrified
50 Mop
51 Tijuana snack
52 Curly hairdo
53 Arizona river
55 Wallet load
56 About 2.2 pounds
57 Killed
59 Subside
60 Teachers' org.

Andy Vogt
Kristen Hull
Andrew Merritt
Shannon Farrington
Larry Nielsen
Scott Pihl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

UMass' top two impress in debut

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Either could play No. 1 for the team for the next three years. Sasha Edelstein and Stephanie Price certainly proved that this weekend. In fact, they didn't even know who would be the No. 1 player for the tournament until before Friday's first round.

Already lady Dixon has told us a few things before the tournament. Edelstein said.

Edelstein, who was the Massachusetts women's tennis team's No. 3 this weekend at the Eastern Collegiate Women's Tennis Championship, played second in her first intercollegiate tournament. The Hyde Academy two seed Edelstein swept through the first three rounds in the tournament six sets before falling to Niagara's Milena Matijevic, 2-6, 0-6.

The Haifa, Israel native beat Army's Marissa Limisaco (6-4, 6-2), Quinnipiac's Kim Piazza (6-2, 6-2), and Connecticut's Whitney Sinicki (6-4, 6-4) en route to her second place finish.

Edelstein, who sat out last year per NCAA transfer rules, was pleased with her effort.

"I was very happy," Edelstein said. "I didn't expect anything because it was my first tournament."

Price, a sophomore who played No. 2 for Dixon's squad last year, found herself in the same position for the season's opening tourney. Because practice had only started a few weeks prior to the tournament, Price wasn't expecting a dominating

Turn to TENNIS, page 7

Sophomore Stephanie Price won the No. 2 flight this past weekend at the Eastern Collegiate Women's Tennis Championship.

Wildcats on the prowl

UNH in town to face Minutemen

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts men's soccer team that walked off of Boyden Field Sunday afternoon was dejected, frustrated, and probably a little confused.

The team that walked off of Rudd Field after practice yesterday, however, was confident, and hungry to get its season back on track.

It will have that chance today, as UMass (2-3-0) squares off against New Hampshire at Rudd Field, starting at 3:30 p.m.

The Wildcats come in to Amherst boasting a 4-2-0 record, although they dropped their last two contests with South Carolina and College of Charleston. On Monday, the National Soccer Coaches Association of America ranked UNH seventh in the New England region. The Minutemen failed to crack the Top 10.

UNH brings a strong offensive front to Rudd Field today. Sophomore Logan Lee and juniors Nicola Chicco and Matt Glode have chipped in with a combined 25 points for the Wildcats this season, with Lee and Chicco netting five and four goals, respectively. Junior Josh Hareld, who had eight goals and seven assists last year, leads the team with four assists this year.

In net, sophomore Mike Vignola has been a standout, posting an .815 save percentage, with one shutout in six games. Vignola hasn't allowed more than one goal in a game all season.

That should be a challenge for a Minuteman squad that has only scored 10 goals this season on 74 attempts. UMass has two solid forwards in senior Jeff Deren and junior Ptah Myers, but the attack has had difficulty breaking through defenses, especially those of Boston University and Michigan State, to provide quality scoring chances.

"Offensively," Head Coach Sam Koch said, "we need to support the ball better than we did, and we have to play the ball quicker. If we do those two things, we'll move the ball better, and we'll have better chances."

The goaltending picture, which has been a running question for the Minutemen all year, is still up in the air. Senior Enzo Altomare has been the leader in minutes played, but junior Colin Burns has also seen some significant time, including the entirety of the Michigan State match.

After practice yesterday, Koch mentioned that the starting keeper job will be decided among three players. While Altomare and Burns are clearly two of the candidates, the third could be either senior Dave Doucette or freshman Lester Melendez, who put in some inspired saves at the end of the workout yesterday.

Defense remains a question for the Minutemen, but it has shown improvement in recent weeks, partly due to the leadership of senior Derek Rhodes, who has dropped back from midfield to add some experience to the back line.

"On the defensive end of the ball," Koch said, "we have to close our marks down off the ball better than we did. We have to make it harder for them to play, harder for them to find their targets, and get them closed down quickly.

"We just have to improve on the things that we as a team have discussed," Koch continued. "We need to get a little bit better every week, we said that today in the team meeting. The list is pretty long, we have a lot of things we need to improve on, and we have to do that."

While there are still faults areas in the Minutemen's game, they have shown some growth in the last week, especially when Iona snuck up on them last Friday, and tied the game at three after UMass had led the entire match. The team showed poise and maturity in keeping a threatening attack on, and was rewarded with a fortunate bounce off a late Martin Burwell corner kick.

What may have been missing after the close win over Iona, and certainly during the Michigan State match, was confidence. The Minutemen may have found that confidence over the last two days, because they showed excitement and hunger after practice.

"I think it's an important game for us," senior midfielder Yuri Morales said. "And I think we're ready for the challenge."

GERALD GOLA/COLLEGIAN

Senior Yuri Morales tallied his first goal of the year against Iona, as the UMass offense had its best output so far this campaign, netting four goals.

JMU wins second straight

Matches 2001 total with victory

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Chosen last in the Atlantic 10 preseason poll, no one outside James Madison University expected the school's football team to impress in 2002. Then the Dukes toppled an 11-game, A-10 losing streak last weekend with a 20-14 win over New Hampshire last weekend.

JMU followed that up with a 16-13 win over Florida Atlantic University to match last year's win total for the entire season (two) in three games. Sophomore quarterback Matt LeZotte threw for 249 yards in the victory. LeZotte completed passes to eight different receivers in Saturday's contest.

The Dukes struck first on a Rondell Biddle touchdown run and then added a trio of field goals from Burke George en route to the win.

The JMU defense made the difference, forcing four Owl fumbles and one interception. Senior defensive end Richard Hicks made four tackles for a loss, including two sacks.

James Madison is now receiving votes in the Sept. 15 ESPN/USA Today poll.

Showing signs of life

William and Mary started the season with a disappointing 0-2 record with losses to Division I Indiana (25-17) and Atlantic 10 rival Maine (27-14) after being placed as the number one team in the conference's preseason poll.

It appears that the Tribe's hailed offense may have finally kicked itself into gear last week. Senior quarterback and A-10 Preseason All-Conference First Team selection Dave Cortes Jr. bounced back from two disappointing outings to lead William and Mary to a 62-37 win over Virginia Military Institute. The Walter Payton Award candidate showed pinpoint accuracy Saturday, completing 21 of 27 pass attempts for 346 yards and two touchdowns.

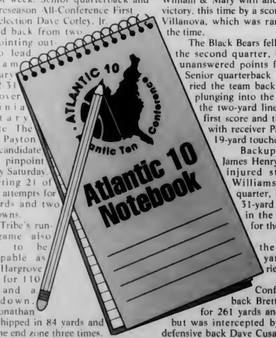
The Tribe's running game also proved to be unstoppable as Steven Hargrove rushed for 110 yards and a touchdown, while Jonathan Smith chipped in 84 yards and found the end zone three times.

Despite losing the first two games of the season, William & Mary never fell out of the Division I-AA Top 25 Poll. The team is currently ranked No. 17 in the nation.

Rising of the Black Bears

Maine (3-0) jumped all the way up to No. 4 in The Sports Network's poll after following up last week's big win over William & Mary with another impressive victory, this time by a score of 21-14 over Villanova, which was ranked No. 11 at the time.

The Black Bears fell behind 14-0 in the second quarter, but ran off 21 unanswered points for the victory. Senior quarterback Jake Eaton carried the team back into the game, plunging into the end zone from the two-yard line for his team's first score and then hooking up with receiver Paris Minor on a 19-yard touchdown pass.



Backup running back James Henry, who replaced injured starter Marcus Williams in the third quarter, broke free on a 31-yard run for paydirt in the fourth quarter for the win.

Henry ended the day with 86 yards on 17 carries.

Villanova All-Conference quarterback Brett Gordon threw for 261 yards and a touchdown, but was intercepted by Maine senior defensive back Dave Cusano with 41 seconds left in the game to negate any chance of a last-second comeback.

The loss was the Wildcats' (2-1) first of the year and dropped the team to No.

Turn to NOTEBOOK, page 7

COURTESY JMU MEDIA RELATIONS

Quarterback Matt LeZotte led the Dukes to their second consecutive victory last weekend, a 16-13 triumph over Florida Atlantic.

BE REASONABLE
ED/OP PAGE 4.
BACK TO PARSONS
SPORTS PAGE 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ISSUE TWELVE 9.19.02

UMass rallies for funds

JAMES HARPER/COLLEGIAN

Students, faculty and staff assemble inside the Student Union Ballroom to protest the State's refusal to honor a guaranteed pay raise for UMass employees at yesterday's all union meeting.

By Kristin Shrewsbury and Amy O'Neill
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members from the University of Massachusetts employee unions rallied yesterday afternoon in an effort to get the state legislature to fund all union contracts at the University.

Massachusetts acting Governor Janet Swift vetoed a cost of living pay increase that passed through the state legislature over the summer. Union members have been working without a raise for over two years.

"Since the veto started and we've formed a state wide coalition starting with the coffee break, which was a success," Donna Johnson, President of USA-MTA said. "We're holding a state wide lunch break on Sept. 25 and we're going to be asking legislators to join us in solidarity and hope. We're going to have a legislators' roll call to see who stands up in support for us and who doesn't."

Union members expressed their concerns over the state and University's lack of support for the contracts. Union representatives stressed the need to have a vote of no confidence in President William Bulger.

"We need to take the chance and stand up for our rights as unions, because we are the union," Johnson said. "In numbers we find power, solidarity forever."

James A.W. Shaw, President of the United Auto Workers Local 2322, led the event along with leaders from all the area unions. He stressed that people are committed to fighting for their rights. He further explained that helping with this large effort could help bring back student advocacy programs that the University recently cut.

"Just by sitting here today, you are making UMass Amherst history and we are not going to quit until we've won this struggle," Shaw said. "People need a sense of solidarity and when we meet on the Sept. 25 we're going to focus on who's with us and find out who's against us and lobby them and pressure them."

Shaw further explained that by winning the union battle, they would not only be getting what was promised to them, but they might help bring back funding for student programs.

"There is this large issue here, and it's about spending money," Shaw said. "However, every investment made has been spent on technologies, and in that process they are trying to divide us from students and students from workers."

"If we can win this fight it will only help in the efforts to bring back programs and keep these other programs alive."

Bill Newman, Campaign Assistant to democratic governor candidate, Shannon O'Brien explained the candidate's goals for the future of the unions at UMass and elsewhere in the state.

"Last Saturday in the Hampshire Gazette, it stated what Shannon O'Brien thought of the state's decision, and she stated any contract bargained in good faith must be honored; a deal is a deal," Burmingham said.

Students, faculty and staff also had the opportunity to question members of the various unions as well as state opinions of their own to the 300-person audience. Questions concerning different union pay-plans, putting a stop to volunteer board positions and working together to rally support for student programs and faculty were addressed.

"We are the union, jump on the band wagon, show some strength and scare the living hell out of them," one union member said.

The Graduate Employee Organization stated their support for the unions on campus by presenting a referendum expressing their commitment to higher education. Liz Stanton, a graduate student in the Economics Department, stated on behalf of GEO that the cutbacks have forced students to pay higher fees and in return receive larger class sizes and fewer teachers.

"The Graduate Employee Organization of the Economics Department are committed to joining our fellow staff members until the state honors our contracts," Stanton said. "As a group we wrote a referendum that we are submitting stating our commitment and we encourage others to get together as a group and do the same."

Union members, faculty, staff and students throughout the 28 union higher educational facilities will be holding further protests and rallies throughout the state on Sept. 25, 27 and 30.

"Students and workers stay together on this campus," Shaw said. "Our cause is their cause."

JAMES HARPER/COLLEGIAN

Students and staff members listen to UAW Local 2232 President James Shaw's rally cries at yesterdays all union meeting.

Minority students protest

SCOTT ELDRIDGE II/COLLEGIAN

Alcides Santiago stands in front of a group of students, upset about last year's budget cuts and the administration's decision to reorganize and eliminate support services for minority students. Protesters rallied for support of the cut programs and the student resources.

By Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

As university employees filed through the doors to the Student Union, a gathering of University of Massachusetts minority students greeted them with a rally on the steps, protesting a cut of resources for the students.

"We don't get the opportunities to get into classes anymore," said Lan Nguyn, a junior who frequented the United Asian Learning Resource Center her first two years on campus. The UALRC is one of the resource programs cancelled during last year's budget cuts.

Also cut last year was the Bilingual Collegiate Program. Rene Gonzalez, a BCP student, helped organize the rally. "This is not just about culture," he said. In defending the support services that were cancelled, Gonzalez and others cited the important role these programs played for students at the university.

According to Gonzalez, support services at UMass were an attraction for students who chose the school over other colleges. The news that student support services had been redesigned was never relayed to incoming students. This past week, at the Malcom X center, students came together to discuss their grievances.

"They had come here specifically because the support programs were here," said Gonzalez. Many of the students who attended were looking for answers to where these services went. The successful turnout of the meeting was a preliminary step he said. Wednesday's rally was another of these first steps.

Next up, organizers plan to take their concerns to the Student Government Association. While resource programs for minority students have been eliminated, a group of students exists to represent minority students. The African Latino Asian and Native American (ALANA) caucus is trying to gather new members.

"We need to have people of color there," said Gonzalez. While he is confident that student interest is a priority for the SGA, Gonzalez feels that an active caucus in the SGA will be the only way to insure that minority students won't be overlooked.

"As long as I've been here this University has never been diverse," said Shameeka Leacock. Leacock joined other student speakers who were upset at the administration's decision to remove the support services. Native American Student Support Services is one of the downsized programs. Arthur Hunts spoke about the cuts to the NASSS.

"They should appreciate us being here," said Hunts. The cuts to the program have reduced professional staff with the program to two full time employees.

"The BCP is my house, my family," said Janayra Santiago. The program, she added, "recruited students that are overlooked." One of the difficulties minority students encounter is choosing and getting into classes. The programs, now combined with undergraduate advising, provide course selection advice.

"Today a lot of freshmen will be withdrawn from this university," said Santiago. The group of approximately 75 students gathered held signs, cheered speakers, and booed the robot grim reaper named "Mr. Administration."

But the brief rally was dwarfed – according to design – by the thousands of university employees gathered inside the Student Union Ballroom. At the conclusion of the rally, about 20 students fed into the ballroom and joined the already underway all-union meeting.

"The unions know that we're behind them and they're behind us," said Gonzalez. The group of students gathered in the corner of the room and was given the standing support of all the employees.

The employees gathered were taking part in the second work action of this semester. On the second day of class, employees participated in a "coffee break" where they stopped work to rally outside of the Whitmore administration building to demand that university officials honor the contracts that were agreed upon. Funding for pay increases was vetoed by acting governor Jane Swift this past spring.

Santiago addressed the union employees during the open forum at the conclusion of the meeting. "We're not getting the money and you guys aren't getting the money...keep fighting."

O'Brien, Romney win primary; battling it out in the press

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Shannon O'Brien and Mitt Romney will vie for the top seat in the State House this year. O'Brien and Romney won the Democratic and Republican primary elections in Massachusetts Tuesday. The candidates have until Nov. 5, approximately seven weeks, to campaign.

O'Brien raised questions about Romney's willingness to stay in Massachusetts for the full four-year term.

"There is a significant possibility that if Vice President Cheney does not run for reelection, Mitt Romney could well be on that list and he may not turn the president down," O'Brien said in an interview with the Associated Press yesterday.

Romney denied that he would vacate his position early, saying that he would turn down any offers from the White House.

"I'll say, 'Hello, Mr. President, it's good to hear from you. My, what a nice offer. No thank you. I've been elected governor of Massachusetts and I'm planning on staying here all four years,'" Romney said, according to the Associated Press.

Romney has a personal relationship with President George W. Bush that stems from the Winter Olympic Games in Salt Lake City. Romney was Chief of the Winter Olympic Games and was the President's host.

Romney claims that he will focus his campaign on education reform and not focus on Democratic candidate O'Brien.

"I will define my campaign as a campaign of change and reform on Beacon Hill," Romney said to the AP. "The mess in Massachusetts costs our working people and our poorest citizens. They're the ones who suffer."

In a statement to the press, O'Brien's running mate Chris Gabrieli criticized Romney's campaign spending decisions.

"I am surprised by Mitt Romney's statements given that the Romney campaign spent $2.7 million through the month of August and Mitt doesn't even have an opponent," Gabrieli said. "That's $2.7 million over and above the $850,000 that Kerry Healey spent through August."

Healey, Romney's running mate, claimed that O'Brien used her position in government to get Treasury jobs for colleagues in a press conference.

"This campaign is about change," Healey said in a press release. "The tax and spending policies of Shannon O'Brien and the other insiders on Beacon Hill have made a mess of our state's finances."

O'Brien claimed that the jobs were given to qualified applicants and Healey was wrong to call O'Brien's hiring choices "patronage".

Both candidates say they will focus their campaigns on the state's budget crisis.

Information for this story was taken from The Associated Press.

Fire dept. sets UMass ablaze

COURTESY AMHERST FIRE DEPT.

The Amherst Fire Department, Student Force set a mock dorm room on fire last year.

By Bridget Henry
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Living With Fire" returned to the University of Massachusetts this week in an effort to educate the campus about fire safety and prevention. Sponsored by Campus Firewatch, the "Living With Fire" program is designed to raise awareness about fire hazards that commonly occur in residential dorms and Greek housing.

University personnel and members of the Amherst Fire Department Student Force, Engine Company No. 3 operated a fire safety booth yesterday afternoon in the Campus Center Concourse. Engine No. 3 is comprised of full-time students from the University who also serve with the fire department.

Today, between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m., two mock dorm rooms will be set ablaze in between the Campus Center and the parking garage to depict what happens when a fire starts in a dorm. Only one of the rooms will be equipped with an automatic fire sprinkler. According to a press release, the burns are intended to provide a graphic demonstration of how fast a fire can build and spread, and to promote the effectiveness of a fire sprinkler system.

While the towers in Southwest are equipped with sprinklers, the majority of dorm buildings at UMass are not. In addition to the live burn, students can learn how to safely escape a burning building by crawling through a replicated smoke-filled trailer. Students will also be able to view the premiere of Graduation: Fatally Denied, a recent video that Ed Comeau, Campus Fire Watch publisher produced and wrote. Comeau is a UMass graduate and former member of the Amherst Fire Department Student Force.

Partially filmed at UMass, the video chronicles the untimely death of a fictional college undergraduate due to a preventable room fire. Comeau portrays the tragic sequence of events that begin with the fire and end with the student's death in the Emergency room of Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

According to statistics from a recent press release, there are an average of 1,500 fires in dormitories and Greek housing every year, which in turn cause an annual $9.1 million dollars in property damage. In addition to this, it is unknown how many fires occur yearly in off-campus apartments and houses.

In October of 2001, the UMass chapter of Delta Upsilon experienced a devastating loss when its house was completely destroyed in a fire started by a candle. The smoke detectors in the building were covered with plastic to stop them from being activated, allowing the fire to go undetected.

The leading cause of fires in dormitories and Greek housing is arson, followed by cooking and smoking. Unattended candles, (which UMass housing made illegal in the dorms this year), laundry draped around halogen lamps (also illegal), and power surges are other causes of fire. According to Campus Firewatch, 75% of fire-related student deaths since January 2000 have occurred in off-campus housing. Local firefighters responded to a call from students in the Boulder apartment community this past Friday. Nobody was injured in the fire.

The ultimate goal of "Living With Fire" is to reduce the overall number of fires that happen nationwide in campuses and Greek housing each year, and to inform students living off-campus about fire hazards in hopes that fewer fires will occur.

WRITE FOR NEWS

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts - operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. Became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

COUNTING CROWS
LIVE IN CONCERT
HARD CANDY

WITH SPECIAL GUEST
GRAHAM COLTON
SPECIAL TAPER SECTION
SAT OCT 5
MULLINS CENTER
NEW ALBUM "HARD CANDY" IN STORES NOW
TICKETS AT THE BOX OFFICE, AT ALL ticketmaster OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE: (413) 733-2500.
ONLINE AT ticketmaster.com
concertbotline.com
PRODUCED BY METROPOLITAN ENTERTAINMENT

THE MONKEY BAR PRESENTS:
COYOTE UGLY
SATURDAYS
COYOTE UGLY NIGHT
NEW ENGLAND'S HOTTEST GUEST DJ'S
DON'T LET PEOPLE TELL YOU [illegible] IT
COME IN AND SEE FOR
63 NORTH PLEASANT ST. AMHERST (413) 259-1

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

'Geronimo'

For the last week, ROTC students have fun using the Campus Center parking garage as a "chill" for rappelling instruction.

Bush to U.N.: 'don't believe Hussein'

COURTESY OF THE WHITE HOUSE

President George W. Bush isn't changing his mind about Iraq.

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

President George W. Bush discussed Iraq with members of Congress early yesterday morning at the Oval Office. President Bush held a press conference after having breakfast with Vice President Dick Cheney and select members of Congress.

"We had a really good discussion about our common concerns," Bush said. "We talked about the energy bill; we talked about terrorism insurance; we talked about the defense appropriations; we talked about the appropriations process."

"We also talked about Iraq."

Bush dismissed Iraq's latest announcement that they will comply with United Nations weapons inspectors as an attempt by Saddam Hussein to "take the pressure off of himself".

"This statement about unconditional inspections was something he's made in the past," Bush said. "He deceives, he delays, he denies. And the United States, and I'm convinced, the world community aren't going to fall for that kind of rhetoric."

The President expects the U.N. to dismiss Iraq's statement as well.

"It's his latest ploy, his latest attempt not to be held accountable to the United Nations," the President said. "He's not going to fool anybody."

Bush alleged that Iraq is a "threat to world peace" and said that it's the responsibility of the U.S. to "remind" the U.N. about the threat Iraq poses to international stability.

"The United Nations, in order for the world to be a more peaceful place, must rise up and deal with this threat and hold him to account," Bush said.

Hans Blix, the Executive Chairman of the U.N. Monitoring, Verification, and Inspection Commission issued a statement yesterday that his meeting with Iraqi officials was "useful" for both sides and "the Iraqi delegation welcomed the resumption of the inspections".

U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan said negotiations with Iraq are just "beginning" in a press briefing Tuesday.

According to the President, his administration expects support from the U.N. Security Council.

Bush requested bipartisan support for a "strong resolution" out of Congress concerning Iraq. Bush said he'll begin working on the resolution this week.

"I told the members that within the next couple of days this administration will develop language...that we think is necessary," Bush said. "I want to thank the leadership for their commitment to get a resolution done before members go home for election break."

The resolution is a "signal" to the United States and the international communities according to Bush.

When asked if the U.S. is ready to "go it alone", the President reiterated that Iraq has defied U.N. resolutions for over a decade, and he expects other countries to eventually join the U.S.

Bush also cited Saddam Hussein's allegedly poor treatment of the Iraqi people as another reason for U.S. military action.

"He kills his own people, he's terrorized his neighborhood, and he's developing weapons of mass destruction," Bush said. "We must deal with him."

McMurphy's Presents:
1/2 Way to Saint Patty's Day
Live Irish Music with...
THE SHAMROCKS
Saturday, September 21
Free Food
Prizes
T-shirts
Door opens at noon
No Cover
Positive ID Required

YES! WALL STREET FIRM WANTS MATHEMATICAL MINDS
Start a career as a Proprietary Equity Trader

WORLDCO FINANCIAL SERVICES
Worldco, a leading proprietary equity trading firm, headquartered at 110 Wall Street in Manhattan, is currently seeking highly intelligent, elite opportunistic, strategic and analytical thinkers.
Special individuals who are predicative, consistent, costly disciplined, persistent, focused, intense, brilliant, talented, self-confident intellectual, energetic, and fast.
Aggressive, rigorous, and logical students. Ivy/Ivy Plus, dual degree holders, academics, celebrated scholars, chess players and bridge players with strong GPAs from Ivy League or other top universities.
Backgrounds in statistics, mathematics, sciences and physics are highly desirable.
Experience in quantitative analysis, hedging, financial modeling, computers, forecasting, financial technology, pattern recognition, neural networks, information automation, video gaming, and electronics are also advantageous.
Candidates can leverage these characteristics and experiences which describe many of the top traders now at Worldco, into a successful and rewarding trading career.
Qualified candidates will learn the fundamentals of consistent, profitable trading from trading gurus who will share their expertise and trading genius in this fertile arena. Through this optimal mentoring system, you will use contextual arguments and pointed inquiry to understand the volatility and numeric, historical puzzle of the equity markets.
Traders will use the most sophisticated, technologically advanced execution, quote, and filter systems, and high-speed internet access available. This translates into real-time, live, direct and surgical access to the equity markets.
Worldco provides financial capital for trading activity. Semi-monthly payouts are based solely on each trader's profitability. Sponsorship for series 7, 55, and 24 securities licenses. Team growth opportunities are available globally, for qualified, proven traders.
Worldco clearly discloses the risk that Proprietary Traders share in both the profits and losses of their trading activity. Worldco is a self-clearing firm and member of the NASD, NFC, DTC, and OCC.
Contact Information:
Fax full resume with cover letter to: (212) 601 6352 or e-mail to pattaud@wldc.com www.worldcollc.com
www.wldc.com
DO NOT LOSE THIS ADVERTISEMENT
SHOW IT ONLY TO YOUR MOST INTELLIGENT FRIEND

THE FINE ARTS CENTER
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
online at www.fineartscenter.com
545-2511 OR 1-800-999-UMAS FOR TICKETS

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3 BLAST II SHOCKWAVE
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
BLAST II SHOCKWAVE is the next generation of the 2001 Tony Award winning theatrical spectacular, BLAST! Exploding with color, light, movement and music, this new production explores this contemporary genre with new cutting edge artistry. Part precision marching band, part spectacular pageant and 100% excitement; it is a soaring take-off to new frontiers of sight and sound.
SPONSORED BY PEOPLES BANK AND WFCR
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 10 JON NAKAMATSU, PIANO
Bowker Auditorium at 7:30pm
The Gold Medallist of the Tenth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, Nakamatsu takes a showman's delight with his big keyboard style. He performs with innate phrasing, spontaneous musicianship and joyous abandon. He'll pull you right on stage with him.
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 17 MARK MORRIS DANCE GROUP
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall at 7:30pm
Liking his dances is the easiest thing in the world. His dancers make you fall in love again with dancing, dancing with music, dancing so whole hearted; it transmits an overflow of joy. And the experience - performing to live music - is rare today. SPONSORED BY WFCR
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22 ORPHEUS QUARTET
Bowker Auditorium at 7:30pm
Opening performance: Beethoven Quartet Cycle
Hailing from France, Romania and the Netherlands, the international Orpheus Quartet launches a three-year, six-performance cycle of the sixteen Beethoven Quartets for the Fine Arts Center with performances of Quartet in D, Op. 18, No. 3; Quartet in f minor, Op. 95 "Serioso"; and Quartet in a minor, Op. 132. Please join us for a free pre-concert talk in the auditorium at 6:30pm. Viennese coffee and desserts will be available for purchase.
Catch the beat Share the Joy
Call for Tickets
545-2511 OR
1-800-999-UMAS
TICKETS ONLY
$7, $10, $15
FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

in concert

SPECIAL GUEST: MUDHUGGER
FRIDAY OCTOBER 25
ON SALE FRIDAY AT NOON
MULLINS CENTER
www.toolband.com
ticketmaster
www.dissectband.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Campus contracts:

time to speak up

As bargained contracts statewide remain stagnant, it's time that University of Massachusetts Chancellor John V. Lombardi let the University employees know where he stands.

Following agreements last year that settled the contracts of UMass workers, the Legislature failed to override a veto by acting Governor Jane Swift that rendered $50 million in negotiated contracts void. Add that to a UMass system already facing $28.5 million dollars in cutbacks (with Amherst alone shouldering $17 million) and the numbers – as well as the stories of those affected – are staggering.

This group – so often referred to simply as 'the employees' – is comprised of a diverse group of talents, trades and functions. Workers from Dining Services, who work to feed an overwhelming student community. The Physical Plant staffers, who tend to nearly every aspect of how this campus functions. Professors, clerical staff and other on-campus professionals, all sharing a broken promise and uncertain futures.

Though he's still a relatively new member of the UMass community, Lombardi must publicly express his interest in the matter and do it soon, for the benefit of those searching for a local reference point. There has been much discussion in various circles around campus and opinions splashed around in the local media. With so much of our state leadership failing us as we speak, the time has come – in fact, has already passed – for us to hear definitive words upon which the next phase of planning and reaction can be constructed.

We at The Collegian hope that Lombardi will use his address to the Faculty Senate this afternoon to do just that. In his short tenure thus far his character has largely spoken for itself. Interested in circumventing red tape to get down to work, his public addresses have been brief, eloquent and straight to the heart of the matter. Faced with an issue that seriously takes into account the livelihood of a great many of his employees, we see no reason for him to stray off that course.

The UMass community as a whole has suffered enough. Financial strains have riddles those areas of campus not fortunate enough to benefit from private funds and donations. Academic resources have been frozen, and while an alarming number of faculty opted for early retirement this spring, it's even more disheartening to see active members of the local community – professors, clerks, etc. – placed in positions of jeopardy with no explanation and even less. Having had the rug quite literally pulled from under them with little concern, our workers – every last one of them – deserve answers.

And, more importantly than that, they deserve the money rightfully belonging to them.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

Information from the Associated Press was used in this story.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Searching for decency

JAMIE LOO

It's Sunday morning.

It might be your day to go to church, run errands, go out for lunch. You walk to your car in the purple lot and from a good distance away you see it for the first time. Your windshield smashed to bits. Boot marks on the hood of your car.

Twenty-three members of the UMass community woke up to this reality on Sunday morning. They weren't all traditional students either. Two of the cars belonged to families in university family housing over in North Village.

A lot of assumptions can be drawn from this. The first is that the person that committed these acts must have been drunk. In my book, being drunk isn't an excuse for anything, especially something like this. If you're going to be drunk and break things, you should be drunk and breaking your own stuff, not someone else's. It's just not right.

> "In my book, being drunk isn't an excuse for anything, especially something like this. If you're going to be drunk and break things, you should be drunk and breaking your own stuff."

My biggest fear is that the vandalism was done on purpose. It's really disturbing to think there are students at this school disrespectful enough to go out of their way to damage another student's property. And for what? A laugh? To be vengeful? To fill a bored Saturday night in the Valley? Honestly, what do you gain by walking across 25 cars in heavy boots, and then smashing their windshields?

At least when my car window was broken, it was a burglary. Last spring break, when I was in Montreal with some friends, the driver's side passenger window of my car was smashed in. It was the last morning of our trip and we were about to pack up the car and head back for Massachusetts. When I approached the car, there was broken glass everywhere in the snow, along with the stuffed animals that sat in the back window, my car registration and other things from my glove compartment. It was a lovely scene. I went into complete shock. After yelling various phrases, I calmed down enough to start cleaning up the glass. Luckily, there was nothing in the car to take, except for maybe $10 in scattered bills and change for the Mass Pike, but at that moment it didn't matter. My car, my property, had been violated.

It was a very personal experience for me to pick up my stuff out of the snow, amidst shards of glass that were once my back window. It's a moment that you get lost in, that you just can't explain until it happens to you. A hundred questions ran through my mind. Visibly there was nothing in the car to take. Why would anyone break into what was essentially an empty car? Why would someone want to do something like this? To make a really long story short, my friends and I drove back five hours with a garbage bag over the window. Five, freezing hours, with no radio, since the garbage bag turned my car into a helicopter. I then spent the next two days of my spring break hanging around the house waiting for the glass repair people to come and fix the window.

Looking back on the incident, I can laugh now, knowing that my insurance covered the window and that the most the burglar got from it was $10. I hope that he/she felt frustrated for wasting their precious energy breaking into my car for $10 when they could have broken into the cars parked next to me, that also had U.S. plates. I'm also still gloating that the burglar missed the most expensive item, lying right there in the snow. My purple lot 49 sticker. I knew a ton of people from UMass who went to Montreal over spring break. The burglar could have made at least $150 off that parking sticker (if they were smart and charged a $50 break-in fee).

In all seriousness though, it was more than just a window. It was time, energy and frustration for a few days of what was supposed to be my vacation, which in comparison to what happened here, is small. The students that had their cars vandalized last weekend are also expending similar emotions on top of their schoolwork and family commitments.

The person that did this acted in senseless disrespect. They didn't have a motive to break the windshields to try to steal things from inside the car. It was just blatant recklessness. I hope whoever did this realizes the human cost behind their stupidity and gets caught. Better yet, if they were drunk and realize later on they did this, that they have the decency to turn themselves in. The owners of those cars didn't do anything to deserve this. No one should have their property vandalized by someone else for no reason. When you really break it down it's not about a window or anything else that comes with it, but basic respect and decency. It's something we shouldn't have to ask for on this campus, but is something we should expect from each other.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

HAVE A COMMUNITY OR CAMPUS CONCERN?

SEND A LETTER TO THE EDITOR. IT CAN BE DROPPED OFF AT OUR OFFICES IN THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT OR E-MAILED TO COLLEGIAN EDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM

Letters to the Editor

To the editor:

In your September 17 article "Booted Vandal Shatters Security" describing the terrible acts of vandalism and destruction of property at UMass last weekend, I was even more shocked and disturbed to see a quote in the article from Leslie Schleipman, a graduate student in the Education Department, in which she states "I began to realize that this is the 'Columbine generation.' A lot of young, white angry males, and it's scary."

This statement is racist, sexist, and has no place being printed in the Collegian. As of September 17, the perpetrator or perpetrators of these malicious acts of vandalism have not been found. Why would Leslie Schleipman assume that white males are guilty of the acts of vandalism?

As a member of the UMass community I would like to publicly denounce Leslie Schleipman's statement as racist, sexist hate speech, and an insult to every European American man on this campus. I would also like to say that I don't like the idea of someone with such prejudiced attitudes to be in a position to teach young children. I am also shocked that the Daily Collegian would print such hate speech. Shame on Leslie Schleipman for espousing hate and prejudice, and shame on the Collegian for printing it.

Eric Lewison
Undergraduate Admissions

To the editor:

I am writing to express my concerns about the reported rape in Central. The young woman is not only a victim of sexual violence, but also a victim of some loopholes in our campus security system. It is very possible that the alleged attacker entered the building without an electronic key by simply going in with a crowd of residents. Here lies the problem. Often times, someone will scan their key and the crowd waiting will enter the building, some of who do not belong in the building and are not even signed in as guests. Other times I have seen people actually waiting outside the dorms for someone to open the door and let them in. Sure, it's a pain to dig for your UCARD every time you enter the building, but it's a pain worth enduring because it helps maintain our safety. I'm not saying don't hold the door for your roommate or your RA, but do not let people into the building that you don't know! Shut the door behind you and if the mass of people waiting, don't like it, too bad. They have a UCARD and it only takes a second to slide it through the scanner. These dorms are our homes and we need to take every possible measure to ensure that they are safe and secure for our fellow residents. Granted, we do not know if the attacker did sneak in an open door, but it's a very large possibility considering the high volume of traffic in the dorms and the absence of security officials.

The suspect may have even been a maintenance worker for Umass, and gained access to the dorm with his own key! If this is the case, I suggest the university implement some kind of computer system that will reject the personnel's card after/before working hours. I feel very unsafe thinking that a maintenance worker could be waiting in the bathroom at 4:30 in the morning and there's nothing I can do about it.

I also suggest that the security booths be set up at all times, not just on the weekends. And perhaps we need more than a couple police officers for an entire university campus with thousands of students. I realize that there have been budget cuts, but no matter how much the budget gets cut, our security shouldn't get cut right along with it. We came here to get an education, but what kind of an education can we get if we live in fear?

Tasha Blount
Student

To the editor:

I was appalled this morning when I heard the University of Massachusetts Police on the radio reporting (another) rape on the UMass campus, followed by the admonition that women at the university should "take some responsibility" for their safety by taking self-defense classes. It is distressing to hear that the University Police basically blame women for being attacked; implying that women can actually avoid being attacked in their dorm rooms by taking self-defense classes. It seems that defending oneself from an attack is a response having nothing to do with prevention of attacks. Do the University of Massachusetts Police have evidence that when college women are able to beat up their attackers, attacks on campuses actually decrease? A responsible police department would do everything in their power to prevent attacks from happening in the first place, and would at least give the impression that they perceive protecting the safety of all members of the community (including women) to be their job.

Heather N. Halsey
School Psychology Ph.D candidate

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS & LIVING at the BIG E

Fair flavor returns to Western Massachusetts

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Nine gates open up into this world. Streamline traffic steadily flows around it during peak hours. Tiny mom-and-pop shops set across the street from it, pleasantly lit and waiting to catch the attention of a passerby. Local residents nearby with larger backyards sit on lawn chairs awaiting motorists eager to park their cars. Sounds of cheerful calliope music, crowds of people laughing or chatting and the whooshing motions of fast carnival rides all fill the air simultaneously. Scents of fried foods comfortably linger in the area like an ever-familiar companion. And come nightfall, neon lights brighten the night sky as it explodes with a kaleidoscope of colors.

Nine gates open up into this world of uncomplicated and carefree amusement. This world where getting something like a baked potato becomes a premier event, equip with standing in line in dire anticipation and all. This world where eye-catching exhibits draw one in with their visual delights. This world where animals of all shapes and sizes from lands across the globe are heralded and sweet-talked. This world where western Massachusetts can, for two weeks of the year, let loose and celebrate all that is New England along with all of life's simple pleasures. This world known as the Big E.

Officially titled the Eastern States Exposition, the Big E has consumed vast acres of land in West Springfield, Mass. annually for more than 80 years. This year running from Sept. 13 to 29, it brings all the flavor and favorites of fairs of old back to the area as livestock, carnival rides, delectable food delights, trinket shopping and live entertainment captive attendees from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day, making the $12 per adult ticket price well worth it.

The best way to experience the Big E is by simply walking about the fairgrounds, all the while taking in the exhilarating sites and sounds. While nighttime offers its pleasure of flashing lights in every direction, daytime, with its bright and bustling abeyance, is nothing to sneer at.

The Main Stage is located at the center of the grounds and acts as a navigational device for those lost among the countless rows of food stands, vendor tents and sideshow attractions. At the far end, one can find the Avenue of the States sporting six life-sized replicas of New England's original Statehouses, each one housing even more food delights and shopping unique to the themes.

Set farthest back is a 30-acre amusement park named Midway. If its bright neon lights at night and the echoing screams of happy fair-going riders do not set this area apart from the rest, a brick archway with "Midway" stretched across red letters outlined in blinking white lights make it clear.

Large brick showcase buildings lay their sturdy foundations in front of this carnival park. Inside these, beautiful décor plant life across from animals in various sized pens and stalls set all abuzz. Sectioned areas where creators have designed garden and patio settings produce miniature paradises that bring a smile to bystanders' faces. Tall

Turn to BIG E, page 8

JAMIE LOO/COLLEGIAN

COURTESY BIG E MEDIA

Thrills and chills on board carnival rides

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Since childhood, the glow of rides at amusement parks and fairs has lit up the eyes of the young and young at heart. After all, rides are by far the best part of any fair around, and the Big E is no exception. Actually, it is the only place in Western Massachusetts (barring Six Flags New England) that has the Las Vegas reminiscent florescent yellow and green glare of carnival-style rides.

Nestled between the endless array of fried dough stands and a series of games run by some of the most annoying and persistent carnies I have ever met lies the Magic Midway, a strip of rides for all ages ranging the from the more banal merry-go-round to the more risky Drop of Fear. After going on as many rides as my grease-laden stomach could handle, I developed this critique:

1. The Drop of Fear: Every serious amusement park risk-taker encounters a ride like the Drop of Fear during his or her travels. This ride boosts the risk taker above the skyline and allows him or her to sit at the top overlooking the entire fair for what seems like an eternity, all the while inadequately strapped into a tiny seat. Finally, it sends one shooting down like a bullet, leaving one's screams at the top of the ride.

Overall, it is worth going on. The ride itself is nerve-racking. However, the ride's mechanics – sitting smack dab in the middle of a fair after likely having been put up and taken down over and over again – give it that metal-on-metal sound that adds to the fear factor.

2. The G Force: This is one of the best rides at the Big E. All of the passengers on this ride are strapped in facing one and other in a circle and then are spun around rapidly and tipped upside down, while one's head is all the while plastered to the back of the seat. It is really similar to the rides where passengers are forced to stand up and then spun around until they feel nauseous. However, music is included in this one, and it makes it all worthwhile.

3. The Defender: Affectionately nicknamed "the tea cups of death" by those who attended the Big E with me this year, this ride packed more of a punch than originally intended. The ride itself looks innocent. It is fashioned with a number of tea cups placed on a moving and spinning platform. What the creators of this ride don't tell passengers is that the seatbelts can be somewhat faulty at times.

Overall the ride would have been a simple spin in a tea cup – that is if my seat belt had worked correctly and I was not forced to mentally write my obituary throughout the duration of the ride. However, this is the perfect ride for those who value some excitement while remaining rather close to the ground.

4. Fireball: Similar to the G force, this ride also straps the adventurer in and tips him or her back and forth until solidly convinced the ride will drop the passengers out of it. As a word to the wise, if someone is less than five feet tall, this attraction may be something one would like to avoid, because the force of the ride nearly pulls one through the shoulder harness.

5. Polar Express: This ride was not worth the four tickets that it costs to get on it. Starting with the basic fact that it was only about a minute and a half long in duration, it also forced the rider to be squished into a little corner due to the sheer force of the two swings around in a loop. Best idea would be to simply skip this one all together.

6. The Titanic: This may or may not be classified as a ride. Nonetheless, it was so interesting that it bears mention. This attraction is a giant inflated Titanic that happened to be making its final descent into the grass behind it. Those interested could climb up the sinking

Turn to RIDES, page 8

KRISTEN HOUSEKNECHT/STAFF

COURTESY BIG E MEDIA

Eats at the Expo: food delights to please all

By Jessica Pelletier
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

When you were little, did your parents ever take you to a county fair? Do you remember the smells of cotton candy in the air and licking the powdered sugar off your fingers when you ate mouthfuls of still hot fried dough? If so, expand on those memories by 1,000, and visit the Big E. Everything you could ever want to put into your mouth exists at this exposition. Kettle corn, deep-fried Oreos, overstuffed Maine baked potatoes and the oh-so-decadent cream puffs are just some of the treats you need to experience this year. Let's review, shall we?

Gate 5. Deep-fried Oreos. A magenta stand advertising Louisiana style doughnuts – beignets in French – contains an interesting advertisement for the aforementioned snack. And I don't know why I feel the need to put one of these in my mouth, because the name alone makes my heart want to leap from my chest in a panic. This is what happens when you take a cream-filled cookie, soak it in cake batter and give it a Jacuzzi in a fat vat. Yet somehow, I crave these tiny treats with a passion that is fierce and undying.

New England Center. Cream Puffs. Wait, let me say it again. Enormous, fluffy, cold cream puffs the size of a baby's head. You need to eat these things with both hands and a friend to tell you when you have powder or cream on your face. The recipe for the filling doesn't contain a custard pudding, much like every other standard cream puff I've had before. With a base more like fresh sweetened whipping cream, you can eat every bite and still have room for corn dogs, cheese steaks, etc. In case you haven't heard, this is the Big E's new signature dessert, and it's worth every penny of the $3 it cost. Don't worry if you can't grab one this year, it's certain to be back for many years into the future.

New Hampshire Building. Kettle corn. I had never eaten this snack in my life, prior to my roommate introducing it to me. She'd seen the man stirring the kettle with a large wooden spoon as she stood in line and knew this was a fresh as popcorn could get. At first glance, it looks like ordinary air-popped popcorn (you know, the flavorless kind you eat on diets). But every so often, you come across a kernel or two with a sharply sweet and salty glaze over it. Grab a drink with this stuff; the flavor gets so intense you need something to wash it down with. But other than that, I can definitely say I have a new addiction to this candy snack.

Maine Building. Baked Potatoes. For many people who come to this fair, getting these spuds are a yearly tradition. Some don't see the point to standing in line for up to 45 minutes for the glory of a potato, but I just can't resist. Close to 10 people stand behind their booths, ready and waiting to prepare your pomme de terre. They use white Maine baking potatoes, a more thin-skinned variety as opposed to the thick, brown skin covering the potatoes you normally receive in a restaurant. All potatoes are prepared to order for the patron and toppings include butter, cheese sauce, sour cream, chives and bacon bits. Even if it does seem a little absurd, you really should try it at least once; it is an excellent little potato.

New Hampshire. Wild Blueberry Pie a la mode. You can't get any fresher than these pies. The crust is flaky and tender at the same time, in a way that couldn't possibly be produced in a factory.

"The berries are grown in New Hampshire," said Barbara Hanchett, Active Older Adults volunteer. "Then they're transported down here and baked at a local bakery."

Incidentally, the difference between a wild and regular blueberry deals with both size and flavor. The pie served at this rustic, wooden booth is intensely flavorful without being overly

Turn to FOOD, page 8

Not another rose with any other name

Rosey claims her own style and sound

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

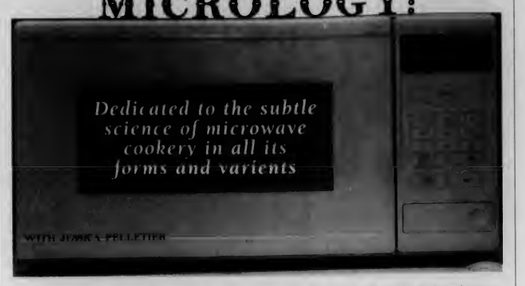
ROSEY
Dirty Child
Island

Rosey, a former major label talent scout, has a smoky/sultry Beth Orton voice and the high cheek-boned good looks of a supermodel. Her own debut CD, Dirty Child, is one of those hip amalgamations that defy genre labeling: funk, soul, rock, hippie street vibes. And she (almost) manages to totally pull it off.

The album would be worth buying just for the first two tracks. The Middle Eastern funk of "Love" glides and dips over a desert sands groove. Rosey's breathy vocals sashaying over lyrics about finding amore. "Afterlife" is a single-of-the-year candidate, with tin pot percussion driving a soulful rave-up anthem. Beginning with sounds of a scratchy record, Dirty Child closes on "My Baby," an understated old-timey cigar-house blues number. Between these highlights lie a few too many lapses into hippie funk cliché, but Rosey is capable of establishing quite a few high notes.

Rosey is a bit too in love with simple titles ("Love," "Beautiful" and "One"). Thankfully though she isn't beholden to the simplicity of her titles. The erotically-charged "One" comes after "Love" and "Afterlife," slinking along on a sexy, breathy vibe. "I like A Dream" slides and moves, and "Beautiful" strives for – and gets – drama.

Unfortunately, Dirty Child doesn't always succeed. "The Time" is bad enough to be passed over within a few seconds. "Cozy," "Heaven" and the title track are too unremarkable to even be bad.



"Cozy" and "Beautiful" both could be anthems for female independence, and "Dirty Child" tells the story of a young woman's time in the industry. Rosey's lyrics are possibly the most basic ingredients on the album. Her voice and the organic synth beats upstage them.

At least there's one thing about Rosey: she doesn't sound like Ashanti, nor the cooing voice on a techno track. She may not fully succeed, but her elegantly disparate grooves should make her a star.

One worded titles may be a bit simplistic, but Rosey's vocals, full of emotion, are anything but bland.

MICROLOGY:

This week's topic: chicken cacciatore and mini-chocolate cream pies. Ever since the time when Fraggle Rock was my favorite program, I can remember the scent of my grandmother's spaghetti sauce filling the room and sending my stomach on a murderous rampage for food. Granted this magical sauce came from a jar, but what does that matter when hunger is on the line?

For starters, find a medium sized microwave safe container. Whether it has a lid or not is irrelevant. A piece of wax paper works fine in place of a cover. Its major function is to allow heat into the chicken and prevent splatter at the same time. The thicker the plastic, the better, for when the sauce begins to boil, it has the potential to produce massive amounts of heat and immediately melt thin plastic.

Next, place a layer of sauce in the bottom of the bowl to keep the chicken from sticking to the container's base. Create alternating layers of uncooked chicken and spaghetti sauce. Between these layers, add chopped mushrooms, sliced green pepper and a diced onion. Top with mozzarella cheese two minutes before serving.

Don't worry about the risk of salmonella. As long as your chicken was purchased from a reputable establishment and not given to you by some stranger who smells of gin and slurs like Ted Kennedy, you'll be fine. Cover with wax paper or the lid – leaving enough room for excess steam to escape – and place in your microwave for 28 minutes on high. Halfway through cooking time, the chicken will need to be flipped over to ensure you're not going to bite into half-cooked strips of fowliness. Should you reach the end of the cooking time and remain leery, do not fear heating it a bit longer, for the sauce creates a barrier between the bare plastic and will stay juicy through multiple reheating sessions.

Food needed:
1 lb. chicken tenders
1 sm. jar spaghetti sauce
3 button cap mushrooms
1 sm. white onion
1 sm. green bell pepper
1/2 cup mozzarella cheese
1 six-pack ready made graham cracker crusts
1 six-pack pudding cups
1 can whipped cream
1 bag fun size Milky Way bars or Reese's Peanut Butter Cups (optional)

But what is chicken cacciatore without pasta? Any brand of the microwave pastas out there will give you a single serving of delicious, tender carbs – Mmm...carbs – to go with your main dish. The pre-made pastas are strangely grainy in texture and incredibly less tasty than the micro-boiled variety.

Now on to dessert, and let me begin by saying I've never been a fan of pudding skin and never will be. The creamy deliciousness of pudding is ruined if you have to chew on thick chunks in the process. Nevertheless, it comes down to how much time you want to spend on a mini-jart. The baking isle of any supermarket has tiny graham cracker crusts made by the same elves that've held the dessert world by the munchkins for decades now. (God bless those elves.)

Pudding cups lack the dreaded skin that covers the expanse of homemade varieties, but if you happen to enjoy it the old-fashioned way, knock yourself out. Any flavor will do. Your personal preference when it comes to dessert products is entirely up to you. Add a can of whipped cream. (I'm sure you know where I'm going with this one.) Crust, pudding, cream – it's that simple. Using peanut butter cups or Milky Way pieces are another way to enhance this recipe. If too much fat is your concern, just use the fat free variety and save yourself about six grams. (And yes. You'd also have to leave out the Milky Ways if you wanted the whole less fat thing.)

Hope these ideas are sounding good right now. And if you get to the store and you're just too tired to deal with this, just go to the deli section and pick up some ready made food. Anything works when you're starving and although nothing beats grandma's cooking, this works much better than dragging the poor woman up to your dorm and having her make meals for you. It's less bizarre too.

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
NOW HIRING!!
IF YOU THINK YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES, WE WOULD LIKE TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT JOINING OUR TEAM OF PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS.
WORK IN A SAFE, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT AND EARN THOUSANDS OF $$$$$$'S
18+ - NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
SOUTH HADLEY - 413/532-3621

THE ROAD TO RETIREMENT MAY SEEM SMOOTH, BUT IT'S LITTERED WITH TOLLS.

Fees. Charges. Hidden costs. Over time these things can erode the retirement savings you're working so hard to build. Contact us, a company known for keeping costs low. It ain't a free ride, but it's close.

TIAA-CREF.org or call (800) 842-2776

TIAA CREF Managing money for people with other things to think about

RETIREMENT | INSURANCE | MUTUAL FUNDS | COLLEGE SAVINGS | TRUSTS | INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services, Inc. distribute securities products. For more information call (800) 842-2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before investing. © 2002 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF), 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017. 02/8006

Seven jeans.

ZAMA

The second all-staff Arts & Living meeting will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Busch / Busch Light 24 Bottles $9.99 + dep
Milwaukee's Best 30 Cans $10.99 + dep
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St Rt. 9 584-8174

HADLEY PUB
Looking For... COLLEGE BANDS
TO FILL THE UPCOMING ENTERTAINMENT ROSTER
Rte. 9
Hadley, MA
586-3880
Ask for Tony

Big Y WORLD CLASS MARKET
We've Got It All!
175 University Drive
Amherst · 413-253-0416
Monday-Saturday
7am-11pm
Sunday 7am-10pm

WELCOME BACK UMass STUDENTS!
Prices Effective September 19th to 25th In Our Amherst Store Only.
WE ACCEPT OCMP!

From Our Kitchen
Sandwich Shop Hours:
7am to 9pm Every Day
Pizza Shop Hours:
9am to 9pm Every Day

Chicken Caesar Salad For Two BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Large 18" Cheese Pizza BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE
To Order A Pizza Call: 253-7690

Made Fresh Throughout The Day!
Best Pizza In Town!

To Place An Order Call: 253-8098
Small Philly Steak & Cheese Grinder BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Just Heat & Serve!

Grilled Chicken Breast, 4 oz BUY 1 · GET 1 FREE

Come In and Sign Up For Your FREE Big Y Express Savings Club Card
Big Y UMass ATHLETICS EXPRESS SAVINGS CLUB

Big E

continued from page 5

Clydesdales stand in their stalls, munching on grains and staring back at wide-eyed, often cooing spectators. A pen of piglets eager to feed from their mother draws another hefty crowd. But these areas, while splendid to view, cannot capture the attention and emotion of one, special pen situated in the center of the building, for it seems nothing can compete with puppies.

Friends Assisting Canines Essential Services, Inc. (FACES), a dog rescue and adoption agency from West Springfield, annually takes some space in this building in attempts to find its puppies foster homes.

"Every year we have puppies and try to find homes for them," said Jean Waleszczyk, a FACES volunteer. "We space the litters [brought to the fair] evenly, so each will get a week [in the pen]. Throughout the fair, we just accept applications for adoption. After people fill in the application, volunteers try to find the best match for each puppy and each home."

Tuesday night included five of 14 puppies from the same litter of a mixture of German Shepard and a Black Labrador.

While two constantly played with each other, standing on their hind legs and spinning about as if they were dancing, the remaining three-month-old pups lounged on plastic white chairs set in the pen. The moment the brawl gained momentum, though, they scampered off to join their siblings in the scuffle, tossing the puppy-toy-laden sod in the air.

"They all have different personalities," Waleszczyk said. "We have one who barks to get picked up. We have this one with white feet who loves to play. And this one over here," she said gesturing to black puppy romping about the pen, "really knows how to work a crowd."

Only a quiet alley way separates this animal-pleasing structure and the Young Building, but the atmosphere seems light years apart. As high-pitched squeals from delighted observers fill the air surrounding the pups, microphone-enhanced marketers can be heard selling their new "wonder" products up and down the craft isles in the Young Building. Though as expected at every fair as on late night infomercials, these product sellers cannot compete with what the furthest corner of this building has to offer: the Big E's self-titled premier exhibit honoring internationally noted American artist Norman Rockwell.

This tribute, organized by the Norman Rockwell Museum at Stockbridge, Mass., displays 322 of Rockwell's Saturday Evening Post cover-art, including some of the most well known images of American art, as well as reproductions of his famous "Four Freedoms" paintings and photographs of Rockwell painting some of his more famous works of art.

In addition to permanent buildings such as these, random tents set up about the grounds also offer hidden treasures. While a simplistic red and white striped tent setting near the New Hampshire building seems unworthy of much inspection at first glance, inside it offers a stunning magic show presented with tricks harboring all the grandeur of a star-studded Las Vegas spectacle. It is bedazzled.

Its settings are as simple inside as out, with only seven rows of bleachers stretched across three fourths of the space. A meek red curtain and a rather cheesy-looking "Liberty Bell" hanging about the set don't help much. But its simplistic nature makes part of its charm. From a smiling Asian woman swaying back and forth to the recording of Chubby Checker's "The Twist" echoing through the tent as she holds and tries to sell four simple mechanical sticks blinking lights of white, green, yellow and pink to four tiny water fountains located in the center (and only) ring surrounded by two potted purple flowers, the charm is set in stone.

Then the show begins. Then the audience goes from charmed to impressed.

Trick after trick, magicians David Hains and Frank Martian, each accompanied by assistants Kathy and Amanda, respectively, put on a great show. It's more than entertaining and easily figured out trickery. It's by far as high-tech and mysterious as magic can be. Fans of the disappearing, reappearing persons and objects tricks, these magicians use boxes, swords, ropes and fire to defy reality again and again. While by no means receiving top billing at the fair, it's truly a show worthy of its name.

Simple. Impressive. And most of all, fun. Befitting adjectives for the show. Befitting adjectives for the fairground festivities. Befitting adjectives for the Big E altogether.

food

continued from page 5

tart. This combined with the French vanilla ice cream and flaky crust makes you wish wild blueberries were more readily available every time of year.

Concord YMCA Active Older Adults volunteers come down annually for the past six years to raise money for their program. They sell about 125 slices in a weekday and even more beyond that on weekends. Even so, a day in this business is no slice of heaven.

"It's hard work, but it's a fast way to make money," said Hanchett, a friendly woman who was willing to spare some of her time to talk to us.

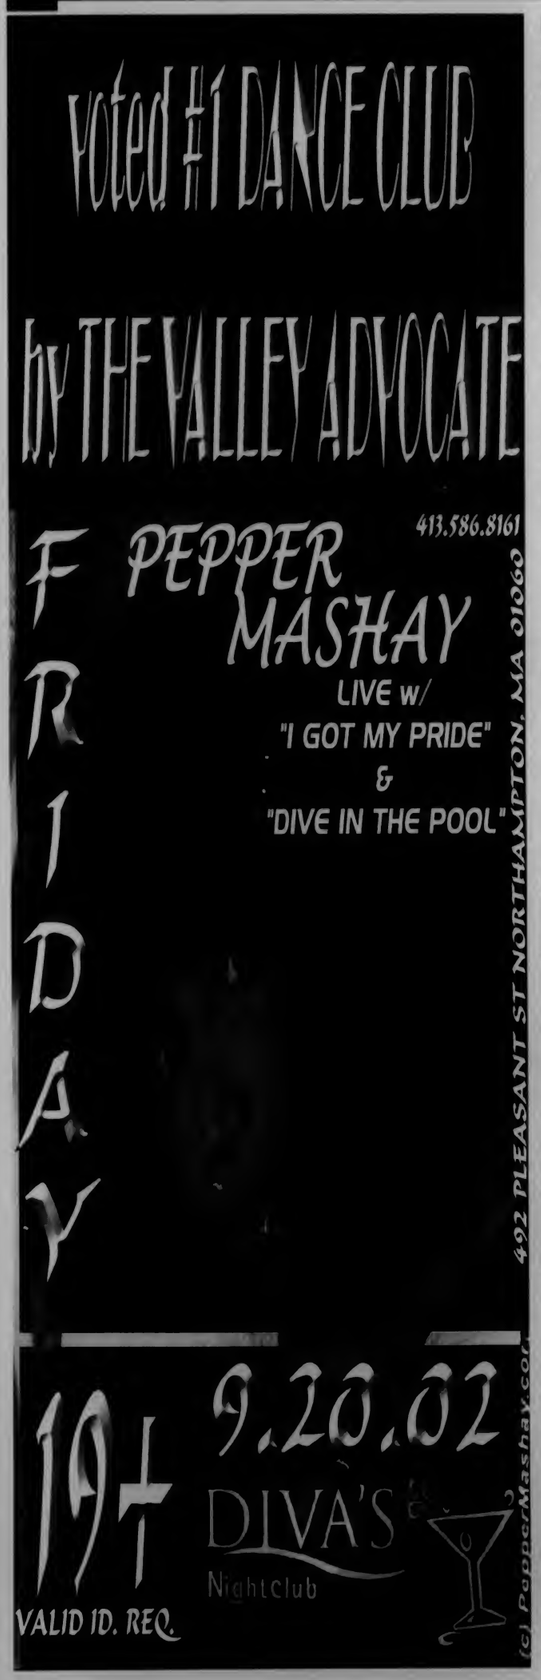
I would recommend this dessert to anyone who would rather have one largely filling treat as opposed to a grazer who would want to sample everything the Big E has to offer.

I leave you now with a small menu of the mouthwatering choices the fair has to offer. American, Greek, Latin American and Asian tastes stand around every corner, and in no way could a person go hungry. And even if you only have a moderate amount of cash to spend, find that one item that thrills you beyond belief – that one that makes your mouth water thinking about it – and nosh to your heart's content. It isn't how much you eat at the Big E; it's how much you enjoy eating it.

rides

continued from page 5

ship on one of its sides and slide down the middle. For the purposes of originality alone, this attraction deserves some praise.



7. The Swings: What trip to the fair is complete without the swings? They are by far the best ride at any amusement park. Enough said.

8. Horror House: Haunted houses by nature are not scary, and they really are not supposed to be. Such manors are meant to be a tacky trip into a dimly lit area in which someone pops out at its guest with a fake chainsaw and tries to chase him or her through the house. At the Big E, this comes through on all accounts, complete with the eerie music.

9. The roller coaster: This is by far the tallest roller coaster in the history of craftsmanship of such an attraction. It moves slowly, and there are few twists and turns. In an era in which roller coasters are crafted to flip upside down and spin, this does nothing. If you are looking for something that feels like a pleasant spin in a car with your grandmother, then this is the ride for you. Otherwise, skip it.

10. The Zipper: The most daunting looking ride at the fair, the Zipper is quite possibly the most fun as well. It straps the rider into a yellow cage while standing up and then allows him or her to be flipped around in a circular pattern similar to that of the Ferris Wheel. Sound like a mid-evil torture device? That is what I thought as well.

Final assessment: good, bad or plain old dangerous, rides are still the best part of any fair around. If you are looking to reclaim your childhood, there is no better place to start.

Shear Bliss
Holistic Day Spa

For $50.00 you get:

- Eyebrow Shaping
- Aromatherapy Scalp and Neck Massage
- Hair Clarified
- Deep Conditioning (Hemp) Treatment
- 10 Face Framing Foils
- The Best Haircut!
- Aveda Mini-Facial with Hot Towel
- Blow Dry with Botanicals
- Purescription
- Aveda Makeover
- 10% Off Retail

479 West Street, Amherst
253-2322

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
AMATEUR NIGHT
THURS. SEPT. 26
1ST PLACE $500 !!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND AND 3RD
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
S. HADLEY - 413/532-3621

Zullo

continued from page 12

National Championship. In 2001, the coaching staff decided it would be best to use a medical redshirt on Zullo so that he would be full strength upon returning.

"He conditioned with [Strength and Conditioning] Coach [Bob] Otrando," Smith said. "And he did a very good job with working the cardiovascular aspect of things as well as the strength aspect of things.

"I think that was what was great for him last year, redshirting, getting totally strong physically, totally strong mentally and that shows now – that he's back to normal, that he's back able to do this year."

Things were dismal for last year's Minutemen, who were without a number of players aside from Zullo. An 0-5 start led to the Maroon and White coming in among the also-rans in the A-10, something that was especially painful for Zullo.

"It really sucked, watching my team fall apart last year and fall apart in the end of the 2000 season," said Zullo, who already has 13 catches this season. "Just to watch everything crumble, it wasn't a good feeling all the way through, both season and a half."

But this past spring, Zullo was rehabbed and ready to return to the practice field. Every little step he took toward getting back on the grass of Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium got him more excited.

"Last year I was just excited to get back on the practice field," Zullo said. "I couldn't wait for camp, I think I was the only player on the team who was excited for camp."

Back on track

Now it appears that all the hard work that Zullo put in during his season and a half away from the game is paying off, as he is now in better shape than he was when the injury occurred.

"I don't think there's any question he's better, he's smarter," Whipple said. "He catches the ball better than he did then. He's just a threat – you have to be aware of where he is at all times. In leadership and maturity, he's at a higher level."

"Actually I feel better than before I got hurt," said Zullo, who is one of the biggest wideout threats in the A-10. "I feel stronger, I feel faster, I'm definitely more mature than I was then. I believe everything happens for a reason, and I just took what God gave me.

"I feel like I'm better than that player in '99 and I have the quarterback to help me get back to where I was," he continued. "Also, the receivers around me, we've got a much better receiving core than we did in '99."

But feeling better physically for Zullo has taken a back seat to the improvement of his mental state over the anguish he had to deal with being away from the sport he was raised on.

"It's great [being back]," Zullo said. "I sat out for a year and a half of football and up until that point I played 11 straight years and started every year and never sat out besides a couple plays. The first game of the season I had anxiety attacks all throughout the game."

Zullo's intensity is widely known by his friends and teammates. Perhaps the best example of that is the first game of the season, when he was so nervous that he reportedly was up at 4 a.m. on the morning of the game vomiting. But now that he's back on the field, it's almost like nothing has changed.

"While I was out here practicing with the scout team, it was kind of dragging, but when Sept. 7 finally came around, it seemed like yesterday I got injured," Zullo said. "I got back to the flow of things, and really, I never did leave. Actually, I was practicing out here the whole time, I just couldn't play in the games."

Important in many ways

In just his second season with the Minutemen, in 1999, Zullo became UMass' all-time leading receiver, passing Bob Simeone late in the season. His combination of speed and hands makes him one of the most potent weapons in Coach Whipple's offense.

"He gives us a go to guy – his presence allows everyone else to be that much better," Gorham said. "He draws a lot of attention, which opens up opportunities for everybody else running their routes, and he's willing to take that leadership role. Everybody has a team leader and within the wide receiving core, he is our leader. The focus is on him and he can handle that attention which lets everyone else flourish."

His presence on the team makes everything harder for opposing defenses, especially considering his speed. That was especially evident against American International College last week, as they often padded more than 20 yards off Zullo.

"[The offense is] much, much better [with Zullo]," Whipple said. "More importantly, you should ask the defensive coordinators in the league. You saw AIC, they just decided they weren't going to let anybody get behind them. They're playing 25, 30 yards back. The threat is there that two plays can change a game. It's the threat – you have to be aware of where he is all the time."

The only player remaining on the team who played during the 1998 National Championship season – he had two catches and a touchdown in the 55-45 victory over Georgia Southern in the championship game – Zullo has dedicated himself to inspire in his teammates the attitude of the '98 squad.

"I don't feel like there's any pressure on me," he said. "I'm just trying to lead the way that our '98 leaders led. I saw what it took to get to Chattanooga, and that's what I'm trying to do now.

"It's both one step at a time, but the goal is to make it to Dec. 18 in Chattanooga – that's our goal as a team."

As for personal goals this season, for Zullo it's simple.

"Just stay healthy, do the best I can, and keep away from as many mistakes as possible."

Going back to Northeastern, the jitters that the senior is suffering from are understandable. Perhaps it is the Huskies that should be suffering from jitters, inspired not by a lightning strike, but by lightning-quick speed. When asked what message he had for NU, Zullo was far from pulling punches. However, as always, he did have something to say.

"Be ready to play, cause I'm sure we're going to be out there with our 'A' game."

COLLEGIAN/Scott Lithgow

Spectacular catches like this one against American International College have proven that Adrian Zullo is close to 100 percent healthy.

UMass faces first true test

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

From every possible angle, this is a big game.

The Massachusetts football team (2-0) travels to Northeastern (2-0) Saturday as two of the Atlantic 10's three undefeated teams battle for a share of first place. A win for the Maroon and White would show the conference that the squad is for real for the first time since the 1999 season. A victory for the Huskies would prove to the A-10 that they have finally arrived.

The squads match up in an intriguing fashion.

UMass has the one of the best offenses in the conference. Led by a terrific wide receiver core, a solid transfer quarterback, and a good, three-headed running game, the Minutemen are leading the A-10 in average points scored. QB Jeff Krohn leads the conference in passing efficiency (146.1), while sophomore running back Raunny Rosario leads the A-10 in rushing yards per game (110).

Northeastern will counter with one of the best defenses in the A-10. The Husky defense hasn't allowed a point in its first two games and leads the conference in almost every defensive category.

NU runs a ball control offense. The Huskies focus on field position and a strong turnover margin.

"[Brown] wants to shorten the game," Whipple said. "They're going to run the ball on offense.

"They're big on shortening the field."

Northeastern won't be airing the ball out like American International College did last weekend.

"If we see 40 passes [this weekend]," Whipple said. "that will be good for UMass."

Minuteman coach Mark Whipple is known as an offensive genius.

Northeastern coach Don Brown is known as a defensive genius.

And they worked together for years.

Brown was Whipple's defensive coordinator from 1996-1999. They spent the first two seasons together at Brown and then moved on to UMass alongside Whipple. Brown left for Northeastern following the 1999 season. Ever since, Whipple has been one of his biggest fans.

"It's really a difficult game, one that you really don't want to play because you have spend a lot of time together," Whipple said. "In football, you spend more time [together] than people know.

"You really have to be disciplined and separate your emotion."

Coming off a pair of blowouts over lesser teams, Saturday will be UMass' first chance to prove itself worthy of a national ranking. Currently receiving votes from both the ESPN/USA Today and The Sports Network polls, the Minutemen will surely move into the Top 25 with a win over No. 18 Northeastern.

Whipple had to sit sophomore tailback Jason Peebler for much of last weekend's game against AIC due to a back spur. Whipple expects him back on the field this weekend.

"He got better as the week [of practice] went on," Whipple said. "[He was] much better yesterday."

Peebler rushed for 130 yards in week one's 52-3 win over Central Connecticut, while R.J. Cobbs ran for 158 yards in week two's 42-13 win over AIC. Raunny Rosario broke the century mark in each game and was named A-10 Rookie of the Week after his 116-yard performance against CCSU.

Whipple isn't sure exactly how he will use the three running backs against Northeastern.

"All of them bring something to the table," said Whipple, who expects to have a better idea of the RB situation in a few days.

###

Senior placekicker Doug White became the first UMass player ever selected to the American Football Coaches Association Good Works Team, it was announced yesterday. Selections to the team are based on a student-athlete's commitment and involvement in working with charitable organizations, service groups or other community service activities.

White is the president of the UMass Student-Athlete Advisory Committee and the UMass Jewish Varsity Athletes. He is the Minuteman representative to the to the Atlantic 10 Conference Student Athlete Advisory Committee and also volunteers time to Claremont Meals-On-Wheels, Habitat for Humanity and the Veteran's Affairs Medical Center.

White is this year's only member from the Atlantic 10.

www.dailycollegian.com

If you can dance...
call Red Cardell
1-413-283-2010
Trans, Security, provided earn good money 18+
Take a Chance, Columbus did?

STUDENT TRAVEL
hip hop
(Find your rhythm.)
44 Main St (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE >> ON THE PHONE >> ON CAMPUS >> ON THE STREET

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Busch / Busch Light 24 Bottles $9.99 + dep
Milwaukee's Best 30 Cans $10.99 + dep
Monday - Saturday 9am - 11pm
333 Russell St Rt. 9 584-8174

IRON HORSE ENTERTAINMENT GROUP AND MASSCONCERTS PRESENTS

JURASSIC 5
SUN, SEPTEMBER 22 • 8:00 PM
Tickets available at the Northampton Box Office at 586.8686, online at Tickets.com, all Strawberries Music & Video Stores, For The Record, or by calling (800) 477.6849
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM MT. HOLYOKE COLLEGE

Affordable

The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM
Sun 12-5:30
Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops
Northampton-108Main St.

Got Mud????
We Do!!

Oozefest 2002
Mud Volley Ball Tournament
October 5, 2002
For more information stop by the STARS table on the Campus Center Concourse the next three weeks.
Registrations are due by 10/2, and will be taken on a first come, first serve basis in the Alumni Relations Office, Memorial Hall.
STARS 577-1390 or STARS@stuaf.umass.edu

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Montreal Madness
Weekends
$89 + 15 security fee complete
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs
10 or more group discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-0076

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Hip Hop Dancers!
Funk Club Tryouts
Sun 9/22 Boyden wrestling room
One p.m.

Meal plans for sale
lunch/dinner great food central location and cheap prices
549-6202

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 , this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works.
Contact
Campus Fundraiser at (888)923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Chapters@sigma alphalambda.org

Searching for E!
www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Volvo 240 DL SDN
160K $600 Runs
well CD player, new parts
413-559-4849

1996 Ford Escort LX 63K
A/C Alloys great condition
Mike 413-534-8246

99 Audi A4 Quattro
Lowered 18-inch wheels and much more $17,500
413-522-3312

Babysitters needed:
for commuter services online
babysitting bulletin board.
Visit our website at www.sitstay.com then click on family services or stop by 428 Student Union.
Live in opportunities available as well.

Used Laptop Notebooks
$99.00
Printrunus with CD Rom and Monitor
$129.00
10% off servers with this Ad.
413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Resort and Golf Internships
Orlando, FL; Myrtle Beach and Hilton Head Island,
SC
Now hiring for winter and spring positions
Take a semester off and learn about the hospitality industry in sunny resort locations!
Receive a certificate from the largest hospitality training company in the United States. Fully furnished housing, stipend and transportation provided. 3-6 month
Internships. View our website at www.AmericanHospitality Academy.com and call 888-859-5293 for more information.

ACTIVISM
Looking for a job that works with your academic schedule? Want a job that means something to you?
Call Clean Water Action Today! We are now hiring people with good communication skills to learn basic grassroots organizing. Flexible Schedules. Great Pay. Fun People. Just 10 min. from campus. Call Megan 413-584-9830

Bartenders wanted. No experience. So Deerfield Bar w/ live music. Call Betsy 665-2301

Moving Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance.
Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $800/day.

EMPLOYMENT

Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees
Needed.
$250.00 a day potential.
Local positions. 800-293-3985 ext. 516

Kitchen assistant wanted Monday-Friday lunch. Free Meal plan.
549-6202

ENTERTAINMENT

HOT-L LIVE MUSIC
Hotel Warren So.
Deerfield Center 665-2301
Smokers welcome.
Cheap drinks- no cover charge- bands Sat. night

Two experienced professional musicians
-The best of strolling troubadors.
Require employment at restaurant, cocktail
Lounge and/or private parties.
Please call 413-549-0413 8-11AM

DJ FOR HIRE- DJ BOOY & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester.
Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Clean new house $425 plus. No pets/smoking 478-6411

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

FOR RENT

1 Room for rent. One mile from UMass, on bus line. Live with 2 males. Dryer, dishwasher, full kitchen, $500/mo + util. Call John or Matt 253-9701

FURNITURE

MATTRESSES & FUTONS
Sealy and symbol mattress sets starting at Twin $199, Full $249, Queen $299, King $419. Mattress only starting at Twin $184, Full $225, Queen $279, King $269.
Free frame delivery with any mattress set. Futon Frame and futon mattress starting at: Twin $184, Full $225. Free solid cover with any futon mattress and futon frame. Sleepy Hollow Bed Co. Route 9 Amherst 1/2 mile East of Amherst College 253-2337

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles,
Levels- lessons@up wingo.com 584-7750

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

LOST

Reward
Lost Book Bag
Inside- Large black art sketch book
Sentimental value. Please call Ian 546-3443

RENT PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/security deposit
Deductions? Question about subletting/assigning leases?
Questions about the condition of your new house or Apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance.
549-1906

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica from $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149!
Springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs from

TRAVEL

Florida! Get Group – Go Free!!
springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Fraternities and Sororities, get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money, let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up!
TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call
Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City. Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator.
TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK!
Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee!
REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.
Wanted! Spring Breakers!
Go on Spring
Break 2003 for FREE!
Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@suncoastvacations.com to find out more info!

SPRING BREAK INSANITY!

TRAVEL

WWW.INTER-CAMPUS.COM OR CALL 1-800-327-6013 GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES! CANCUN, JAMAICA, FLORIDA AND BAHAMAS PARTY CRUISE! FIFTEEN YEARS EXPERIENCE! FREE TRIPS FOR CAMPUS REPS!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips.
Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849
www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break
Travel Free
Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre
Free Drinks/Lowest Prices
1800-426-7710
www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers
Travel Free 2003
Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV
www.sunsplashtours.com
1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours
Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun
www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!... 1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 3
4	NBC / 4
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN InfoChannel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-to-Travel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN- 38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass!

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30a.m.-4:30p.m. Mon.-Fri. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 35 cents/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

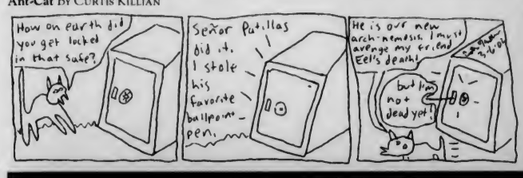
C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH (2)	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	News/hour With Jim Lehrer (In Stereo)		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB (3)	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ (4)	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WCVB (5)	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI (6)	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News			Friends	Raymond
WHDH (7)	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WTXX (8)	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT (9)	News	NFC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WTIC (11)	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)	News			Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP (22)	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WGBY (57)	World News	Business Rpt.	News/hour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		Antiques Roadshow: Chocolate Factory: Hershey, Pennsylvania (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB (40)	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK (38)	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Chess	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News	Ent. Tonight		5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS (29)	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (Ch) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E (A)	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Mercenaries		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN (20)	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM (35)	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kilborn	★★ "Packer" (1936, Satire) Edward Harlow, Christina Rico				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC (36)	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackhead's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN (21)	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)					Major League Baseball	Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE (26)	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV (30)	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Lil Jo Movie	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK (46)	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Total by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI (25)	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC (23)	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Bath"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TM (55)	NYPD Blue "Lem Peters"		Pretender "If" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs	Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)			Inside NBA		Prime Suspect 3 Day Off" (1998)
USA (33)	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Blank Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley						★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO (8)	(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13						Str Fest Under (In Stereo)	Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX (28)	(5:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Sat. Enough	★½ "Mr. Myself's Here" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. R						★½ "Sweet Novembr" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. PG-13
SHOW (9)	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. PG				★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett. R						Soul Food (N) (In Stereo)	Resurrection Blvd.

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

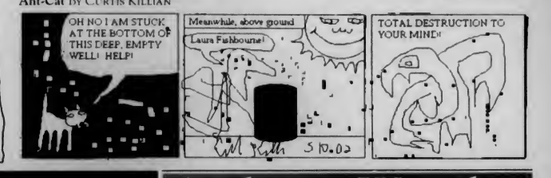
Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

The Torques By Ken Fredette



Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"You need something special all right. You need something special to give you hope. But hope's just a word that maybe you said or maybe you heard on some windy corner 'round a wide-angled curve."

-Bob Dylan

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 80 LOW: 55	HIGH: 81 LOW: 59	HIGH: 79 LOW: 61

Horoscopes

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – The kids of today should defend themselves against the 70's. It's not reality, just someone else's sentimentality.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – It makes much more sense to live in the present tense.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – Sorry is the fool who trades his soul for a Corvette. Think you'll get the girl? You'll only get the mechanic.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Soon you'll be a star in somebody else's sky, but why can't it be mine?
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Take a drive today. Time to emancipate. You'll see things much clearer once they're in your rearview mirror.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Unsealed on a porch, a letter sits. Open it.
PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – Hormones firing like a fifty-foot roman. Please don't make me explain.
ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – There's time enough for you to lay your head down tonight. Maybe it'll wash away all those yesterdays.
TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Sorry is the fool who trades his life for hi-rise rent. Seems the more you make equals the loneliness you get.
GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – Hail hail the lucky ones, we refer to those in love.
CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – Is Today your birthday? You'll win the lottery.
LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – We were but stones, your light made us stars.

ACROSS
1 Mock fanfare
5 Striped stone
10 Malinese man
14 Novalist Jean
15 Unfounded report
16 Secret writing
17 Verbal
18 Shines
19 Novelist Murdoch
20 Fastener
22 High points
23 Guy's date
24 Grey Cup org.
25 Bright color
29 Tended the plants
33 Birchbark craft
34 Raise (kids)
36 Trucker's rig
37 Superlative suffix
38 Value
39 Chaney of films
40 Playwright Simon
42 James — Jones
43 Delight
45 Fled
47 Wandered off
49 Hollow place
50 Tune
51 Jelly flavor
54 Planned
60 Indian royal
61 Legend
62 "Born Free" subject
63 Press
64 Orchard
65 Danger
66 Lemony taste
67 Irish poet
68 Aching

DOWN
1 New Mexico resort
2 Mystique
3 Unable to hear
4 Fast, in music
5 Type of sock
6 Swallow greedily
7 Pierre's "Help!"
8 Night on the —
9 Hosp. areas
10 Wintertime sights
11 Campus building
12 Comics dog
13 Minus
21 Fe
22 Behind, on a ship
24 Small wagon
25 Movie part
26 Lawyer's workload
27 Prank
28 Tire feature
29 Lamenis
30 Pass along
31 Ham it up
32 Hed supper
35 Botch up
38 Rendezvous
41 Drinking like a pooch
43 Camel of song
44 Pansies
46 Crusty dessert
48 Lessens
51 Coarse sand
52 Unusual: to Cicero
53 Unknown auth.
54 Stallion's male
55 "Fernando" group
56 Story line
57 Potpourri
58 Gorbachev's domain
59 Seiza
61 Actress Wray

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	R	O	M	A	S		M	P	H		S	L	A	M
R	E	H	I	R	E		O	R	E		H	I	L	O
F	O	S	S	I	L		D	I	M		O	N	T	O
		T	A	L	C	U	M	P	O	W	D	E	R
H	A	T	E	S		S	A	L	E		D	E	A	R	S
E	M	I	R		S	P	E	E			I	R	I	S
A	I	D		M	R	S		S	L	O	S	H	E	D
R	N	A		O	N	O		E	A	U		O	V	A
D	O	P	H	I	N	S		B	I	R	D		I	D
		R	A	E		A	S	H		B	O	L	D
S	T	R	E	W		I	R	A		S	A	S	S	Y
Q	U	I	C	K	A	S	A	W	I	N	K
U	R	G	E		M	A	R		V	I	E	N	N	A
R	E	B	A		B	A	A		A	B	O	U	I	T
T	O	L	E			O	C	T		N	E	S	T	L	E

10-18-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Rice Soup

Chicken Pesto Pasta

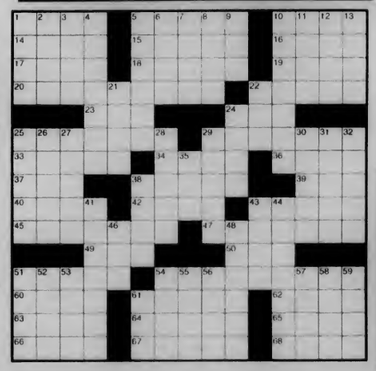
Philly Steak Sandwich

Tofu Fricassee
Oney Ga (vegan)

3-Cheese Quesadilla (vegetarian)

DINNER

Tomato Rice Soup



BBQ Chicken Quarters

Baked Chicken Quarters

Beef Stew

Seitan Bourguignon (vegan)

Falafel Burger (vegan)

Editorial Staff

Matthew Despres
James Schaffer
Scott Eldridge II
Mike Kulak
Emily Richards
Jolene Rousseau

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Good fortune eludes struggling UMass

By Andrew Merritt
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team features some potent weapons. Two forwards – junior Prah Myers and senior Jeff Deren – who have the ability to put the ball in the net, a solid midfield and a young defense that has shown incredible improvement over the first six games of the season.

What it might be missing now is a horseshoe nailed over the entrance to Rudd Field, or possibly Head Coach Sam Koch could just have the Blarney Stone shipped to Amherst and plant it directly behind the south goal.

UNH	1
UMass	0

All that was missing from the UMass attack yesterday was luck, but that was probably what the Minutemen needed most as they fell to New Hampshire, 1-0. The Maroon and White submitted one of its best performances of the year, but couldn't find the finishing touch to put a crooked number on the scoreboard.

"I thought we played better today, but we were unfortunate," Koch said. "We deserved a better result today."

Meanwhile, UNH benefited from a late goal from junior Josh Harold, and held off some inspired Minuteman attacks to take the win back to Durham. Harold took a pass from freshman Eric Masi and snuck a dribbler past UMass junior keeper Colin Burns at 79:13.

While the Minutemen haven't found the back of the net in 187:04, this game saw an attack that put 12 shots on the board in the second half, including at least a half dozen chances that had the crowd at Rudd Field gasping for air, including a groin at the 85:25 mark that had senior Derek Rhodes with an open shot from just inside the penalty box. Rhodes blasted the ball mere inches over the crossbar, nearly completing a well-played sequence by UMass.

The Minutemen continued their assault on UNH keeper Mike Vignola, but most close shots missed the net and anything coming from outside went directly into the waiting arms of Vignola.

"We had our chances," Deren said. "We can't complain about the way we played, we did create our chances. I cut across the keeper one time, and he made a huge save, maybe I should have shot it earlier."

Deren wasn't the only one to see a few quality chances in front. Freshman Jason Scudamore led a charge down the field with a mad dash up the middle. The attack was stifled, however, as UNH stacked some of its midfielders low, and the slumping UMass offense wasn't able to finish off the job.

Defensively, the Minutemen played with poise, and limited the UNH attack to just six shots, only two of which were in the second half. The effort from UMass' back line reflected the experience lent by the addition of Rhodes to its ranks.

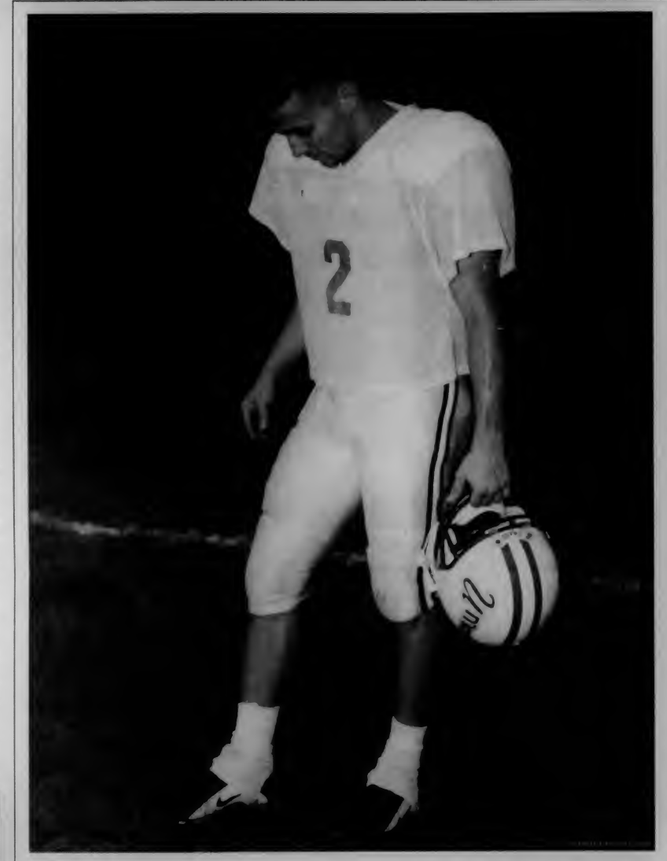
"I've just been sorting it out, it's a lot of information," Rhodes said. "I've been trying to make sure everyone stays with their marks, knows who they have, just make it real clear what their jobs are. We need someone to lead back there, and take control. We have a lot of young guys in the back there, first time playing at this level, and it's a lot different."

Yesterday was the first step in the harvesting of Rhodes' work.

"I think we took some steps forward even though the score doesn't show it," Rhodes said. "We have to keep working every week, so when the conference season comes, we'll be ready."

The first half was loaded with fouls, with each team committing 11. The second half saw a more wide-open game, although the two squads remained physical, including some near scuffles in the waning moments. Of course, some of that chippy play came from the frustration experienced by the Minutemen.

"There's complete frustration," Deren said. "We are putting the effort in, and the ball's just not bouncing our way. We needed that win."



The Maroon and White showed more intensity, however, than it has in the last few matchups, which is a welcome change for Koch's squad.

"There was a little lull halfway through the second half," Koch said, "but I thought we played with the intensity that we needed. We played with the intensity we needed to win."

With the victory, UNH snaps a two-game losing streak to UMass, and brings its record to 3-2-0. The Maroon and White drop to 2-4-0.

UMass now takes its show – improving defense, missed chances and all – on the road for a contest with Maine Saturday. Then, the squad will have one more game in front of the home crowd against Hartford on Sept. 28 before kicking off the Atlantic 10 season with Dayton on Oct. 4.

"We can learn a lot from this game," Deren said, "and we still have the games against Maine and Hartford to get ready until we break out our Atlantic 10 season. By that time we'll be full steam ahead, ready to go."

Devlin Barnes (No. 12) in an air battle for possession. The Minutemen were unlucky on offense yesterday, despite such aggressive play.

Putting it behind

Zullo returns to NU two years after injury

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

Lightning may never strike twice, but it's difficult to return to the place where it first struck.

On a bright October day in Boston in 2000, the Massachusetts football team was without its best player in Marcel Shipp and had a new quarterback under center in Kelly Seibert. In a hole from the opening kickoff, which Northeastern returned for a touchdown, things seemed like they could not get much worse for an injury-laden UMass squad.

Then lightning struck. On a Seibert pass to star receiver Adrian Zullo, No. 2 collapsed in a heap after a hard hit. The Minutemen won the game, 21-16, but lost their top receiver for the next season and a half.

"It was definitely the worst injury I ever had, but I didn't know the extent of it until I got the MRI and they told me I was going to have to have two surgeries," Zullo said. "Once I did it, I knew I was done for the season, I didn't know how long it would be until I made it back on the field. But I felt it go and my shoulder pads came right off because I knew I was done."

"It was that kind of year," Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "The week before Marcel gets hurt at Hofstra, we also lost Tyler Lauback who was playing really well, so it was a credit to the kids in the program to win the game."

Two years later, UMass' all-time leading receiver is back, and though he has shown signs of rust in his first two games of the 2002 season, he has left no doubt as to his physical condition.

"He runs just as well and he's much more aware," Wide Receiver Coach Paul Gorham said. "He's a much more cerebral receiver – he can see things. When he was an [underclassman], he was just the fastest kid on the field and wasn't sure what he was doing and why he was doing it. Now he's got a little bit of guile, he can read coverages and he's got a sense of what the defense is trying to do to him."

Now comes not only the test of his first contest against an Atlantic 10 opponent since that October afternoon, but also comes the challenge of overcoming the mental aspect of returning to Parsons Field for the first time since the worst injury of his career.

"Yeah, I'm a little nervous, but this is the game I've been waiting for since I got injured over there," Zullo said. "Me and Anton [McKenzie] got injured by the same team so we've been talking with each other everyday, getting each other excited, but I guess the nerves are kind of shaky right now."

"It was good for Adrian last year to be able to work on the mental aspect of things," Associate Athletic Director for Sports Medicine Jeff Smith said. "Anytime you come back from an injury, whether severe or minor, there's that mental aspect of things. It takes time to overcome that."

"You have to be nervous," Whipple said. "If you're not nervous, you have problems."

The long and winding road

The trail back to the field was a long, arduous one for Zullo that started from day one.

"It was pretty intense actually," Zullo said. "Once I woke up from my surgery, they already had me hooked up to this machine that was bending my leg, trying to get the motion back in it. It was mostly the doctors forcing the leg to bend and that was quite painful. It was like learning to walk all over again. I didn't take my first step until two and a half months after my injury."

With two surgeries to overcome, just getting back on the playing field was not necessarily a given for the receiver, let alone getting back to the form that earned him First Team All Atlantic 10 honors in 1999, when he made 81 catches for 1,253 yards and nine scores.

"I don't think he takes for granted his athletic ability," Whipple said. "He had some concerns when he got hurt, they weren't sure he was going to be able to play again. [His being back on the field] talks about not only what kind of athlete he is, but what he's got in his heart that makes him a great football player."

But support from his teammates and hard work led to the best medicine for the senior – getting back to playing football.

"Even the day I woke up from surgery I was getting phone calls from our assistant coach right now [and former Minuteman offensive lineman] Tyler Lauback," Zullo said. "He told me, 'Just keep working hard and you'll be back and we'll be here waiting for you.' So it's been great."

With Zullo gone from the equation, the 2000 Minutemen limped to a 5-3 record in the A-10 and found themselves out of the playoffs just two years removed from a

Turn to ZULLO, page 9

THE FUTURE OF JOSH JOPLIN GOES TO ARTS PAGE 5.
TEAM PLAYERS ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
FRIDAY ISSUE THIRTEEN 9.20.02

'Money matters' stressed at Faculty Senate

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

As Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP) union members held signs and wore pins advocating their causes, Chancellor John V. Lombardi addressed the Faculty Senate yesterday for the first time.

Repeating what has become part of his self-proclaimed mantra, "money matters," Lombardi said that the University must handle its financial situation, and explained what can be done.

"Money purchases all that keeps the quality of the University here. The first thing I did when I got here was look at the money," he said. "Let me share what I saw."

According to Lombardi the commonwealth of Massachusetts has "historically struggled" to support the University at a level that would maintain the quantity of quality it strives for. Statistically, the University receives about 40 percent of its funds from the state, while comparative universities only receive 30 percent.

"We have too much dependence on the state's revenue," he said, adding that the University is a generation behind its competitors in private support and funds.

To relieve the University's dependence on state funding and increase private support, Lombardi has begun to set into place a fundraising committee.

Fundraisers in the past, according to Lombardi, have proven that there is private monetary support to be had by the University.

"We are organizing a vehicle to achieve that success," he said.

In addition, Lombardi pushed faculty to be more competitive for grants and contracts. Although they have been "very successful," he wanted to see more grants and contracts funding faculty work.

"There are not enough people. Our faculty is smaller than it should be. We must expand our capacity to go after grants and contracts. There is money to be had in every field, even for miserable historians of Venezuela," said Lombardi, a professor of Latin American Studies, specializing in Venezuela. "Every dollar is important, everybody has to go after that."

Turning to the issue of contract funding and the faculty, Lombardi showed his support for the contracts and their eventual funding, but explained that he does not support cutting one department or area of the University to support another.

"Other challenges: the state is in terrible financial difficulty, budget cuts, the political process has left contracts unfunded," he said.

"I don't know anybody who isn't in favor of funding the contracts. I am not in favor, however, of taxing ourselves to do it. I am not in favor of robbing one side for the other. We'll lobby like mad, and when the state has the money to fully fund the contracts we'll take the opportunity. It is an obligation of the state, not the institutions," Lombardi said.

Lombardi explained that even as the flagship campus we are no longer the University of Massachusetts, but the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

"We are an independent voice within the system," he said. "Flagship means you're better. It's a performance requirement that comes with the name. But if we're not sure who we are...then nobody can help us."

Speaking to the future of the University and the ability of the commonwealth to fund the campus properly, Lombardi advised Senate members to appreciate that the "state is not getting better," and that it will become an issue not only of funding, but of being able to sustain the funding that we currently have. Lombardi advised members to think about what would make them invest in an institution, and how to convince investors of the worth of the University.

"I think this is a terrific place, but it won't stay that way if we don't get some money into this place," he said. "If we don't get the money we're going to be in trouble. We're going to get the money."

The chancellor also explained his transformation from objective outsider to becoming an insider within the community.

"When you arrive as an outsider, you say about the place around you 'they and you,' 'you do,' 'you behave,' it is comfortable because you don't have to take any responsibility," he said. "I'm almost transformed. I'm losing my outsider's objective. But before I do so, let me tell you that how we look to the outside is very important. We are competing in a national marketplace."

The Faculty Senate also took the opportunity to express its appreciation to former Presiding Officer Frank Hugus for his twenty years of service in the Senate.

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

John Lombardi addresses the Faculty Senate yesterday in their first meeting of the year. In a continuing trend, Lombardi stuck with his mantra, "money matters."

New psychology program gets anonymous grant

By Marilyn Cardano
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts Psychology Department recently received an anonymous $2.5 million gift to establish a study for peace psychology and the prevention of violence. The study will make UMass a frontrunner in research of violence and peace.

"Under this initiative, the University will be in a position to play a distinctive role in promoting peace in a world so often torn by ethnic, religious, and political strife," University President William Bulger said.

The Psychology of Peace and the Prevention of Violence Initiative will promote peace and minimize violence at both the individual and group levels, providing a doctoral concentration in peace psychology. Researchers and scholars will explain the conditions that lead people to act either violently or cooperatively, as well as explaining ways to prevent violence and promote cooperation and peace.

UMass Psychology Professor Ervin Staub will head the new field. Staub began in the late 1960s by studying the nature of altruism and people helping one another. In the 1970s he studied in depth the origins of genocide and mass killing and in the 1990s he worked on the prevention of violence. His work in war-torn Rwanda was key in helping both sides sort out their differences peacefully. He was the 1990 recipient of the Intercultural and International Relations Prize of the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues, which is part of the American Psychological Association.

The donors of the gift presented it to the University this past summer after they toured universities in the Northeast, according to Staub. The donors are a couple, each with a Ph.D. in psychology, who are peace activists seeking to promote peace and nonviolence.

Staub said he worked with the donors for a year as they were gathering information about potential recipients. According to Staub, they chose UMass for several reasons, including that they were impressed with the UMass Psychology Department. He said that the Five College community being a "hospitable place" for this type of research is another. Staub's personal work in the field in which the donors are interested also played a role in their decision.

The program is still in the planning stages and will be offered in the fall of 2004 as a doctoral research program, said Staub. It will prepare graduate students for teaching in this arena and for further research in the field of group and individual violence. It will also stress working with others to promote better human relationships and peaceful societies.

Although this is a doctorate program, Staub hopes that this will eventually be expanded so that undergraduate courses and opportunities will grow out of it. He hopes to be able to bring this topic to the public with lectures.

Only $500,000 of the gift is accessible at this time, and it will pay for the hiring of one additional faculty member and what will be needed for the first four years of the program. The remainder is set up as an endowment and only the interest will be available. After the program gets underway, doctoral candidates will apply for grants to keep the program going. Staub said he hopes that others in the private sector will show interest in this program for financial consideration.

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

Fire in the hole

Engine Company No. 3 of the Amherst Fire Department puts out a fire in a mock dormitory room near the Campus Center yesterday. The demonstration was a part of the 'Living with Fire' program, which is designed to raise awareness about fire hazards commonly found in college residencies.

First Save UMass meeting Monday

The Save UMass campaign resumes Monday at noon in Campus Center, Room 902 with the group's first fall meeting.

"Many issues facing undergrads affect the whole UMass community," a press release by the Save UMass group stated. "If you want to help make a difference, you are invited to Save UMass' first fall meeting."

Save UMass has many issues left that it would like to address, including the cuts of the minority support programs, the lack of campus security, student fee increases, overenrollment in courses, library funding cuts, and the lack of funding in general in higher education.

The program was created last year in the face of major budget cuts statewide. The coalition repeatedly rallied, lobbied and put pressure on University and state leaders to do everything they could to keep budget cuts from gutting UMass.

The largest of these rallies was a march on the statehouse steps in Boston. Thirteen buses carrying 600 to 700 students arrived on Beacon Hill April 25 to join a statewide rally to protest budget cuts. Students displaying signs reading "We won't be raped by budget cuts, save security," "Stop the cuts, raise revenues," "Money to fight the Union, but no money for classes," "Education without privatization" and "Scholars against Squalor" marched peacefully on the statehouse, joining a group of several thousand public education backers.

"I think it sends a message out that it's a serious problem the Legislature needs to address," Representative Jose Santiago, (D – Lowell), said in the April 26 edition of the Collegian. "It shows the commitment that education should be a priority up here on the hill, as it is for me here."

The coalition rallied several times before that, including a meeting of over 1000 students on March 7. That rally focused on getting students to write letters and call their legislators. "The state University is dependent upon sufficient money from the state," state Representative Ellen Story (D – Amherst) said at the rally. "The majority of the state legislature doesn't know much or care much about this University."

– Dan Lamothe

CAMPUS PERSPECTIVES

By Dan Roy

Is discrimination or acceptance more widespread in the U.S.?

Jenny Belfield
Senior
BFA in Art

"You want to find someone you can put on the outside so you can feel like you're on the inside."

Dina Itkin
Freshman
SOM

"In the U.S. the children are brought up to be more accepting than maybe in other countries."

Byron Jennings
Junior
Computer Science

"Discrimination is very widespread. All ethnic groups here stick to their own. White people talk down to me all the time on campus."

Naihalie Schroeder
Sophomore
Anthropology

"People have such high opinions of themselves that they're not open to accepting those with different viewpoints."

Jasper McChesney
Senior
BDIC

"Acceptance. People I know all take strong stances on that sort of thing."

Chuck Berry-Skillen
Junior
History

"Discrimination is more prevalent by far if you include subtle forms. People who don't conform, especially with ideas, are discriminated against."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. This paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Fri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

KARATE

Flexibility Confidence Conditioning

Est. 1982

Karate Health Fitness Center
460 WEST ST. AMHERST
256-0080

0217024

Humanities and Fine Arts Alumni in the World
Dean's Seminar Series - Fall 2002

COME MEET LEADING UMASS ALUMNI FROM THE ENTERTAINMENT INDUSTRY

September 23
Kyle Cooper, '84
Founder/Creative Director, Imaginary Forces

Lecture:
Monday, September 23
4:30 - 6:00 PM, 430 Fine Arts Center

"O For a Muse of Fire"
Kyle Cooper, designer of over 100 titles for film and television will lead a discussion of the design methodology and thinking behind his bi-coastal company, Imaginary Forces.

UMASS

Other dates and times of events will be announced soon. For all event details, look for posters in your department, check out ads in the Daily Collegian, or contact Sharon Davenport at: sharond@admin.umass.edu.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Political analyst to speak Wednesday

COURTESY LEIGHBUREAU.COM

Kevin Phillips

Amherst College will host political commentator Kevin Phillips Wednesday, Sept. 24 at 4 p.m. in Johnson Chapel as part of the annual Croxton Fund Lecture.

Phillips will address the topic "Your Generation and Politics" to an audience made up primarily of first-year Amherst College students.

Phillips is the editor of The American Political Report, a columnist for The Wall Street Journal and the Los Angeles Times and a regular commentator on National Public Radio. In addition to recently publishing Wealth and Democracy: A Political History of the American Rich, he has written other bestsellers, such as The Politics of Rich and Poor and The Cousins Wars and Arrogant Capital.

"Through more than 25 years of analysis and prediction, nobody has been as transcendentally right about the outlines of American political change," The New York Times Book Review said about Phillips in 1993.

After graduating from Colgate University in New York, Phillips studied history and economic history at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland and received his J.D. from Harvard Law School. He went on to work as an analyst of political and voting patterns for the Republican presidential campaign in 1968, in Washington D.C.

These experiences inspired his first book, The Emerging Republican Majority, which came out in 1969. Newsweek hailed the book as "the political bible of the Nixon era."

William Croxton, a 1936 Amherst College graduate, created the Croxton Lecture Fund in 1988 in memory of his parents Ruth L. and Hugh W. Croxton. The profits from this fund are used to bring lecturers with substantial reputations to Amherst College to educate Amherst students. The Croxton Lectures will present a broad range of topics and views.

For more information on the Croxton Fund Lecture, contact the Office of Public Affairs at 542-2322.

On the Net: Speakers of Substance: http://www.leighbureau.com.

– Amy O'Neill

Travel series lecture to spark discussions

A semester-long series of lectures, presentations and panel discussions on travel kicked off last week at Mount Holyoke College. "Destinations: New Meanings of Travel," will feature well-known travel writers, editors and a variety of other speakers such as a world-famous mountain climber, an art historian and a biologist.

Organizers hope the series will spark discussion on our changing ideas about travel, including globalization in its various forms and our emotional response to travel after the Sept. 11 tragedy. Among the speakers is Conrad Anker, one of the most versatile and talented mountain climbers in the world. Anker is best known for his role in discovering the body of legendary climber George Mallory on Mount Everest in 1999.

Professor Emeritus of Fine Arts Robert Herbert will talk about "Monet and the Tourist View," which will feature old prints and photographs of actual sights painted by Monet. The play "Thomas Cole: A Waking Dream" will be presented by Mount Holyoke College's department of theater arts. The play is based on the life of Thomas Cole, famous for his 1836 oil painting "View from Mount Holyoke, Northampton, Massachusetts after a Thunderstorm (The Oxbow)." All of the events in the series, except for the theater production, take place at Mount Holyoke College and are free.

– Jamie Loo

The calm after the storm

A day after hundreds of University employees met there for the first all-union membership meeting in the history of the campus, the Student Union Ballroom sits empty yesterday.

Cornell grad students considering unionization

By Peter Norlander
CORNELL DAILY SUN (CORNELL UNIV.)

(U-WIRE) ITHACA, N.Y. – On Oct. 23 and 24, 2,200 graduate students will choose whether to unionize or not. Cornell University, the Cornell Association for Student Employees (CASE) and graduate students opposed to unionization have begun a debate to be decided at the ballot box.

Most recently, President Hunter R. Rawlings III outlined his opposition to unionization.

"Unionization will, in my view, inevitably introduce standardization and complicate the relationship between graduate students and their faculty mentors," Rawlings said in a Sept. 4 statement.

Rawlings said that the current Graduate and Professional Student Assembly "has ably voiced the concerns of graduate students." He also expressed concern over the ability to separate "all academic aspects of a graduate student's life from the collective bargaining process."

CASE/United Auto Workers (UAW) organizer Ariana Vigil, however, disagreed with Rawlings' position. "We don't have an effective body to express our demands," Vigil said, arguing that through collective bargaining with Cornell, CASE/UAW can better represent student employee concerns than the Graduate and Professional Student Assembly. "I wasn't surprised at the tone or what he was saying," Vigil said, calling Rawlings' tone "paternalistic."

"We have to separate ourselves from this big happy family rhetoric," she added.

Meanwhile, borrowing their title from a Brown University group of the same name, "At What Cost?" is a coalition of graduate students opposed to unionization.

Their website was started two weeks ago by three engineering graduate students to inform the campus about their concerns.

"We are not opposed to unions in general," Allen MacKenzie said. "We are opposed to unionization as it has been carried out at Cornell."

"The UAW has treated other graduate students abysmally," MacKenzie said.

The United Automobile Workers is the largest representative of graduate students nationally and is seeking to represent Cornell's graduate students.

For a period of time, the UAW assumed administration of the graduate student union at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst, according to MacKenzie. That administration did not include elected graduate students.

"If you are associated with the UAW, then they can come in and take over your unit," MacKenzie said. "That doesn't seem democratic to me."

Grad student Jordan Frenrich saw no need for a union. "Forming a union is an action of last resort," he said, "but it seems like most people here are happy."

Vigil said that the problems at Amherst were not long term.

"They went through a tough period," she said, "but everything there is back on track."

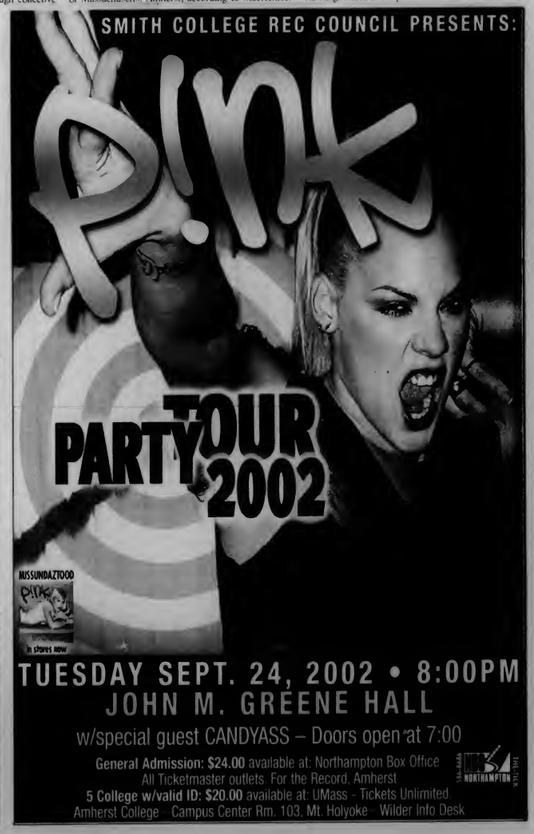
CASE/UAW's Website includes information about the organization, frequently asked questions, contact information, and other resources. A simple majority of those voting will determine whether collective bargaining to create a contract will begin. The University may reconsider its position if the National Labor Relations Board substantially changes the current understanding of labor law, which permits unionization at private universities.

"Whatever your views on student unionization might be, please take the time to inform yourself further about this important issue in the coming weeks," Rawlings stated in the press release.

www.dailycollegian.com

The Collegian is still looking for writers. Make a difference! Call 545-1762

TechCavalry
help is on the way!
Computer Troubles?
We come to your place!
We support, fix and upgrade computer systems
Call: 413 586 7070 www.techcavalry.com
Tape this ad to your computer!



Mavi jeans.

ZAMA
downtown Amherst

Making people look good, since 1984
Patrick & Company
DISTINCTIVE HAIR STYLING FOR MEN AND WOMEN
104 Russell Street, Route 9, Elmwood Shops, Hadley, MA APPOINTMENTS or WALK-IN 413.586.7477

SMITH COLLEGE REC COUNCIL PRESENTS:

TUESDAY SEPT. 24, 2002 • 8:00PM
JOHN M. GREENE HALL
w/special guest CANDYASS – Doors open at 7:00
General Admission: $24.00 available at: Northampton Box Office
All Ticketmaster outlets. For the Record, Amherst
5 College w/valid ID: $20.00 available at: UMass - Tickets Unlimited
Amherst College - Campus Center Rm. 103, Mt. Holyoke - Wilder Info Desk

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM EDITOR IN CHIEF JAMIE LOO

UMass Parking Services
It doesn't add up

Three weeks into the school year and still Parking Services hasn't solved its beginning of the semester problem. One might wonder if the problem will ever be solved, or if it will persist right up until everyone heads home for the winter.

The problem is the overcrowding of the parking lots on campus specifically designated for students who reside in the dormitories, or in more simple terms: the purple lots. There are three of these lots on campus. Lot 44, located near Sylvan and Northeast, usually does not seem to have the problems that face the other two, Lots 22 and 49.

Lot 22 is located in Southwest. This parking lot is consistently overcrowded with cars, and not just at night. Wednesday morning at 10:45, Lot 22 had one available spot. One, ein, uno. At night, the problem is much worse. After all spots are full, the cars park on the grass, which is illegal and will earn you a nice ticket. Parking Services' solution is to tell students to park in the yellow lot. Fortunately in Southwest, the yellow lot is right next door. Unfortunately, it also is filled to point of having automobiles parked on the green blades.

The next option the authorities suggest is parking in Lot 12, the yellow lot next to the infamous parking services trailers. Most students would even be willing to deal with the inconvenience of the walk back to the concrete jungle occasionally, however at two in the morning, it is a safety issue, especially when walking back alone.

In Orchard Hill and Central, which Lot 49 is designed to serve, the neighboring yellow lot is not as crowded as that in Southwest. It is though, a much longer walk, which again raises the issue of safety.

This past week It was once again brought to the forefront that unfortunately, our campus is not always the safest place to be. When Parking Services asks a student, particularly a female, to walk back to her dorm from a distant, deserted parking lot, in the middle of the night, alone, they are just screaming for the opportunity of a lawsuit against the University if anything was to happen.

There are some temporary options. Both Southwest and Lower Central have metered parking available, though it is tough to get, in and of itself. In Southwest there is also Lot 33, a green lot that is active from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. If the activation time were changed to 9 a.m., this would still be a bit early for a number of students, but would at least give a more viable option just for the night.

The real solution though lies in enforcement. Many members of the University community have experienced the wrath of Parking Services when they park in the red and blue lots designated for staff and professors. However, it is a rare scene to see Parking Services towing illegally parked cars out of the yellow and purple lots.

Even more basic, however, is the arithmetic we all learned when we were seven years old. Count the number of spaces available and count the number of cars in the lot. The latter would more than likely be greater than the former. And it doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure out what that means: more cars than spaces equals unhappy students.

The Parking Services website states as its mission that its goal is "to provide safe, orderly, and fair parking for employees, students, and visitors to our campus." Hopefully soon, this will be a reality.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Be a team player
U.S. needs foreign policy consistency

In the past few years the stance the United States has taken in the global community has been a matter of concern. In the day and age we now live in, with high-speed communication technology that travels over borders, and threats from foreign factions are mobile as well, the U.S. should take a serious look at its stance in the International Community and make sure it's in the right place.

I guess I can start with the decision made in 1997 by the Clinton administration to back out of a treaty that banned land mines. This was aimed to ban the use, production, stockpiling or transfer of land mines. It specifically referred to land mines triggered by the weight of humans not tanks. These mines indiscriminately kill 26,000 people a year.

There are estimates of 115 million land mines in the earth from past conflicts and that number increases by two million every year. In fact many innocent children die running through unmarked mine fields in third-world countries where aggressive wars have been fought in the past. This would have been the right kind of treaty to get involved in. And the world needed the U.S. to help with this since It is one of the largest military powers. Unfortunately, the U.S. was not supportive of this idea even though 100 or so other countries were.

But the fun doesn't stop there; it's really just begun. Nuclear weapons and radioactive material are deadly, and the testing of nuclear weapons is a danger to society. But the U.S. has failed to sign onto a treaty banning nuclear testing. Eighteen other countries have done so just this September, but this has been an issue for a few years now. When other nations, especially Western nations like the U.K. and France, sign onto treaties without the U.S. onboard it makes others wonder what the motives are and why this necessary cooperation is lacking. The U.S.'s cooperation on this is even more important than New Zealand's, Nigeria's and Sweden's (3 more of the 18 which ratified the treaty) because the U.S. has a huge stockpile of nuclear weapons and the technology and financial capabilities to produce more.

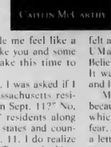
And if you thought it was over, wrong again. It seems that there isn't only a problem with nuclear weapons treaties, but with germ warfare as well. Recently the U.S. abandoned seven years of global negotiations to enforce a treaty banning germ warfare. With all this talk about weapons inspections In Iraq one would think germ warfare was a serious issue. But it seems that it was only a serious issue to the 55 other countries that had tried to pass the treaty. It failed because it needed full consensus to be approved.

Since I mention Iraq, I might as well discuss another point. Over the past months of hearing debate about the legality of a strike against Iraq, I noticed one of the key issues always mentioned is that Iraq is in violation of U.N. resolutions. What irks me about this is that Iraq isn't the largest violator of U.N. resolutions in the world; it's not even the largest violator of U.N. resolutions in its region: that title goes exclusively to Israel. Yet we don't hear much talk about that, do we? We never hear debate about reconsidering our foreign policy with Israel or the billions we send them in aid because they are in violation of the almighty resolutions the U.N. has passed. Other reasons have been cited for an attack against Iraq but if the U.S. is to cite violations of U.N resolutions it should make that a global standard and not exclude Israel. Besides, we don't want too many "rogues" running around.

The United Nations is an organization that must be respected and supported. I have had teachers tell me they were taught in the 1950s that the United Nations would save the world. But the America's recent moves have not helped that goal.

"What irks me about this is that Iraq isn't the largest violator of U.N. resolutions in the world..."

In fact this past month a U.N.-sponsored world summit was held in South Africa on sustainable development. This is very important for third-world countries because it will help them rise from a seemingly endless whirlpool of poverty and despair. Heads of state from nations across the globe met in Johannesburg. And logically one would think that the President of the wealthiest nation on this earth, the nation that has the power to create sustainable development, would have attended. He didn't. Kofi Annan said at that summit, "[Rich nations] have the wealth. They have the technology. And they contribute, disproportionately, to global environmental problems."



Who knows why Bush didn't go. Maybe It was because he couldn't find South Africa on a map, maybe it was because he was held up taking his shoes off at the airport, or maybe it was just because he couldn't find a place to put a meeting on the development of the world he lives in into his busy schedule.

Then there's Kyoto, yet another treaty that the U.S. backed out of. According to journalist Greg Palast, "The Kyoto Protocol aimed to slash emissions of 'greenhouse gasses' which would otherwise fry the planet, melt the polar ice caps and put Blackpool and Los Angeles under several feet of water. (It will also have negative effects)." But it seems too many big lobbyists got to the Bush administration and convinced them that a treaty banning significant pollution emissions was bad for business.

And I think I will end with the International Court of Justice. This is where war crimes are dealt with. This summer the U.S. said it would only take part in more peacekeeping missions and recognizes the authority of the ICJ, if all American personnel are immune to its authority. Doesn't that defeat the purpose? This request by the U.S. illegitimates the ICJ's authority. Have the Balkans taught us nothing? The idea of the court isn't new, and even in its origins F.D. Roosevelt had this to say about it: "Those who voted against the principle of the World Court, I am inclined to think that if they ever get to Heaven they will be doing a great deal of apologizing for a very long time – that is if God is against war – and I think He is."

Yousef Muwayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

Let me introduce myself

Caitlin McCarthy

On Sept. 13 my column in the Collegian was entitled "Is it really so much to ask?" Being that I am brand new to this writing thing, I was a little skeptical about whether or not I should have changed my column before I sent it to be printed.

Then I realized that it didn't matter because I am writing for the Editorial/Opinion department of this paper. I can write whatever I want as long as it is not slanderous or libelous. I knew that people would be offended and that I would get feedback. My prediction was correct and I was happy to read everyone's comments. The feedback made me feel like a real writer, some critics like you and some don't. I just wanted to take this time to clear some things up.

In a letter to the editor, I was asked if I was "insinuating that Massachusetts residents did not suffer loss on Sept. 11?" No, I was not. Massachusetts' residents along with residents from other states and countries suffered loss on Sept. 11. I do realize that more than just the Towers in New York got attacked on that day. There was also the Pentagon, the hijacked planes; people had losses all over. I was then asked, "Doesn't their loss count?" Yes, of course, every loss counts and I would never single out anyone. Then there was a comment about me turning it into "some sort of competition of which state suffered more." I was never turning it into a competition, just stating how I felt. I did feel alone.

The point of my column was not "a self-righteous attack on our community at UMass," as was stated in one response. It was trying to explain my feelings as to being away from my hometown when all this was occurring at home.

It was never an issue of what state I was from, or what state suffered the most loss; it was my hometown and home area that I was talking about. If you do not understand my point, then here is what I am trying to get across. I grew up with New York City at my fingertips. It was a part of daily life. A lot of people commuted to work there. The skyline was something I could see every day if I wanted to. The Twin Towers meant a lot for the city; in a way they represented the city. When something as astronomical as Sept. 11 happens in your back yard, it really touches you.

Being up here is different than being at home; it is a different world. In general, everyday life is different compared to being at home. There is in fact a difference for me to remember Sept. 11 here, or to have remembered it at home. I don't think it is irrational when I say that there is a difference; I know – I live there.

For example, a professor in one class asked how many people had seen Ground Zero: about five people raised their hands. That small percentage of people is a prime example. Any out-of-state student is a minority at a state university. The point of me saying this is, that this is where I come from when I say I felt alone. I was not attacking the people of UMass, or the state of Massachusetts. Believe me: I love this school and this state. It was my choice to come to school here and live here for four years.

My column was labeled as selfish because I told a story about my mourning, which was described as, "her shock, her fear, her grief, her anger, her confusion," in a letter to the editor. If I am writing a column about myself, of course the content is going to be about my shock, my fear, my grief, my anger, and my confusion. That is how a story about me goes, so why should that be labeled as selfish? Now, I understand that not everyone is going to grieve or mourn in the same way. I did not mention this in my column and maybe it would have made a difference if I had. Although I mention the way I dealt with things, it does not mean everyone has to do it like me. Here is the thing: I know that when an event hits closer to home, people are affected a little bit more.

If, God forbid, something happened to the city of Boston, I feel that there would have been different reactions, because it would have hit closer to home for most people here. I know that planes out of Boston crashed, and I have respect for that. Once again I am not making it a competition: believe me it is just an example. If we used a different city out on the West Coast it would be the same scenario. Less people here would have been hit close to home. Here is another example, on a much smaller scale. If someone has a death in their family, that person's friends are going to be upset and feel bad for them and their family. But the family is going to react to the death in a different way just because the family had a history with the deceased family member. They were closer to the person in their family than their friends were.

"If, God forbid, something happened to the city of Boston, I feel that there would have been different reactions..."

This compared to Sept. 11 seems rather meager, but nothing can really be compared to those events.

When I think about how our country was attacked on Sept. 11 I get very angry. My anger makes me emotional and I can talk about the topic all day. My column was written out of anger toward the events. It was a flowing of words that ran out from my emotions. The reason I called the vigil at the Student Union "pretty pathetic," is because it simply was. With all the students on this campus, the outcome should have been enormous and I found it disappointing. The service itself was very nice; I never said that it wasn't. For those of you who say you don't need to show patriotism on that day, I disagree with you. On Sept. 11, it is not just about mourning what happened, but showing respect for our country. In a conversation with one of my friends from home who goes to school in Pennsylvania, she told me how there were flags flying all over her campus. Just about every student attended the vigil held at her school and it was held at 8:48 a.m., earlier than most people wake up on any other day. I suppose I was expecting more from people here.

Maybe I use the outcome of the vigil as an analogy to the world in which we live. I have silly dreams that everyone in the world will come together in peace, I do not like to lose faith in my dreams, but I know in reality that there will never be world peace. Seeing the lack of togetherness at the vigil made a perfect example of this for me once I saw it with my own eyes. If people cannot come together on a college campus, than how could we ever get the world to come together? I was hoping that this column would better describe where I am coming from. If you do not agree that is fine, but I will continue to stand by my opinion. Thank you.

Caitlin McCarthy is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Regan McKendry's column, "Laboring for the Truth." The tone and sheer ignorance in this column is astonishing. First of all, McKendry makes it sound as if sweatshop labor is only a third-world problem. There are hundreds of illegal sweatshops in New York, Los Angeles and many other major American cities. These sweatshops have been known to break every safety and workplace law imaginable. Another claim made by McKendry is that cheap labor "helps to keep the cost of items down. I don't see the crowds lining up to pay people $6-7 an hour so that each of their T-shirts will cost $300," he says. This is the illogical line of thinking we hear from CEOs such as Phil Knight of Nike. The fact is that the miserable pay and working conditions that workers are subjected to are completely unnecessary. Multinational corporations could pay their workers a living wage and provide safe working conditions without passing on the cost to consumers. Sweatshops exist because corporations are decreasing costs to increase profits as much as possible, and governments around the world are unwilling to compel corporations to change their behavior.

McKendry also claims that workers are "happy" to be exploited and would have "no means of income" if it wasn't for the noble factory. And I suppose McKendry thinks the homeless are just people who like living outdoors. Most sweatshops workers do not make enough money to survive their country's standard of living. According to the National Labor Committee, Chinese apparel workers earn approximately 23 cents per hour, while the living wage in China is 87 cents per hour.

McKendry then shows his true colors. "I have to ask what these irate people expect to accomplish," he says. Gee, how about a living wage for all workers, ending sexual and verbal abuse at factories, and a safe working environment. Is that too much to ask? McKendry then goes from the ridiculous to being plain asinine referring to anti-sweatshop activists as "wacko hippies." I guess many students, professors, economists, union members and most American citizens who are disgusted with corporate lies are wacko or don't have "access to the information" as McKendry claims he does. Finally, McKendry is obviously not reading the signs posted where he works. He says, "The true way to hurt a company is simply to not give them your money." Well McKendry, what do you think activists are calling for?

David de Hoyos
UMass graduate student

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to Lindsey Elder's column entitled "Defenders on the Defense" which appeared in The Daily Collegian on Wednesday, Sept. 18.

Ms. Elder's column has to be one of the best editorials I have read in my time here at UMass. Although most of us here at UMass want peace, a lot of us don't realize that certain measures must be taken to achieve that; namely military.

The fact that members of the military receive harassment from "peace" supporters astonishes me. Last year on Veterans Day, there was a ceremony In Amherst center to commemorate soldiers who fought and died for our country. I did not get to attend it myself, but read that students were burning flags at the ceremony as war veterans were making their speeches.

Where do you get off? Countless soldiers have fought and died in war and this is how you treat them? Burn the flag in front of the men and women who serve to protect your freedom every day? Threaten to kill them and spray paint their buildings with messages of hate? Is this your definition of "peace?" If you feel that this country is so horrible to live in, why don't you just leave? Go live in your perfect world somewhere else.

The role of the military was perhaps best stated by Father Denis Edward O'Brien: "It is the soldier, not the reporter, who has given us freedom of the press. It is the soldier, not the poet, who has given us freedom of speech. It is the soldier, not the campus organizer, who has given us the freedom to demonstrate. It is the soldier who salutes the flag, who serves beneath the flag, and whose coffin is draped by the flag, who allows the protester to burn the flag."

In closing, I would like to thank all the soldiers who put their lives on the line everyday to keep our country safe. You have my utmost support and are in my prayers.

Lisa McLaughlin
UMass Student

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.20.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Josh Joplin Group's Future looks good

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

JOSH JOPLIN GROUP
The Future That Was
Artemis Records

I'll admit that when I realized the Josh Joplin Group was the band that played the song "Camera One," a formulaic poppy song with a catchy little hook ("You're playing you now"), I was afraid that delving into their sophomore release The Future That Was would disappoint me as a follow-up from a pop group that nailed the songwriting mission once, but never found it again.

I won't go into cliches about judging books by their covers or bands by their singles, I will say, however, that The Future That Was, while not being any sort of groundbreaking pop opus, was a pleasure to listen to.

Josh Joplin's inspirations, both musical and biographical, shine in his lyrics, most of which show a cynical, yet not entirely antagonistic approach to culture and growing up young. "I am not the only cowboy in this one-horse metaphor," from "I Am Not the Only Cowboy," slated to be the first single from the record, is just one example of Joplin's wry, but meaningful writing. He's not out to make you laugh at how much life sucks, but rather to show you that the picture isn't as pretty as it ought to be – but what you're left with isn't too terrible either.

As for the actual music on the record, Joplin and his crew have crafted a nice pop sound that, while not being the cleanest or most original sound possible, still works, and shows depth and range. They can start a song with a bang, as on "Siddharthas of Suburbia" and "Happy at Last," but the group also has the ability to be soft, deep and sometimes downright mournful with songs like "Listening" and "Dishes." "Dishes" became my early favorite song on the record, because while there are lyrics to provide the setting in the first minute of the song, the last minute and a half is all instrumental, and the song paints the picture of the employees at a small diner with all the clarity that words could provide.

Joplin doesn't go for any vocal challenges on the record, and that might be a good thing. After all, his lyrics are about subtle, average feelings about life, and the music doesn't lose its grasp on the structure it begins with, so for Joplin to start sustaining climactic notes would become jarring and take away from the actual emotion and intellect in the crafting of the songs.

Other highlights from The Future That Was include "Must Be You," the first track on the album, which is a fun little rock song. It verges just close enough to Third Eye Blind territory to appeal to the pop mentality, but not so much as to become tired and predictable.

Another personal favorite from The Future That Was is "Wonderful Ones," a mid-range rock tune with some real deep electric guitar, providing a wonderfully comfortable sound that nearly hides the cynical anti-propaganda theme of the song.

The title track of the album also stood out, mainly because of the ideas in the lyrics. One of Joplin's trademark concepts is the loss of a dream, especially the dreams of being famous. This theme comes through in "The Future That Was," with the message that life doesn't always turn out the way it was supposed to be. While the idea becomes a little mournful, the song is not an overly depressed one. There is some optimism in the sound, at least that as bad as things get, there still was the dream, and life now isn't exactly the worst possible way to be.

While Josh Joplin Group's The Future That Was won't leave you with a brand new outlook on life, or cause any major rifts in the pop music landscape, it is a very enjoyable record, and shows that this young band has found its voice, and isn't wasting it with an excess of radio-ready fluff. The time-tested rock riffs and basic pop rhythms conceal the depth on the record, but the bright spots aren't entirely overshadowed. Joplin and his mates have crafted a wonderful little record for their sophomore release, and have proven that a hot single on a debut album doesn't have to spell disaster for the rest of a career.

COURTESY JOSH JOPLIN GROUP/ARTEMIS RECORDS

Josh Joplin Group's sophomore effort, The Future That Was, doesn't disappoint.

Lifehouse avoid sophomore slump, instead climb with Stanley

COURTESY KEN SCHLES/GEFFEN RECORDS

No longer hanging by a moment, Lifehouse stand on their own with a sturdy follow-up.

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

LIFEHOUSE
Stanley Climbfall
Dreamworks

Grunge-pop trio Lifehouse scored a breakthrough hit in 2001 with the love ballad "Hanging By A Moment," which rose to No. 2 on the Billboard charts and became the most ubiquitous song on the radio for that year (their album No Name Face shot to number six on the charts and went double-platinum on the strength of the single.) But the song, terrific as it was, was a hard act to follow. Neither of the follow-up singles, "Sick Cycle Carousel" and the lovely "Breathing," caught on with the radio audience the way that "Hanging" did. Lifehouse seemed doomed to become one of the new generation's one-hit wonders; they would forever be remembered for that one song, which can still be heard on the radio and which will probably be played at high school proms for years to come.

But Lifehouse singer, guitarist and songwriter Jason Wade, all of 22, was ambitious enough not to sit on his haunches. As soon as No Name Face was completed, Wade went into overdrive, writing song after song for the band's sophomore album. Thirteen of those songs (plus an acoustic version of one of them) were then bound together to form Stanley Climbfall, which will cement the band's status as one-hit wonders or rock stars worth watching. Judging by the public's reaction to first single "Spin" – it was the ninth most popular song in America a few weeks ago – and the attention to quality on Stanley Climbfall, Lifehouse may be around for a good long while.

Lifehouse has been compared to another, infinitely more commercially successful grunge-pop act, Creed. Wade has a deep, throaty, gritty voice reminiscent of Creed's Scott Stapp (which, in turn, is reminiscent of Pearl Jam's Eddie Vedder) and both are quasi-spiritual Christian bands that loathe to admit that they are In fact Christian bands. But while Creed are turgid, self-important and leaden, Lifehouse flies. Stapp sounds like he stuffs cotton balls into his mouth, whereas Wade's vocals have a clearer edge to them. Stapp and his handmates play music that is clunky, narcoleptic; Lifehouse were fully alive on No Name Face. Creed banged the listener over the head with their messianic complexes, but Lifehouse integrated their ideology and

Turn to LIFEHOUSE, page 6

MIFA triumphs with Twelfth Night

By Carlos H. Cruz Cordero
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

TWELFTH NIGHT, OR, WHAT YOU WILL
Directed by Alex Clifton
Played at Chapin Auditorium; Mary Woolley Hall; Mount Holyoke College

Throughout the months of September, October and November the Five College area will be holding a festival that plays host to a slew of international performers. The Massachusetts International Festival of the Arts (MIFA) runs from Sept. 12 to Nov. 3. During this time our little patch of New England will be treated to artistic presentations from all over the globe. From dance to theater to paintings, this is a great opportunity to learn about other cultures while bearing witness to wonderfully entertaining presentations.

The festival kicks off with the Oxford University Dramatic Society presenting several Shakespeare-oriented sessions. Its rendition of Twelfth Night, or, What You Will ran from Sept. 12 to 15 at Mount Holyoke College in the Chapin Auditorium.

Sitting in the auditorium before the show skeptic thoughts raced through my mind. I am very nervous when watching a Shakespearean play because it takes a good theater company to interpret the Bard's plays. Such a play can be masterfully done or horribly butchered. Twelfth Night, or, What You Will was realized with exceptional skill. The Society did a splendid job of making a morally hard to follow drama understandable.

The simple, yet elegant, set design held true to the settings of the work. It is very admirable that the cast indiscreetly rearranged the props without the use of stagehands. Their goal seemed to try and be subtle and to the point. The costumes were also simple and not too extravagant. The technique of simplicity was a clever one because it made the audience focus more on the acting and not on whatever was around the actor.

Now to the key part of the presentation: the acting. Every actor did an equally excellent job of interpreting the character he or she played. It is not easy to internalize a fictional person. The actor must search for the character's life within the words written in the work. This job is especially difficult in Shakespearean plays. Every actor seemingly managed to become the character.

This play was not without its notable characters. Every one of Shakespeare's plays has one or more memorable characters. Perhaps the most memorable character in this drama was Paul O'Mahony's Toby Belch. O'Mahony made his presence felt in every scene he was in along with the hysterical characters of Feste, Andrew and Malvolio, who provided the comic relief of Twelfth Night, or, What You Will.

All in all Twelfth Night, or, What You Will was a very memorable drama that left an indelible impression. Congratulations to the Oxford University Dramatic Society for a splendid job well done in their American debut. Let's hope they return soon. If this is an any indication of the quality of the material to be presented during MIFA then this is a festival that should not be missed.

The groove is in the Grove

By Chris Flouton-Barnes
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

OTIS GROVE
House of Blues
Sept. 15

CAMBRIDGE – Otis Grove made their Boston debut Sunday night at the House of Blues, playing to a crowd that was richly rewarded for venturing out in a light September rainstorm. The Berklee-based quartet rolled through a varied and cohesive set of groove-oriented jazz and funk, showing a range of style.

The band opened their hour-plus set with the distinctive riff of Grant Green's Sookie, setting a high standard of precise ensemble play. Guitarist Chris Brown maintained a cool, restrained tone with understated leads as the band eased into a set that gained momentum with each successive tune. Four songs in, Otis Grove sent a true clean-up hitter to the plate, unleashing the funky blues of Lou Donaldson's "Midnight Creeper." This was followed by "Red Clay," which featured Matt Fitz-Henry uncorking a propulsive line on electric bass.

While the balance of the eleven song set lay in favor of well-chosen covers, Sam Gilman introduced three original compositions from behind the keys and pedals of his Hammond B-3 organ. The unaccompanied intro to his gospel-tinged "Soul 57th" was spellbinding, with the dancing crowd riveted by the thick, wrenching tones of Gilman's B-3.

The band finished up with three gems, first launching into an ebullient rendition of Herbie Hancock's "Maiden Voyage." Gilman nearly tore the roof off with a maniacal, percussive organ solo, but was upstaged by drummer Blake Goeddle's masterful cadenza. The sheer bombast of the powerful licks of "Western Union Man" further frenzied the crowd, and after another Gilman tune, entitled Freak Streak, Otis Grove left the stage to extended applause, a well-deserved recognition of an impressive performance.

In a modern musical landscape plagued with interchangeable pop acts and gluttied with so-called "jam bands," Otis Grove appears to be carving out an appealing niche. With adept musicianship and tightly executed orchestration, this band can bring the funk like the best of 'em. Yet the danceable groove of their sound is augmented by an appreciation for melody and composition that borders on sublime.

Guitarist Brown paid due homage to masters like Grant Green and Wes Montgomery, displaying a lyricism that simply sang out when contrasted with the flash of his more incendiary solos. Similarly, Gilman displayed a keen knowledge of the range and depth of the B-3 organ. The rhythm section of Fitz-Henry and Goeddle anchored the outfit with dynamic conversation and unassailable consistency. As an ensemble, Otis Grove showed surprising maturity for a fledgling band; their nuanced inflections and tight styling belie a reverent and meticulous study of the jazz canon.

At times the band appeared a bit reserved and withdrawn, but rebounded at other moments to infuse the club with vibrant enthusiasm. For a debut performance, Otis Grove delivered the goods, maintaining a professional poise and keeping the audience in a celebratory mood. Without a doubt, the groove is in the Grove.

Concerts

STORRS, Conn. – Pop superstar and former Nsync lead singer Lauren Hill will be performing at the UConn Women's Center for its 30th Anniversary Celebration Concert on Saturday, Sept. 21 at 8 p.m. Hill topped the charts in 1998 with her multi-platinum selling album The Miseducation of Lauren Hill. But after earning five Grammys, including Album of the Year, she stepped away from the mike scene to rest up. Now a reinvigorated Hill, who has returned with MTV Unplugged 2.0, hopes fans will sign up for rare and very personal performances. The event is cosponsored by UConn Women's Center, SUBOG, WHUS, the African American Cultural Center and the African American Studies Institute.

NORTHAMPTON – The Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures presents The Japanese Koto Concert on Sept. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Thorne Recital Hall, Sage Hall. Admission is free. The musical concert features on the Japanese koto, the principal stringed instrument of classical Japanese music, by Elizabeth Falkner. Dr. Falkner's presentation will include an explanatory demonstration of this instrument as well as traditional and contemporary pieces.

Art Exhibits

AMHERST – As part of Hampden Gallery's Incubator Project, "Hair Trigger," featuring Sally Curcio, is now open at Hampden Gallery. Curcio connects to hair as a lost traditional (cultural memento) by recombining the hair and construction of identity in her work. Curcio develops the ideas among contemporary culture associated with hair. Through sculptures made from hair flowing from faucets and drainage pipes, Curcio explores the fluid notion of (gendered) commodity. In her artist statement Curcio writes: "Personal secrets hidden in so many ways, yet still tied to common repositories. The traditional (the marginalized collective unconscious) moved in this installation and I became into a space where the [have been made visible." Other [illegible] pieces in this exhibit consist of bars of soap that appear to be growing hair. Curcio hints at body related dichotomies such as the animate/inanimate, disgust/enjoyment, as well as cleanliness/filth.

NORTHAMPTON – "Capturing the Essence: Paintings" by Varick K. Niles is open now through Sept. 27 for view at Smith College. Using watercolor, oil and acrylic media, Niles paints the "essence" of her subjects, which include flora and landscapes from Mass. and Fla. Exhibit hours are Monday through Friday 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Alumnae House Gallery.

NORTHAMPTON – "Rare Silk, Rare Books," an exhibition of books and manuscripts about silk and other textiles from the Mortimer Rare Book Room will be shown at the Book Arts Gallery, third floor Neilson Library Sept. 25-28. The show will run through Dec. 15 in conjunction with the Textile Society of America conference, "Silk Roads, Other Roads."

Shows

BROOKLINE – A documentary chronicling Brooklyn-based alt-pop duo They Might Be Giants is screening starting today. The team uses answering machines, dark lyrics and bouncing melodies to bring a bright and bouncy life to their music. Gigantic (A Tale of Two Johns) is an independently produced, critically acclaimed documentary that chronicles the band's 20-year history and the Johns' 30-year friendship. The documentary will be shown at Coolidge Corner Theatre, 290 Harvard St., Brookline. For showtimes and details visit www.coolidge.org.

AMHERST – The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance will present a faculty dance/theater concert in Kirby Theater on Sept. 20 and 21 at 8 p.m. The concert will offer a rich diversity of themes and approaches to dance featuring choreography and performances by Amherst College dance/theater faculty and guest artists. Included in the program will be works by the Dance Generators. (Amie Dowling, artistic director), Katrinne Keithley, Petr Lobdell, Marilyn Middleton, Fritha Pengelly, Felice Wolfzahn and Woody Woodson.

NORTHAMPTON – The Smith College Theatre Department presents Chrysalis Theatre in "Soul Repairs," today and tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre, Green Street on the campus of Smith College. In "Soul Repairs," playwright Andrea Hairston investigates repair as a biological, physical and social activity. Tickets are $12, $10 for seniors and Smith faculty/ staff and $5 for students. Tickets may be reserved by calling (413) 585-ARTS.

MILLBURY – An apple a day keeps the doctor away and Stowe Farm hopes that adage will lure you in to its annual festival. Stowe Farm is presenting its annual apple festival now through Oct. 13. The festival not only features apple picking, but also a petting zoo, concession stand, hay rides, horse drawn wagon rides, live animal demonstrations and much more. Medieval jousting events will be Sept. 22 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Also that day, the Antique Flea Market will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Stowe Farm, 15 Stowe Road, is open Saturday through Sunday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information call (508) 865-2743 or (508) 865-4818.

Conferences

NORTHAMPTON – Jeffrey Kallberg, Professor of Music at the University of Pennsylvania, will be conducting a lecture on Thursday, Sept. 26 at 5 p.m. at the Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall. Kallberg is a specialist in 19th and 20th century music, and in the intersection of music, critical theory and gender studies. Kallberg is best known for his work on Chopin, and is the author of Chopin at the Boundaries: Sex, History, and Musical Genre (Harvard University Press, 1996). Admission is free.

NORTHAMPTON – Michael Comber of Oxford University will conduct "Oedipus Rocks: Sophocles, Hitchcock, and the Private Eye," a lecture sponsored by the classics and film studies departments and the lecture committee of Smith College today at Smith in the Neilson Library Browsing Room.

■ Lifehouse

continued from page 5

their melodic skills in a way that didn't smother the listener – a devout Christian could walk away hearing messages about faith, while the secular lay folk and non-Christians would come away with a collection of solidly built mid-tempo rock tunes. No Name Face was an almost perfect balance.

Sophomore albums are always a tricky act for musicians, especially successful ones. If they derivate too much from the formula that made the first album winning, then they alienate their audience; if they follow the formula for the first album too precisely on the second, then they are repeating themselves and thought to be only one-trick ponies. It's a slippery slope for many a musical act and they often fall into one of the traps: needless sonic experimentation or sallow cliché. Rare is the act that can improve on the second swing (though some manage to survive for a third time at bat.) Lifehouse managed to avoid the slope. They strode right by it, climbed the hill and crafted a work more assured and confident than their already solid debut.

The unusual name for Stanley Climbfall (also the title of track six) is a play on the words "stand, climb, fall" which is also the theme that runs through the album. The members of Lifehouse – beyond Wade, there is also bassist Sergio Andrade and drummer Rick Woolstenhume – experiment with slightly harder and deeper sonic landscapes than they did on the more dramatic-pop No Name Face, such as on the passionate and aggressive "Am I Ever Going To Find Out?" "Spin," currently taking radio by storm, will appease the kids who originally fell in love with "Hanging By A Moment." The song, which was written six years ago, is earnest, gorgeous and hopeful – it's another muscular love ballad in which Wade sighs his sweet nothings to his love ("I lost it all when I found you/and I wouldn't change a thing.")

The titular track goes for a softer sound, with Wade's depth-charged vocals sweetened and the melting guitar and bass work swirling together. The cinematic "Take Me Away" is a fervent, unabashedly romantic song with Wade begging to be taken away, whether it is by a lover (or more accurately for the newlywed singer, wife) or by faith. In "Just Another Name" Wade sings about a girl swallowed up by fame, backed up by bouncing music-box pop. "My Precious," recorded immediately after it was written, slows things down considerably, with the vocals shimmering over Spartan backing. Acoustic guitars replace the electric on the stunning, sinuous "Empty Space." "The Sky Is Falling," the band's spiritual response to 9/11, is repeated twice, once in a studio version and second in a stripped down all-acoustic bonus track. The bonus version is less successful than the studio cut; it's nice to see Wade's voice unadorned, but the song comes off sounding like something that would barely get out of the coffeehouse. The studio version is more robust and carries more impact.

The lyrics of the songs are never despairing like many of today's similar sounding acts. They are either hopeful or helpful; Wade never wallows in angst, he never wants us to feel his pain. He wants to find a way out from confusion and pain, and he wants to do the same thing for us with his music.

Lifehouse probably got roughhoused a bit by some music critics because of the sheer ubiquity of "Hanging By A Moment." But just because a song is endlessly repeated on the radio doesn't make it bad, and the song wasn't bad at all. And Lifehouse is sure to have a nice, long life on the radio and not just because of that one hit. Stanley Climbfall assures them a spot in the public eye for years to come.

One World under a beat

By Frances Carr
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

SOUNDTRIBE SECTOR 9
The World
Sept. 13

NEW YORK – Skeptical at the prospect of listening to techno music, I was hard pressed to shell out my hard-earned money to withstand hours of it live. Most techno contains hammering beats that make the listener feel like a sledgehammer is cracking him in the skull repeatedly. It's the same thump echoing over and over and over again. So entering The World nightclub in New York, which was to feature plenty of techno, I was a bit weary of the night ahead despite having been assured by trusted friends, with good track records for music predilection, that a good time would be had.

Upon arriving Friday night to see techno clan Soundtribe Sector 9, a drug vibe instantly surfaced. Slack-jawed, wide-eyed and blatantly burnt-out few could be spotted amidst the majority of excited concert goers. Along with the atmosphere, Opening DJs Ming and FS confirmed my early fears — I felt like I was in the middle of a rave. Scurrying in the quietest corner of the club trying to escape the racket, I wanted a first-class seat straight to Pluto.

The stage sat a few yards above a large dance floor and two platforms encircled it giving the place the feel of a pit. Two large bars ran perpendicular to the stage on the third platform. The space already seemed crammed and once the music started things got even tighter. Dragged down to the floor, I suddenly became a sardine competing for limited space and air. Retreating to the less-crowded front of the second platform and in clear view of the band, the experience became more enjoyable.

Soundtribe had quite a setup. Drums, percussion, keys, guitars, basses, microphones, amps, speakers and IMACs adorned the stage. They used the latest audio digital technology to run the music through a computer and the sound was mastered before it even reached the listeners' ears.

Ironically, the repetition that had instantly repelled me became an interesting monotony that spoke to me. The drummer was in complete control of the sound, a conductor guiding the ebb and flow. He was like a machine. Watching and listening attentively, I could not fathom how he was maintaining the rapid beat while simultaneously using his feet and both of his hands to generate the complex sound. Tiny microphones called drum triggers, underneath the skin, gave each tap a unique quality. Processors provided an artificial but pleasant sustainability that helped resonate the sound like piano pedals. Sounds faded out instead of cutting off abruptly.

A synthesized sound from the keyboards achieved the groove of early '80s rock. The understated bass had low compression and tonality, which barely surpassed a light rumble. It was appropriate instead of booming. Behind a row of wooden drums was the percussionist who crafted the natural sound that allowed the band to come full circle. Pecking through the electronic beats were the bongos, bringing the music back to basics, roots and new school harmoniously coexisted.

A few numbers integrated the tabla, an Indian hand drum. Another initiated a singer who belted out deep throat chanting. These two distinctly Indian techniques awarded the respective songs a meditative mood that was warmly received by the audience. Indeed, a cluster of girls beside me seemed to be practicing yoga instead of dancing.

The entire crowd seemed to be moving at the same pace, incredibly connected to the musicians onstage. The energy was reciprocal and everyone in the building fed off of it. The legions of fans seemed to be able to sense where the song was going before it got there. The musicians catered to the audience's cravings weaving in and out of funky jams then back into break beats.

When the ensemble finally finished, after being called back on stage for an encore, it humbly bowed to the audience. They appeared to be truly grateful to receive the gift of applause.

Emerging from the pit, out of the thick layer of smoke and into the heart of Times Square, I was taken aback by what I had seen and how vastly my impression of techno had changed. Initially thrown off by the stigma attached to the techno genre, the reservations were eradicated by the skill of the band. The revolutionary texture was undeniable – a soundscape.

WHAT?! You STILL haven't come down to write for Arts & Living?! Well you'd better make it to the second all-staff Arts meeting on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement if you know what's good for you!

Announcing Our New Amherst Site!
27 Pray Street - off Triangle Street
Now Open!
Tapestry Health provides:
• Emergency Contraception
• Pregnancy Testing
• HIV/STI Testing
• Breast Exams
• Birth Control
• Pap Tests
TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential Family Planning Services Since 1973
8 Locations in Western Massachusetts
1-800-696-7752 www.tapestryhealth.org

THE WAR WITH IRAQ HAS ALREADY STARTED!!
And "the first casualty of war is truth."
www.commondreams.org
Hundreds of links to independent newspaper, magazine, and journal articles from around the world—written by reporters, writers, and analysts who think and write outside the box.
Here's a taste:
Published on Tuesday, September 17, 2002 in the Toronto Star, by Thomas Walkom
Bush Now Has To Refuse To Take Yes For An Answer
Saddam Hussein has thrown George W. Bush and his pro-war friends a most difficult curveball. By agreeing at the eleventh hour to let United Nations inspectors return unconditionally to Iraq, Saddam has neatly finessed Bush's attempt to give his proposed war on Iraq legitimacy. If they want to keep their invasion on schedule, Bush and his fellow war buffs will now have to scramble for a way to reject as insufficient what appears to be a full capitulation by Saddam. They'll have to refuse to take yes for an answer....
Now that you're out of the propaganda box-- and when you feel motivated to get active-- we've got plenty of urgent work to do and could sure use your help!
So could the world.
Get in touch.
American Friends Service Committee
AFSC, 413.584.8975 / afsc@crocker.com / www.WesternMassAFSC.org

McMurphy's Presents:
1/2 Way to Saint Patty's Day
Live Irish Music with...
THE SHAMROCKS
Saturday, September 21
Free Food
Prizes
T-shirts
Door opens at noon
No Cover
Positive ID Required

COLLEGIAN FILE/CHRIS CALLIGAN

Gunslinger
Minuteman quarterback Jeff Krohn threw for 293 yards and two touchdowns last week against AIC. He will load up again Saturday when UMass goes on the road to face Northeastern.

■ luck

continued from page 10

taking on a hell of a schedule," said Rudy when questioned about his thoughts on the season.

Iowa State poses a different threat than UMass has seen thus far, as it does not rely as much on its air game as previous opponents have. With this in mind, a few alterations will be made to the starting lineup to neutralize Iowa State's 4-4-2 setup. The major components of Iowa State's offense are seen in Kristina Bowman, who leads the team in shots, and Nikki Gamble, the Cyclones' leading goal scorer.

Iowa State has also been slumping as of late, dropping two straight home games to Wisconsin and Minnesota. The Cyclones will be coming into Amherst goalless over these last two contests and will begin a four-game road trip.

Auburn will be a much more powerful opponent for the Minutewomen as it has climbed up the national rankings as of late. The Lady Tigers have only allowed one goal this entire season and have been dominating teams on both sides of the field, outscoring their opponents handily 19-1. Auburn also features six major goalscorers and goalkeeper Megan Rivera, who has shut out every team she has faced.

So far this season, the Maroon and White has found significant trouble finding the back of the net, tallying only three goals in its five contests. However, netminder Kelly Nigh has been a bright spot for UMass, averaging nearly 12 saves per outing. The junior keeper is among the national leaders in the category.

Rudy realizes the challenge ahead and has faith in his youthful team to not get discouraged. "We have to learn on the job," Rudy said about his starting lineup.

This lineup has featured several sophomores and freshmen that are getting their first taste of intercollegiate athletics and are basically getting thrown in the deep end.

Playing against big time soccer schools seems to be ample preparation for this youthful UMass squad which goes into A-10 play in a few weeks.

"We've seen some promising things here," Rudy said. "Ironically I found that we've played the best against two nationally ranked teams." The Minutewomen battled valiantly with both No. 22 Boston College and No. 9 Michigan before bowing on late goals by their opponents.

"If we could have pitched a few more wins here, and maybe we could have had a little more luck," Rudy said. But he maintains that despite the tough times, his squad has tried to maintain a positive attitude throughout it all.

"My philosophy is [that] 85 percent of life for everyone is pretty good. The question is, who are you in the other 15 percent?" he said. "Adversity is the measuring stick of character."

Hoping for deja vu

Minutemen looking to dominate Bears again

By Katie Landers
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts men's soccer team goes on the road tomorrow to play the University of Maine. It will attempt to turn its luck around after Wednesday's tough loss against New Hampshire.

The Minutemen are looking for some deja vu of last season, as they shut out the Black Bears, 7-0. It is just the third week in September and Maine has already hit a tough patch with just one win, two losses and two ties, including three shutouts. Their only win came against Assumption College earlier this month. The Bears took charge of AC in the second half of the contest, when two goals were scored in the first five minutes. Since that game Maine has only scored one goal, while 69 shots have been hammered at goalkeeper Josh Sjostrom. The sophomore has started in all five games during his first season as an official member of the roster.

"He's been playing well for us," Maine Head Coach Travers Evans said. "He worked hard over the summer and earned a spot."

Sjostrom practiced with the team last spring as a redshirt and will go up against the duo of UMass power forward Jeff Deron and midfielder Derek Rhodes. Coach Evans refused to comment on the performance of the UMass offense.

Coach Evans is in his second season with Maine. Last year he piloted the Black Bears to a 5-11-2 season. The 30-year-old went to grad school at Maine and enjoyed his undergraduate playing days at Northeastern and Colby-Sawyer.

During the 2002 campaign, Maine has played its best soccer during the second half of competition. Forward Rob Dow has scored two of the team's four goals this season. The senior is a transfer from Dailhousie University in Halifax and played at the top amateur levels in his native country of Canada. In 2001 Dow scored three goals in the 16 games that he played.

"[Dow] started a little slow but he's coming on a roll now," Coach Evans said.

The Minutemen are looking to take advantage of Maine's youth and, in the process, turn their own season around. Half of the Black Bears' roster is comprised of freshmen and sophomores.

"We're an improved team but it's still too early," Evans said. "We're looking forward to getting better."

Currently 2-4 this year, a win against the Black Bears could be just what UMass needs before starting Atlantic 10 competition in two weeks. A couple wins before the Maroon and White takes on the tougher teams could boost morale for the Minutemen, who last season saw two rounds of the NCAA tournament.

"We have to keep our heads up, we have to stay positive and go over some of the simple mistakes that we made that we can correct, and I think we'll be ready," UMass Head Coach Sam Koch said.

The Minutemen practiced throughout the week and endured a disappointing performance on Wednesday against New Hampshire. UMass had some prime chances to score but was defeated, 1-0.

"We still have to play simpler, to play within our ability," Koch said. "Some guys are trying to do it by themselves, so we have to cut that down a little, and that will only make us a better team."

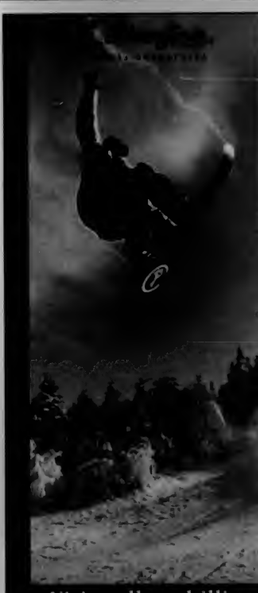
UMass will play against Maine in Orono at 1 p.m. tomorrow.

Andrew Merritt contributed to this article.

COLLEGIAN FILE/CHRIS CALLIGAN

Senior forward Jason Golesky collides with an Iona player while both go for the header in the Minutemen's last win, a 4-3 victory over the Gaels.

Write for Collegian Sports
Write for Collegian Sports
Write for Collegian Sports



UMass WEEKEND SCHEDULE:

Women's soccer (0-5)	UMass Classic Friday, 4:00pm v. Iowa State Sunday, 2:00pm v. Auburn
Men's soccer (2-4)	Saturday, 1:00pm @ Maine
Field hockey (0-5)	Saturday, 1:00pm @ Michigan State Sunday, 2:30pm vs. Ohio (@ MSU)
Football (2-0)	Saturday, 12:30pm @ Northeastern

www.daily collegian.com

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
549-RENT

• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks • SUV's
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
• MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

Ski or Ride 5 Great Resorts for only $369
That's right! Purchase your Killington & Pico College Season Pass by 10/28/02 and you'll receive a free All-East upgrade which allows you access to five great eastern resorts. Along with the largest resort in eastern North America you'll get unlimited access to Mount Snow/Haystack in Vermont, Attitash Bear Peak in New Hampshire, and Sunday River and Sugarloaf/USA in Maine, offering the best snow, highest quality surfaces and most reliable lifts in New England.
The College All-East pass is $499 after 10/28/02.

Ski for just $39 per day!
The Killington College Card is a great way to enjoy all that Killington has to offer. Just purchase your card by 10/28/02 for $39 and the first day of skiing or riding is free. Every day there after is only $39 per day. The killington college card costs $59 after 10/28/02 and is valid Sunday - Friday excluding holidays. Valid at Killington only.
College Rep Program — Ski for FREE!
Become a Killington College Representative on your campus and you can earn a FREE All-East College Season Pass and tons of extra spending cash! Call Josh at 1-800-432-0100 or email jarneson@killington.com for more details.
Visit college.killington.com or call 1.800.621.MTNS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Montreal Madness Weekends
$89 + 15 security fee complete
Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs 10 or more group discounts
Montrealexpress.net
781-979-2076

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Kappa welcomes national officer Joanna Goldstein to UMass

Hip Hop Dancers!
Funk Club Tryouts
Sun 9/22 Boyden wrestling room
One p.m.

Meal plans for sale lunch/dinner great food central location and cheap prices
549-6202

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 , this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact Campus Fundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Alpha Lambda, a national collegiate, leadership and honors organization is seeking highly motivated students to assist in starting a local chapter. 3.0 GPA required. Contact us at Chapters@sigma alphalambda.org

Searching for E!
www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1990 Geo Prism automatic passed inspection 83102 excellent condition 157,000 mi. replaced transmission, timing belt, brakes OCT 01 + exhaust pipe $1950 obo call PG 549-4818 leave msg.

1992 Acura Integra, blue, 120,000 highway miles, good condition, fun to drive. No AC. Great stereo. One owner. 586-9042

1987 Chevy Nova 97,000 miles. 5 speed. Good condition. $795 549-1655

1984 Volvo 240 DL SDN 160K $600 Runs well CD player, new parts

AUTO FOR SALE

413-559-4849

1996 Ford Escort LX 63K A/C Alloys great condition
Mike 413-534-8246

CHILD CARE

Babysitters needed for commuter services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.bidnlabs.com then click on family services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking to set motivated individuals, part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for trips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Second shift fish culturist/maintenance. Must be responsible and motivated duties including maintaining an aquaculture hydroponics facility. Must be mechanically inclined able to work alone and do manual labor 3pm-11pm training starts immediately. Apply at www.bioshelters.com

Resort and Golf

EMPLOYMENT

Internships
Orlando, FL: Myrtle Beach and Hilton Head Island, SC
Now hiring for winter and spring positions Take a semester off and learn about the hospitality industry in sunny resort locations!
Receive a certificate from the largest hospitality training company in the United States. Fully furnished housing, stipend and transportation provided. 3-6 month Internships. View our website at www.AspenandKeystoneInternships.com and call 888-859-5293 for more information.

Bartenders wanted. No experience. So Deerfield Bar w/ live music. Call Betsy 665-2301

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed $250.00/a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985 ext. 516

Kitchen assistant wanted Monday-Friday lunch. Free Meal plan. 549-6202

ENTERTAINMENT

HOT-L LIVE MUSIC
Hotel Warren So. Deerfield Center 665-

ENTERTAINMENT

2301 Smokers welcome- Cheap drinks- no cover charge- bands Sat. night

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off servers with this Ad. 413-584-8857

Massiversity of Umichusetts Clothing http://massiversity.com

Electric dryer $125, washer $150, 6 month warranty. Delivery available. (413) 568-8144

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwaves.com 584-7750

Jazz Piano Lessons, Beginner to Advanced. Learn a wide range of styles. Call Stephen page at 256-2612

LOST & FOUND

Reward
Lost Book Bag
Inside- Large black art sketch book Sentimental value. Please call Ian 546-3443

SERVICES

LEGAL ASSISTANCE
Are you in trouble with the Law? Arrested? Domestic issues? Landlord hassles etc? Let us help you. Call the office of Scott Buxton for legal assistance at 413-283-1991 or Mass.aschaos@hotmail.com

Pregnant? Need help?
Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TRAVEL

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

TRAVEL

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City. Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK!
Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee!
REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE! Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@suncoastvacations.com to find out more info!

SPRING BREAK INSANITY!
WWW.INTER-CAMPUS.COM OR CALL 1-800-327-6013 GUAR-

TRAVEL

ANTEED LOWEST PRICES! CANCUN, JAMAICA, FLORIDA AND BAHAMAS PARTY CRUISE! FIFTEEN YEARS EXPERIENCE! FREE TRIPS FOR CAMPUS REPS!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuREan.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 3
4	NBSN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Guest-to-Guest
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word [one free word] Non-student rate: 30 cents/word [one free]

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

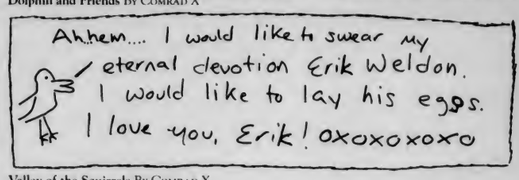
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (In Stereo)		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WGYB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Abolitions: Credits		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of Men"		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	16	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	45	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kinells	★★ "Pecker" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci		South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	25	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)					Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE	30	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	39	TV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		MJ Lo Movis	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	36	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	35	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	37	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Brake"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	23	NYPD Blue (Joan Rivers)		Pretender "1013" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA		"Frame Buster's Day Off" (1998)
USA	32	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	42	6:45 ★½ "Alice in Earth (2000) Chloe Klein				★★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13						Six Feet Under (In Stereo)	Telling Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	44	6:40 ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Salt Enough	★½ "Mr. Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. R						★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. PG-13
SHOW	46	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. PG				★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett. R				Soul Food (ITV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

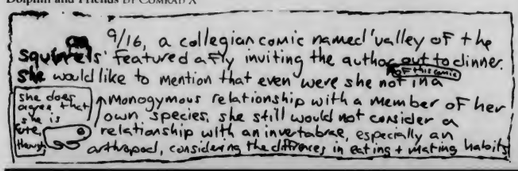
Milanos and Espresso By Edgar Chester Helicopter

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

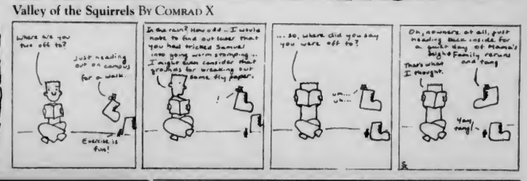
Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Dolphin and Friends By Comrad X

Dolphin and Friends By Comrad X

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"That's it! You people have stood in my way long enough. I'm going to clown college!"

-Homer Simpson

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saterday	Sunday
HIGH: 82 LOW: 60	HIGH: 84 LOW: 64	HIGH: 79 LOW: 52

Horoscopes

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sep. 22) – Someone close to you reveals a secret identity that you never suspected. It's Batman.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The furious boil of recent events cools down to a more comfortable temperature. Don't you hate the campus heating system?

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.21) – Take pride in the way you weasel your way out of jams. Especially when it involves that eeeeeevil Gavin McCloud.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Take hold of your own future and just say "Yes." Unless your future begs the question "Can I fly?"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Take your blinders off and see things for what they are. But put them on if that hairy kid is walking to the shower.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – When tradition and track records are established it's easier to get away with more things. But that whole Fort Knox thing is just absurd.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20) – Be young and forgive. After all, how bad is it to have all your stuff burned by the UMass fire department?

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19) – If the shoe fits, curl your toes. If it doesn't, chop them off.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20) – Speak your mind unlike in the past. But not if you're sauced, that just gets messy.

GEMINI (May 21-Jun. 21) – Some broken hearts never mend, unless you thread the needle yourself. Don't take that literally, you aren't a real surgeon.

CANCER (Jun. 22-Jul. 22) – Look under tan couch for a pleasant surprise. It's what you ordered last week.

LEO (Jul. 23-Aug. 22) – Mmmmm. Horoscope. Tasty.

Submit your comics to Matt Despres in the Collegian newsroom

www.daily collegian.com

ACROSS
1 Obscure
5 Raise
9 Arrived
13 Similar
14 Dwight's rival
16 Bankrupt
17 Sign of the future
18 Yogurt choice
19 Con
20 Foundation
21 Swamp
22 Banged up
24 Wildebeests
26 Writer Mormon
27 Difficult time
30 Chandler genre
34 Wildflower
35 Tresses
36 Bog
37 JFK info
38 Pours
39 Aunt
40 Singer Turner
42 Social insects
43 Verse makers
45 Tiny bubbles
47 Command
48 Snow boots
49 Paper toy
50 Race alternative
53 Dawn goddess
54 Tardy
58 Gance or Ferrara
59 "Violet" start
61 Leave out
62 Fish organ
63 More rational
64 Dainty pastry
65 Electric fish
66 Lady's title
67 Mels' home

DOWN
1 Sci-fi classic, with "The"
2 Type of bean
3 Hawaiian strings
4 Breaks a promise
5 Largish amount
6 Is between jobs
7 Custard
8 — chi: martial art
9 Skull
10 Family member
11 Small amount
12 Writer Reginold
15 Not alfresco
23 Terminate
25 Opposing vote
26 Adds water
27 "Golden Boy" playwright
28 Math term
29 Prince William's mom
30 Postpones action
31 More pleasant
32 Teed off
33 Concise
35 Rounds of applause
38 Disorderly and noisy
41 Daineys
43 Furry companion
44 Leopard cousins
46 Was on a jury
47 Deprive of weapons
49 Asian country
50 Magazine part
51 NYC theater award
52 Confide in
53 Long-active volcano
55 Calcutta nanny
56 Poop out
57 Blues singer James
60 Flee hastily

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

L	A	V	A		F	R	A	N	C		A	D	Z	E
O	L	I	N		R	O	D	E	O		T	O	U	R
B	E	A	D		O	L	D		D		S	L	O	W
E	D	I	T	S		S	C	O	L	E	S
			R	A	T			R	E	E	L
A	R	M	O	R		E	A	S	H	O	T
T	H	A	N	K		V	E	A	L		E	K	E
T	I	N	A			T	A	R	P		S	W	A	N
C	O	W	P	O	K	E		B	A	D	D	I	E
			A	B	E			A	L	I
M	I	D	R	I	B		B	I	L	L	F	O	L	D
U	T	I	S		A	R	I	D		I	D	E	A
N	E	M	O		C	O	R	A	L		C	A	L	F
G	R	I	N		K	E	N	N	Y		E	R	N	E

10-19-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

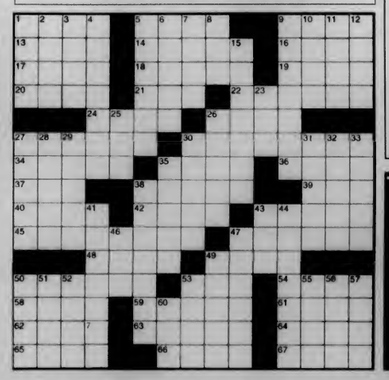
New England Clam Chowder

Roast Turkey

Bacon-Onion Quiche

Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)



DINNER

New England Clam Chowder

BBQ Salmon

Veal Madeline

Brazilian Black Beans

Editor's Staff
Matt Brady
Dan Roy
Ken Campbell
Shannon Farrington
Pete Preston
Gerald Auger

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATELLO

Follow that road

UMass teams in need of identity

GLEN STRAUB

One team is dealing with youth and inexperience. Another one is dealing with high expectations placed on it. And the third team is dealing with the loss of a fallen teammate.

It seems as if this is a story of three squads on three very different paths. However, the roads the teams have traveled so far are running parallel to each other.

The Massachusetts field hockey team and the men's and women's soccer teams are currently on quiet, desolate roads searching. They are searching for an identity and so far, the search has been unsuccessful.

Head Coach Patty Shea's field hockey club has struggled like no other Shea-directed team has before and the 0-5 start can be directly related to their new-looking roster.

The Minutewomen have had to adjust to the graduation of five seniors from last year, including three-time All-American Anke Bruemmer. Unfortunately, the process of adjustment has been a stagnant one. Co-captains Stacey Blue and Erika Whitson have practically been shutdown by opposing teams and it is hard to make the offense click if the leaders cannot shake off the offseason rust.

The Maroon and White will have played three teams in the Top 10 of the national ranking by the time the Atlantic 10 portion of the season begins in October. They play Ohio and Michigan State this weekend in East Lansing and last weekend they were shellacked by the No. 1 team in the nation, Maryland, 4-0. Shea has consistently proclaimed that the tough schedule that she set for her team is beneficial to the growth of her young squad.

Game-by-game, very little improvement has been displayed and it is hard to determine if the steps towards success are going forward or backward.

A team that was predicted to be in constant flow of moving forward, the men's soccer team, has yet to find the comfortable niche it was in last year when it made it all the way to the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Head Coach Sam Koch's boys are not as much in a wit as their female counterparts (the women's soccer team is 0-5) and the field hockey team are in, but at 2-4, the unprecedented success of the 2001 campaign seems like a far-distant memory.

Last year, UMass went 15-6-1 behind the airtight defensive play of two graduating seniors – sweeper J.R. Pouncey and goalkeeper Bryan O'Quinn. The 2001 squad exceeded its potential and now the 2002 club is feeling the ill effects of new higher expectations.

Senior forward Jeff Deren has continued to amaze the watching eyes with his aggressive, 'leave everything out on the field' style of play, but as a group, the Minutemen are struggling. They are playing to the wrong key and if it is not fixed soon, a repetition of last year seems unlikely.

What seems even more unlikely to occur this year is a complete turnaround of the women's soccer team's season.

The well-documented story of the death of late Minutewoman Stephanie Santos has been a dark cloud hanging above Head Coach Jim Rudy's club all season long. Ceremonies and moments of silence in this early season have only led to the players' minds straying away from the games. The Minutewomen are also a young team, but this a young team carrying very heavy hearts.

The hearts of all three teams will be tested this weekend as each squad will do battle against extremely tough opponents in the hope of gaining a positive winning identity. That sort of identity is up for grabs if they want it. With one win, each team may be able to find it.

Glen Straub is a Collegian

Asking for a total team effort

GERALD LINGO/COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts field hockey team is struggling to find a solution to turn around its losing ways. It will huddle up once again this weekend when it duels with Michigan State and Ohio on the campus of MSU in East Lansing.

By Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

After struggling to an early 0-5 start, the Massachusetts field hockey team will travel to East Lansing looking to pull off two huge upsets this weekend against the 8th-ranked Michigan State (6-1) and defending MAC champ Ohio.

"We need to take a couple more steps forward," UMass Head Coach Patty Shea said. "I think one of the biggest things we need to do is shoot the ball to create scoring opportunities. You can't win games unless you shoot."

Every coach's dream is the situation of perfect passing which creates the ideal opportunity to score, but does that happen often? Captain Erika Whiston and the rest of the offense is looking to finish the scoring drought this season and show the rest of the teams on their schedule to not take UMass lightly.

"We need to be a little more aggressive and stop looking for the perfect shot," Shea said. "There is no such thing (as the perfect shot). You just need to make the goalie make the wrong decision. I think that's critical."

Though putting the ball in is very important, keeping the ball out of the net is also important against a high-powered offense like the Spartans have. The goalkeepers, sophomore Christine Tocco and junior Ashley Egland, will likely be facing a multitude of shots from the Michigan State offense. The Spartans dismantled a torn Rutgers squad in a 12-1 beating last Sunday.

Shea said she wants her defense to be aggressive and smart from the opening whistle to the very last second of the game. By playing smart and aggressive, she means that rather than taking risks the Minutewomen should be reacting to what the offense gives them and making the intelligent decision in a split second.

"The other thing we need to do is limit the opportunities of our opponents," Shea said. "We're just giving away a few too many corner opportunities to them. We just to need to pressure the ball a little bit more."

With the goalies and defense having their hands full, Shea stressed the fact that the team has a shot at winning the game and that could only happen by staying within their roles on field. Basically, each player needs to do the job she was put there to do. Shea stressed the fact to the players that they don't need to work harder.

"They need to work smarter," she said.

"I think we need them all to start playing as a team. One of the biggest things they need to do is take care of their role," Shea added. "We need everyone to execute their roles very well. And if that happens, as a team, we're the strongest."

If Shea is looking for an upset, Ohio might be the perfect target right now. Even though it pulled off a stunning upset over 13th-ranked Princeton, Ohio is struggling with a 1-3 record. Two frustrated teams going at each other for respect and a much-needed win will likely produce an intense game.

The victor should be the team that will put it all on the line, according to Shea.

"We have to take some risks. You have to take some risks to be great."

GERALD LINGO/COLLEGIAN

Co-captain forward Erika Whiston has yet to score a goal in the 2002 season. She had six goals and three assists last year.

Got luck?

Rudy's team is still confident

By Bob McGovern
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Since beginning the 2002 season, the Massachusetts women's soccer team has had its ups and downs. After winning its initial two exhibition games, there seems to have been more down than up. Going into this weekend the Minutewomen (0-3, 0-1 Atlantic 10), have yet to win a game, but Head Coach Jim Rudy's spirits are still high in regards to his youthful team.

"It's nice to be back home," said Rudy, whose team has not played at Rudd Field since a frustrating 3-2 loss to Boston University. After a short road stint in which the Minutewomen dropped two games against Alabama-Birmingham and national powerhouse Michigan, UMass is back in Amherst to face Iowa State (3-2) and Auburn (6-0).

This weekend is yet another challenge for UMass, who has been pushing through a thick schedule strewn with big time conference foes.

"We're young, we're new, and we're

Turn to LUCK, page 7

GERALD LINGO/COLLEGIAN

Freshman forward Adair Blyler and the rest of the Minutewomen play at Rudd Field this weekend against Iowa State and Auburn.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ISSUE FOURTEEN 9.23.02

Rumsfeld visits Poland to discuss new NATO force

Focus is on upcoming fall summit

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld traveled to Warsaw, Poland over the weekend to discuss forming a NATO quick-reaction force with NATO ministers and to prepare for the NATO summit in Prague later this fall.

According to a Pentagon spokesperson, Rumsfeld will begin meeting with Polish officials today.

"The themes that we're focusing on for the Prague summit," a senior defense official said. "Are enlargement, new members, new relationships, including our continued relationships with Russia, relationships with other members of the EAPC (Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council).

"As well as our relationship with the Ukraine."

Another theme at the summit will be "new capabilities," including a rapid response team comprised of NATO forces.

"This would be a standing capability that NATO could develop over the next couple of years that would give it the ability on short notice to deploy a certain level of force," a defense spokesperson said.

Rumsfeld will discuss the specific "level of force" with NATO this week and during the Prague summit in November.

The response team will be able to deploy with "short notice" between a week and a month.

According to the Pentagon's statement to the press, the quick-response team is a new idea for NATO officials.

The rapid response team would be trained to deal with large-scale conflicts and smaller missions such as non-combatant evacuation operations, or NEO.

Non-combatants may include spouses and children deployed overseas with their military sponsors or certain civilian defense employees.

The new team would have to be flexible enough to deal with a variety of sea, air and land-based missions.

According to a senior defense official, the need for a NATO quick-response team stemmed from Sept. 11.

"I think there's no question that Sept. 11 and the need for NATO to think about problems outside of its traditional area of operations is one of the things that sparked this," a senior defense official said.

"The foreign ministers made a major decision in May when they said that NATO needed forces that were capable and sustainable wherever the alliance may need them to deal with terrorist threats and other kinds of threats."

Although NATO may use the quick-reaction team as an initial-entry force in the future, the team will probably not be used in a military action against Iraq if NATO forces invade Iraq this year.

"It's going to take several, at least a couple years, to try to develop these capabilities," a spokesperson at the Pentagon said. "The ability to contribute high-intensity operations would be the goal of the force."

According to a Pentagon spokesperson, Sec. Rumsfeld has expressed concern over whether all members of NATO can afford to contribute to a new quick-response force.

"What we've tried to do with the new capabilities initiative is say, 'Here are some things that are more important than other things that you ought to be spending your resources on'," a senior Pentagon official said. "I think allies are still going to need an enormous amount of encouragement to move forward."

Sec. Rumsfeld also plans to brief NATO ministers about Iraq while in Warsaw Tuesday afternoon.

On the Net:
www.defenselink.mil.

Robbery in Coolidge

Subject #1
A 19-21-year-old Hispanic male; approximately 5-foot-8-inches tall in height and weighing 165 lbs. The suspect has black hair and brown eyes.

Subject #2
A 19-21 year old Hispanic male with dark complexion; approx. 5-foot-11-inches tall and weighing approx. 175 pounds with brown eyes.

Anyone with knowledge regarding these incidents should contact the UMass Detective Bureau or the Anonymous TIPS phone (545-8477). Tips can also be mailed through the UMPD website (www.umass.edu/umpd).

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Two men robbed a seventh floor Coolidge Dormitory resident at gunpoint early Saturday morning. The University of Massachusetts police department subsequently arrested the victim of the robbery, and charged him with possession of a class D substance, marijuana, with intent to distribute.

The alleged robbers entered the victim's room at approximately 1:25 a.m. According to a Public Safety Alert released by UMPD spokesperson Jim Lyons, one of the men pointed a handgun at the student and instructed him to hand over his valuables. The student reported that the two men left his room with $75 in cash. The two individuals have yet to be apprehended.

"There were cops everywhere on my floor," seventh floor resident Jessica Valley said. "I just moved in that night," she said. "A lot of s___ty things go on in this building. There's no security for the building whatsoever. It's kind of pathetic."

According to three anonymous sources, the robbery victim's name is Dustin M. Gaunt. Unconfirmed reports say that police arrested Gaunt after he called them and they interviewed him.

Sketches of the two robbery suspects have been released and are posted around campus.

The first suspect is a Hispanic man between the ages of 19 and 21. He is described as having black hair and brown eyes and as being 5-foot-8 and 165 pounds. He was also wearing a maroon jersey and dark mesh shorts and displayed a semi-automatic handgun with a dark finish.

The second suspect is a Hispanic male with a dark complexion. He is described as being between the ages of 19 and 21 with black hair and brown eyes. Police said that he is about 5-foot-11 and 175 pounds.

Anyone with information regarding this incident is encouraged to contact the UMass Police Department at 545-0895 or call their anonymous TIPS line at 577-8477.

Police suggest that to prevent crimes like

Turn to ROBBERY, page 3

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

Union members of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, the faculty union on campus, will look for representatives elected by the senate to force the issue of funding contracts.

Faculty Senate fills vacant positions

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate held elections on Thursday at their initial meeting for the year to fill empty positions in the Senate, Rules Committee, and elect representatives to the Board of Trustees.

Associate Vice Chancellor and Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin addressed the senate following elections to announce admissions data for the new school year.

Following Presiding Officer Frank Hugus, of the Germanic Languages department's, retirement from the position, nominations were made from the floor of the meeting. Senator Roland Chilton of Sociology and Senator Jerome Mileur of Political Science were both nominated; Mileur was elected.

Mileur will follow in Hugus's experienced footsteps beginning at the next meeting of the Faculty Senate on Thursday, Oct. 3. Hugus served the Faculty Senate for twenty years, five as the Presiding Officer.

Secondly, the Senate elected Alexandria Deschamps of Women's Studies as an associate delegate to the Board of Trustees. Deschamps, and Jenny Spencer of English had been nominated before the meeting.

The two nominees for two at large members of the Rules Committee were Richard Bogartz of Psychology, and Mileur. However, since Mileur had already been nominated and accepted the position of presiding officer he was taken out of the election.

Following additional nominations from the floor, Spencer, Chilton, and Janice Irvine of Sociology, were added to the ballot. Senators were asked to write elect two of the candidates by writing their names on small ballots handed around by assisting members of the Senate. Spencer and Irvine were elected.

Chilton won the position of Rules Committee Chair by acclimation, since both Irvine and Spencer declined nomination.

Following elections, the Senate moved to approve a name change for the College of Food and Natural Resources (CFNR to the College of Natural Resources and the Environment as presented in Sen. Doc. No. 03-002.

This approval came after a debate between members as to what

Turn to SENATE, page 3

© 2002 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization. We are proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer.

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

VOTED #1 IDEAL EMPLOYER BY BUSINESS STUDENTS, UNIVERSUM UNDERGRADUATE STUDY, 2002

Help us help companies determine how import taxes, manufacturing costs and labor will affect their profits, and we'll help you build a career.

For opportunities and information go to:
www.pwcglobal.com/lookhere

Look beyond the numbers.

Senate

continued from page 1

departments in the college would be adequately represented by the new name. Senators spoke for both sides of the issues, but the vote was decidedly favorable towards change.

During regular announcements Provost Charlena Seymour announced that the University would be conducting searches for two positions: Dean of Public Health, and a Vice Chancellor for Research. Meetings of the committees chosen to perform the search are under way.

Addressing the Faculty Senate for the first time under in her new position Associate Vice Chancellor and Dean of Students Jo-Anne Vanin reported the earliest statistical data from the new class and the department of admissions.

According to Vanin the department of admission and the University succeeded in "most" of their goals, including those to reduce class size, receive more applications, accept better students and maintain diversity.

There was a 10 percent increase in applications, but the University dropped its acceptance rate from 73 percent to 58 percent. The ratio of in-state students to that of out-of-state students grew, as the University tried to accommodate Massachusetts's own before accepting students with other choices. The split was 75/25, but is now 87/13 with the addition of this year's freshman class.

The freshman class boosted the University's average high school G.P.A. for acceptance upping it from 3.25 to 3.43. Transfer students' incoming GPA's also boosted the average.

However, while 62 percent of transfer's offered admission accepted, only 28 percent of incoming freshman offered enrollment accepted, down from last year's 31 percent.

Vanin reported that this figure may have dropped due to the media's coverage criminal activity on campus, and highly discussed budget concerns during the spring semester.

"Factors seemed to be the state's budget for higher education, the number of retirements and the questionable overall stability of the institution," said Vanin.

JAMES SCHOTTER/COLLEGIAN

University of Massachusetts, Amherst Chancellor John V. Lombardi addressed Faculty Senate members, explaining his positions on several current issues on campus. He stayed on hand to witness elections for members of the Rules Committee and representatives to the Board of Trustees. He'll be working closely with each group as the year progresses.

Student threatened by armed assailants in Southwest dorm

robbery continued from page 1

this one from occurring, students should lock their doors at all times, even while in their rooms. Police also strongly urge students to report all suspicious persons and activities.

This is the first armed robbery reported this year at the University. Last year, there were a series of armed robberies on campus, including one last Dec. 5 in Coolidge. In that incident, the victim reporting the robbery stated that the suspects carried weapons and stole money, a personal telephone and beer.

Another armed robbery in Kennedy last year was successful when two suspects entered a dorm room at 1:12 a.m. on April 9. The two entered a room wielding knives. They took a small amount of cash and left. No one was hurt in the incident.

On May 4, a woman and a man robbed a student at around 4:30 a.m. in John Quincy Adams Dormitory at gunpoint for drugs. The victim let the two suspects into his room after they asked to purchase marijuana. They began collecting drugs in his room without paying. When the victim attempted to stop the suspects, the woman alleged pulled a gun on his chest. They then escaped down the hall with the drugs.

Perhaps the most high profile armed robbery at the University in recent years ending in a shooting. In 1998, Sokha Chhim, of Amherst, then 17, was arrested after an armed robbery ended in the wounding of a 24-year-old undergraduate in Cashin Dormitory. Chhim was charged with attempted murder, assault with a dangerous weapon, and armed robbery.

The victim in that shooting sustained a gunshot wound to the neck. After police medical attention and transport to the hospital in an ambulance, the victim underwent successful surgery.

Police said that they believed that the Cashin shooting was not a random assault, but an isolated incident.

CLAY BANKS/COLLEGIAN MEDIA GROUP

The seventh floor of Coolidge Dormitory, one of Southwest's four towers, saw an armed robbery occur over the weekend.

speakers

Monday:

Kyle Cooper, UMass alumnus and founder/Creative Director of Imaginary Forces, a graphic /titling company for print, film and television will be on campus from Sept. 23-24, to discuss his new feature film, Newport South, for more info call 545-2563.

Entomology Lecture Series: Selection and evolution of performance curves: thermal sensitivity of caterpillar growth at 3:30 p.m. UMass campus. Alexander Conference Room, Fernald Hall.

Odyssey Bookshop Reading with Sven Birkerts: 4 p.m. at Mount Holyoke College. Odyssey Bookshop, 9 College St., Village Commons, South Hadley.

Lecture on "Courage, Truth, and Reconciliation," at Amherst College, at 7 p.m., in the Cole Assembly Room, Converse Hall.

Tuesday:

Jim Crawford, the former editor of Education Week will speak about the "English-only movement" and language rights since 1985 within the educational system. 7 p.m., Smith College, McConnell Auditorium. Free and open to the public.

Poetry reading by Lucille Clifton: she will read about her experiences as a woman, an African American and a cancer survivor, a book-signing will follow. Begins 7:30 pm Wright Auditorium at Smith College. Free and open to public.

Wednesday:

Benefit Sweater Sale at Smith College: handmade mittens, blankets, scarves, etc., for sale. Proceeds will benefit Smith's student volunteer program and local non-profit agencies. To be held in the Lower Gamut Meddenhall CPA, Green St. from 9 a.m. – 5 p.m.

Thursday:

Author, Northampton resident and Associate Professor of Sociology at UMass, Janice M. Irvine will speak about her new book, Talk About Sex: The Battles Over Sex Education in the United States from 7:30-9:30 p.m. at the Unitarian Society of Northampton and Florence, 220 Main St. Northampton. Free and open to the public.

The Five College Graduate program in History to announce annual fall lecture: Eric Foner the DeWitt Clinton Professor of History at Columbia University will present his lecture, "September 11 and the Teaching of American History," at 7:30 p.m. in Memorial Hall at UMass. Free and open to the public.

programs

Everywomen's Center Counseling Services: "Finding your voice through Writing: A Women's Self-Discover Group," six sessions, Thursday evenings during fall semester. For all women who would like to use writing to increase their understanding of self.

"Managing Anxiety," a group for women who struggle with anxiety daily, will focus on understanding the causes of anxiety and learning skills to reduce and manage it. Four Wednesday evenings, beginning Oct. 9.

(Both programs are free and open to women from the 5 colleges and the surrounding community. Registration required, for more info or to register-call 577-0077.

films

Monday:

Shadows and Sojourners Film Series: Marriage in the Shadows, at 8p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 231 at UMass.

Look for the Community Bulletin every Monday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

All Semester
The HARP Features
MURPHY'S IRISH STOUT & MURPHY'S IRISH RED
$2.95 PINT
Live Music THURSDAY-SATURDAY
TUESDAY Pub Trivia
NEW MONDAY ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $5.95
EXPANDED MUNCHIES MENU SERVED UNTIL MID NIGHT
OCMP

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
"Voted Best New Bar/Club In The Valley" Advocate
"Start Your Own Tradition"
163 SUNDERLAND RD.
AMHERST, MA
413 548-6900

D.P. Dough®
DELIVERS CALZONES
— THE PIZZA ALTERNATIVE® — 256-1616
TM
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616
2 CALZONES & 2 DRINKS FOR $10.00
With this coupon • Exp 5/31/03 • One Coupon per 2 Zones
Must mention coupon when ordering
D.P. Dough • 256-1616
D.P. Dough = GREAT CALZONES + FAST DELIVERY + LOW PRICES

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE FOO

MCAS Testing: hasn't proven effective

This year, graduating high school seniors will have more than admission letters to worry about. Their graduations are now on the line because of the controversial MCAS test. The class of 2003 will be the first required to pass both the English and math portions of the 10th grade MCAS test to graduate. They've had three chances to pass it so far and about 12, 000 students have yet to do so.

The test has sparked protests and even a lawsuit over the past few years regarding its validity. The problem with the MCAS is that it's become more than a test like the SATs or GREs. It's an exam that will stop you from getting a high school diploma and, for that matter, admission into some colleges. Students that fail the MCAS would face being denied admission into the state's public four-year colleges and the University of Massachusetts system as a whole, because they require high school diplomas. While students with the financial means to go to a private institution will most likely be able to go to school without passing the MCAS, lower income students that fail the exam might be left in the dust if they can't attend the state's public higher education institutions.

Sadly, high school curriculum has changed and is now molded around getting students to pass the MCAS test. Instead of covering a variety of subject matter, high school teachers are now nervously focusing specifically on subject matter that is going to be on the exam. By doing this, high school students are losing out on interesting curriculum that used to be covered in high school. This intensive focus on an exam, instead of on different topics will definitely hurt college-bound students in Massachusetts who might not have the same frame of reference as their future classmates.

Many national universities and colleges are saying that students who don't acquire a diploma as a result of the MCAS will not affect their college admissions decisions. Among these colleges are Brown University, Brandeis University, Dartmouth College and Stanford University. These schools recognize the importance of factors other than standardized testing. The majority of college students who have taken the SATs probably agree that their scores were not an accurate reflection of the work they did in high school. Standardized testing of any sort doesn't accurately predict how you'll do in the future or who you are as a person.

The state needs to take a step back and continue to evaluate the effectiveness and the validity of the MCAS. While it's original intent was to create a statewide standard in education the test is slowly destroying high school curriculum and creating a wider gap between higher and lower income students.

Information from The Boston Globe was used in this staff opinion.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

We want your opinion! Send us a letter at collegian editorial@yahoo.com

Appreciating the moment

Sunny, salty air tantalizing your senses. Flip-flops lying carelessly in tiny particles of scorching sand. Waves crashing powerfully on the shore. Then, my whistle blows and I motion a swimmer to come closer to shore, to remove their mask and snorkel, or to put away any non-Coast Guard approved floatation devices. This is how I spent the summer of 2002: as a lifeguard on Cape Cod National Seashore.

I was lucky to have a job that allowed me to be near the sun, sand and ocean for eight hours a day, as well as receive a tan to the envy of all of my friends. My light hair became a platinum blonde, making me feel like a little kid again. Sounds great doesn't it? How couldn't I have had a great summer? I've asked myself the same question ever since being back here at UMass. And the simple answer is that I did not enjoy the moment while I was there.

Most days when my alarm went off at 7:50 a.m., I felt disgruntled and annoyed. I was annoyed that I had to spend another day not lying on the beach sunning myself with a book and my friends, but staring at strangers swimming around and then yelling at them if they disobeyed the rules. I felt like my job was repetitious: get up, brush teeth, pack a lunch, drive 25 minutes on seemingly endless Route 6 and eat some dry cereal (preferably Raisin Squares). This was followed by sitting on my lifeguard stand, workout and packing up equipment for eight hours. Don't get me wrong: I love lifeguarding, working outside and interacting with the public. I just hate feeling like I appreciate experiences after they're over. On my last day on the Cape, I felt a sinking, melancholy feeling in my stomach as I glanced back at my bedroom for the last time. Thoughts of: "Will I ever be back here?" "Will I keep in touch with the friends I've made?" filled my mind and I wondered how the summer had passed without even realizing it.

Ever since I can remember, most experiences I've had have been similar to my time on the Cape. Some days are great and some are hard to get through. That's life. But for some reason I find it so hard to appreciate what I'm doing while I'm doing it. I believe that most people want what they can't have. This unfortunate pseudo-philosophy can apply to experiences as well as to material goods. At the beach? You want to be at school. Drive a Grand AM? You want a Camry. It's human nature, or perhaps society, that brings with it an aura of never being completely satisfied where you are. How often have you been sitting in class, struggling to pay attention to the professor or teaching assistant, and all you can think about is that girl or that guy, or what you're going to order at the Coffee Shop? And, when this damn class is over, or how your family is doing at home, or maybe how you miss an experience that you just finished with – like a summer job.

"I just hate feeling like I appreciate experiences after they're over."

I also abide by the Rolling Stone's philosophy of "You can't always get what you want." There comes a time when you have to realize that maybe it's okay not to always have what you think you want, and in the end, as the song goes, you'll get what you need. I needed to do something challenging and new this summer, and I did. It just sucks that, at the time, I overlooked the positive aspects of my two months and focused on the negative times.

Pink Floyd also knows what's up when they sing, "we're just two lost souls swimming in a fish bowl" year after year. The cycle of feeling unfulfilled makes me feel helpless, like I'm going through the motions without actually knowing where I am or what I'm doing. Why did I spend half of my summer anxious to be back at college, my academic environment of learning interesting things and meeting new people?

Why wasn't my mind focused on being a lifeguard? And now that I'm here at UMass again, I desperately miss the beach, my job, having my own house (inside Marconi Beach!) and a huge, comfy double bed which now stands in stark contrast to my tiny single bed and concrete walls.

I've always considered myself a restless spirit, a wanderer.

Even my senior class speech in high school closed with the Cat Steven's song line, "There's so much left to know and I'm on the road to find out." What makes the journey and my life so much harder is that in addition to having no idea where that road is going to bring me, I have a difficult time enjoying the road trip (to continue my cheesy metaphor). I get anxious, feeling like there must be something better, someone better, some place better. Somewhere I can learn to enjoy the moment, take a deep breath, and relax.

I guess the reality is that no matter how lonely, sad, depressed, or unhappy any of us may get, it usually comes back to the fact that most of us are individuals who forget the simple aspects of life that really matter. Sitting outside of my dorm smoking a cigarette (a very unsuccessful way of alleviating these feelings, trust me – I've been trying to make that work for four years) last week on a gorgeous 75 degree evening, I saw an orange, gray and black sky as the sun was setting and knew that no matter who I miss, who I'm not getting along with, or what I'm unsatisfied with at the moment, that sky will still be there. And rather than appreciating it days, weeks, or months later, I should keep trying to love it at that moment.

I constantly battle with my wandering mind, the queasy, uneasy feeling in my stomach and throat when I think about how much time I spend being on-edge and discontented. It sucks. Even though I haven't figured out an answer yet, I guess for now I'm just going to keep working at enjoying the moment, even with that ever-present lump in my throat.

Katy Noone is a Collegian Columnist.

Lone Ranger

Ruining the game

Kansas City Royals' first base coach Tom Gamboa stood in the coaches' box at Comiskey Park in Chicago surveying the field after a botched bunt attempt by Royals' right fielder Michael Tucker in the ninth inning of Thursday night's game against the Chicago White Sox. What Gamboa failed to notice was the two shirtless men charging out of the stands to punch him.

The two men attacked Gamboa playing on a seemingly endless loop on ESPN's two men emerging from the stands to blindside a seemingly defenseless man. Seems strange, doesn't it? Even more bizarre is the fact that the two assailants are father and son.

Now what does it say about the state of fan involvement when a father and son tandem climb out of the crowd and pummel an old man? Is this simply an isolated incident, or is it indicative of a more disturbing trend of fan fanaticism.

For years there have been hecklers, and crazy fans willing to go shirtless in freezing temperatures. There's also a fight in the stands every time you go to Fenway. But only in recent years have grown so bold as to come out of the stands and attack the athletes.

On Sept. 24, 1999, a 23-year-old fan attacked Houston Astros right fielder Bill Spier. Like Gamboa, Spier was jumped from behind, but unlike Gamboa Spier got the better of the attacker probably because he only had one to deal with.

The most severe instance of an athlete assaulting a fan happened during an April 1993 tennis match in Hamburg, Germany. A man obsessed with tennis star Monica Seles jumped from the stands and stabbed her as she prepared to receive a serve from her opponent. Security caught the man immediately, and he didn't hurt anyone else, but it took Seles months to recover and regain her once-dominant form.

If there is one positive we can glean from this situation, it's that Gamboa was not more seriously injured. He sustained only a cut over his right eye since Comiskey Park security and the entire Royals' bench prevented any further injury.

Needless to say, payers don't have the right to attack players. In fact, nobody has the right to attack anyone. The purchase of a ticket allows a fan admission to the game, it certainly doesn't grant someone the right to jump onto the field, court, or ice, and assail the athletes, or coaches.

With heightened security since last Sept. 11, many fans are wondering how this could possibly have happened. Let me first say the blame rests solely on the two nitwits who decided to leap over the guardrail and jump a man from behind. Security cannot possibly be held responsible for the unreasonable actions of two idiot fans.

All the parks, arenas and stadiums in the four major sports are constructed to provide fans with a decent view of the action no matter where they're sitting. Although they pay exorbitant amounts to get those seats, fans must remain in the stands and not spill onto the field.

Let me say that my criticism is of overzealous fans. I love the Red Sox and long hated the Yankees. But I'm not about to run onto the field and kick Derek Jeter in the groin. Nor am I going to stab Curtis Martin for leaving the Pats. Or whip a shattered bat at Roger Clemens' head.

Fans have every right to come to a ballgame, enjoy a beer and cheer their home team. Fans should be able to have fun. Not only that, sports franchises should strive to create a safe, enjoyable atmosphere. The fans should be catered to, because it is the fans that make the major sports the billion-dollar industries they are.

I even think ticket and concession prices are far too high. It costs nearly $100 to take a family of four to Fenway for a ballgame. I sympathize with the complaints of the average fan. Athletes are paid far too much and too often and don't hustle enough. I don't even oppose heckling. It's fun and it's part of the game. Without it, home field advantage is rendered almost worthless.

But fan liberties only extend so far. When fans throw beer bottles at players and refs, or run out onto the field, that's crossing the line. If this type of behavior continues, it'll become increasingly harder to defend the fans. I mean what more can these ballparks and stadiums do, install Plexiglas around the perimeter of the field? Will it really come to that? I doubt it, and let's hope there's not the typical post-Sept. 11 overreaction, but how much more can athletes and coaches continue to tolerate?

Obviously, it would take a severe attack to ever institute any security measure as drastic as Plexiglas, but as previously demonstrated, there certainly is potential for that to happen. Just ask Monica Seles.

With their lavish contracts and pampered treatment, pro athletes should accept some responsibilities outside of playing a sport: signing autographs, speaking with the media, and, most importantly, being cordial with the fans.

The players shouldn't have to worry about attack at the hands of the people they're playing for. Athletes shouldn't be forced to defend themselves while the game is in progress. Although I did extract a sick sense of pleasure when Royais' second baseman Carlos Feebles clotheslined the elder assailant, players shouldn't have to fend off attackers emerging from the stands.

So often fans chastise athletes for being selfish, greedy, and rude. It's true we have a legitimate complaint. But, we can't exact revenge by attacking these athletes, whether on or off the field. In this particular case, the fans have quite obviously crossed the line. Hopefully, this won't result in a security backlash in which fans are subjected to unreasonably restrictive measures just to see a ballgame. Let's hope the actions of two criminal fanatics won't ruin the ballpark experience for the law-abiding fans. Let's also hope certain fans will think before they ruin it for the rest of us.

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I am writing this in letter in response to Lindsey Elder's column on the 18th, "Defenders on the Defense." To start I would like to introduce myself as one of the people who sat across from Lindsey's ROTC table, I am in the "world peace group." I would also care to add that I've had this discussion many times before. My sister and her husband are military folk, and Carlos, my brother-in-law, is currently stationed on the Korean border. This fact alone was very hard on my sister then coupled with Sept 11 talks of the "axis of evil," and war with Iraq she has become particularly sensitive to my anti-war stance. So as I have done with my sister, so shall I try to explain the "world peace" view not only to Lindsey, but to the entire UMass community.

The first view that needs to be addressed is the supposed hate of the army by the left. Just as I would ask women not to hate all men because a few commit the heinous crime of rape, I would ask those in the armed services not to dislike the entire left because of a few extremists have crossed the line of acceptable protest. Is it fair to hate every Muslim due to the events of Sept. 11, or is it a better plan to bring just those guilty to justice?

Most of the "world peace" community, the "Silent Majority" as President Nixon said, has no problem with the armed services. The issues most have are the way in which they're used. All too often it seems that our government uses the military for less then noble actions endangering the lives of citizens of foreign nations as well as the lives of home grown Americans.

I would agree that while military action is occasionally needed, the US abuses its status as the only remaining super-power. Perhaps, the US could follow the lead of Japan and its interactions with North Korea. Instead of threatening North Korea with war (North Korea is trying to acquire sophisticated nuclear weapons), Japan is making great headway with billions of dollars of aid. And If you're wondering why the U.S. favors military action I offer you this fact: the U.S. military asked for $396 billion for 2003, the next highest globally was Russia at $60 billion.

As my closing point I offer this, both sides are after the same goal, the same ideals. We simply disagree on the method to achieve them. Perhaps, our time will be better spent taking action on the points where we agree, rather than fighting over those we don't. And If push ever comes to shove, rest assured I'll be standing there with you, as the last defense for our nation.

Matthew Callis
Student

www.dailycollegian.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTSLIVING@YAHOO.COM 9.23.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

FORGET REGRET OR LIFE IS YOURS TO MISS!!

Cassie Levy (left) as Maureen and Bridget Anne Mohammed (right) as Joanne Jefferson in the touring production of RENT last thursday in Springfield.

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

RENT
Directed by Michael Greif
Starring Kevin Spencer, Ashton Holmes, Krystal L. Washington, Bruce Wilson, Jr., Justin Rodriguez, Cassie Levy and Noreen Crayton
Played at Symphony Hall on Sept. 19

SPRINGFIELD – September 19, 8 p.m. Eastern standard time. From here on in I write without a guide. See if anything comes of it. Instead of my old...

Well, that little tribute to the show's rhythmic opening is at least one of the more appropriate ways to begin a review on the national tour of RENT. With book, music and lyrics by Jonathan Larson, the premier musical for which has dazzled audiences for nearly six years. Millions of copies of the show's original recording and gift paraphernalia such as T-shirts, commemoration booklets and even Christmas ornaments are sold each season. Chorus groups across the country sing its hit songs, such as "Seasons of Love," in their respective local performances. Unarguably, the show has seeped its way into U.S. popular culture and last Thursday night, it hit the Pioneer Valley for a one-night engagement.

Symphony Hall, its exterior built with all the grandeur of a Roman palace, sets on the corner of E. Columbus Ave and Court Street. Only a clock tower sets between it and Springfield's City Hall, a building that with its looming fat, round pillars of concrete practically mirrors the image of the music hall. A block over from the city's main congestion, the theater welcomes audiences with its white and gold trim walls, its towering ceilings and its wide Isles. At the moment of entrance, one can tell it's an older theater—one with history and experience in hosting productions. And best of all, its ambiance balances well with RENT.

Based on the opera La Boheme, RENT brings the stage to life with fun costumes, a unique set design, amazing lighting and, naturally, some of the catchiest tunes to come out of Broadway in the last decade. It's a story of trust, devotion and love. It's a story of and for outcasts of a society ever familiar to anyone who has lived in America—or, as is argued in the show, of and for anyone in America. It's a story of friends connecting and of people getting through life's curveballs together. Simply put, it's life projected on stage through song and dance, filled with emotions you've probably already felt in your own time.

To begin, the show has no curtain. Instead, setting on stage for inquisitive onlookers to inspect is a curious world of metal pipes, random tables, chairs, staircases, balconies and high brick walls stretching upward towards the hidden catwalks above. Shadows play well on these walls, one soon learns as the show begins, adding to the visual lighting extravaganza that delights the senses. It's by no means a simplistic, one-dimensional set with simplistic singular-colored schemed lighting. And that's befitting, because RENT is certainly not simplistic.

The story is set in Manhattan's Alphabet City, opening one afternoon on a Christmas Eve in the late 90s. Mark Cohen (Ashton Holmes) serves as the show's narrator and opens by introducing his long-time roommate and dear friend, Roger Davis (Kevin Spencer). Roger, we learn from our aspiring film director, has been a recluse since he learned of his AIDS infection. Seeking to write just one song that can capture through his guitar cords all the emotion in his heart, Roger finds it difficult to open up to other people, making it all the harder for his love-interest Mimi Marquez (Krystal L. Washington) to get to know him.

Enter Tom Collins (Bruce Wilson, Jr.), Mark and Roger's ex-roommate

Turn to RENT, page 6

Kevin Spencer (right) as Roger Davis and Krystal L. Washington (left) as Mimi Marquez during the moving rendition of "Light my candle"

The cast of RENT brought the house down Thursday night at its one night performance at Symphony Hall in downtown Springfield.

Hair, hair everywhere
"Hair Trigger" comes to Hampden Gallery

By Cameron J. Woods
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

I want it long, straight, curly, fuzzy; snaggy, shaggy, ratty, matty; oily, greasy, fleecy, shinning; gleaming, steaming, flaxen waxen; knotted, polka-dotted, twisted, beaded, braided, powdered, flowered and confettied, hangled, tangled, spangled and spaghetti!

Hair.

It is found in-between the teeth of combs, in shower drains and sometimes even in our food. It is hair. Though we all may wash, rinse and repeat and then style our hair, few, if any, of us consider the artistic goldmine we have growing from our own skulls. Local Northampton artist Sally Curicio has made this realization and will be exhibiting her original artwork in the Hampden Gallery titled "Hair Trigger," the exhibit will open on Thursday, Sept. 19 and will be open through Dec. 8 from 5-7 p.m. daily.

"I am really into experimenting with different media," said Curicio, a University of Massachusetts graduate. "Working with collage, I just came across hair, and I realized just how much of a charged tool it was."

Her sculptures contain 100 percent real human hair, some of which is her own while the rest was donated by a Northampton boutique.

In this selection, Curcio exposes the many meanings today's society places on hair. Amongst other themes, the exhibited sculptures hint at the contrasts between animate/inanimate as well as disgust/enjoyment and cleanliness/filth.

"Personal waste is hidden in so many ways, yet collected in common repositories," Curcio said in her artists' statement. "The result of this marginalized collective activity is exposed in this installation as it brings one into a space where the debris has been made visible."

Through sculpture made from hair that flows through drainage pipes, she expresses a repressed commonality between the individuals in our society.

"Individual reactions to Ms. Curcio's work have ranged from the comical, to disgust, and in other cases the appreciation of the sculpture forms," reported Anne DePrado, Hampden Gallery spokeswoman.

"We do not want to tell people how to interpret art and by exposing different extremes of it, the Incubator project hopes to bolster peoples interest for the fine arts."

There are to be three notable parts to the exhibit, the first and largest of which is a sculpture of pipes with hair coming out of them. The next includes a set of windows with full wigs pressed between the glass, while the last feature, but the most numerous, involves the 10 bars of soap with the appearance of hair growing out of them, which are placed throughout the exhibit.

Though Curcio's particular usage of hair in her work is an original concept, the use of hair in artwork is fairly as historic as oil paints, pastilles and even clay. In the middle Ages, through to the invention of the photograph, it would be commonplace for lovers and friends to exchange locks of hair as tokens of their relationship. Families would create wreathes or bouquets woven from hair gathered from each member of the family.

"Hair Trigger" is the first of many projects being sponsored by the "Incubator Project."

"The Incubator Project allows us to foster a relationship with an artist that we may not have had room to offer an exhibit space to," LaPrade said. "Also this project provides UMass with a constant stream of new and provocative art."

Cursio has studied at Williams College and the American College in London, England. She has also received awards for her artwork from UMass, Western Massachusetts Juried Works on Paper and Sculpture, The Northampton Council on the Arts and the Northampton Center for the Arts.

Capturing the Pioneer Valley
The view From Mount Holyoke

By Katy LoConte
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

It has certain magnetism. People have been viewing it and artists capturing it for centuries. Mount Holyoke presides over the Pioneer Valley – so striking that an entire exhibit at the Mount Holyoke Art Museum is dedicated to it. Changing Prospects: The View From Mount Holyoke.

The sheer magnitude of the artistic works of the same general subject that decorate the would-be blank walls was, although expected, still a sight to see. The works ranged in medium from etchings, lithographs, engravings and photographs to numerous types of painting, such as watercolor and oil.

When walking into the museum, a woman with her high heels clicking along the hardwood floors, was finishing a tour. The group of middle-aged women and men circled the area, fascinated by the women's speech. I sat to listen but, when she uttered the phrase "suffused in glorious sunset, the red oxbow's reflecting light..." I walked on, trying to steer my way clear of her cliches. When the words "sunset" and "glorious" are used together, I grow weary.

Approximately 100 pieces of work hung in the museum. One was clearly abstract, visible as I turned the corner. It hung on the back wall of the museum. From a distance it just looked like a mass of color. At closer glance it wasn't much different. I could make out few distinctions between the lines and slashes of color across the canvas. Were it not for the fact that I already knew that the mountain and oxbow would be in the painting, I might have recognized nothing. The mountain was a cluster of lines, thickly settled with visible wet brush strokes. The picture oozed of continuity, yet remained cluttered to see. It was equally messy throughout the whole painting. I moved on, knowing it was not my favorite. Yet I couldn't help but appreciate the courage of the artist and their eye to be able to see things in such glorious color and freedom.

The next painting was more my style: more representational than any other in the show. It is the main painting of the exhibit; Thomas Cole's "View from Mount Holyoke, Northampton, MA, after a thunderstorm (The Oxbow)." The title was a bit lengthy yet well worth it. I bent to read the card next to it. "The most famous view from Mount Holyoke..." Thomas Cole is the father of American landscape painting," it read. There's a reason why this painting is so renowned, a reason why it's set in the middle of the display on a wall of it's own.

"We are indeed privileged to present this magnificent painting from the Metropolitan Museum's collection-a painting that is widely considered the most important American landscape," said Marianne Doezema, director of the Mount Holyoke College Art Museum. On the left of the painting the trees are covered with rough and textured bark and leaves. The ominous storm clouds clearly evoke emotion and show the power of nature. The oxbow and surrounding mountains lay off to the right, basked in golden light. The eye is torn between the tumultuous stormy clouds, darker colors on the right and the coming of the light.

The emotion and feeling evoked from this painting come from great technical skill. The details and strokes in the trees and leaves in the left foreground perfectly depict life with proper shadowing and highlighting. The valley below shows the reflections in the glassy still waters of the oxbow effectively. Overall the painting is a powerful image. One that stayed with me long after I walked out the door.

Batman's Little Girl Grows Up In WB's "Birds of Prey"

Dina Meyer kicks butt in "Birds of Prey" as Barbara Gordon. "Birds of Prey" premieres Oct. 8 at 9 p.m.

Seventeen-year-old Rachel Skarsten makes her TV debut in "Birds of Prey."

By Erik Taylor
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

There seems to be a trend these days in turning comic book properties into major film (X-Men, Spider-Man, Daredevil) and television ("Smallville," "Mutant X") franchises. Last year, the WB premiered "Smallville," the teenage version of Superman. When the show received critical praise and earned high ratings, people started to realize something; if the comic book material is handled properly and respectfully, the show can come out to be really good. If it is done badly, the product can come up dreadfully wrong (nobody remembers the "Generation X" pilot on Fox years ago do they?). This season, the WB and the producers of "Smallville" are bringing another comic book to life: "Birds of Prey."

The Birds of Prey are a trio of super heroines that reside in New Gotham City, the home of Batman. The show brings us into the near future where the Joker goes on a rampage killing Catwoman and shooting Barbara Gordon (Batgirl) in the spine, rendering her paralyzed. These events drove Batman to impose exile on himself, leaving New Gotham to the criminals and villains. With the Dark Knight gone, it is up to three women of incredible abilities to step up and fight Batman's war on crime.

Barbara Gordon (Dina Meyer) left her persona of Batgirl behind and took the mantle of Oracle, the center of information and technology for Gotham's heroes. She resides in her clocktower with her supercomputers monitoring the streets below.

Helena Kyle (Ashley Scott) AKA The Huntress, the illegitimate daughter of Batman and Catwoman, joins her in her fight. Being the daughter of a super powered Catwoman; Helena is gifted with meta-human cat-like abilities and enhanced speed and strength.

Dinah (Rachel Skarsten) is the final piece of the trio, bringing her developing meta-human abilities of visions. These three join the struggle against crime that is overcoming the denizens of New Gotham.

For people looking for a show on Batman, this isn't it. The show simply exists in a world with Batman in it and references to him will be few and far between. The pilot episode presents flashbacks that show the Dark Knight in action, but that is going to be all for the time being. The creators want the show to be about the Birds themselves, and not just secondary characters to Batman.

Joining the cast of "Birds of Prey" is Detective Jesse Reese (Shemar Moore), the son of Gotham's most notorious crime lord. He uses his badge to atone for his father's sins by battling justice and crossing paths with the Birds of Prey. Dr. Harleen Quinzel AKA Harley Quinn (Mia Sara), is the season's major villain. The ex-lover of the joker is unbelievably wicked and she will cause many problems for the girls. Alfred Pennyworth (Ian Abercrombie), Batman's old butler, assists Barbara Gordon by tending to wounds and supplying advice to her team.

Hopefully the shows creators have an idea of what will work for this show and what will not. An early version of the pilot floating around the Internet has gotten some bad reviews but has undergone alterations since then. The character of Harley Quinn has been replaced to Mia Sara, the clocktower set has been redone, and the music and sound has been changed completely. The comic itself is an excellent read and is high on sales charts. With all of these factors the WB seems to have another hit to add to their primetime lineup.

"Birds of Prey" Premieres Wednesday, October 9 at 9 p.m.

Avril not so 'Complicated'

AVRIL LAVIGNE
Let Go
Arista

As the bloom began to fade off Britney's and N'Sync's rose, naysayers went to work predicting the end of teen pop for good. But the bubble didn't burst – it just transmuted into a new form, one in which the young actors took a cue from the music of their parents. They started to write their own stuff, and they started to play their own instruments, and they started to make music more sophisticated than the synthetic, blips-and-blaps of the previous teen music upstarts (not that it's necessarily bad; N'Sync's "Pop" is one of the great recent pop songs).

Canada's own Avril Lavigne is blonde, bluc-eyed and 17, but don't compare her with Britney Spears. Don't compare her to Michelle Branch, either. Spunky and outgoing, Avril is a self-confessed skater punk who looks and acts like the kid sister to Sum 41 and travels with a back-up band that aspires to be Blink-182. The music on Let Go is brash and confident, the awaited debut of a young woman who knows she'll be going far.

Lavigne has an alto that vibrates from tremulously whisper to roaring cry to youthful pout. It's an appealingly askew singing voice (her Canadian accent sometimes slips through), full of personality and vibrato. She's a good singer and doesn't sound like another musician.

Let Go begins with the steely, crashing "Losing Grip," which comes down like a Pacific wave, and follows with her hit "Complicated." The song is everything a radio-pop song should be: melodic, tuneful and sleek. The bopping, punky "Sk8r Boi" and the beatific "I'm With You" follow. The tune "Tomorrow," which, like "I'm With You," is a slow ballad, is fine, but sounds like a WB drama soundtrack selection. The rest of the album is really good, if a bit monochromatic.

Avril Lavigne's album isn't as successful all around as Branch's The Spirit Room was. It isn't as a gorgeously crafted or as perfectly harmonic. But it isn't a Britney rip-off, and it isn't bad.

– Johnny Donaldson

Rent

continued from page 5

and good friend, on his way to visit the two in their run-down loft apartment. Suddenly deterred, Collins is mugged, robbed of his coat, pushed aside and left to wallow in the street. His saving grace is Angel Schunard (Justin Rodriquezt, a kind-hearted drumming Drag Queen. Instantly, the two men share a connection and another tender romance ensues.

Act I is centered on a protest in the lot next door to Mark and Roger's building. Benny Coffin (Matthew S. Morgan), another one of the two's ex-roommates who has recently married into wealth, dreams of transforming the area into a high-tech cyber-arts studio, meaning that everyone in the area would be left homeless.

This idea does not sit well with Maureen Johnson (Cassie Levy), anarchist-at-large. Mark's ex-girlfriend, the final ex-roommate to Mark, Roger, Collins and Benny and, at the show's start, a recently self-declared lesbian. Her girlfriend Joanne Jefferson (Noreen Crayton), was brought up in an upper-middle class privileged household, is an attorney who, for the night, attempts to take on the responsibilities of a stage manager in Maureen's show.

The show's a crazy ride through a year-long (525,600 minutes, as certain song lyrics put it) journey into self-discovery and awareness of all the people who can shape one's life. And the touring production does it justice in every way a show possibly can. From choosing actors/actresses prepared to place into their performance an endearing realism that can touch even the hardest of hearts to staying true to Angela Wendt's original and most befitting costume designs (from Roger's striped scarf to Mimi's "Out Tonight" ensemble of blue hologram pants, silver tank top, vinyl sleeves and baby giraffe printed boots), the touring production captures the heart and soul of Broadway's best "La Vie Boheme" musical to date.

Mixfest a complete mess

Bad lineup decisions by Boston radio station

LIZZY NIELSEN

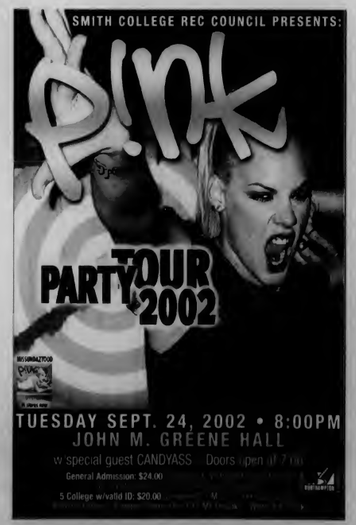
The idea of radio stations sponsoring concerts has spread like wildfire throughout the country. Kiss 108 in Boston has the summer-kickoff event with their Kiss Concert. Kiss 95.7 in Hartford has their annual "Boo Bash," and Z-100 in New York has "Zootopia," and Kiss 102.7 in Los Angeles has its "Wango Tango," which also often kicks off the summer. I was lucky enough to have a close friend win me tickets to the "Mixfest", sponsored by Mix 98.5. The lineup consisted of John Mayer, Avril Lavigne, David Grey, Pink, Def Leppard, Ruby Horse and Guster.

Personally, I was excited about John Mayer, and I assumed that he was headlining and therefore playing the longest set of any of the acts. I was so wrong. Mixfest is a huge rip-off, and Mix has a long way to go to produce the kind of show that Kiss 108 or Z-100 does on a yearly basis. I feel sorry for those who actually paid to see the show.

Guster and RubyHorse went one-two in the lineup. As the two least-known acts in the lineup, this was expected. I even arranged to be at a bar across the street from the FleetCenter consuming beverages during these acts, so that I could be nice and happy by the time that I went in to see the headlining acts, which I assumed to be Avril, Pink, and John Mayer. As my friend and I walked in to find our seats, we ran into someone we knew who informed us that Avril Lavigne had just finished. This surprised me, as Avril Lavigne has had the number one song in the country, and David Grey was following her in the lineup. I enjoy David Grey. "Babylon" was one of my favorite songs a few years ago, but I hardly expected him to follow Avril Lavigne in a lineup like this. This would prove to not be my biggest shock of the night.

David Grey opened with "Babylon," which made me happy, so I was able to get up and exercise the privileges of a 21-year-old after he performed the single. By the time I move through the mile-long beer line and back to my seat, they announce that John Mayer is going to be next. And Pink is going to be after that. I come to find out that Def Leppard is headlining. This is wrong on so many levels.

First of all, last I checked, Def Leppard was playing weddings and free concerts in the middle of Nebraska. They even played the Big E a few years back. Their glory days are long over, as they haven't had a hit since the Reagan Administration. One song has survived on the time, the anthem of drunken girls everywhere, "Pour some sugar on me." Now, I'm all about 80's nostalgia, but it has-been hair band headlining a sold out arena of more than 10,000 people in the year 2002 over someone like John Mayer is more pathetic than Naughty by Nature releasing a comeback album. Mayer, an artist with two hit songs and a slew of fantastic others was given a measly 40 minutes to perform.



This isn't the only gripe people have had with Mixfest. A close friend of mine actually sold his tickets because of his disappointment with the lineup. Understandably so. Last year's show was cancelled, and Mix probably took a huge revenue hit for the cancellation. The artists are typically booked eight months before the concert. Think about where John Mayer and Avril Lavigne were eight months ago. John Mayer was charging $10 a ticket at Pearl Street, and nobody knew why you had to go and make things so "Complicated."

When Mix put tickets on sale, the most expensive seats were going to close to a hundred dollars a pop. Imagine charging a hundred dollars to see John Mayer last January. Not happening. Conveniently, the artists were not announced until tickets had long been on sale. So people could be tricked into paying a gazillion dollars to see a less than stellar lineup. This works for stations like Kiss 108. The headliners for Kiss concert over the last few years have included Aerosmith, Celine Dion, Christina Aguilera and Ricky Martin. Depending on your choice in music and whether or not you're a pop nut like me, that's a pretty sweet selection of headliners. But Def Leppard? Please, I have better things to do on my Saturday night than listen to a thousand drunken twenty-somethings belt "that song from Coyote Ugly." I would have much rather heard John Mayer do songs like "Not Myself," and "Sucker," than have a washed up 80s band relive their glory days. It's worse than the varsity football banquet in my hometown, which involves townies and high school football has-beens lamenting about their glory days playing varsity football. So sad.

Mix has a long way to go before they can consider themselves up in the ranks with Kiss 108 and others due to the lackluster lineup and high-ticket prices of this year. Kiss often has upwards of 15 acts at Kiss Concert and charges around $75 for lawn seats. Mix had seven acts and nosebleed seats were nearly that much. Mix has had great artists at Mixfest in the past including Goo Goo Dolls and Barenaked Ladies, but if your ticket prices are going to go up, the quality of your show better increase as well. Def Leppard as a headliner over someone like John Mayer? Absolutely, positively more wrong than Ananda Lewis doing her own TV show. Good luck next year, Mix, because you certainly have a lot of redeeming to do.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian Columnist.

All Arts writers!
Meeting!
Day: Tuesday
Time: 7:30
Place: Newsroom
Be there or be oval.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
$139
★Student Special★
4 months
Best Aerobics~Best Machines
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS
• CYBEX • STAIRMASTERS •
LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • V.R.
BIKE • LIFEROWER • GRAVITON
AMHERST Athletic Club No. 115 So. Amherst 256-0080

UMass BRIEFS:

Men's Lacrosse

On Friday, the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team named Chris Gabrielli its new assistant coach. Head Coach Greg Canella hired Gabrielli to replace departed former assistant Terry Mangan, who left in the offseason to take the head coaching job at Lafayette.

Gabrielli, who spent four years as a down-low defender for UMass from 1998-2001, will be in charge of defense and faceoffs for a Minuteman squad that is looking to return to the NCAAs this season.

"We are very pleased to bring Chris back," Canella said in a press release. "He was a tenacious player and superb leader. Those qualities make him an outstanding coach. Chris knows and believes in our philosophies and style. I look forward to having him work and lead our players."

Hockey

The Massachusetts men's hockey team has announced its captains for the 2002-03 season. Seniors Kelly Sickavish and Tim Turner will lead the Minutemen on the ice, according to Head Coach Don Cahoon.

"We are very pleased to have two quality seniors, who are proven student-athletes, to lead our young team into a very challenging schedule," Cahoon said in a press release. "The coaching staff is confident that every action they initiate will be with the team's best interest in mind."

Turner has scored 20 points in each of his three years with the Minutemen, and finished second on the team in scoring last season, behind only current sophomore Greg Mauldin.

Sickavish scored four points from his defenseman spot last season, including a huge goal in the Maroon and White's 4-3 come-from-behind victory over Northeastern on Jan. 6.

Football

Former Minuteman Marcel Shipp scored his first NFL touchdown yesterday in Arizona's 23-15 loss at the hands of San Diego. Shipp took a lake Plummer pass 31 yards for the score. The play was also the longest from scrimmage in Shipp's brief NFL career.

soccer

continued from page 10

was a give and receive," Nigh said. "We absorbed, and then we attacked."

UMass nearly made it 2-0 with about eight minutes remaining, but Lilly was stopped point blank by Chapman just outside the box. The Cyclones came back with a fury, and had a few more chances to tie it up, but couldn't convert any of them. Iowa State's last opportunity came with 16 seconds left came off a corner kick, but the Minutewomen were able to steer it aside to preserve the victory.

CHRISTOPHER ELLIGAN

Lindsay Bellini scored two goals this weekend. The first gave the Minutewomen their first win of the season.

"There were some courageous efforts out there, people coming off injured and going back on," Rudy said. "I was very proud of them, they kept this game tight and allowed themselves a chance to win."

The momentum of Friday's win couldn't carry over to Sunday, as the Maroon and White was throttled 6-2 by No. 9 Auburn. Sarah Power and Christina Culver each knocked home two goals for the Tigers as the visitors turned a close game at halftime into a laugher soon after the second half began. The Minutewomen could not duplicate the feat of fellow Atlantic 10 member Rhode Island, who upset the Tigers 2-1 on Friday.

"You can't come up here coming out of the Southeastern Conference and take two losses," Rudy said.

UMass jumped ahead in the 20th minute as senior captain Martha Conover took a feed from Lilly and headed it past Tiger goalkeeper Megan Rivera to give the Maroon and White the early lead.

But Auburn rallied nine minutes later on almost a duplicate goal, as Power picked up her first marker on the afternoon, heading in a Jennifer Walters pass to tie the two teams up at halftime. The Tigers utterly dominated the opening frame, outshooting UMass 19-3 and earning nine corner kicks to UMass' zero. Still, the Minutewomen remained confident that they could come out and be competitive out of the intermission.

"I thought we had the right mindset, we were playing strong," Conover said. "We were attacking a lot in the first 15 minutes, and I really thought we could do it."

Any hopes of victory were quickly squashed, however, as the Tigers attacked furiously out of the break, scoring five goals in the first 13 minutes of the half to put the game far out of reach. Culver put the exclamation point on the run, scoring the final two tallies less than two minutes apart from each other.

Bellini recorded her second goal of the weekend late in the second half off a Erica Wideberg pass. Kelly Nigh had eight saves for the Minutewomen, and freshman Kristen Rutland saw her first extended action of the year in goal, recording three saves in just under 25 minutes.

"We really tried to play away from their strengths, and it got to the point where we gave up the [second] goal and lost our focus," Rudy said. "It's the sign of a young team."

football

continued from page 10

"Obviously they throw the ball as well as anyone in the country," Brown said. "I don't think you can sit back and play base defense against that guy."

Whipple, whose defense has a complex blitzing scheme of its own, was duly impressed by the pressure the Huskies exerted.

"When they get ahead of you, that's when they always come," he said. "When you get ahead of them, not so much."

Two more big plays were turned in by the NU passing game, both coming on screen passes. The first came on Northeastern's first drive of the second half – with the Huskies leading by a narrow 7-3 margin. Quarterback Shawn Brady was under heavy pressure from the Minuteman defensive line, but found fullback Tim Gale open on a short screen, and Gale rumbled for a 52-yard pickup. Three plays later, he took a ball up the middle for a two-yard touchdown that put NU up 11.

"The big series was when they came right out in the second half and took the ball right down the field and made it 14-3," Whipple said. "I knew we made some mistakes [in the first half], but I didn't feel bad at halftime."

"We just said it before the half – hey we're going to get the ball," Brown said. "We came out and just went right down the field and Shawn made a couple of good plays and we were able to finish it off."

The second big screen pass came on NU's next drive, as Brady ran a play action fake to the left and then found backup tight end Cody Thompson on the right side and Thompson barreled for 66 yards before he was finally brought down by Leroy Brooks. Four plays later, Brady found Quintin Mitchell in paydirt.

"It just comes down to not finishing," senior linebacker Jeremy Cain said. "We were on the ball – all 11 guys – and we didn't make tackles. They made plays when that happened."

Trailing 7-0 near the end of the first half, the Minutemen strung together a drive that ran nearly seven minutes off the clock. But after getting within four yards of tying the score, Maikel Miret sent a direct snap well over running back R.J. Cobb – head for a 23-yard loss, forcing UMass to settle for a field goal.

"We run it all practice, we thought we had it set up," Whipple said. "He just snapped it over R.J.'s head."

For Whipple, the answer to why his team was on the losing end of the game was simple.

"Their offense played better than our defense, their defense played better than our offense."

Running back Tim Gale scored on a two-yard dive during the Huskies' first drive of the second half. The runner set up the score with this 52-yard reception.

Ewing

continued from page 10

round of the '90 playoffs by hitting a desperation three-pointer that seemed to come from Boston Harbor.

Then there were the misses. His biggest miss was "the finger roll" in the 1995 playoffs against Indiana. From point blank range in an elimination game, Ewing blew what was no more than a lay-up. If only Ewing could have made some crunch time free throws, maybe the Knicks would have a ring to show for all their success in the '90s.

The New York Knicks traded Ewing in September of 2000. He left the Knicks for the Seattle Supersonics in what was the largest deal ever made. It was a trade that both New York and Ewing had no problem with, because both had grown tired of one another. The following year, Ewing left the Sonics and signed with the Orlando Magic as free agent. Later that year he received the first DNP (Did Not Play) of his career.

New York fans never truly appreciated Ewing until he was gone. The three-minute standing ovation he received in his first game back to The Garden explained it all. A relationship gone sour over 15 years had turned into a relationship of respect. Ewing never complained, whined, or gave up. He left everything out on the court night after night, often playing hurt and that is all one can ask from a man.

Only after the Knicks traded him did his real personality emerge. His closest friends and teammates always saw it, but the average fan never knew how bright of a smile he had and how great of a person Ewing really was. Ewing always did keep his personal life secluded to just friends and family. It's a shame Patrick Ewing is not as beloved in New York as Don Mattingly, Mark Messier and other great New York players of the '80s and '90s. It was not until after he was gone that both he and the Knicks realized how much they needed each other.

Adam Leroy is a Collegian Correspondent.

"Secrets of Leadership:
You think you know, but you're not quite sure."
Attend an interactive hands-on workshop, where you will work in groups to discuss, demonstrate, and develop your business leadership skills.
DATE: Thursday, September 26, 2002
PLACE: SOM, Room 127
TIME: 5:00 PM
Sponsored by Travelers
A representative will be available to discuss our own Leadership and Internship opportunities following the workshop!
Travelers

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
$139
★Student Special★
4 months
Best Aerobics~Best Machines
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS
• CYBEX • STAIRMASTERS •
LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • V.R.
BIKE • LIFEROWER • GRAVITON
AMHERST Athletic Club No. 115 So. Amherst 256-0080

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Bacon'n'Cheese Skins $3.95 4.49
Fried Shrimp Tempura $5.95 6.63
Sweet Potato Fries $3.95 4.38
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
DCMP Welcome Week
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
www.judiesrestaurant.com

Uechi-ryu Karate-do
UMass Uechi/Shohei practitioners. There is a Uechi dojo just 20 minutes from campus.
The Hatfield Shubukan
95 Prospect Street, Hatfield
413-247-0159
"Karate the way it was meant to be."
©1999 Hatfield Shubukan, Inc.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Enjoying Push, Nevada? Valuables already found by search4e players. Many more chances to find amazing [illegible] www.search4e.com

[illegible] Commuter Assistance Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven fundraising program. Flexible scheduling system. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get started immediately! It [illegible] com/51 Campus Fundraiser at (888)923-3238, or [illegible]

Sigma Alpha Epsilon, a national collegiate leadership and [illegible] organization is seeking highly motivated students [illegible] starting a [illegible] Chapter. We [illegible] Contact [illegible] @sae.com [illegible]

Applying for ED? www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1996 Ford Explorer XLT loaded SNRF LTHR green w/ V8 5.0L Excellent shape 155K Flowmaster dual exhaust vent shade/visors well maintained engine $6800 617-416-0027

1990 Geo Prism automatic passed inspection 83102 excellent condition 157,000 mi. replaced transmission, timing belt, brakes OCT 01 + exhaust pipe $1950 obo call PG 549-4818 leave msg.

1987 Chevy Nova 97,000 miles. 5 speed. Good condition. $795 549-3655

1984 Volvo 240 DL SDN 160K $600 Runs well CD player, new parts 413-559-4849

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off servers with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bus Driver Wanted Looking for responsible person for morning practice for women's rowing team. From now until November. $12.00 per hour/ approx. 15 hours per week. Actual driving time per day=20 min. Call 545-9484 if interested.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals , part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Second shift fish culturist/maintenance. Must be responsible and motivated duties including maintaining an aquaculture hydroponoics facility. Must be mechanically inclined able to work alone and do manual labor 3pm-11pm training starts immediately Apply at www.bioshelters.com

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985. ext. 516

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742 Microwaves for sale Good as new $30-$40 Call 413-222-1661

FOR SALE

Massaversity of Umichusetts Clothing http://massaversity.com

Electric dryer $125, washer $150, 6 month warranty. Delivery available. (413) 568-8144

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwares.com 584-7750

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services office. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

LOST

Reward Lost Book Bag Inside- Large black art sketch book Sentimental value. Please call Ian 546-3443

SERVICES

LEGAL ASSISTANCE Are you in trouble with the law? Arrested? Domestic issues? Landlord hassles etc? Let us help you. Call the office of Scott Buxton for legal assistance at 413-283-1991 or Massachuslaws@hotmail.com

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment.

Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TRAVEL

Montreal Madness Weekends $89 + 15 security fee complete Includes RT Motorcoach, 2 nights, hotel, downtown meals, nightclubs 10 or more group discounts Montrealexpress.net 781-979-0076

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up!

TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE! Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@sunscoastvacations.com to find out more info!

SPRING BREAK INSANITY! WWW.INTERCAMPUS.COM OR CALL 1-800-327-6013 GUARANTEED LOWEST PRICES! CANCUN, JAMAICA, FLORIDA AND BAHAMAS PARTY CRUISE! FIFTEEN YEARS EXPERIENCE! FREE TRIPS FOR CAMPUS REPS!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4-Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

- CBS / 3
- NESN
- Fox Sport NE
- PBS / 57
- HSCN Music Channel
- WB / 20
- HSCN Movie Channel
- TV Guide Channel
- FOX / 61
- ABC / 40
- NBC / 22
- International Channel
- UMATV
- HSCN Info Channel
- ESPN
- ESPN 2
- UVC-19
- ESPN Classic
- Travel-tv-Travel
- CNN
- CNN HL
- Weather Channel
- Learning Channel
- History Channel
- A & E
- Discovery Health
- Food Network
- NASA
- Home & Garden TV
- Travel Channel
- Lifetime
- CNBC
- Court TV
- BET
- UPN-38
- USA
- TNN
- MTV
- CMT
- VH-1
- TNT
- TBS
- E! Entertainment
- Sci-Fi Channel
- Court TV
- Nick at Nite
- Comedy Central
- Cartoon Network
- Game Show Network
- TV Land
- FOX Family
- Univision
- Telemundo
- College TV Network
- C-SPAN
- C-SPAN2
- Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Check the appropriate heading:

Student rate: 20 cents per word per day - Non-student rate: 40 cents per word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

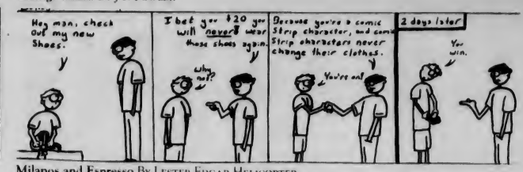
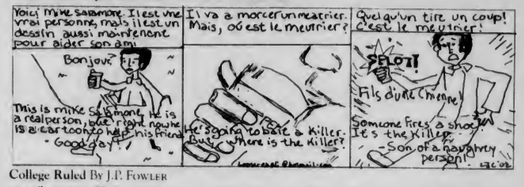
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	29	(12) Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				In the Life
WFSB	3	(3) News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	(4) News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	(5) News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	Accoding-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News		Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News	Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News		NBC News	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News	Home Imp.		Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	(21) Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Scrubs Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	(22) News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!		Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)	News
WGBY	57	(57) World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic	Akutsiaq: Credo			Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	(40) News		ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier		My Wife Kids	Accoding-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)	News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News	Ent. Tonight		5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	22	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		+++ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	44	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order	Self-Defense	Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret	American Justice: Menendez			Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	29	(29) Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live	Newsnight			Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	12	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Dr. Keith	+++ "Packer" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci			South Park	Insomniac		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	23	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 -- Teams to be Announced. (Live)				Major League Baseball Teams to be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	52	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)			+++½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAID2	Fight Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		J. Lo Movie	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	50	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers		All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	55	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	57	(25) World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Bowie Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure"		Monster Trucks
TNT	25	NYPD Blue "Twin Peaks"		Pretender "PTB" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		"Terrific Buddies's Day Off" (1996)
USA	17	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		+++ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				+++ "Species II" (1998, Science Fiction) Brit Vaughey
HBO	15	(9:45) +½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				+++½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13				Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Talking Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	45	(9:45) +½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Set Enough	+½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey R				+½ "Sweet Novembar" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. PG-13
SHOW	46	+½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy. PG				+++½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett. R				Soul Food (N) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

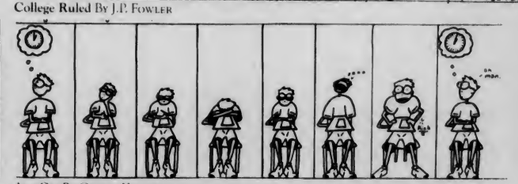
College Ruled By J.P. Fowler



Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X



College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Milanos and Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"To me, boxing is like ballet, except there's no music, no choreography and the dancers hit each other."

-Jack Handy

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 52	HIGH: 73 LOW: 50	HIGH: 75 LOW: 52

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you, and they're secretly trying to steal your fish.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herter at all costs. Damn trick stairways.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The perfect girlfriend would say, "You're so sexy when you're hungover."
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Got a case of early semester swipes? Call your friends and buy $20 worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Put on a happy face... or at least take a shower. You look disgusting.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember, kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You slacker, what are you doing going to class? Go get your sleep on!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't eat at the DC next week.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.

Submit your comics to Matt Despres in the Collegian newsroom.

THE HARP IRISH PUB
Crossword not challenging enough?
TUESDAY NIGHT!!
Team Pub Trivia
win money and prizes
9-10:30pm
call for details
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900
Start Your Own Tradition

ACROSS
1 "— here long?"
5 Kind of park
10 Pouches
14 Harvard rival
15 Party hearty
16 Singer Guthrie
17 Explorer — the Red
18 Blot out
19 Genuine
20 Splash
22 Guacamole base
24 Craft or skill
25 Lord Byron's daughter
26 Keep at it
30 Hid away
34 Impresses greatly
35 Tomato product
37 Compelled
38 Mineo of films
39 Presidential nickname
40 Ms. Lupino
41 Musical ensemble
43 Vine-covered
45 Related
46 Conceal
48 Bowling groups
50 GP's group
51 Evergreen
52 Fearsome vampire
56 TV adjuncts
60 Slope
61 Bombay locale
63 River to the Caspian
64 Mayberry kid
65 Full-grown
66 Cathedral part
67 Hoses down
68 Some shoe sizes

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-20-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Brief farewells
2 Tombstone deputy
3 Director Kazan
4 Fruit juices
5 Bird's penthouse
6 Hamburg mister
7 Zsa Zsa's sister
8 Arizona city
9 Heist
10 Mark Twain's forte
11 Type of code
12 Attired
13 Unaccompanied
21 Taste
23 Seraglio room
28 Stage groups
27 Cognizant
28 Flea-market find
29 Gullible
31 Japanese poem
32 Comic Murphy
33 Faculty heads
36 Race in a slalom
42 Some prophets
43 From Venice
44 Overcomes
45 Stuck, as a ship
47 Outback bird
49 Goal
52 Lateen-rigged ship
53 Mellow
54 Got down
55 "The Egg —"
56 Tick off
57 Walter's road
58 Roof projection
59 Winter transport
62 Press for

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Italian Minestrone
Chicken Cacciatore
Chili Nachos
Native American Stew (vegan)
Sweet Potato Quesadilla (vegetarian)
Vegetable Chili Nachos (vegan)

DINNER
Italian Minestrone
Veal Parmesan
Chicken Margarita
Southern 6-Bean Stew (vegan)
Roast Vegetable Wrap (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Melissa Hammel
Photo Technician — Gerald Ling
Copy Editor — Jim Pignatiello
Production Supervisor — Pete Preston
Production Staff — Jen DiMeglio, Jen Eastwood

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Crushed in conference opener

Win gives Huskies A-10 credibility

BOSTON – Northeastern has arrived.

The Huskies, long considered one of the Atlantic 10's mediocre programs, is now one of the odds-on favorites to capture the conference's 2002 title.

There were rumblings in the Division I-AA world when NU took down Div. I-A Ohio 31-0 in week two.

"They have a great defense. They haven't given up a point in the first two weeks of the season. They're ball control offense doesn't make mistakes."

But...

"They have to take on Massachusetts in week three. If they can win that one, then we'll start believing in the Northeastern football program."

The Huskies hadn't beaten the Minutemen in 16 tries. One of those losses included a 77-0 loss in 1999. That kind of loss haunts a team for quite a while, at least three years.

In that 1999 season, Northeastern suffered through a horrendous 2-9 campaign (1-7 A-10). Looking for a change, then-Athletic Director (and current Massachusetts AD) Ian McCaw hired UMass' defensive coordinator as his school's new head coach. Don Brown, who won a National Championship as Minuteman Head Coach Mark Whipple's assistant in 1998, inherited a team that, despite a few successful seasons, was known for being one of the whipping posts of the A-10.

Brown's squad went 11-13 over his first two years in Boston. Year three may just be his year.

Week One's 48-0 win over Lock Haven was met with, "Who's Lock Haven?" Week Two's shutout win over a D-I team was met with more appreciation. But there was still that big, maroon monkey on Northeastern's back: UMass. A win over the instate rival would be a tremendous boost to the improving program.

All the Huskies did Saturday was dominate the UMass football team on both sides of the ball in its 42-17 win. The 25-point margin of victory was Northeastern's largest ever in an A-10 game, while the 42 points scored were the most by the squad in a conference game.

NU dominated the trenches. Its offensive line pushed the defensive line around. Freshman tailback Anthony Riley broke tackle after tackle, including a tremendous touchdown run in the first quarter.

Riley took the ball off tackle at the 18 and was immediately wrapped up by Minuteman defensive tackle Dorati Davis in what seemed like the end of the play. But No. 28 slipped out of Davis' arms, bounced off linebacker Corey Potter and accelerated into the end zone.

The Huskies held the Minuteman offense – one of the best in the conference – to just three points in the first half and went into the break with a 7-3 lead.

Northeastern kept Whipple's squad out of the end zone by getting physical with UMass quarterback Jeff Krohn, including two 15-yard roughing the passer penalties in the first quarter. Krohn was forced to get rid of the ball too soon throughout the game. The Arizona State transfer was hit or hurried on numerous occasions.

After a dominating first half that resulted in just a four-point lead at the break, Northeastern had to come out in the second half and put more pressure on UMass. The team showed a ton a character in the way it kept making big play after big play any time the Maroon and White threatened to get back in the game.

Husky QB Shawn Brady connected on two big pass plays to open the third quarter and running back Tim Gale bullied into paydirt from one yard out.

The NU defense sacked Krohn on the Maroon and White's subsequent turn on offense and forced a three-and-out.

Brady then drove his team 80 yards, including a nifty dump off to Cody Thompson for 65, for another touchdown and a 21-3 lead.

UMass threatened with its next possession as Krohn connected with freshman Joe Bruce on three consecutive passes. But NU defender Anthony Nolen picked off Krohn at the Husky 40 and scampered 60 yards for a touchdown and a 28-3 lead.

The Minutemen scored on their next drive (28-10) and forced a three-and-out on NU's next possession. UMass drove all the way down to the Northeastern six-yard-line, and looked to cut the lead to 11 when linebacker Kurt Abrams picked off Krohn in the end zone and took it all the way for a 98-yard touchdown and, virtually, the game.

Northeastern didn't make a mistake in the entire game. In fact, the Huskies haven't made a mistake all season. With one of Division I-AA's best defenses and an offensive system that doesn't turn the ball over, NU has gone from being selected to finish 10th in the A-10 Preseason Poll to one of the odds-on favorites to win the conference.

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist.

JARED JONES/COLLEGIAN

Northeastern's defense punished Deshon Hardy (No. 9) and the rest of the UMass receivers with its swarming attack

JARED JONES/COLLEGIAN

UMass quarterback Jeff Krohn was hit by an opposing defender on the majority of his pass attempts. No. 7 was hurried into three interceptions. Two were returned for touchdowns.

Big plays lead to blowout NU win

By Matt Brady
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BOSTON – Stat sheets are a good way of gauging how a game played out. They can show you which team gained more yards, which team held the ball for longer and which team committed the most penalties.

But the one thing they don't show you – big plays – is often the best indicator of which team actually won a football game.

Northeastern (3-0, 1-0 Atlantic 10) turned in at least five big plays in Saturday's 42-17 victory over the Massachusetts football team, including a pair of interceptions returned for touchdowns. The second of those – a 98-yarder brought back by NU's Kurt Abrams – turned a potential 11-point deficit into a 23-point hole that the Minutemen (2-1, 0-1 A-10) could not manage to dig themselves out of.

Northeastern	42
UMass	17

"[Senior linebacker Neil Andersen] was right there in good position and deflected it right to me and I just went and found the end zone," Abrams said. "I had some good blocks."

"They made a great play," UMass Head Coach Mark Whipple said. "I thought when Jeff [Krohn] let the ball go, it was going to be a touchdown."

The junior transfer from Arizona State was picked off three times by the Huskies overall, a stat that greatly overshadowed his 401-yard, two touchdown performance. Krohn also completed 33 passes in the game, an all-time high for a Maroon and White passer, but made it clear that without the victory, the record was simply a moot point.

In its first A-10 test, the Minutemen were overmatched on both lines all day long, and the running game – which had rushed for an average of 273 yards in the season's first two games – was nearly totally neutralized (26 yards) by the Husky defense, which came into the contest as the best defensive squad in Division I-AA.

"They did a great job," Whipple said. "They came out ready to play. They played hard, played physical – they beat us. I thought if we could have gotten up on them and taken care of the ball in the red zone, I think we could have gotten some momentum. The bottom line was we got beat by a better football team."

Northeastern Head Coach Don Brown, who was the defensive coordinator at UMass for its 1998 National Championship, piloted the Huskies to their first 3-0 start since 1967.

"That was a hard fought football game by two teams," Brown said. "It was hot and we had guys going down on our sideline and their sideline. I'm just proud of my football team and the way they responded."

Abrams' interception return was preceded by a similar return by junior Anthony Nolen. Krohn intended a quick out for Neal Brown, but put the ball just behind his receiver and Nolen jumped right in front of him and scampered for an easy 60-yard scored.

"We were having problems with the slant, but [Nolen] stepped up," Brown said.

The ferocious NU defense spent nearly the entire day in the UMass backfield, making 14 tackles for loss, including two sacks. Additionally, the Huskies hurried Krohn on nearly every play, often sending seven men on a blitz, sending him to the ground several times after he threw the ball, three of which went for roughing the passer calls.

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

A weekend of ups and downs

Soccer breaks losing streak, starts new one

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The weekend might have finished with a somewhat ugly result, but for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, it mattered little compared to the way the weekend began.

When the final seconds ticked off the clock of Friday's 1-0 victory over Iowa State, the relief in the faces of the players was clear. As they celebrated and threw T-shirts to their applauding fans at Rudd Field, the Minutewomen finally had something to cheer about in what had been a rocky beginning to their season.

"I don't know if there's words to describe it," junior goalkeeper Kelly Nigh said. "It's been a tough season so far, and we've come all this way knowing that eventually it's going to come together.

"Today was the beginning of that," she added.

Nigh made 10 saves for her fourth career shutout, and freshman Lindsay Bellini recorded her first career goal as the Maroon and White ended their five-game losing streak to open the 2002 campaign, its worst start in school history. Bellini took a feed from Michelle Luttati and fired a rolling shot that eluded Cyclone netminder Beth Chapman in the 13th minute for the only tally of the match. Junior Erin Lilly was also credited with an assist on the goal.

Iowa State came out roaring in the second half, and held the ball in the Minutewoman end for the majority of the frame. UMass had to hold on for dear life as they surrendered 11 corner kicks and 17 shots to the Cyclones in the half.

"We knew this team was going to get the riot act at halftime, so we charged our people, you've got to get through the first 15 (minutes). It was actually more like the first 25," UMass Head Coach Jim Rudy said. "We get locked into our own end and we couldn't get out."

ISU had multiple choices to grab the equalizer, but couldn't capitalize on any of its opportunities in the UMass end. The visitors had a goal disallowed in the 60th minute due to an offsides, and had an open net off a blast by Kelly Burke, but the Cyclones' Deb Benakis shot the ball just over the crossbar.

"Psychologically, it's a little tiring down there when you keep getting hammered on, but today it

Turn to SOCCER, page 7

JARED JONES/COLLEGIAN

Junior netminder Kelly Nigh made 10 saves in the women's soccer team's first win of the season.

Ewing's retirement has New York fans reflecting

Last week, one of the NBA's all time greatest centers retired from the game. After 17 grueling years, 11-time all-star Patrick Ewing decided to call it quits. Ewing was nominated one of the NBA's 50 greatest players in 1997, and holds just about every New York Knicks record that exists. Spending 15 years with the Knicks, Ewing's number will certainly be retired, however over his career he has had a love/hate relationship with the city of New York.

I am a diehard New York fan. Patrick Ewing has been my hero since I was nine-years-old. No one will disagree that Ewing is a warrior. For 15 years he left his blood and sweat out on the court at Madison Square Garden. It was his personality and silly guarantees that grew old in the Big Apple. Ewing never signed autographs or granted interviews on the day of a game. He often dodged media and blew off fans. With the largest media frenzy in the world right at your fingertips, that is not the thing to do.

Because of this, Patrick was often maligned in the papers. What the people in the Tri-state area did not know, however, was that Patrick refused to have his visits to hospitals and community service known to the public. He often visited terminally ill children, but demanded that the media not know of his visits.

New York became tired of his yearly guarantees of, "This is our year," or "We'll win it all." The only guarantee Ewing came through with was his 20 points and 10 rebounds night after night. If only the Knicks had a player that could provide that now.

ADAM LEVOY

Ewing's decade with the Knicks was full of makes and misses. Ewing's proudest moment came in Game Seven of the Eastern Conference Finals in 1994 when he tipped in a John Starks miss to catapult the Knicks into the finals for the first time in 20 years. There was the time Ewing single handedly eliminated the Celtics after being down 0-2 in the first

Turn to EWING, page 7

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ISSUE FIFTEEN 9.24.02

Car hits girl in crosswalk

Victim suffers head injury, treated at Baystate Medical

By Jaime Loo
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Nineteen-year-old freshman Jessica Moody was hit by a car in a crosswalk while crossing University Drive yesterday afternoon.

According to the University of Massachusetts Police department, the victim was crossing the street at a crosswalk outside of the Southwest horseshoe towards yellow lot 22 when she was struck by a car traveling southbound. UMPD said a car had stopped at the crosswalk for the student to cross when another car passed it on the right, striking the victim.

The victim rolled onto the hood of the car and traveled on the hood for about 40 feet, rolling off when it came to a stop. The driver, Edward Kaynor of 460 Market Hill Road, Amherst, stopped to check on the victim. Katie Rooney, a student passing by, placed the 911 call on a cellular phone. Rooney and students Catherine Hartunian and Michelle Roy rushed to the victim's aid.

"It was an awful sound and an awful sight," said Hartunian.

Hartunian said Moody was conscious and sitting up after the accident and asked the women to call her roommate. UMPD said that the victim sustained head injuries. Rooney, Hartunian, and Roy said the victim had a long gash on one side of her forehead that was bleeding continuously. Another witness said it also looked like she sustained a leg injury.

"She kept asking the driver, 'Why did you hit me? Why did you hit me?'" said Roy.

Kaynor will be charged with operating to endanger and failure to stop for a pedestrian in a crosswalk. Moody was rushed to Bay State Medical Center in Springfield, where she was treated and released.

This is not the first incident where a student has been struck by a car on campus. Last Nov. 28, Joshua Mason, a 29-year-old Amherst resident, was charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence and a crosswalk violation after he struck junior Anthony Patrick on University Drive near Southwest circle. Patrick suffered a head injury and was taken to Baystate Medical Center in Springfield.

A car also struck student Alyssa Warren outside of the Fine Arts Center on Dec. 8, 2000.

There were three accidents involving pedestrians in 1999, one of which was fatal. On March 3, 1999, Allison Lustig, 19, of Shrewsbury was struck by a car at the intersection of Governor's Drive and Commonwealth Avenue. She died shortly after the accident as a result of her injuries.

Visiting professor Ruth A. Abrams was injured in a car-pedestrian accident on Oct. 7, 1999 on the westbound side of Massachusetts Avenue, near the Whitmore Administration building. In Nov. 1999, a car struck Courtney Spivack, 18, and Lisa Abrams, 19, at the same time near Southwest on University Drive.

A car also struck Kerry L. Hines, a senior biology major, on Nov. 11, 1998 outside of the Hills House. She later died of her injuries at Bay State Medical Center.

ESTHER LANZ/COLLEGIAN

Police officers discuss the car accident that resulted in an injury to pedestrian Jessica Moody yesterday on University Drive. Moody suffered a deep gash to the head after traveling on the hood of the car for about 40 feet.

ESTHER LANZ/COLLEGIAN

Smash it up

A glassworker works on the sliding glass door of apartment #54 of the Townhouses in Amherst. The window was broken by a glass Jaegarmeister bottle in the melee that broke out after a 10-keg party involving between 700 and 1000 people grew out of control late Saturday night. See The Collegian later this week for an analysis and further coverage on the incident.

Police arrest eight students in wild weekend on campus

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts Police Department responded to a hectic weekend with eight arrests on Saturday and Sunday. In one 12-hour period between 4 p.m. on Friday and 4 a.m. on Saturday alone, UMPD handled 50 calls.

Dustin M. Gaunt, 19, of 75 Rampart Dr. in Glastonbury, Conn., was charged in relation to the armed robbery reported in the Collegian yesterday. Two men held Gaunt up at gunpoint in his room, taking $75 in cash. After questioning Gaunt, police then arrested him on possession of a class D substance, marijuana, with intent to distribute and possession of liquor as a minor.

Police responded to several violent crimes over the weekend, as well. According to UMPD spokesperson Jim Lyons, a University police officer responding to a complaint of a car driving on a sidewalk was nearly run down by a motor vehicle. The officer sustained injuries in the incident. When he attempted to approach the car to speak to the driver, the car sped away at a high rate of speed, striking the officer with the side of the car.

The driver, Louis A. Thouin III, 20, of 327 East St., Chicopee, Mass., was arrested and charged with assault and battery on a police officer, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (an automobile), failure to stop for a police officer, and reckless operation of a motor vehicle. The officer sustained minor injuries and is good condition.

Several other violent incidents took place this weekend. Peter J. Getty, 18, of 7 Doreen Way, Plainville, Mass., was arrested early Saturday morning for domestic assault and battery after a dispute with his ex-girlfriend turned ugly. A disturbance in Coolidge Dormitory early Sunday morning resulted in the arrest of Frank Curreri, 25, of 51 Birch St. in Peabody, Mass., on an outstanding warrant. Police also responded to another domestic disturbance late Sunday night. Luis Ledo, 21, of 102 Eastman Lane in Amherst was arrested for assault and battery after a dispute on University Drive.

A case of vandalism in Lot 32E on Massachusetts Ave. also resulted in the arrest of a student. Police apprehended Benjamin Shuffain, 22, of 434 S. Main St. in Sharon, Mass., for destruction of property valued at $250 and malicious disorderly conduct.

Police also recorded several liquor law arrests. At around 7:30 p.m. outside of Lot 33 near University Dr., police arrested Jarrett L. Doherty, 20, of 99 Mt. Pleasant Ave. in Gloucester, Mass., and Adam Stewart Novello, 20, of 9 Seaview Rd., also of Gloucester, for possessing alcohol while being under the age of 21 years old.

The theft of multiple expensive items also occurred in the past week on campus. Last Monday, a student

Turn to ARRESTS, page 3

Foundation leader speaks tomorrow

By Amy O'Neill
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Executive Secretary of the Truman Foundation, Louis Blair, will be speaking to students interested in applying for the Truman Foundation Scholarship, Wednesday Sept. 25, at 4:00 p.m. in Campus Center 168C.

Blair will speak on the topic "Public Service Today: The Aspirations of the Truman Foundation," and provide information on government opportunities in public service in addition to the private sector. Blair will also speak about the application process for the Truman Foundation Scholarship.

"It is really a boost to the program to have Mr. Blair speak here in person," Dr. Susan K. Whitbourne, Director of the Office of National Scholarship Advisement, said.

The Truman Foundation offers 75 to 80 $30,000 scholarships annually meant to provide students pursuing careers in public service with one year of college tuition and two years of graduate school. A few of the requirements for the scholarship include: a G.P.A. of 3.75 or above, a strong record of public service, demonstrated leadership in college, and a future career in some aspect of public service.

Although students must be junior year status to apply, Whitbourne encourages interested students to start working on the application process as early as their freshman year. They can do so by attending this lecture or coming into the National Scholarship Advisement office located at 611 Tobin Hall to seek advice or help on the application, which are due by Thanksgiving. Student applicants may speak with either Whitbourne, or the Truman Faculty Advisor Dr. John Brigham.

Blair's visit comes after the recent naming of former Secretary of State, Madeline Albright, as President of the Foundation. The Truman Foundation was formed in 1975 to honor the 33rd President, Harry S. Truman, and since 1977 has honored 2,176 recipients. The University of Massachusetts has had two recipients in recent years, according to Whitbourne and a total of three finalists in the last three years.

Blair has devoted his professional career to public service and held positions in the White House during the Ford and Carter administrations. He has also been a member of several different committees including Presidential Scholars and Coca-Cola Scholars. Whitbourne strongly encourages faculty to attend the lecture as well.

"He is a very interesting man and very pro-student orientated," Whitbourne said. "Students will enjoy his lecture."

Interested students looking for additional information who are unable to attend the lecture Wednesday, as well as students looking for the scholarship application, can visit the website at www.Truman.gov.

On the net: www.truman.gov.

POLICE LOG

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Monday, Sept. 16, 2002

4:42 a.m.: A caller in Chadbourne Dormitory on Orchard Hill Dr. reported a rape. She reported that a man in a ski mask snuck up behind her while she was in the bathroom and started to sexually assault her from behind. She eventually escaped to her room and called UMPD. The incident is under heavy investigation.

7:35 a.m.: The Peter Pan bus sign was reported stolen from President Dr. near Hefter Hall.

7:00 p.m.: A caller reported that his windshield was smashed in Lot 22 west of University Dr. Dr. The owner was advised to call his insurance company for compensation.

3:16 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported in the bus shelter on N. Pleasant St. near Hasbrouck Hall. One person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

3:58 p.m.: A caller reported missing eyeglasses from a "Lentz" brand "Tabor lux S" model microscope from the Morrill Science Center on N. Pleasant St.

4:24 p.m.: A caller reported that his windshield was smashed in Lot 22 off of University Dr. in Southwest.

4:49 p.m.: A caller reported that a female stepped on a manhole cover that flipped open, causing her to fall into the hole. The caller believed that the female sustained injuries, but was unable to find her. Physical plant reported to the scene.

10:15 p.m.: A Dell brand "Inspiron" lap top computer valued at around $2,500 was stolen from the back of an unlocked car while it was parked in Lot 54, west of Hampden Dining Common.

Tuesday, Sept. 17, 2002

2:37 a.m.: A woman called to report that while she was outside Van Meter Dormitory smoking, she saw a tall man trying to get into the front door and bathroom windows. A check of the area and floor turned up negative.

8:18 a.m.: A medical emergency in the Campus Center was reported. An ambulance transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

10:15 a.m.: A caller reported a smashed windshield in Lot 11 north of Alumni Stadium. The incident had been previously reported.

12:59 p.m.: A caller from the Morrill Science Center reported that the top half of a microscope taken was removed from a locked office in the building sometime since Friday. The value of the microscope is about $8000. The incident was previously reported.

1:15 p.m.: Police stopped a car on University Dr. The stop resulted in the arrest of Jose G. Esparra, of 53 Chestnut St., Chicopee, Mass. Esparra was charged with operating a motor vehicle without a license.

1:48 p.m.: A caller reported that $7000 was taken from her bank accounts with checks and her ATM card in Brookline. The caller's purse was reported stolen on Sept. 7 from a John Quincy Adams Dormitory Room.

9:18 p.m.: A caller stated that she could hear a female screaming outside in the area of Van Meter and Butterfield Dormitories. An officer confirmed that there was screaming. The noise came from a band which was expressing their concerns over violence against women by encouraging audience participation.

Wednesday, Sept. 18, 2002

10:50 a.m.: A caller reported that biplane was circling the library. An officer confirmed the presence of the plane. SP Airwing was notified for identification of the plane.

11:14 a.m.: A student reported personal items taken from an open cube within a locked office in the Student Credit Union.

3:52 p.m.: A parking officer reported obscenities carved into the side of a parked vehicle in Lot 22 on University Dr. The incident was previously reported.

Thursday, Sept. 19, 2002

12:12 a.m.: A caller in Patterson Dormitory on Sunset Ave. reported homophobic writing on a door.

1:22 a.m.: A caller reported hearing a "rape whistle" outside his apartment on the first floor of Greenough Dormitory. The officer advising reported that the floor check turned up negative.

Friday, Sept. 20, 2002

12:24 a.m.: Two individuals reported that they were stuck between the fifth and sixth floor of John Adams Dormitory. Emergency Housing was notified and responded.

Saturday, Sept. 21, 2002

12:33 a.m.: A report of a bus driver verbally and physically assaulted by an individual heading towards Herter Hall is registered. A check of the area around the Fine Arts Center and the pond is negative.

12:41 a.m.: A caller reported that her windshield was smashed while she was in Butterfield Dormitory on Clark Hill Rd.

1:00 a.m.: A Resident Assistant in Pierpont reported that someone took a black marker and wrote homophobic graffiti on the door.

1:00 a.m.: Student Security reported that there were two males dressed in all black with their faces painted black running around the area. Officers investigated.

1:09 a.m.: An officer stopped a vehicle driving on the sidewalk on Kennedy Rd. While the officer was talking to the driver, the driver sped away from the officer at a high rate of speed, striking the officer with the side of the car. Louis Thouin III, of 227 East St., Chicopee, Mass., was arrested and charged with assault and battery on a police officer, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (an automobile), failure to stop for a police officer, and reckless operation of a motor vehicle.

1:36 a.m.: An armed robbery in Coolidge Dormitory was reported. Two individuals reportedly held up a resident with a gun, taking $75 in cash. The caller, Dustin M. Gaunt, 19, of 75 Rampart Dr., Glastonbury, Conn., was then himself arrested by police for possession of a class D substance, marijuana, with intent to distribute, and possession of liquor.

3:01 a.m.: A caller in Patterson Dormitory on Sunset Avenue reported that a pizza delivery driver was violently upset and getting ready to hit a female. The caller stated that the driver was banging on the front door. A check of the area turned up negative.

3:38 a.m.: Glass breaking in the Quad area near Chadbourne Dormitory on Orchard Hill Dr. An officer reported that there was a fire extinguisher thrown from a second floor window.

4:11 a.m.: A caller from Coolidge Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave. reported that there was a fire hydrant spraying water. Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) responded.

7:42 a.m.: A caller reported that she was not able to find her car in the Boyden parking lot, Lot 40. Springfield police recovered the vehicle.

1:54 p.m.: A medical emergency on the athletic fields across from Boyden Gym on Mullins Way was reported. One person was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

7:37 p.m.: Police responded to liquor law violations in Lot 33, west of University Dr. Jarrett L. Doherty, 20, of 99 Mt. Pleasant Ave., Gloucester, Mass., and Adam Stewart Novello, 20, of 9 Seaview Rd., Gloucester, Mass., were arrested for being a person under the age of 21 and possessing alcohol.

8:37 p.m.: Police responded to liquor law violations in Lot 33, west of University Dr. Chris W. Auger, 19, of 6 Kimball Hill Dr., Haverhill, Mass., was arrested for being a person under the age of 21 in possession of alcohol.

11:54 p.m.: A medical emergency was reported at Cashin Dormitory in Eastman Ln. An officer stated that a person was en route to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Sunday Sept. 22, 2002

12:15 a.m.: The Springfield Police Department called and stated that they recovered a stolen vehicle. It was reported stolen from a Boyden parking lot completely stripped.

1:48 a.m.: A medical emergency in Patterson Dormitory was reported. The Amherst Fire Department transported one person to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

2:00 a.m.: Police responded to vandalism in Lot 32 E south of Massachusetts Ave. Benjamin Shuffain, 22, of 434 S. Main St., Sharon, Mass., was arrested and charged with destruction of property valued at $250 and malicious disorderly conduct.

2:27 a.m.: A medical emergency in Prince Dormitory on Sunset Ave. was reported. One person was transported to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

2:54 a.m.: A disturbance in Coolidge Dormitory on Massachusetts Ave. was reported. Frank Curreri, 25, of 51 Birch St., Peabody, Mass., was arrested on a previous warrant.

3:11 a.m.: A traffic stop on University Dr. resulted in the arrest of Daniel H. Marsh, 21, of 31 Wildflower Dr., Amherst, Mass. for operating a vehicle under the influence.

11:22 p.m.: Police responded to a report of a domestic disturbance on University Drive. Luis Ledo, 21, of 102 Eastman Ln., Amherst, Mass., was arrested for assault and battery.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, receiving funds on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded as the Index. Title became the Collegian Nugget in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Eator
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

THE ROAD TO RETIREMENT MAY SEEM SMOOTH, BUT IT'S LITTERED WITH TOLLS.

Fees. Charges. Hidden costs. Over time these things can erode the retirement savings you're working so hard to build. Contact us, a company known for keeping costs low. It ain't a free ride, but it's close.

TIAA-CREF.org or call (800) 842-2776

TIAA CREF Managing money for people with other things to think about.

RETIREMENT | INSURANCE | MUTUAL FUNDS | COLLEGE SAVINGS | TRUSTS | INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. and Teachers Personal Investors Services Inc. distribute securities products. For more information, call (800) 842-2733, ext. 5509, for prospectuses. Read them carefully before investing. © 2002 Teachers Insurance and Annuity Association-College Retirement Equities Fund (TIAA-CREF). 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017 02-0806

19TH ANNUAL NATIONAL ENVIRONMENTAL CAREER CONFERENCE

necc2002

Building Sustainable Communities

October 18 AND 19, 2002
Bayside Exposition Center
Boston, Massachusetts

Don't miss the nation's premiere environmental career conference featuring

- 50 seminars covering topics from finding a job to current environment issues
- A two-day career fair where you can meet one-on-one with representatives from over 40 organizations
- Three highly informative general sessions
- And much, much more

For more information and to register on line go to www.eco.org/necc or call 877-589-5329.

Environmental Careers Organization

Serial rapist terrorizing Ohio State University

By Jordan Gentile & Lisa Everman
THE LANTERN (OHIO STATE UNIV.)

(U-WIRE) COLUMBUS, Ohio - The serial rapist stalking the Ohio State University campus area claimed his fifth and sixth victims over the weekend of Sept. 14 and 15, compelling university officials to intensify efforts alerting local residents to the threat.

As autumn quarter begins and the campus fills with students – many of whom are unaware of the sexual assaults that have gripped the area over the summer – that task may become increasingly difficult.

"After students move in there will be a greater concentration of targets in an already ripe environment," said Sgt. Pat Foley of the Sexual Abuse Unit of the Columbus Division of Police. "Everyone needs to be aware of the neighborhood's environment and keep an eye on each other for safety."

The fifth assault was a rape and the sixth is being called an assault with sexual overtones. As with all of the previous attacks, both occurred between 5 a.m. and 10 a.m., in an off-campus area bounded by North High Street to the west, North Fourth Street to the east, Patterson Avenue to the north and 10th Avenue to the south.

Five of the six victims are confirmed as Ohio State students.

The attacks have been attributed by Columbus police to a black male in his 30s, of average height and weight, with either short hair or a shaved head.

In each case, the perpetrator gained access to his victims by entering their homes through an unlocked door or window. On at least one occasion, he entered while his target was on a short errand; another time, he barged into a residence after persuading a woman to open the door. He has threatened each victim with a knife.

In addition to an increased Columbus police presence, the off-campus area in which the rapist operates is now being watched by Community Crime Patrol, a group founded and co-sponsored by OSU that "provides extra eyes and ears to police," according to a university press release.

While the area is out of the jurisdiction of University Police, OSU police chief Ron Michalec said he has not been left out of the loop.

"We have great confidence in the Columbus police and we are doing everything we can to cooperate in their investigation, specifically in terms of the public awareness campaign," he said.

That campaign, initiated this summer in response to the string of assaults, has been stepped up in response to the two recent attacks. At a press conference Wednesday, representatives from the university and Undergraduate Student Government announced new initiatives designed to educate and protect incoming students.

"It's the university's No. 1 priority, as far as I'm concerned, to make sure that students, as they come in literally from all over the world, are alerted to the threat," said William Hall, vice president for Student Affairs.

Posters and fliers bearing warnings and safety tips are being distributed on and off campus. Door-to-door visits by OSU police have been initiated, and a Web page (studentaffairs.osu.edu/news/) has been created providing a list of resources related to personal safety, including free self-defense and rape prevention classes.

Resident advisers will hold mandatory floor meetings during which safety issues are to be discussed at length.

As part of its safety awareness week, USG will hand out "screamers" – devices that emit loud signals designed to ward off physical attack – Oct. 3 on The Oval. Additionally, the organization plans to make house alarms available at discount prices of $10 and $15. Interested parents and students will be given more information via e-mail.

■ arrests

continued from page 1

reported that his Dell "Inspiron" lap top computer, valued at $2500, was stolen from the back his unlocked car in Lot 54, west of Hampden Dining Common.

The top half of a microscope was reported stolen from the Morrill Science last Tuesday. It was taken from a locked office in the building sometime between last Tuesday and the Friday before. The value of the microscope is about $8000.

A car was also stolen from the University over the weekend. A caller reported early Saturday morning that she could not find her vehicle in Lot 40, the Boyden Gym parking lot. The Springfield Police Department later reported just after midnight Sunday morning that they had found the vehicle completely stripped.

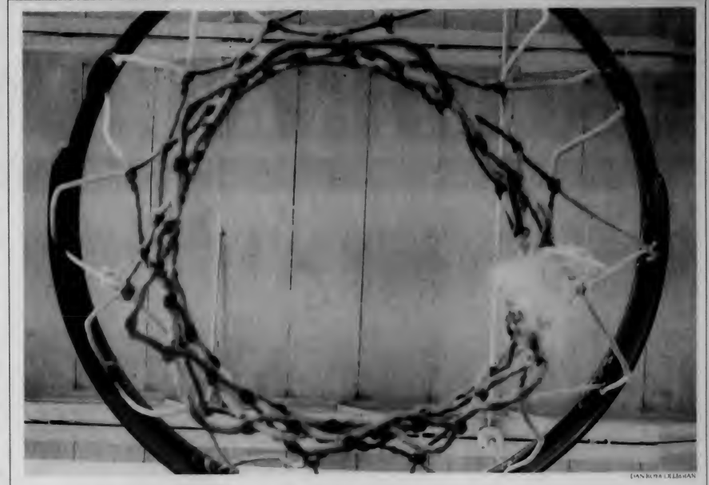
A student in John Quincy Adams Dormitory also reported a scam involving her checking account and ATM card. Her purse was reported stolen from a room in JQA on Sept. 7. Last Tuesday, she reported that $7000 was taken from her using her stolen ATM card and checks in Brookline., Mass.

Windshield smashing update:

According to UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons, the department has a suspect identified in the case involving 23 windshields smashed on and near campus last weekend.

"It won't be weeks or months, it [the arrest of the individual] will probably be this week," Lyons said.

Come write for news!



The Daily Collegian needs your help. Beats and stories are still open and need to be covered.

Email thedailycollegian@yahoo.com or come to our weekly news meeting tomorrow at 5 p.m. in the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement if you're interested.

All are welcome!

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Bartenders Have More Spirit! Why not be a bartender?
BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Call TODAY! (413)747-9888

Nothing but net
A basketball hoop in Totman Gymnasium lies dormant waiting for some action.

Wanna go to the Biggest Party of the Year?

Pick AT&T Long Distance and you could win a trip to the MTV Studios.

AT&T College Communications

MTV MUSIC TELEVISION®

1 877 COLLEGE

AT&T

Get a FREE MUSIC CD of your choice when you select AT&T.

NO CALL OR PURCHASE NECESSARY TO ENTER OR WIN. ELIGIBILITY: Open to legal residents of the 48 United States, District of Columbia, and the U.S. Virgin Islands who are 18 or older as of 8/1/02. Void in Puerto Rico, U.S. Virgin Islands, Hawaii, Alaska, and where otherwise prohibited by law. Two Ways to Participate: A.) To enter by signing up for AT&T Long Distance, AT&T One Rate® 7¢ Plus Plan and/or the AT&T Anytime International Savings Plan: Call 1 877 COLLEGE (between 12:00:00AM Eastern Time (“ET”) on 8/1/02 and 11:59:59PM ET on 10/31/02 (hereafter referred to as the “Promotion Period”) and provide the required information to the operator or IVR prompt to receive one entry into the sweepstakes. Limit one entry per household for each plan. B.) To enter by mail: Hand print your name, complete address, zip code, age, daytime telephone number, email address, college or university name, school status (yr/fr) (if applicable), and the words “AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion” on a plain 3”x 5” paper and mail it in a hand addressed #10 envelope with first class postage to: “AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion”, P.O. Box 13084, Bridgeport, CT 06673-3084. Limit three entries per person and per household for the duration of the Promotion Period. Prizes/Odds: (1) Grand Prize: 4 days/3 night trip for winner and (3) guests to the MTV New Year’s Eve Party in New York City on 12/30/02-1/2/03 consisting of round trip coach air transportation from nearest major airport in the U.S. to winner’s residence, suite hotel accommodations for (4), ground transportation (to/from hotel and the airport), and a total of $1,000 spending money (Approximate Retail Value “ARV”=$5,000). Actual value of prize may vary depending on winner’s city of departure. Insurance and all applicable federal, state and local taxes on receipt and use of prize, if any, and any expenses not specified above are the sole responsibility of winner. A random drawing will be conducted on or about 11/14/02 from among all eligible entries received. Odds of winning the Grand Prize will depend on the total number of eligible entries received. Subject to the Official Rules available by visiting http://www.att.com/collegesales or by sending a self addressed, stamped envelope by 11/1/02 to: AT&T College/MTV Back to School Promotion, PO Box 13105, Bridgeport, CT 06673-3105. Sponsor: AT&T, 340 Mt. Kemble, Morristown, NJ 07960 Promoter: DVC Group, Inc., Morristown, NJ 07960 CD OFFER: Consumers who have signed up for the AT&T Long Distance, AT&T One Rate® 7¢ Plus Plan and/or the AT&T Anytime International Saving Plan during the promotion period, in addition to being entered into the Sweepstakes, will be sent a Sony online gift certificate which may be redeemed at www.sonystyleusers.com toward a select CD from the Sony Music “Hot New Releases” Catalog (Approximate Retail Value “ARV”=$15), while supplies last. The Sony online gift certificate will be included in the AT&T fulfillment package. Terms, conditions, and restrictions may apply to the use of the online certificate and P.I.N. Limit one CD per person, e-mail address, immediate family member, or household. Please allow 6-8 weeks after redemption for delivery.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Support your peers

Few else will

If there were ever a time to support one another it is now. When the state refuses to stand behind us, the town in which we reside despises us, and the country in which we live may send our peers to war, it is awesome to see students care for other students. When a student was hit and seriously injured by a vehicle on University Drive yesterday afternoon, witnesses rushed to help, whipped out cell phones dialing 911, and stayed with the victim until emergency rescue personnel had arrived on the scene.

In a place where we rely on each other to maintain some semblance of harmony, community or possibly even safety it is important that we treat one another with kindness, equality, and respect. By stopping to care for their injured peer yesterday, students, like Katie Rooney who made the call to 911, did just that. It is a sign that not all is wrong with the world.

Last spring reports began to surface that while a female student was assaulted at the Fine Arts Center passerby's did not stop to help. In a situation where a student is being taken advantage of, hurt, or simply made vulnerable it is our responsibility to take action as responsible members of the community. Put it another way, if you were attacked, raped, stalked or harassed in a public space (which all of the University campus qualifies as) wouldn't you want someone to help you? What explanation could someone possibly give for you to understand why he hadn't helped your sister, brother, mother, cousin or friend?

Anyone who allows their female roommate, friend, or girlfriend to walk home alone at night, go jogging after sundown, or find their own way home after a night of drinking is in part responsible for what happens to that person. Just as friends do not let friends drive drunk, peers must watch out for one another. It could just as easily be you.

Women should take advantage of the free self-defense courses offered by the University or local police departments in order to better their chances of avoiding or removing themselves from sketchy situations.

Although budget cuts have eliminated the escort van services the UMPD continues to provide walking escorts to anyone at any time of day or night that calls and requests this service. Call friends to pick you up or ask them to meet you and walk home.

Trust your gut. If you feel nervous about a situation you are probably right to feel that way.

As many police, call boxes, safety vans, lights, or cameras as we have on campus, the effectiveness of security relies on the communities' devotion to protecting each other.

As part of this responsibility we are equally obligated to monitor our own behavior so that it does not infringe on our peers safety or happiness. Speeding through campus without regard to others safety; letting strangers into our dormitories, vandalizing call boxes, abusing alcohol to the point of disrespectful and destructive behavior are all actions that contribute to the dearth of safety on campus. This is our campus; our home, our community and our conduct will make it what it is.

The opinions expressed on this page are those of the respective authors and do not necessarily represent the views of The Collegian and its majority section of The Collegian

Violent acts, a wakeup call

DAMOTHE

Two years ago tomorrow, a young leader of a large community lay bleeding on a nightclub floor with nearly a dozen stab wounds in his back. Panic was all around him as his friends pushed through the crowd to get to him and whisk him off to a local city hospital.

Had he not survived the attack, this column would probably have been written as a news story for the front page of the newspaper on the two-year anniversary of Celtics star Paul Pierce's death. The Boston community and the National Basketball Association (NBA) would still be shedding tears over the senseless loss of a human being that connected with them as an up-and-coming superstar.

Luck was with Pierce that day. Thanks to a heavy leather coat that he was wearing, Pierce escaped a brutal stabbing and a bottle crashing down over his head. "I didn't realize how badly I was hurt until after the incident, and the doctors told me what was going on, what happened to me," Pierce said in an ESPN.com interview. "I didn't realize how much my life was in danger until after it was all over with."

It took lung surgery to repair the wounds to his body – had the knife entered at a different angle or an inch in either direction, Paul Pierce would be dead. Instead of getting ready for a new season with the Celtics this week, Pierce would be pushing up daisies as his alleged attackers' trial plays out.

The sad fact of the matter is, Pierce may live with this every day, but after a while, the rest of us forget about violent incidents like this one. We're young, strong and invincible. Bad things can't happen to us. Right?

Wrong. Then we hear about something like what happened in Chadbourne last week.

On Monday morning at 11 a.m., I meet the UMass police to go over the weekend's log and to look for potential situations in it that the student body should know about. Last week, as my eyes scanned the page, a knot formed in my throat. Staring back at me up from the page were four letters: "R-A-P-E."

Without even getting the details, my mind was already racing. Where? How? Why? Is she okay now? The thoughts flashed through my head before I even opened my mouth to draw police spokesperson Jim Lyons' attention to the entry on the log.

> "We're young, strong and invincible. Bad things can't happen to us. Right?"

The details just made it worse. A pig with a ski mask sneaking up behind a woman while she was in her own bathroom? It's the kind of thing that makes a guy's blood boil.

The whole thing reeks of evil. The random location of the assault, at little, quiet Chadbourne Dormitory in sleepy Central serves as a warning for all of us. Each and every one of us is vulnerable to acts of hatred or violence like this one, and the random quietness of the place where it happened shocked many of us. This isn't Southwest anymore, Toto. It's Central. This could have happened anywhere on campus, and you know what? It still can.

When we picture a victim of violence, the first things that come to our minds are the easy targets. We picture the petite young lady brushing her hair, or walking alone through the dark part of campus in the wee hours of morning. We picture people that look easy to overpower, people who lack a certain swagger in their walk.

And that's where we go all wrong. "It could never happen to me," we say. It doesn't matter if we're talking about a rape, a hold-up, or a mugging. We think we're above it all – no one wants to feel like a potential victim.

As the three men accused of stabbing Paul Pierce within an inch of his life stand trial this week, remember Paul. Remember that he's a graceful, strong, and athletic human being that stands six foot seven inches tall and weighs over two hundred and twenty pounds of lean muscle on his body. What fear in the world could he possibly have?

Then remember what happened to him. Recall the way that Pierce nearly lost his life in a bloody mess for doing nothing other than striking up a conversation in a pool hall with a girl who interested him. Think about how quickly Pierce's life changed forever. Pierce could have been any of us.

We can't take attacks like the Chadbourne assault lying down anymore. Guys, walk girls back to their places – at night especially. Always watch for things that stick out, and when something seems odd, SAY SOMETHING. We've got to do everything in our power to keep this from happening again.

This is our campus. We're supposed to be a family. Take care of each other.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian columnist.

If you're interested in drawing political cartoons please come down to the Collegian and talk to Jamie or Regan! Or e-mail us at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com.

www * dailycollegian * com

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

The Springfield Union-News and Sunday Republican, WGBY-TV 57 television and WFCR-FM radio are co-sponsoring and broadcasting a cozy two-party Gubernatorial debate at Western New England College next Tuesday at 7pm. Green party Gubernatorial candidate Jill Stein and Libertarian candidate Carla Howell, both of whom earned a spot on the November 5th ballot were not invited.

A recent Western New England College (WNEC) news release quoted VP for Marketing and External Relations, Barabada Campenella, as saying that, "to host such an important debate...is in keeping with our fundamental educational mission of providing a forum in which issues and ideas can be fully examined and analyzed so that informed decisions can be made." Who's kidding whom here?

Are social and political ideas and issues fully examined when an institution of higher learning hosts a debate which excludes certain ideas because they are spurned by the wealthy and their political servants? Do public radio and television stations deserve public subsidies or the confidence of common citizens, whom they presumably exist to serve, when they agree to be pawns in this political game?

The co-sponsors purported rationale for excluding the third party candidates is that neither have polled 15% among likely voters on November 5th. Yet, an October 1st Gubernatorial debate in Worcester, featuring the candidates of all four parties is sponsored by a consortium that includes The Boston Globe, WGBH, and NECN. What's good enough for Worcester and the Boston area media is apparently not good enough for the Springfield Union, WGBY-TV57 and WFCR-FM.

I say we deserve better. This is not the democracy they taught us to love in grade school. It's time to take it back for the common man and woman. Unless the Springfield-Union, WGBY-TV57, WFCR and WNEC have a sudden change of heart, Jill Stein and her supporters will be discussing her proposals and yours outside the WNEC debate hall where truth has at least some chance to flourish.

John Pepi
Williamsburg, MA

To the Editor:

I want to thank you for publishing the article about the Mentors in Violence Prevention Program (MVP-UMass) in the Sept. 13 edition of the Collegian. I also want to clarify two points from the article.

One, MVP-UMass just became a Health Education program recently. Mentors have been, and still are, staff and students from numerous areas of campus, all volunteer. Staff members from Housing, the Dean of Students Office, Human Relations, Health Services, Athletics, the Everywoman's Center, and others have worked in coalition to bring this program to UMass, and to keep it going. All of them volunteer their time to the MVP-UMass Program.

Two, I believe there was a misprint in a quote. The statement is "...women are much more likely to be the targets of violence, whether it be sexual harassment, rape, or assault." Actually, women are much more likely to be the targets of sexual violence, but men are more likely to be the targets of all other forms of violence. In both cases, men are the likely perpetrator of that violence (roughly 80-98% of the time, depending on the crime). And of course, as you pointed out, while we acknowledge that most men do not commit violence, most violence is committed by men.

Tom Schiff, Ed.D.
University Health Services
Coordinator, MVP-UMass Program

New foreign policy creates imperialism

RENE GONZALEZ-BERRIOS

If anyone had any doubts regarding the true nature of the United States and its foreign policy objectives around the world, Sept. 20th's declaration by President Bush of the military foreign policy of the United States for the future will surely dispel those doubts. The United States has officially changed from military deterrence to unilateral, "pre-emptive strike" as its foreign policy toward potential enemies. This is nothing more and nothing less than a declaration of empire, an imperial manifesto. (declaration available at http://www.whitehouse.gov/nsc/nss.pdf)

In the declaration, President Bush stated, "While the United States will constantly strive to enlist the support of the international community, we will not hesitate to act alone,
if necessary, to exercise our right of self-defense by acting preemptively against such terrorists." The key words are "we will not hesitate to act alone". In a de-contextualized environment, this would seem as a rational statement.

Who wouldn't want to "attack first" against recognizable enemies preparing an attack on you? But, who's to say who the enemies are? Who will prevent the United States from abusing this power to label countries that are not legitimate threats to the United States as enemies? War Afghanistan a legitimate threat to us?

Al Qaeda was, but not the Afghani people or even the horrendous Taliban regime. If seen from the prism of history (and most peoples and countries of the world will view it this way, from their experiences with U.S. intervention), the U.S. declaration today is the formalization of an already existing imperial policy, sometimes nebulously covert and sometimes arrogantly overt.

This is a major escalation of foreign policy initiatives by the United States. It is in direct contradiction with the principle of sovereignty (let's be real, which country is safe from U.S. intervention, except other nuclear nations?). It's the "big bully" way of keeping the peace.

And even after this evidence, there are people in this country who cannot understand why many people around the world hate the United States. Remember how you hated that bully in elementary school? Yep, that's us. It is damaging our relations with the world (even alienating our closest allies, the Europeans). It is polarizing the population at home and eroding civil liberties. We can thank the right-wing for these beautiful gifts they have left the U.S. and the world.

Some will argue that this is an overreaction, that the United States would not abuse this declaration in an imperial fashion. Whoever says that, says it against a mountain of imperial evidence against the United States (including such glorious "doctrines" as the Manifest Destiny and Monroe Doctrines, and a history of military intervention all around the world practically from its birth). Nobody worth their History Ph.D would dare say the Soviet Union did not have imperial ambitions (the examples of Poland, Hungary, Afghanistan, and others would quickly brush away such talk). Why the double standard with the U.S.? Was it not the United States who invaded and/or bombed Puerto Rico, the Philippines, Cuba (twice, 1898 and an attempted invasion in the Bay of Pigs after the Cuban Revolution), Panama, Nicaragua, Dominican Republic, Vietnam, Haiti, Nicaragua, Korea, Sudan, Lybia, Bolivia, Lebanon, Laos, Cambodia, and countless other examples? Is this the track record of a "peace-loving" nation? How many other countries have such a long list of war? Assuming that a case could be made for some of these nations, what's the explanation for the rest? For what reason was Puerto Rico invaded? For what reason were the Philippines invaded? There's only one reason. Imperial expansion! Is Puerto Rico still a colony? Yes! Does that make the U.S. (remember, the supposed leader of the "free world") one of the few remaining colonial powers? Yes again! Colonial power and "leader of the free world", in the same sentence? Hmmm....sounds like a contradiction to me.

With that as a background, should we be concerned about President Bush's declaration on Sept. 20th? If you are from one of the above mentioned nations (and others), you surely would! The actions of President Bush are outrageous. This goes way beyond the right of the United States to self-defense.

The First-Strike Doctrine is essentially an imperial manifesto, where the United States reserves the right to unilaterally and at its will strike whichever country does not fit the, quote "only sustainable model for national success: freedom, democracy, and free enterprise". While many of us undoubtedly support freedom and democracy, we may have very divergent views on the way to structure our governments in order to fulfill our goals of freedom and democracy.

Furthermore, many people in the world view "free enterprise" as a free reign for global corporations (like Enron, Haliburton, and others) to exploit the poor of the world. This doctrine is legal justification for the U.S. to act as an empire and decide which governments and systems are acceptable and which are not.

Aside from these very clear concerns, this is no manner for a government to conduct itself. Why don't we hear the Japanese speak this way? Why don't we hear the South Africans speaking this way? Why don't we hear the Chinese speaking about First-Strike doctrines? Why is the U.S. the ONLY nation making arrogant declarations of "First-Strike" privileges? Could it be the arrogance of the current world empire? It's not like these countries don't have their own internal terrorist groups and pressures. Why do we get free reign to violate international law because we have a "War on Terror". This American exclusivity to international law must come to an end. As a U.S. citizen, I am completely opposed to this new imperial position on the part of the United States, and as a world citizen, I demand U.S. compliance with the various international treaties accepted by the majority of the nations of the world and to the betterment of the entire human race. Democracy Yes! Empire No!

Rene Gonzalez-Berrios is a UMass graduate student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.24.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

The simple pleasures of apple picking

There's no business like Stowe business

By Jessica Pelletier
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

MILLBURY – The leaves are changing faster each day and – whether the temperature feels it or not – one thing is certain: fall is on its way. With this changing of the seasons, one thing that cannot be ignored is the abundance of fall festivals and harvests across most of our area. Crisp breezes and colored leaves awaken the most basic urge to be closer to nature itself before shutting down for another New England winter.

We celebrate this change in a variety of ways, and one of the most simple and relaxing of activities can be found in the tranquility of an apple orchard. Picking your own fruit serves as a therapeutic way to celebrate the change of season. It is reminiscent of a time when the gathering of food was necessary for human survival. Although times have changed for many of us, the joys of collecting these ripe jewels of fruit have not.

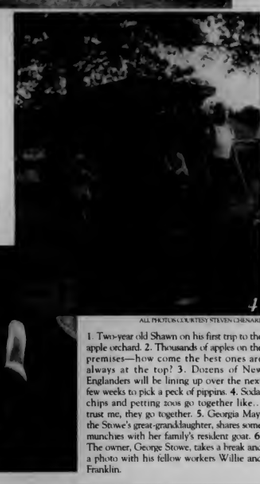
One particular orchard, Stowe Farms, has maintained itself as a family owned and operated farm for over 70 years. But it isn't just the business savvy that keeps families coming back each year. It's tradition. Located off Rt. 20 in Millbury, Mass., the farm fosters a sense of northeastern comfort with the warmth of a family surrounding.

"I've seen people come here as little kids, and now they have kids of their own," said Dean Peterson, son-in-law of owner George Stowe. The prime season for apple picking begins the Saturday after Labor Day. From this time and up until Columbus Day, the orchard is abuzz with people's having a timeless experience. Weekends are the most popular time for the orchard, specifically Sundays.

Dozens of apple trees from the 30's remain standing, despite near destruction in the hurricane of 1938. Thus, walking this area isn't just a piece of wooded land; it is a part of history.

As for the owner George Stowe, he can still be found working on his land, as he has in decades past. Along with the help received from family members, two gentlemen from Jamaica have flown up for the past 24 years for the two-month picking season. Not only have they helped gather the excess fruit, they have grown a part of the family.

The great-grandchildren help out as well. Giving pony rides, working the entrance to the petting



Turn to APPLE, page 6

"Picking your own fruit serves as a therapeutic way to celebrate the change of season."

"It is reminiscent of a time when the gathering of food was necessary for human survival."

ALL PHOTOS COURTESY STEVEN CHENARD

1. Two-year old Shawn on his first trip to the apple orchard. 2. Thousands of apples on the premises—how come the best ones are always at the top? 3. Dozens of New Englanders will be lining up over the next few weeks to pick a peck of pippins. 4. Soda, chips and petting zoos go together like... trust me, they go together. 5. Georgia May, the Stowe's great-granddaughter, shares some munchies with her family's resident goat. 6. The owner, George Stowe, takes a break and a photo with his fellow workers Willie and Franklin.

Bacon film not 'trapped' in same old plot line

By Molly McCarthy
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

TRAPPED
Directed by Luis Mandoki
Starring Charlize Theron, Kevin Bacon and Courtney Love
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

While waiting for the movie to start, I was thinking about how I couldn't wait for it to be over. I did not have a very high standard for this film. First of all, I had never seen a preview for it. Hardly anyone had heard of it. It was a thriller, of which I am not a fan. And most of all, it was opening night, and the theater was nowhere near full.

But as the movie started, I found myself getting sucked in.

Based on the novel "Twenty-four Hours" by Greg Iles, Trapped turned out to be a fast passed, intense hit. Its intensity stemmed from the topic, which hit very close to home in these days of many horrific kidnappings. But be forewarned, as this intensity may even bit bothersome to some.

In the beginning, Will and Karen Jennings (Stuart Townsend and Charlize

Turn to TRAPPED, page 6

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Charlize Theron serves as a mother under surveillance as her kidnapped daughter's life is bartered over for ransom in Trapped.

Banderas and Liu fail at action drama

New film not the stars' best

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BALLISTIC: ECKS VS. SEVER
Directed by Kaos
Starring Antonio Banderas and Lucy Liu
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

There's nothing much that can be done to save Ballistic: Ecks vs. Sever, but the filmmaker's could have started by working on the title. I mean, who wants to say Ballistic: Ecks vs. Sever? It's not a title that exactly rolls right off the tongue. As far as pumped-up actions go, it lacks the punchy, B-marquee melodrama of, say, Armageddon. It's an ungainly mess, the title, but I guess it's appropriate for a movie that is, itself, an ungainly mess.

Imagine one of Michael Bay's all-explosions, all-the-time extravaganza's stripped of all subtlety and nuance (a scary thought indeed), and you'll have a close approximation of what Ballistic is. It may be the first action movie ever to entirely dispense with everything that isn't action. Even the hoariest of action movies at least hinge their big effects on a clothesline plot: Ballistic cuts the clothesline altogether. It's never a good sign when a movie's pyrotechnics budget is infinitely higher than the cost of the script.

Antonio Banderas, giving a performance that consists of nothing but his stubble, plays ex-FBI agent Jeremiah Ecks. Ecks retired from the force after his wife was killed in a car bombing. But gee, she's still alive, and Ecks will be led to her if he helps on a case. Robert Gant (sneering Gregg Henry), the renegade head of the DIA (or Defense Intelligence Agency), has developed a mini robotic assassin that can be shot into a person via a dart. After that, it can be activated with a remote control, so the person has a heart attack or stroke. (If you ask why Gant doesn't just use poisoned darts, then you are putting more thought into the movie than the filmmakers did.)

Of course with a plan like this, someone has to go after Gant, and seeking him is an ex-DIA agent codenamed Sever (Lucy Liu.) She was a Chinese assassin who was trained to be a ruthless assassin, but she rebelled to start a family, whose members were killed by Gant. So now Sever wants revenge... and I give up on the whole business of being a movie critic.

To call Sever a ruthless assassin is to understate matters. She seems to be indestructible. Wave after endless wave of well-armed extras take on Sever only to be brutally taken down by her fists of fury. The character makes absolutely no sense whatsoever; she's nothing but a cartoon of martial arts ferocity. Liu, with her dominatrix looks, certainly looks to be the part of a kick-ass martial arts fireball. But her face is just a little too placid. In fact, Liu's face is frozen into an immobile mask of... well, nothing, really. She has no expression whatsoever. When Liu kicks butt, she displays nothing but paralyzing nothingness, which is the exact same facial display she wears throughout Ballistic.

At it's best, Ballistic is by turns idiotic, incoherent and inept. This is the kind of poorly thought out trash—in which a simple scene portraying characters driving is ruined by the fact that the cityscapes outside the windows are just really bad greenscreen work. It's the kind of movie were Liu drives a car, but never even bothers to make it look like she's driving the damn thing. (There's nothing funnier, at least after you begin to beg for mercy, than the site of a steering wheel driving itself.)

It's the kind of movie where two American agencies, the FBI and DIA, wage war in the streets of Vancouver, Canada. (Wasn't Canada a foreign country at last check?)

It's the kind of movie in which story elements aren't even developed, but just used as staples to

Turn to BALLISTIC, page 6

COURTESY ALAN MARKFIELD

Antonio Banderas and Lucy Liu attempt to take on the big screen with an action-packed drama of epic proportions. However, the two, along with the entire film, fall short.

Simple comedy makes for mindless entertainment

Though Stealing Harvard ends up short on a quality story line

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

STEALING HARVARD
Directed by Bruce McCulloch
Starring Tom Green and Jason Lee
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

I have a feeling that many people, at least many critics, will remember Tom Green's 2001 bomb Freddy Got Fingered for years to come. The movie was decrepit swill, the kind of horrid atrocity that makes "awful" look like an understatement. Green may have amused himself parading around in bloody animal skins, but Freddy Got Fingered was a gruesome hodgepodge, a sketchy collection of the worst skits never aired on his cult MTV series. It will be remembered for the sheer way it didn't just scrape the barrel's bottom – it plowed through it and contaminated the earth in the process.

This is all a fancy way of saying that Green may never be forgiven for inflicting Freddy on us. He certainly isn't going to be helped by Stealing Harvard, a modestly amusing dumbbell comedy that, I think, is destined to be savaged by critics for the unholy crime of not being smart enough to be thought of as good.

Certainly the trailers for Stealing Harvard don't exactly promise a high-quality comedy. In fact the trailers threaten a sitcom comedy of depressingly low quality. Stealing Harvard, however, is neither here nor there – it's not exactly good, and is as ghastly as it should have been.

Credit to any of the marginal success of the movie must go to star Jason Lee and screenwriter Peter Tolan, and to the fact that Green was not involved in any capacity behind the scenes. Lee, a former pro-skateboarder, is an immensely appealing, likable and talented actor even in the worst of movies; in a movie like Chasing Amy he's terrific. Tolan was a writer for "The Larry Sanders Show" and a co-creator with Denis Leary of the cult show "The Job." He knows a few things about comedy.

In Stealing Harvard, Lee's character is bland and vanilla, but Lee invests enough into it that he comes off as agreeable. Lee plays John Plummer, a young manager at Homespital, a company that sells home health care items. John is engaged to Elaine (Leslie Mann), the daughter of his boss (Dennis Farina). His boss regularly grills John on whether or not he has slept with Elaine; John hasn't, but only because Elaine cries hysterically whenever they try to have sex.

(Top) Jason Lee and Tom Green get their kicks in Stealing Harvard. Unfortunately for moviegoers, they are the only ones. (Bottom) Leslie Mann is the comedy's the main girl of interest.

Elaine won't marry John until they have saved $30,000. As soon as John successfully raised the money, he's rudely reminded of a promise he made years ago. When he visits his promiscuous, trailer-park dwelling sister (Megan Mullally) he learns that his niece (Tammy Blanchard), a girl who has looked up to him as a father-figure, has gotten into Harvard – and he promised to help pay for college when she was a little girl. She needs just under $30,000 to attend Harvard. In order to raise the money, John turns to his bad influence friend Duff (Green), who hits on a series of schemes all of them illegal.

They break into a home, with Lee (and, later, Farina) winding up in drag, spooning with the owner. They plot to rob a convenience store with spray-painted guns. They plan to invade Homespital, and Duff gets a little too acquainted with Farina's dog.

Stealing Harvard is not a good movie. It's predictable. It's dumb. It's filled with the ugliest cinematography in a comedy this year. Green drops his obnoxious-jester bit (thankfully), but seems to have adopted the styling of Andy Dick (which, by now, is unfortunate). Director Bruce McCulloch, a former kid in the Hall, continues on an unimpressive directorial career (remember the dreadful "Saturday Night Live" spin-off Superstar.) Plenty of the jokes fall flat (it is not humorous to see Green make backwork of his new landscaping business), and the set-ups for the robbery scenes are clumsy.

But Stealing Harvard is adequately funny – funny enough to recommend to those who enjoy a stupid good time. Lee is a likable enough hero; Green isn't as abrasive as he has been; and there are enough laughs to be found within to make an enjoyable time at the movie theater.

Unexpected rich quality to be found in Ice Cube's latest flick: Barbershop portrays people in real life

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BARBERSHOP
Directed by Tim Story
Starring Ice Cube, Eve and Cedric the Entertainer
Playing at Cinemark 12 in Hadley

The premise of Barbershop, a gently funny day-in-the-hood dramedy, is that, the sort of small businesses being swallowed up by big box companies like Wal-Mart have a purpose beyond mere commerce. They are our common gathering places and the true heart and soul of a neighborhood. They are the places where neighbors can commiserate on equal ground. (Think of the bar in "Cheers.")

It's a nice thought – and an important one in an age of corporate sterility – though one I can't buy into entirely (I'm not on a name-by-name basis with the workers of any small business I shop in).

The titular business, a quaint place called Calvin's In Chicago's mean streets, is such a wistful place. In it, six barbers and their various customers gather and gossip and harangue and connect in a way rarely put on screen anymore. Barbershop is about something that doesn't hold much currency for modern movie producers: the connections of real life.

The barbershop's eponymous owner, Calvin (Ice Cube), inherited the business from his father, who cherished the neighborhood. But Calvin considers the barbershop a burden. He'd rather try to make money off his failed get-rich-quick schemes, the latest of which is to open a hip-hop studio in his basement. The loans that funded Calvin's businesses are due, and now the bank wants to foreclose on the business.

Calvin, wanting money, decides to sell the place to a flashy neighborhood loan shark. After the impulsive decision, however, he begins to see the impact his place has made on those who work in it, those who visit it and the 'hood in general. Calvin spends an agonizing day trying to find a way to keep the business in his hands.

Calvin's story is intercut with the lives of those who work in the shop, a racially and sexually mixed crew that includes a white guy and a woman. Rapper Eve is the hotheaded Terri, who repeatedly takes back her dog of a boyfriend, Jimmy (Sean Patrick Thomas) is a smart-ass college student who keeps spouting needless trivia and berating his current profession.

Ricky (Michael Ealy) is a two-time felon seeking to stay on the straight and narrow. Isaac (Troy Garity, son of Jane Fonda) is a white Jew who lives like a black rapper (bling bling, black girlfriend) but can't get anyone to trust him with their hair. Dinka (Leonard Earl Howze) is a corpulent, sensitive West African immigrant secretly in love with Terri. And that blustery comedian Cedric the Entertainer plays Eddie, a philosophizing old timer who apparently never had a customer. He also has some unpopular words to say about O.J. Simpson, Rodney King and Rosa Parks.

The scenes set in the barbershop have a spirited vibrancy. The situations themselves are routine and predictable; the stories have been culled from dozens of other movies. And each story is concluded with a too-tidy resolution, a sitcom efficient way of making sure each loose thread is conveniently tucked back into place. (In real life, the loose threads tend to remain loose.)

Each character has been vividly realized though.

No one central to the shop is a cardboard boy, and no character upstages the other. There is magic in the way they speak to each, a lulling musical quality. The screenplay, by Mark Brown, Don D. Scott and Marshall Todd, captures a natural rhythm. There is fascination there with these people, something that goes beyond likeability. I wanted to remain with these people for much longer than I did. The humor is at turns provocative and humane and sweet. It's never mean or gross. Life exists in this barbershop, not a calculated screenplay. For once, I would welcome a sequel.

The scenes in the barbershop switch back and forth with those involving J.D. (Anthony Anderson) and Billy (Lahmard Tate). They are two petty crooks who have stolen an ATM machine and now are having a hell of a time cracking it open. These scenes are funny, but in a slapstick way. They are contrived and don't fit in with the barbershop scenes.

Ice Cube does his first acting since his performance in 1998's Three Kings. Cedric is funnier here in one scene than in all of Serving Sara. Eve proves to be a sharp actress, and Garity digs beyond the stereotypical white homeboy persona to find a person who is genuine.

Barbershop is not a black movie or a niche movie by any count. It's a good-willed, sweet, formulaic, uplifting, charming, uncluttered, easily resolved film. Not an ironic, mean, stupid, trashy or cynical one. And it's not gummed up with sticky sentiment either. It's proudly entertaining.

■ Trapped

continued from page 5

Theron) thought they had the perfect life. Will, a prestigious doctor, ensured his family was very well off. The couple was left with a perfect house, many luxuries and an extremely cute daughter named Abby (Dakota Fanning). The only apparent set back to Will's career involved the many business conferences he must attend, all of which cause him to leave his family quite often. Trapped centered on one of these business trips, for as Will left town at the film's start, Karen was put through the horror of realizing her daughter had been kidnapped by a family scornful of prestigious doctors treating people like dirt. A man named Joe Hickey (Kevin Bacon) was left from the kidnapping group to watch over Karen, while collaborator Marvin Pool (Pruitt Taylor Vince) took Abby to a cabin hidden in the woods of the Appalachian Mountains. To make matters worse, Will discovered this information after Cheryl Hickey (Courtney Love) corners him in his room, putting a gun to his head.

What makes this situation different from other ransom kidnappings is that, except for Joe Hickey, no one knows the location of the other two – not even the kidnapers overseeing the parents themselves. The novelty comes from the kidnappers' contact plan. Marvin, placed in charge of the little girl, carried a cell phone with him constantly. If Joe Hickey did not call this cell phone every 30 minutes, meaning if Karen was not cooperating, Marvin was to kill Abby.

Joe Hickey also communicated to Cheryl to make sure Will was cooperating with the plan to get a quarter of million dollars out of his bank account. The three kidnappers were sure they would get away with this, because they had done it four times before and were never caught. What Joe Hickey failed to think about before this kidnapping, however, was that the little girl was a severe asthmatic who needed to take her medicine at a certain time. Without the medicine, Abby, if suffering an attack, could likely die. This of course caused her parents to act different than the other parents, and Joe Hickey was not prepared for what they had in store for him.

Kevin Bacon was by far the best choice of actor for this character, with his mysterious aura and reputation for making movies that are not always your everyday screenplay. Trapped should be added on to the list of the many films he has made that have not been the usual – or best – but were still good. That you can always at least count on with him.

Surprisingly, the other actor in the movie that truly stood out was Dakota Fanning. Playing the 7-year-old Abby kidnapped from her family, Fanning included facial expressions and emotion into her performance that made the audience get even more caught up in the plot and feel for the parents. (I'm sure the parents in the audience were thinking about what they would feel if this happened to their loved ones.)

I was skeptical when finding out Courtney Love had major role in this movie, because in the past I have not believed she was the best actress. As such, I was very surprised how she added to this movie, and overall, the character choices for Trapped were key in making it work.

While it was not the best movie to recently hit the big screen, it was certainly not the worst. And not being the biggest fan of thrillers, myself, I was surprised at how the story kept me entertained. While some parts in the film were quite unbelievable, and the end was a bit drawn out, other aspects of Trapped were exceptionally good, making up for those other factors.

To be sure, moviegoers will get their money's worth with Trapped – a typical Kevin Bacon flick. It's a parent's worst fear twisted into a kidnappers nightmare.

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Kevin Bacon and Charlize Theron star in Trapped—a typical Bacon film with an unusual plotline of mere descent quality.

■ apple

continued from page 5

Double the goats means twice the fun at Stowe Farm Orchards in Millbury, Mass.

zoo and gathering the animals into the barn for the night are all-important jobs that are essential to the operation of the farm. It's a large responsibility, especially since some of us probably complained about taking out the trash when we were young – never mind dealing with livestock.

Even those who want to forego the experience of harvesting their own pippins can have a good time. The country store on site remains open until Thanksgiving and contains homemade pies, breads and candied apples. Other foods such as apple cider, a wide assortment of fresh jellies and jars of honey line the shelves as well.

Out to bake the perfect pie? Recipe books can be purchased with pages of things to do with your fresh apples. Family ties can be found here too, for Amy Peterson, daughter of the owner, is in charge of making the pies and running the store. Her elder daughter is responsible for the breads and her second eldest helps work the store with her mother.

Nothing on the farm is purchased from large, corporate businesses. And for those concerned with spraying chemicals, I was assured that only the most minimal of spraying is done to keep the apples from being scabbed over before they ripen.

The bones sold on the establishment is itself, beneficial to the farm. A local beekeeper brings his insects to the farm in order for them to pollinate the trees; the honey produced is then sold to the farm to be marketed to the public.

Another wonderful event at the farm is the weekend hayrides. Two enormous Belgian mares take cartloads of patrons on a tour around the back pasture and into the woods. And should you be so inclined, they do offer horseback rides for children and adults. The youngest daughter of Amy Peterson (now grown, of course) looks after all animals, including those in the petting zoo. Traditional animals such as goats and the more exotic peacock give Old Mac Donald a run for his money. In addition, Peterson's daughter owns the boarding stable located less than 20 yards away from the store.

The events I've mentioned are only a few of the great things happening in Millbury this season. So before the wind picks up and the colors of autumn are gone for another year, make it a plan to spend an afternoon hanging out with your friends or significant others, creating a tradition of your own this fall.

Opening hour is at 10 a.m. and closing time occurs around 5 p.m. The farm is open seven days a week, with the exception of the store that is closed Mondays.

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
AMATEUR NIGHT
THURS. SEPT. 26
1ST PLACE $500 !!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND AND 3RD
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
S. HADLEY - 413/532-3621

18+

Seven jeans.

ZANNA

■ Ballistic

continued from page 5

hold together endlessly chaotic action sequences wherein the entire downtown area is turned into a bullet-riddled mess, and no one bats an eye.

Yeah. It's that kind of movie.

Clichés don't even catch a break in Ballistic. Banderas is accused of murder, escapes and then nothing. He doesn't even become a man on the run – the movie forgets that little plot point even before it happens. The movie is nothing but a cacophonous mess. There is little style or originality to the repetitive series of explosions and gunfights. A non-discriminating viewer could describe the action as "high voltage." But remember, the sad consequence of too many high voltage shocks is electrocution.

The director, or the man responsible, if you will, is a Thai newcomer named Wych Kaosayananda, who bills himself by the deliberately hip moniker of Kaos. Yep, Kaos. Even the director's name is awful.

The second all-staff Arts and Living meeting takes place tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Collegian office in the Campus Center Basement.

Evolution of the Revolution; A Taylor-ed turnaround

Believe it or not, there is in fact a New England franchise that plays the majority of its games in the summer months that is still in contention for a championship. In fact, it has just locked up a division title.

That team is the New England Revolution.

Classically a weakling among the MLS ranks, the Revolution has never won an MLS Cup, despite the fact that this year marks the third time the final will be played on the Revs' home turf.

ANDREW MERRITT

This year, however, the baby cousins of the Super Bowl Champion New England Patriots are carving a little piece of history for themselves. And there are enough running subplots in the story of their season to fill a textbook, from the addition of two star players, to the departure of a coach, to the emergence of stud forwards and keepers.

* * *

The 2002 edition of the New England Revolution began with a bang, as Jonathan Kraft opened the checkbook and signed Mamadou Diallo after selecting him with the second pick in the dispersal draft held by MLS following the contraction of the Tampa Bay Mutiny and Miami Fusion. Diallo was the darling of MLS in 2000 after scoring 26 goals. The 6'4" Senegalese forward's production tapered in 2001, but his fame didn't.

The acquisition seemed to be a sign of good things to come for New England fans. However, Diallo proved to be a poor fit with the Revolution, and was shipped out of town along with fan favorite Ted Chronopolous on May 24. In return, the Revs acquired the services of forward Diego Serna, who was second in goals for Miami with 15. The top scorer on that team? Alex Pineda Chacon, who also happened to be on the Revolution roster at the beginning of 2002. Serna scored in his first game with the Revolution, but that was the only goal he would submit all season.

Fortunately, that wouldn't matter too much, because the Revolution's search for a quality goal scorer ended with its first pick in the 2002 SuperDraft, Taylor Twellman. Twellman, a forward from Maryland, spent a short stint with 1860 Munich of Germany's Bundesliga before coming back Stateside, where he became the first player in Revolution history to win the MLS scoring title. Twellman scored 23 goals and six assists in 28 games.

The emergence of Twellman as one of the league's elite goal scorers was balanced by the addition of goalkeeper Adin Brown. Brown was another dispersal draft selection, after posting excellent numbers with the Colorado Rapids and Tampa Bay. The graduate of William and Mary proved in 2002 that he deserved to be listed among the best keepers in MLS, with a goals allowed average (1.23) that was good enough to tie with Chicago's Zach Thornton for fourth in the league.

Solid keeping has been a problem for the Revolution since the departure of the beloved Walter Zenga. With the addition of Brown, the Revolution had two keepers who were good enough to keep it in matches. Juergen Sommer, who has been with New England since the 2000 season, posted a 2.39 GAA over 12 games. While not MLS's most solid goalie, Sommer provided enough quality keeping to give Brown the chance to sit a match out every once in a while, without a major loss in defense.

Midway through the season, Head Coach Fernando Clavijo was relieved of coaching duties, and assistant Steve Nicol, a former Scottish football legend, took the reins. Under Nicol, the Revs enjoyed moderate success, but nothing that signaled a big change in their future.

Throughout the season, the Revolution seemed destined once again to disappoint their fans, who have constantly been ranked as the best in MLS. Not enough goal scoring and poor play against quality teams all predicted that the Revs wouldn't be able to show up in the MLS Cup playoffs.

All of that changed in the last month of the season.

The Revolution went unbeaten in its last six games, culminating with a 3-0 win against New York/New Jersey which, combined with Columbus' victory over Chicago on Sunday, gave the Revs their first Eastern Conference title in team history. The surge that New England put on at the end of the season has the MLS universe buzzing, and the Revs head into a first round series against Chicago with all kinds of momentum.

New England opens the series against the Fire on Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Gillette Stadium. While the Revs have been in the playoffs before, in 1997 and 2000, the team has never had such an impressive squad, and never before have New England fans had so much reason to believe that MLS Cup 2002 will be another chance for the Revolution to shine on its home pitch.

Andrew Merritt is a Collegian columnist.

GERALYN LYNG/COLLEGIAN

R.R. derailed

Raunny Rosario posted 100-yard games in his first two contests of the season, but could not solve the Northeastern defense, as he ran for 11 yards on 11 carries.

WRITE FOR SPORTS
or you're benched...

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
NOW HIRING!!
IF YOU THINK YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES, WE WOULD LIKE TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT JOINING OUR TEAM OF PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS.
WORK IN A SAFE, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT AND EARN THOUSANDS OF $$$$$$'S
18+ - NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
SOUTH HADLEY - 413/532-3621

■ field hockey

continued from page 10

GERALYN LYNG/COLLEGIAN

Beth Percival and the Maroon and White defense allowed eight goals this weekend in a pair of games against Midwest powerhouses Ohio and Michigan State.

"It says a lot more about our players, a lot more about the student athletes we have, a lot more about the type of pride that we have and what UMass is all about. We will fight back from this."

Momentum is all about setting the pace, and the Minutewomen came out strong in the first half. They jumped out to an early lead when senior captain Erika Whiston put away the feed from sophomore Ashley Gilbert. Whiston finished second on the team in scoring last year, but this goal was her first of the season.

The Minutewomen wasted no time extending the lead to 2-0 off Jamie Bawden's unassisted goal, less than four minutes later. Andrea Voros cut the deficit for the Bobcats in the 22nd minute by putting away an unassisted goal. The Minutewomen went into halftime with a 2-1 lead, the first time they have led at the break all season. Also, the Maroon and White seemed to show some signs of ending the scoring drought by outshooting the Bobcats, 11-8.

After having such a tough start to the season, the Minutewomen seemed to be on the way to their first win, but they could not hold it together for the entire game. To mount a comeback, the Bobcats turned to sophomore sensation Elizabeth Unger lead the charge.

Unger, who has been one of the best players in the nation so far, fired two shots past sophomore Christine Tocco. Unger's second goal put the Bobcats ahead for good, pulling off the comeback and keeping the Minutewomen winless and still frustrated.

The second half shot comparison was the exact opposite of the first half, as the Bobcats took a modest six shots, while the Minutewomen only were able to get off three. UMass came out really strong in the first half once again, but fell apart during crunch time.

"I just think it's the mark of a young team," said Shea, still confident in her players. "Now, all of a sudden, you have the lead. Now, how do you plan to keep that lead? That's the difficult part."

On a positive note, the Minutewomen shouldn't be threatened by the early frustration, because there isn't a single team in the A-10 with a winning record. Youth and inexperience is unlikely to last forever as all the players seem to be gaining valuable experience in big games. With the conference season only a few weeks away, making the mistakes now will make it easier to correct when it really counts.

Northeastern University Presents...
RATDOG
With
G.Love and Special Sauce
September 28th, 2002
Doors open at 6pm

NU Students $10.
Other Students $20-
must show college ID
Purchase tickets at Blackman ticket Office, 109 Ell Hall, Sept. 23-27 in person (12-4pm)
Call the Council for University Programs at 617-373-4336 for details and phone sales.
Day of Show tickets sold at Matthews Arena starting at noon
No Backpacks, Cameras or Taping Devices will be allowed in the Arena!!!!
Matthews Arena-
Northeastern University
CUP
COUNCIL FOR UNIVERSITY PROGRAMS

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven Campus Fundraiser 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! It works. Contact Campus Fundraiser at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Searching for E? www.search4e.com

AUTO FOR SALE

1996 Ford Explorer XLT loaded SNRF LTHR green w/ V8 5.0L Excellent shape 155K Flowmaster dual exhaust vent shade/visors well maintained engine $6800 617-416-0027

1990 Geo Prism automatic passed inspection 83102 excellent condition 157,000 mi. replaced transmission, timing belt, brakes OCT 01 + exhaust pipe $1950 obo call PG 549-4818 leave msg.

CHILD CARE

Babysitters needed: For Commuter Services on-line babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.cshrc.org, then click on Family Services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off servers with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Research Interviews Ideal for college students. Conduct surveys over the phone. No sales. Set your own schedule each week. 20+ hours/week. Evenings/weekends. $7.50/hour. Hadley location. PVTA accessible. Field Marketing, Inc. 1-888-423-5381

Bus Driver Wanted Looking for responsible person for morning practice for women's rowing team. From now until November. $12.00 per hour/ approx. 15 hours per week. Actual driving time per day=20 min. Call 545-9484 if interested.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals , part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Second shift fish culturist/maintenance. Must be responsible and motivated duties including maintaining an aquaculture hydroponics facility. Must be mechanically inclined able to work alone and do manual labor 3pm-11pm training starts immediately Apply at www.bioshelters.com

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985, ext. 516

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

White and blue pullout couch. In good condition $40 / or bo call256-8895

Microwaves for sale Good as new $30-$40 Call 413-222-1661

Massaversity of Unichusetts Clothing http://massaversity.com

Electric dryer $125, washer $150, 6 month warranty. Delivery available. (413) 568-8144

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mapwaresa om 584-7750 office. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

LOST

Reward Lost Book Bag Inside- Large black art sketch book Sentimental value. Please call Ian 546-3443

SERVICES

LEGAL ASSISTANCE
Are you in trouble with the law? Arrested? Domestic issues? Landlord hassles etc? Let us help you. Call the office of Scott Buxton for legal assistance at 413-283-1991 or Massachusettslaw@hotmail.com

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TRAVEL

USA Spring Break Presents Spring Break 2003 Campus Reps Wanted Earn 2 free trips for 15 people Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, Acapulco, South Padre and Florida Call Toll Free 1-877-460-6077 www.usaspringbreak.com

Early Specials! Spring Break Bahamas Party Cruise! 5 Days $299! Includes Meals, Parties! Awesome Beaches, Nightlife! Departs from Florida! Get Group- Go Free!! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City, Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE! Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@sun-coastvacations.com to find out more info!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplash-tours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplash-tours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!...1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

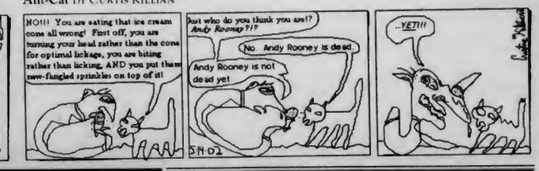
College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Quote of the Day

"If you quit your job, how are you going to pay for me?"

-Overheard at the Dove's Nest girl talking to her boyfriend

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 76 LOW: 47	HIGH: 74 LOW: 48	HIGH: 76 LOW: 48

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — The cosmos today remind you to wear your nuclear boots and drip-dry gloves, because here she comes again.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Listen to the radio today – you're just another brick in the wall. And not a particularly bright one at that.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today's going to be a great day for you. You're just in the zone today. Man, I wish I were you, you lucky bastard.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Cosmically speaking, living your life by a three line horoscope isn't logical. Instead, you should just pick your favorite horoscope and go with that one. I think you should pick Gemini — there aren't any of those really anyway
ARIES (March 21-April 19) — The stars are sending a very clear message: shake, shake, shake Senora, shake your body-line! You heard the stars – work it, baby.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Later today you will face a great crisis when the batteries in your remote stop working on the Lifetime channel. I see much Bea Arthur in your future.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You will be presented with the answer to a great question today. Unfortunately, it will be too late, and the rascal Ben Stein will keep his money.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Some friendly advice will seem stupid at first, but once you get good and drunk it seems like a good idea.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Look on the bright side – having a beagle implanted in your chest is a great icebreaker.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Finding a new friendship is always the signal of a good day. Unfortunately, your new friend makes Hannibal Lector look stable. Hide the Chianti.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Good things come to those who wait – in bed.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) — The stars reveal a new path to happiness to you during a time of great despair. Either that or you're going to fail physics. The stars, they can be real tricky sometimes.

If you don't submit (comics) to us we will destroy you.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Yankee Corn Chowder

Tomato Basil Beef Stew

Chicken Nuggets

Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

Vegan Nugget

DINNER

Yankee Corn Chowder

Chicken Pot Pie

Boston Scrod

Caribbean Vegetable Stew (vegan)

Today's Staff

Matthew F. Sacco

Esther Danzig

Glen Straub

Scott Ciruso

Sarah Lloyd
Erika Earl
Mike Kulak

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/3
4	NBC/5
5	Fox Sports NE
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB/30
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	LIVE/49
20	ESPN Classic
21	Travel-n-Living
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NASA
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	CNBC
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	UPN/38
38	USA
39	TNN
40	MTV
41	CMT
42	VH-1
43	TNT
44	TBS
45	E! Entertainment
46	Sci-Fi Channel
47	Court TV
48	Nick at Nite
49	Comedy Central
50	Cartoon Network
51	Game Show Network
52	TV Land
53	FOX Family
54	Univision
55	Odyssian
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
59	C-SPAN2
60	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30am - 4:00pm M-F Closed Saturday & Sunday

Student rate: $3.00 per day. Non-student rate: 40 cents/word/per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	16	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers			In the Life
WFSB	3	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)			News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)			News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kids	According...Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets		Barrio Mac (N)	News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!!	Ed "Finale" (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic	Absolutely Credible		Charlie Rose (N)	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife Kids	According...Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise "Shadows Of Peril"		Enterprise "Shadows Of Peril"		Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipwrecked
WYBS	68		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal			Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	69		The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self-Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"		American Justice: Green Beret		American Justice: Menendez	Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	21	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live		News night	Moneyline
COM	49	39	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kibels	★★ "Fletch" (1985, Satire) Edward Forlong, Christina Rico,		South Park		Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	24		White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz	Devil's Island
ESPN	31		Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 7 - Teams to Be Announced (Live)					Major League Baseball	Teams to Be Announced (Live)
LIFE	25		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	29		(5:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanMIX	Fight Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		J. Lo Movis	Making Video	Jackass
NICK	26		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Sponge b	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family
SCIFI	35		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)			Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	32	28	Worlds of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"		Extreme Survival "Pressure		Monster Trucks
TNT	30		NYPD Blue Twin Peaks		Pretender "PTB" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal - Teams to Be Announced (Live)					linede NBA	"Trans Buster's Day Off" (1986)
USA	33		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley				Sx. Stickers (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	53		(5:45) ★½ "Here on Earth" (2000) Chris Klein				★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks (In Stereo) PG-13				Biz Fed Under (In Stereo)		Talking Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	54		(5:45) ★★ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Sex Enough	★½ "Mr. Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey R				★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves PG-13
SHOW	69		★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG				★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett R				Soul Food (ITV) (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

www.dailycollegian.com

ACROSS
1 50%
5 Grain holders
10 Hints
14 Jai —
15 Hill
16 Dog in "Garfield"
17 Vinegary
18 Bowling venue
19 Oxen's harness
20 Trophy stand
22 Did an office chore
23 "That was close!"
24 "This must weigh —"
26 Forbidden
29 Bright flower
33 Ice hut
34 Gourmet mushroom
35 Sedan or convertible
36 Necklace part
37 White-water craft
38 Actress Capshaw
39 Be- —: hippie gatherings
40 Doughnut country
41 Slacks
42 Counselor
44 Time periods
45 Raucous laughs
46 Ringlet
48 Chandelier pendant
51 Valentine gifts
55 Right, on a map
56 Marshy inlet
58 Diva's rendition
59 Gardner of mysteries
60 City near Kyoto
61 Tackle the quarterback
62 Bold look
63 Committee
64 On the sheltered side

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-29-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Hinged fastening
2 Medicinal plant
3 Prase
4 Hearth need
5 Use the rink
6 Spouse's brother
7 Lounge about
8 Pamplona cry
9 Wily
10 Trifling (with)
11 Goddess' statue
12 Freshwater fish
13 Bird food
21 Drive away
22 Food wrapping
24 Producer
25 Squirrel's refuge
26 Shinbone
27 Double —
28 Use TNT
29 Cash
30 Florida town
31 Informal farewell
32 Boutique buy
34 Labyrinths
37 Hit on the noggin
38 Polish sausage
40 Tap one's fingers
41 Ceremonial fire
43 Type of cracker
46 TV host Alistair
47 Customary
48 Flake off
49 Unusual
50 Wight or Capri
51 Meg of "Sleepless in Seattle"
52 — Mountains of Russia
53 Cut into cubes
54 Benefit
56 Type of jazz
57 Clean — whistle

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Minutemen hit stride

Soccer upends Maine

By Andrew Merrin
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It only took three weeks, but everything finally came together for the Massachusetts men's soccer team Saturday, as it defeated Maine 4-1 at Alumni Field in Orono, Me.

The Minutemen (3-4-0) played to their capabilities and Lady Luck finally arrived at the same time to help them break a two-game losing streak.

Freshman Jason Scudamore began the scoring for UMass with a 30-yard strike at 3:27 to give the Minutemen the 1-0 lead. Senior Jeff Deren followed that up with a goal of his own at 32:24 on a penalty kick. That would be all that the Maroon and White would need to drop the Black Bears (1-3-2) who only put three serious challenges on senior goalkeeper Dave Doucette.

The Minutemen finally saw a little luck come their way when Maine put the ball in its own net off of a header attempt from junior Deyln Barnes. The own goal gave UMass a 3-1 advantage at 68:00. Maine finally struck back at 70:55 with a goal from sophomore Kyle McMorrow, who was alone at the side of the net to service from freshman Adam Chenault.

However, Maine would not find the net again, and senior Yuri Morales ended all doubt for UMass with his second goal of the season at 73:26.

"I think in the first half we played very well," UMass Head Coach Sam Koch said. "We controlled, and I thought we did very well. In the second half, we struggled, we just did not play well, and let them get back in the game. The ball bounced our way, and we were fortunate."

After seeing the fates work against them last week in a loss to New Hampshire, the Minutemen certainly had to be pleased that luck finally became a positive part of the outcome.

What the Minutemen also saw were real signs of brighter skies ahead, with a defensive effort that kept Maine from penetrating...as most opponents have done this season, as well as a solid performance from Doucette in his first action of the year.

"I thought [Doucette] did a good job in the first half," Koch said. "He wasn't tested, but he came out with everything clean. He made a real nice save on a deflection in the second half."

Which means that the goalkeeper race is a bona fide three way tie between Doucette, senior Enzo Altomare and junior Colin Burns. Altomare has seen the most minutes this season, but Burns showed in last weekend's contest with Michigan State that he has the abilities to be no less than a quality backup. Now, with Doucette's showing Saturday, the issue is far from being settled.

The other running subplot for UMass this year has been how the young defense would stand up to the rigors of a Division I season. With a few important names, Koch and his troops may have figured out the solution. Derek Rhodes, who has shone at midfield during his career in Amherst moved to the back line to lead and organize the defense, and Scudamore has moved to a defensive midfield position that suits the former forward quite well.

"[Scudamore] scored a goal," Koch said, "and that's a big bonus for us because it's not his job to score goals, his job is to win the ball. His job as a defensive midfielder is to hold the midfield together, be the ball winner, and get the ball to [senior] Andrew Ficher and Yuri Morales.

"[Rhodes] just organizes everything so much better for us. With him back there, we just play so much better. It's been a real hard transition for him, because it's not where he wants to be, and he's making the sacrifice for the team, and I think it's definitely payed off in the last two games."

The match with Maine could have spelled danger for the Minutemen, who were without junior Push Myers for the first time this season. Myers stayed home to rehab an injury. Myers has three goals in six games, and has been a potential threat along with Deren all season.

"[Myers] has great ability up top," said Koch, "and he's one of my best all around athletes. But his injury has definitely shown in his play the last couple of games, so I think it was good for him to stay home and get the rehab, and hopefully he'll be ready for Saturday. We obviously missed having him out there."

The Minutemen will have a week off before welcoming the Hartford Hawks to Rudd Field on Saturday, the final tune up for the Maroon and White before beginning the Atlantic 10 season. Match time is set for 1 p.m.

UMass	4
Maine	1

GERALD M. LINO/COLLEGIAN

Freshman Jason Scudamore scored his first collegiate goal in a 4-1 Minuteman victory over Maine on Saturday.

Tennis wins first match of year; has mixed success at Yale Invitational

By Nick Wright
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The Massachusetts tennis team faced cross-town rival Amherst College on Tuesday in its first dual match of the season. The Minutewomen (1-0) edged the Jeffs (2-1) by a score of 5-4 in a hard fought contest.

The Minutewomen had to come from behind, with the number three pairing of junior Susan Hyams and freshman Jana Bartoloini securing the only doubles point in three matches with an 8-4 victory over Amherst's pairing of senior Roopali Agarwal and junior Wallis Molchen.

In the other two doubles matches, sophomore Sasha Edelstein and freshman Camilla Knight were defeated 8-4 by Amherst's sophomore pairing of Rachael Holt and Tristan Hendrick, whilst in the other doubles matchup sophomore Stephanie Price and freshman Dorothy Iwanowicz were beaten 8-6 by senior Paige Lawrence and freshman Kristen Reverta.

However, the Minutewomen won four of the six singles points, with straight set wins for Edelstein (7-5, 6-2) and Price (6-1, 6-3).

Hyams and Bartolini managed to carry their fine doubles form into the singles matches as they also won in straight sets 6-2, 6-4 and 6-4, 6-3 respectively.

Last weekend, the Minutewomen traveled to New Haven to compete in the Yale Tournament. Number one single Edelstein only took part in the doubles portion of the tourney due to a lower back injury sustained on Friday. She said that "the injury isn't serious but that [she] will rest this week and will not train until Saturday at the earliest."

The remaining team members came away with mixed results. Dinn Brothers/UMass Athlete of the Week Stephanie Price's fine run of form was ended as she was defeated in the first round of the singles draw 6-0, 6-2 by the tournament's eventual champion.

Price received the award Wednesday in recognition of her stellar play at the Eastern Collegiate Tennis Championships at West Point, N.Y. The sophomore went 4-0 at the Championships to earn the number two singles title. She didn't find the same success at New Haven, however.

Price did win her two consolation games against Seton Hall opponents Kim Barfuss and Nicole Cercone. There was success, however, in the second flight of the doubles section for the Maroon and White, as Hyams and Iwanowicz won the tournament, beating host Yale 8-5 following victories over Seton Hall in the first round (8-1) and Quinnipiac in the second round (8-5).

The victory is even more amazing considering Hyams and Iwanowicz weren't even aware that they would be playing doubles until the day of the tournament, and that they had never competed as a doubles team in official play before.

"We were put together more for practice than anything else," Hyams said.

The Minutewomen return to action on Oct. 2, when they travel to Storrs to face the University of Connecticut. The next chance to catch them at home is Oct. 4, when they square off with Holy Cross at 10:00 a.m., followed by a matchup with Marist at 3:00 p.m.

Difficult schedule continues to plague UMass

National powers MSU, Ohio down Maroon and White

Todd Foster
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

There are many factors in sports that can make or break a team. Youth, schedule difficulty and a rich tradition are three examples of these factors.

This season, the Massachusetts field hockey team has faced all those factors and has struggled early. After having lost five players to graduation and having to battle inexperience, the Minutewomen have struggled with a tough schedule, including facing top-ranked Maryland. With their worst start in 27 years, the five-time reigning Atlantic 10 champions need some momentum before facing their A-10 opponents.

"A lot of these games are games we've had on our schedule for years," said Massachusetts Head Coach Patty Shea. "There are really only two weekends that we change who we play, and that's the Maryland weekend and the Michigan State weekend."

This past weekend, the Minutewomen traveled to East Lansing, Mich. to face two more powerhouses in 2001 MAC champ Ohio (2-3) and 6th-ranked Michigan State (8-1). Determined to get into the win column, the Maroon and White put up a solid first half in each game, only to fall in both contests after sub-par performances in the second half. These two losses put the Minutewomen into a deep hole with a record of 0-7 (0-0 A-10).

"You have to throw in some games that you know have to play your best game to win, and that's a Maryland [and] a Michigan State," said Shea. "You have to go out of region to play difficult games. That's what brings the respect back to the region."

On Saturday, the Minutewomen were faced with the challenge of Michigan State, one of the top offensive teams in the nation. UMass wasn't affected early on by the Spartans' high-powered offense by keeping the game scoreless through the 20-minute mark. Though, MSU struck first when junior Sophie Rosenalen scored an unassisted goal in the 22nd minute of the first half.

Eight minutes later, sophomore Caitlin Beresin quickly evened the score for the Minutewomen, firing home her second goal past Spartans goaltender Christina Kirkaldy.

The tie was short lived, as Spartan sophomore Annebet Beerman found the back of the cage after receiving a nice dish from sophomore Judith Van Haeringen only two minutes after Beresin's goal. The goal gave the Spartans a 2-1 lead and a lot of momentum going into halftime.

The Netherlands was well represented, as every goal and assist in the first half was recorded by one of the three MSU players that hail from that country.

The Minutewomen were able to "hold" the Spartans to ten shots on net in the first half and prevented the offensive attack from pulling away early. Though, the Maroon and White gave the Spartans nine plenty corners to its one chance from the corner, which could have produced a blowout in the first half.

The second half was a totally different story as sophomore goalie Ashley Egland had to face 26 shots. Egland came up with an amazing 23 saves as she held off all shots until the 52nd minute when the Spartans extended their lead to 3-1; sophomore Michelle Carstens scored on a tap-in from Beerman, who had a goal and an assist on the day. From that moment on, the game belonged to Michigan State, which scored goals in the 55th and 69th minute to finish off the game, 5-1.

A pair of wins over the weekend improved the Spartans to 8-1 overall, including a huge upset over 4th-ranked James Madison, which should move MSU into one of the top five spots. Michigan State pushed themselves into the national spot and could make a serious run for the national championship.

After a strong effort against Michigan State, the Minutewomen's next test of the weekend was against an experienced Ohio team. The Bobcats and the Minutewomen are normally two of the biggest powerhouses within the field hockey ranks, but both teams have struggled to losing records and are trying to fight their way back to respectability.

"This program has a huge tradition. We are definitely in a position that we are not used to being in," Shea said. "We talked about this as a unit. It says more about our program to fight

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 7

MSU	5
UMass	1
Ohio	3
UMass	2

ARCHIVE PHOTO/COLLEGIAN

Senior Stacey Blue and the Minutewomen are off to their worst start in 27 years as they dropped to 2-7 this weekend.

GERALD M. LINO/COLLEGIAN

Ashley Gilbert and her UMass teammates fell to No. 6 MSU 5-1 Friday.

THE WHITE VS. THE WASTE ARTS PAGE 8. LEO FOOTBALL 11 DIGITAL ALL SPORTS SPORTS PAGE 11

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ISSUE SIXTEEN 9.25.02

KRISTIN HULEY/COLLEGIAN

Justin Provencher was working hard Tuesday to prepare for today's SGA Senate elections.

Student Government Association prepares for elections to begin today

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Student Government Association's Senate elections begin today.

This fall's ballots will hold 46 candidates up for election as well as three referendum questions regarding security cameras in the dormitories, the proposition of beer in the Mullins Center, and state political involvement by students.

This year's elections were scheduled to be held Sept. 25 and 26 and have since been limited to today. In light of the recent change, members of the SGA have stressed the need for students to vote and get their voices heard.

"I want to see a lot of people vote," Speaker Dan Saunders said. "Students want change on this campus and the easiest way to do this is through the Senate. If we want change we need the people to back up those changes before the administration."

Although only 46 of the 78 Senate seats are up for election, members expressed that they hope other students will strike up an interest with the Senate and come out after the elections.

"We need student support and we have a lot of old and new faces on the ballot right now," Saunders said. "I'm hoping a lot of people will come forward and get others involved after the fact."

Associate Speaker Matt Pelnar agreed, explaining that he would rather have 46 dedicated senators than 78 senators who were not committed to their positions and work.

"I think it's great that we have 46 seats up for election," Pelnar said. "I really hope this campus will take the SGA more seriously this year and realize that we're their voice to the administration."

Eight of the 14 elected elections commissioners, along with Chancellor of Elections Gabriel Tavares, will be manning the polling stations located at all the dining commons as well as those in the Campus Center.

Public safety has been an ongoing concern campus-wide, and one of the three referendum questions on today's ballot will be surveying student opinions on security cameras placed in campus residence halls. The three referendum questions were compiled and submitted by Student Trustee Bill Powers, with the approval by the SGA Executive Cabinet.

"We [the SGA] decided that we need some question that dealt with security and with the new additions of security cameras in the lobbies of John Quincy Adams (JQA), Patterson and Van Meter, we decided we should get a student response," Powers said. "Personally I don't feel cameras protect students, however we want to see how students feel so that we can give the administration an idea of what the students are thinking."

With the recent reallocation of tailgating prior to UMass football games, a referendum question regarding the sale of alcohol in the Mullins Center will be posed.

Powers explained that by instating the sales of alcoholic beverages, revenue and community interest in events may be increased. He further explained that despite tailgating and its positive aspects, alcohol would be more controlled if sold in the Mullins Center.

"Aside from the SGA working on budget cuts and safety we're also looking at more ways to engage the entire student body and I don't see why beer should not be sold in the Mullins Center," Powers said. "It would generate revenue and get more people into games, and it coincides with tailgating being allowed at UMass football games again."

The final referendum question posed is regarding recent budget cuts and the need for a "student voice" on Beacon Hill. It asks students if they feel the SGA should advocate more to the state capitol, not from just the UMass campus. Powers explained that he feels that students want to do more, and in light of the recent faculty "coffee breaks" and issues with the RA Union, students can, and should want to do more for the University.

"Advocating on a state and local level has gotten lots of energy from this campus and I get a sense that students feel were advocating, but there is so much more we can do, and so many resources aside from what this campus has to offer that students can use," Powers said. "We want to get a student perspective on what they feel about going to the state and advocating on behalf of this University."

Members of the SGA stressed the need for students to vote, particularly on the referendum questions as well as to reach the needed five percent student vote to ratify the elections. Senators more specifically targeted the referendum question regarding public safety. A public safety forum is in development by the SGA for the month of October.

"We really need to try and step up with these elections, especially with only 46 candidates running it looks like our campus is not concerned with issues," Saunders said. "If students want their voices to be heard and to get out there they need to come and vote. I hope that people see that one person can make a difference with an idea, but to be successful they need to have people to back them up."

The first SGA Senate meeting of the year is set for Oct. 2 in the Campus Center.

Smith welcomes newest president

By Amy O'Neill
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Smith College will welcome its 10th president into office, Carol T. Christ, in an inauguration ceremony to be held at 12:00 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 19, at the Indoor Track and Tennis Facility (ITT) on the Smith campus.

Since coming to Smith from the University of California at Berkeley in June, Christ has been exploring the community and becoming familiar with the school.

"I believe very strongly that colleges are part of their communities," Christ told the Daily Hampshire Gazette. "They need to be responsible to their community, responsive to their community."

Christ succeeds Ruth Simmons (who left Smith last year to take over the Presidency of Brown University, becoming the first female African-American president of an Ivy League school).

Born and raised in New York City, Christ attended public schools in northern New Jersey, and graduated with high honors from Douglass College (the women's college at Rutgers University). Following this she went on to Yale University from which she received a Ph.D. in English. She joined the English Department at the University of California at Berkeley in 1970 where she built and maintained one of the highest ranked departments in the country during her tenure as department chair from 1985-88. From 1988-93, Christ served first as the Dean of Humanities and later as Provost and Dean of the College of Letters and

Turn to SMITH, page 2

UMPD searches for individual connected with sexual assault

Police seek information from students

By Dan Lamonthe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts Police Detective Bureau is currently searching for an individual in connection with the Sept. 16 sexual assault in Chadbourne Dormitory in the Central residential area.

Police are not considering the person a suspect at this time, but would like to interview him. The individual was seen at the scene of the crime several hours beforehand.

The individual is a white male, six feet tall and of average weight. He is about 20 years old and has reddish/brown hair and a neatly trimmed, full beard. He was wearing a black hooded sweatshirt, dark pants, and a dark, blank baseball cap at the time he was spotted.

The police have no other new information to release at this time in relation to the assault. They continue to encourage any students with information or potential clues for the case to contact them. University police detectives can be reached at 545-0893. Anonymous tips can also be called in to the TIPS line at 577-8477 or emailed through the UMPD web page at www.umass.edu/umpd.

COURTESY UMPD

Smith

continued from page 1

Sciences. In 1994, Christ was appointed Vice Chancellor of Provost and later became Executive Vice Chancellor. After Proposition 209, the 1996 California law barring the consideration of race in college admissions, she helped to shape Berkeley's campus policy on the matter.

Christ has a well-established reputation as a champion of women's issues and diversity and is excited to see women moving up in the world of school administration.

"My heart leaps when I see more women [college] presidents," Christ told The Christian Science Monitor. "[Mine] was the first generation of women in academia that really benefited from the Women's Movement. I want to see that continue."

At Smith, Christ will push for more gender balance within the faculty, especially in science, and work to control the "spiraling costs" that put higher education out of reach for many families.

"Higher education in America is one of the most successful things this country has ever produced – an array of institutions unlike anything else in the world," Christ told the Monitor when explaining why making higher education available to more families was so important.

A colleague described Christ as having, "an intellectual and emotional commitment to women's education."

Christ was the highest ranking female administrator at Berkeley until she returned to teaching in 2000. She has maintained an active program of teaching and research since then. She has published two books, The Finer Optic: The Aesthetic of Particularity in Victorian Poetry and Victorian and Modern Poetics, in addition to lecturing and presenting papers to scholarly organizations and academic institutions across the U.S. She is also teaching a seminar at Smith on the plays of George Bernard Shaw and Oscar Wilde.

Joining Christ in her move to Smith College is her husband, retired college professor Paul Alpers, a scholar of the English Renaissance.

Christ is a mother of two; her daughter, Elizabeth Sklute is a student at Mills College in California, while her son, Johnathon Sklute is a recent graduate of New York University.

The ceremony is free and open to the public. It will begin with a procession of Smith College faculty, trustees and past presidents, in addition to delegates from more than 100 other colleges, universities and learned societies. The ceremony will also coincide with the college's annual family weekend, so students and their families are expected to attend. Christ's friends and family, community members and higher education leaders from around the country will also be attending the event.

Since Christ has been in office since June, the ceremony will mark her formal inauguration into office and will include the presentation of the symbols of office, the presidential medal and the Smith College mace.

Other highlights of the weekend include a reading by acclaimed poet Adrienne Rich, a faculty lecture titled "A Women's College for the World's Women" by Provost and Dean of Faculty Susan Bourque, a panel discussion featuring Smith alumnae such as Gloria Steinem and Molly Ivins, exhibitions, concerts, theater performances and fireworks over Paradise Pond.

Smith is the largest undergraduate women's college in the country with an average enrollment of 2,800 students every year. The school was founded in 1875 to educate women, and has done so as part of the "seven sisters" schools since its establishment.

KRISTIN HULLER/COLLEGIAN

Peek-a-boo!

Rebekkah visited the Hadley Farm yesterday where she saw the mommy goats and their kids, born at the beginning of this week.

Write for news!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1192 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating wholly on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

S G A

Vote! Vote! Vote! Vote!

Vote! Vote! Vote! Vote!

Senate Elections
September 25th
10am - 2pm 4pm - 7pm

VOTE

UMASS

At DCs and the Campus Center

S G A

Vote! Vote! Vote! Vote!

Vote! Vote! Vote! Vote!

Senate Elections
September 25th
10am - 2pm 4pm - 7pm

VOTE

UMASS

At DCs and the Campus Center

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Wednesday

The New World Theater will present Project 2050: Nation. Conflict. Freedom at Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. Admission is $15 for the general public and $5 for students. An encore show is scheduled for Thursday.

Professor Frank Stern of Ben-Gurion University in Israel will be holding a lecture in room 301 Herter Hall, entitled "Teaching German Studies in Israel." The event is free and starts at 3:30 p.m.

Fine Arts Center Solos & Duos Series: The Marks Brothers at 8 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $10 for non-students, $5 student admission. The concert is a collaborative effort between the Augusta Savage Gallery, Residential Arts and the Fine Arts Center Jazz Coordinator. Call 545-2876 for more information.

Thursday

The Malcolm X Cultural Center will be hosting an open house starting at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served and students with questions about campus organizations and support services are urged to attend.

An information session for students interested in Italian Studies at Siena, Italy will be held at 4 p.m. in room 301 Herter Hall.

A discussion on the war with Iraq will be facilitated by the International Socialist Organization in room 804-808 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

A Japanese Koto Concert will be held Earle Recital Hall at Smith College. The event is free and will start at 7:30 p.m.

The Cuban Film Festival will present Guantanamera at 7 p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 209. The event is free and open to the public. Made in 1995, the film depicts an undertaker's convention in Havana, where the main character, Adolfo, proposes a solution to the gasoline shortage that will help him climb the political ladder. The film has English subtitles.

Friday

The group Something Every Friday presents Salsa dancing at 8 p.m. in the Chapin Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College. Dance lessons for both beginners and intermediates, "wear your dancing shoes." Free and open to all.

Monday

The Five-College Women's Studies Research Center will be holding an event entitled "Race, Gender and the Nation: The Myth of Mestiagem in Brazil." The event will feature UMass lecturer Natasha Pravaz and will start at 4:30 p.m. The Center is located at 83 College Street, Mount Holyoke College.

The first traditional Tavla Backgammon Tournament will be held at the graduate lounge from 5 to 8 p.m. Sponsored by the Turkish Graduate Students Association (TGSA) and the Turkish Undergraduate Students Association; the event will run through October 11.

Tuesday

A lecture on "Financing Life" will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Smith College in Stoddard Auditorium. Free and open to the public, the reading is sponsored by the Women & Financial Independence program. The lecture series speaks to the essentials of financial planning for a lifetime, taught by Professor Randy Bartlett. Topics to be discussed will include student debt, credit, tax planning, saving for retirement, and managing risk. Light refreshments will be provided.

The Hampshire College art gallery will hold an exhibition on "The Mystical Art of Tibetan Buddhism, Sand Mandala" from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the gallery (closed between noon and 1:00 for lunch). The exhibition will demonstrate the creation of a sand Mandela, a tradition in Tantric Buddhism.

Compiled by Rahwa Asmerom

All those with events to be posted on the Community Bulletin or the Diversity Calendar should e-mail the News Department at thedailycollegian@yahoo.com with their information. Events to be listed on the Community Bulletin must be received by Sunday at noon and will run every Monday. Events to be listed on the Diversity Calendar must be submitted by noon on Tuesday to run Wednesday. E-mail or call S.J. Port (545-1762) with questions.

CREDIT CARDS OKMP Delivery EXPRESS

Classic American Roadside Dining and the home of 2 BUROS For 2 BUCKS

Burgers Hot Dogs Chicken Seafood Fries Shakes Smoothies

Burgers & Dogs

287 RUSSELL ST ROUTE 9 HADLEY 585-0241

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
$139
★Student Special★
4 months
Best Aerobics~Best Machines
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS
• CYBEX • STAIRMASTERS •
LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • VR
BIKE • LIFEPOWER • GRAVITON
AMHERST Athletic Club Rts. 116 So. Amherst 256-0080

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
NOW HIRING!!
IF YOU THINK YOU HAVE WHAT IT TAKES, WE WOULD LIKE TO TALK TO YOU ABOUT JOINING OUR TEAM OF PROFESSIONAL ENTERTAINERS.
WORK IN A SAFE, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT AND EARN THOUSANDS OF $$$$$$'S
18+ - NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
SOUTH HADLEY - 413/532-3621

Dear ALANA Community members and Allies,

"ALANA ia an acronym for African, Latino(a), Asian, and Native American"

Our organizations have decided to sponsor a community meeting in light of the plight of issues that have troubled our campus regarding services to the ALANA and Low Income students at the University during the last 15 years. (Ex. The Elimination of Upward Bound, The 1992 ALANA Agreement, The Goodell Incident, The Academic Support Programs Current problems, The Termination/Firing of Ric M Townes, etc.)

We would like to invite you to join us an ALANA ALUMNI TEACH IN that we are hosting to EDUCATE the campus community regarding; "The history of people of color at the UMass and their current struggles". The TEACH IN will be this coming Saturday, September 28 at 6pm in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Sponsored by
Black Student Union
Black Mass Communication Project
Office of ALANA Affairs

We hope you can join us!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Election 2004

Phone in your vote

Kelly Clarkson, step aside. The Fox television hit "American Idol" has set the precedent for another Rupert Murdoch show, "American Candidate."

This bastardization of democracy puts hundreds of contestants against each other, whittling down the competition to one – who will be financially backed by Murdoch as a presidential candidate in the 2004 race.

Phone-in voting will decide who the presidential hopeful is. Preliminary plans for the show will pit contestants against each other in competitions. These debates with a game show edge are designed to narrow the competition.

The show will air on FX, a Fox cable network, and will take place at a variety of American idyllic locations – including Mount Rushmore and the Statue of Liberty.

The final episode, expected to air July 4, 2004, will feature the final three contestants and will take place on the National Mall in Washington D.C. No place better than our nation's capital to end the rollercoaster ride of democracy.

The problem is not that this show will bring out unique candidates, as it surely will. The problem is more that the money, the financial backing for this candidate is coming from a company, and a television network at that.

Murdoch, the media mogul who owns and runs News Corporation – which owns and runs a large chunk of all news, radio and television companies – has little to lose with this decision, and plenty to gain.

Murdoch does not reside in the United States; he can swim through his Scrooge McDuck money pit without worrying that the president he backed will act against his investments.

But we do.

And Murdoch's financial backing or influence is only one concern; the candidate who is chosen offers another list of worries.

"It's like a cross between 'The War Room' and 'American Idol,'" said producer R.J. Cutler to Daily Variety. "We will be making available to every American who is qualified, by virtue of the Constitution, the opportunity to run for president," he added.

Some are certainly concerned that the choice of audiences and phone-in viewers will not match the qualifications of Commander-In-Chief. While the show is hoping to bring a mix from plumbers to politicians, the winner is decided by the people.

This could be considered real democracy. The people are definitely choosing who they want. But it raises the issue that most people are not educated in politics, foreign policy, national budgets, the inner workings of welfare politics and the adventures of health care.

It is entirely possible that the candidate News Corporation finally supports will be fully qualified.

He or she may be better than any candidate or president we've had in the past.

There is a chance that person will surpass the competition. But the nature of the show leaves all these things up to chance.

Information from www.drudgereport.com was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Email your comments, questions or concerns to collegianeditorial @yahoo.com.

Dirty water and apples

They're arrogant and stubborn. They always think they're right, you're wrong, and that's all there is to it. Their driving can be described as less than stellar. They talk a mile a minute and always expect everything to have been done two days ago. They feel they are the center of the universe and think that everyone else can just bow down before them. They're full of sports fans (and have the winningest team in their respective sport's history), artists, immigrants, people of any and all persuasions. Their city is unlike any other on earth.

Quick, tell me who I just described: Bostonians or New Yorkers?

I've often wondered about the logic of where people chose to live, even more so now that I'm in my super-senior status. Sure, it may seem like a big enough challenge to pick a single area, be it a city's metropolitan area or the middle of the country, but then think about the steps beyond that: north, south, east, or west of the city (or right in downtown), or which little small town specifically. The questions are unending and unanswerable, so instead I'll just stick to a larger scope, the greater city at large.

America is full of cities with their own unique atmosphere and culture. Miami, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago, Washington D.C., Philadelphia, the list goes on and on. Yet few cities bring to mind such strong histories, and rivalries, as much as Boston and New York City.

Separated by just over two hundred miles, two of America's founding cities have lived lives rich with their own history, intertwined with an unmistakable animosity towards one another. Sometimes this is imagined to be one-sided. Some may dismiss it as simply a case of envy on the part of Bostonians, always feeling like their city is in the shadow of its much larger cousin to the southwest. However, the animosity is on both sides to be sure. The simple reason is pride, as both these cities are full of some of the proudest people in the nation.

New York has Broadway to Boston's Tremont Street. Each city has a sports team that has won more championships than any other (the Celtics and Yankees), while also a team notorious for getting close but not being quite good enough (the Red Sox and the Knicks). Though, to be fair, the Sox are sort of in a class by themselves in the heartbreak category. Anyways, each city also lives life at the pace of a hummingbird. While the South and West may be known for their laid-back way of life, people from the Big Apple and the Hub wouldn't want to live any other way but uptight and high pressure.

Growing up in suburban Boston, 30 miles to the north, there were certain things instilled in my mind due to where I was brought up. I learned that driving is an aggressive tendency that must be practiced with the utmost skill. I learned that Massachusetts is full of colonial history. And I learned that New Yorkers were nothing but arrogant jerks to be hated and the Yankees were a symbol of this evil. I lived the first 18 years of my life without having anything contradict my upbringing. Things seemed crystal clear.

As a student at UMass though, I have, for the first time in my life, interacted with New Yorkers on a regular basis. Joe from Long Island lived on my floor my freshman year. Now granted, being from the center of the Island, he was as much from New York as I was from Boston, but we each were full of local pride, and it led to many disagreements. We could find a reason to argue about anything. Initially, it aggravated me to no end and was confirmation of all my previous ideas about those nasty New Yorkers. As the year went on though, I began to understand that one of the biggest reasons we fought so much, was our similar personalities. We both were knowledgeable about a variety of topics and had strong views on almost all of them. Sometimes our views differed, but even if they were similar, our argument would just turn into a mutual support society. By the end of the year I counted him as one of my closer friends, even if he was a Yankees fan.

Now, five years later, I've had encounters with numerous people from the Big Apple. While at times my initial stereotypes still came into thought, I've grown to be friends with some and it has gotten to the point where it doesn't really register anymore. Perhaps there is not a better example than last year when New York City was in a state of crisis. That day I looked at my friends from New York and could tell they were hurting. This wasn't just their country being hurt; this was their home. On that day I finally realized that there was nothing in these people that wasn't in myself.

As I said earlier, I have numerous friends who hail from our nation's most populated city. Included amongst them is a person who doesn't realize how good a friend he is or how much I admire him. And now as I begin to search for grad schools and plan out places to live as I start the next phase of my life, New York comes up highly on that list. I am a city boy at heart, and Gotham most definitely has plenty to see and do.

Don't get me wrong, I'm not abandoning my Boston roots and positively want to come back to Beantown at some point. Yet this young man would jump at the chance for life in the city that never sleeps. A Yankees fan...never (I still have my morals!). A New Yorker...start spreading the news.

Regan McKendry is a Collegian Columnist.

© Denver Rocky Mountain News. Dist. by NEA Inc.

It was all a conspiracy

KATIE LANDERS

I drink five cups of coffee a day. I don't know how I'd get through the day without it. If you see me at any point between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., my heart rate has probably skyrocketed and my mind is going too fast to think straight. If I didn't have that coffee, I'd probably be passed out by noon. I drink a gallon of coffee and I can still go to bed straight. I've only had two right now, and writing this is the only thing keeping me awake during class. Who created decaf? It's like drinking non-alcoholic beer. No point.

Coffee really starts out as a college thing. In high school I snuck iced coffee before high school despite my mother's warning that it would turn my teeth yellow and make me tired in the long run. Every morning at Dunkin' Donuts I would get a French Vanilla iced coffee with extra, extra cream and extra, extra sugar. A crunchy frappe.

When I first came to UMass, I started drinking hot coffee, from Starbucks and the Blue Wall. Sometimes, I even splurged the 10 dollars to get a "macchiato." I shifted away from heavy cream and sugar, and before I knew it I was taking my coffee black. Drinking black coffee is like eating baking chocolate. Remember when your Grandma let you try that? Now I'm back to cream and sugar. Not as much as my frappe days, but enough to keep my stomach from disintegrating altogether.

I drink my five cups a day, luckily for free, courtesy of working at the People's Market: the strongest coffee on campus and still under a buck and a half (shameless advertising). Every cup is as good as the last, each sip keeping my legs up and body functioning.

How can this happen? How can so many Americans be addicted to the morning cup(s) of joe? The common work environment even has an established 15-minute break for it.

It's a conspiracy.

In the old European days and early pilgrim days, tea was the drink of choice and anyone knows that tea has the caffeine of water next to coffee. But then the new American government snuck in coffee beans and slipped them to pilgrim-yuppies. I bet the local townsman gave coffee away for free, and the pilgrim yuppies would get so worked up after drinking a cup, they'd be pleased to do three days of work in an hour for a penny.

Flash forward a few hundred years and find a workplace that doesn't have an automatic coffee machine. Drive through a town and see if you can't find at least three Dunkin' Donuts. The coffee industry gets you hooked at a young age and before you know it, coffee is the fuel that gets you showered, dressed, and in your car. The second cup gets you en route to work, and the third cup brings you to lunch. Your breath by then is probably so rank you don't even want to sit next to yourself. There's nothing you can do now. Just keeping drinking the coffee to keep you straight, just like smack.

Drinking black coffee is like eating baking chocolate. Remember when your Grandma let you try that?

The coffee industry feeds on people who can't make it through the day without it. Coffee does not see class lines. It's not just for Volvo-driving, Cape-vacationing, suburban white collar workers anymore. Construction companies bring on trucks to sights specifically for coffee nourishment. Coffee shops on every corner cater to students who think they are going there to "study." Over a cup of coffee, there's always something to talk about. Interns bring their boss a cup of coffee, and maybe they'll land a job. Put the beans through a 200-dollar machine and you can call it espresso. Freeze it and now you have ice cream. Cover beans in chocolate and it's a tasty snack. UMass is even in on it. They put coffee in the DC. Starbucks sits right in the Campus Center.

Coffee isn't a drug though. Nope. And it doesn't have nicotine in it so Folgers and Maxwell House won't have lawsuits. Maybe I'm just angry because I'm going through withdrawal. I guess I'll just keep drinking my coffee to get through my day, and when my teeth have rotted out of my head in 20 years and I have that twitch, don't look at me funny. It was all a conspiracy.

Katie Landers is a Collegian Columnist.

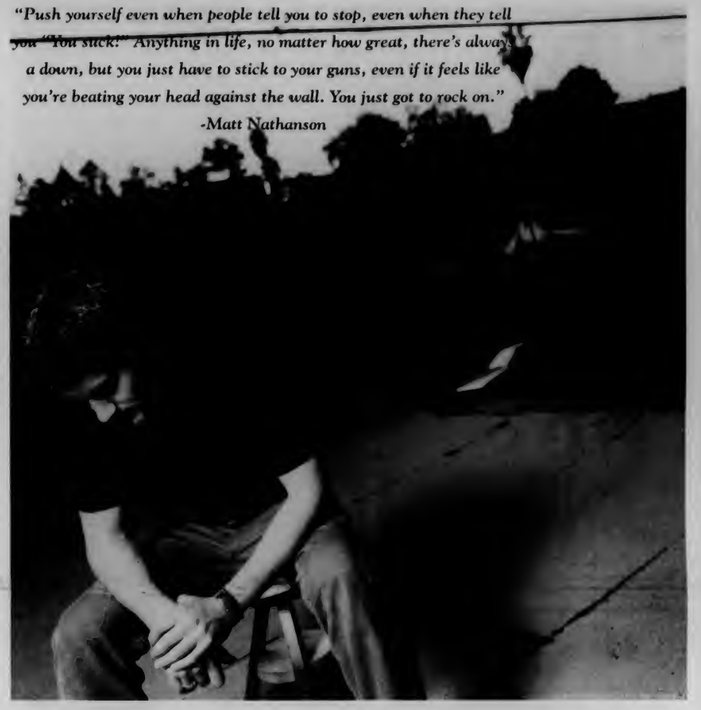
DAILY COLLEGIAN



ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 9.25.02 ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

Nathanson show like a big party

"Push yourself even when people tell you to stop, even when they tell you "You suck!" Anything in life, no matter how great, there's always a down, but you just have to stick to your guns, even if it feels like you're beating your head against the wall. You just got to rock on."

-Matt Nathanson

By Ashley Hand
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

MATT NATHANSON
Pearl Street Nightclub
Sept. 22

NORTHAMPTON — Armed with a 12-string acoustic guitar, a killer voice and genuine, thought-provoking lyrics, 28-year old Matt Nathanson rocked the house at Pearl Street Nightclub this past Sunday night. Alongside him was cellist Matt Fish who added a different and unique element to the "aggressive folk" that Matt so eloquently performs on his own.

Nathanson rocked out with crowd favorites "Wings" and "Lucky Boy" injecting his usual anecdotes and random stories along the way. He described "Wings" as a song originally about that certain person "you think about all the time, so much you can't sleep." Not satisfied with his definition, he then tweaked the meaning so that "the person is thinking about me instead," and laughed seeming to enjoy that idea.

"First Time," a song about a boy and Walden Pond, was my personal favorite. The guitar, cello, and vocals blended beautifully together to create an awesome sound that accurately mirrors the mood of the lyrics.

Along with his powerful songs, Nathanson's performances are the perfect combination of singing and stand-up comedy. An avid fan of the 80s metal era, Nathanson pulled out an old Motley Crue concert T-shirt that his friend and fellow singer/songwriter Stephen Kellog gave him. He brought him up on stage, and they busted out with their very own medley tribute to great 80s rock legends Jon Bon Jovi and Poison consisting of "Livin' On A Prayer" and "Every Rose Has its Thorn," complete with a harmonica solo from Kellog. Of course, Nathanson required the participation of the audience, and they were all ready and willing to add their own flavor to the mix by singing along with the chorus. The line between entertainer and audience is completely blurred when Nathanson is on stage. He loves his fans and he lets you know it. "I LOVE YOU GUYS!" he gushed after "Answering Machine."

Random songs were shouted out for him to play and he smiled, "Okay, yeah! Awesome, I'll be your human juke-box for the night!" Someone up front yelled for "New Coats and New Hats" and he went with it. Compelled to explain the meaning of the song before he played, he went on to say that it was about his wife. "Sometimes you find that really fantastic person... like Yoda but only better looking." He played with a certain quiet fierceness during this song, enough to break a guitar string, but surely not enough to stop him from continuing the show. Nathanson ended the night perfectly with "Maid," which was uncharacteristic of him because he has never played the song live. "Can I play this for you?" he asked. "This has been a weird night and I figure it can't get any weirder, so I want to try this out."

"Man, is it hot in here?" he asked, wiping his forehead, his gray T-shirt dripping with perspiration. "I feel like I just took a dip at the Y. I'm gross...but that just shows how hard we rock! Right?" He smiled, thanked the audience and ducked out.

When you go to a Matt Nathanson show, expect much more than a guy standing on a stage strumming his guitar and spitting out unoriginal lyrics – it's more like a big party. Complete with sex, drugs and rock 'n roll...okay, so maybe no sex or drugs are involved, but there's plenty of rock 'n roll. And plenty of entertainment.

Watching Nathanson perform wasn't the only highlight of the night. For those of you who haven't heard of Mason Jennings, take the time to check him out. I stuck around to hear him play after Nathanson's set and I was blown away by the distinct antique, bluesy sound he brought to the stage.

Nathanson opens up about touring, music biz in interview

By Ashley Hand
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Born in Boston, fledgling singer/songwriter Matt Nathanson is known for his hilarious stage show (a hybrid of singing and stand-up comedy) that helps to distinguish him from the many other artists around today. We caught up with the prolific artist for an interview to find out what makes him such a unique stage presence.

Daily Collegian: With the recent developing interest in folk/rock/pop music, do you feel as though people see you as the stereotypical guy with a guitar?

Matt Nathanson: (laughs) I've always been that guy. I'm still that guy! Before John [Mayer] and Howie [Day] opened up the door it sucked because no one was into that type of music yet. Now it's in upswing and it's a great time to be that guy.

DC: What do you think makes you different from the next guy with a guitar?

MN: I don't know ... I feel like I dig the rock more. I grew up listening to bad 80s metal and I feel that as an influence. I dig it! And playing by myself, I feel it's the easiest thing to do. But the minute I get a band, I'll [Day] opened up the door it sucked because no one was into that type of music yet. Now it's in upswing and it's a great time to be that guy.

DC: Speaking of Howie, how was touring with him? Did you feel the age difference between you two?

MN: Not at all. Howie is very mature and I'm very immature so we were a great match. We kinda met in the middle. I toured with John too, they are both super great guys and super intelligent. It was really fun working with the both of them, and I was surprised

Turn to Nathanson, page 8

Jazz duo at Fine Arts Center begins new concert series

COURTESY RESIDENTIAL ARTS, FINE ARTS CENTER

Mark Dresser and Mark Helias perform their duo jazz concert tonight at the UMass Augusta Savage Gallery in the New Africa House.

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Jazz. It's a music genre that has spanned generations, continuing to delight plenty of audiences to this very day. And three factions of the University of Massachusetts know this well, for the coordinators at the UMass Augusta Savage Gallery, Residential Arts and Fine Arts Center have teamed up this semester to host a revolutionary new series dedicated to jazz artists of different styles and techniques.

Best of all, those eager to see how such a series will float in the diverse music scene of the Pioneer Valley are in luck, for Solos and Duos, as it is named, begins today.

The most original concept for this series – as Spotlight Magazine, a publication produced by the Fine Arts Center, explained – lies in its presentation. For the first time at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, both the performers and the audience will be onstage together. It will require the use of unique lighting, staging and curtains in order to complete this transformation, the magazine continued, but in the end, the space should prove to be an intimate concert venue unlike that of which the Fine Arts Center has ever seen.

The Marks Brothers launch the series today with both their performance at 8 p.m. at the Concert Hall and an earlier free dialogue/ workshop at the Augusta Savage Gallery in the New Africa House at 4 p.m.

Musicians Mark Dresser and Mark Helias have both professionally played their music since the 70s. Tonight the

Turn to JAZZ, page 8

The Lovely Bones paints morose picture

By Arkadiy Finn
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

THE LOVELY BONES
Alice Sebold
Little Brown & Company

What would your heaven look like? Would you color it purple or make it smell like just a hint of skunk? Alice Sebold paints her own picture of heaven in her soaring new novel, The Lovely Bones.

Now in its 10th week on the New York Times bestseller list, The Lovely Bones has climbed this pinnacle of modern book culture. Displacing such bestseller mainstays as Tom Clancy from the top spot is an impressive feat for a second novel.

The Lovely Bones is a story of a murdered little girl in suburban America in the 1970s. Killed by a predatory neighbor, Susie Salmon is relegated to watching her bereaved family from "her heaven." Her death shakes the town, and the reactions of the people who knew her form a patchwork of American grief.

Presenting the world through the eyes of a 14-year-old girl, Sebold gives her character unmistakable voice. Frozen in time, Susie Salmon is at the same time an emotional teenager and guardian of her family. From her perch in heaven she sees the raw emotions that drive her loved ones, gaining a perspective, which at once sympathizes and forgives. Yet Susie remains in limbo, waiting for her own revelation, the catharsis that would bring long-awaited freedom.

The telling beginning immediately introduces the reader to the power of Susie's voice. "Inside the snow globe on my father's desk, there was a penguin wearing a red-and-white-striped scarf. When I was little my father would pull me into his lap and reach for the snow globe. He would turn it over, letting all the snow collect on the top, then quickly invert it. The two of us watched the snow fall gently around the penguin," Sebold writes. The author has Susie telling her story simply and elegantly, leading up to the poignant climax without a change in tone. "The penguin was alone in there, I thought, and I worried for him. When I told my father this, he said, 'Don't worry, Susie, he has a nice life. He's trapped in a perfect world.'" This kind of passage is commonplace in Sebold's flowing prose, revealing deep insights disguised as family moments.

The Lovely Bones fluctuates between magical realism and all-too-gritty actuality to create a modern fairy tale in the style of Gabriel Garcia Marquez. Although dealing with tragedy through escape into the surreal has long been a theme in literature, Sebold enters her vision of sorrow in Middle America in a novel way. Susie is the storyteller and the main character, representing the mystical and at the same time grow-

Turn to BONES, page 8

Anything but Bleu at Pearl Street

By Samara Marblestone
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

BLEU
Pearl Street Nightclub
Sept. 21

NORTHAMPTON — "I'm Bleu," said the 25 year-old Virginian (and Bostonian for the past eight years), as he extended his right hand to shake mine, while snacking on a green apple in the other. He sat down and crossed his right leg over his left. He was clad in a light black "Extreme" t-shirt, blue bracelets from Claire's, washed-out denim jeans and Converse sneakers sporting out an American flag theme. His right upper arm sported a tattoo of the word "Tattoo" in black, bold letters with a hint of red. His name, "Bleu," is based on the fact that he once had blue hair. At the time, he just finished a brief sound check with his band and had an hour until he opened up for Antigone Rising at Pearl Street. Even though we only spoke for about 10 minutes, I have never met a musician so passionate and yet serious/haha/n about his music.

Inspired by '80s power ballads, '70s hard rock, country, metal, and a variety of other kinds of musical genres, Bleu describes his music as "a cross between Metallica and Barry Manilow." He started his music career in elementary school as a member of the choir and has been playing the piano since age 13. His debut album Head Room came out in 2000 under the Lunch Records label, and features tunes from a mellow, sonther genre, to poppy, uplifting rock songs. Many at the present moment recognize his name from the Spiderman soundtrack in which he recorded, "Somebody Else." Having the privilege of touring with John Mayer and several other artists, Bleu awaits the release of his sophomore album, Red Head, tentatively set for release this coming January by Columbia Records.

"I'm not interested in allying with anything," Bleu responded when asked to describe his music, "I just hope it's me. I'm not part of a scene. I think that's what any [musician] would hope for."

He then went on to explain all his songs are all written by him. Most have a true storyline, while others are fictional.

"Friends have told me that I've helped them deal with their break-ups through my music," he said. "I like to be of comfort."

At 7 p.m. on Sat., Sept. 21, Bleu and his band took the stage at Pearl Street for a very small crowd. Mostly made up of women and young girls and a sporadic boyfriend or two (keep in mind that the headlining band, Antigone Rising, is an all-girl group). Bleu and his boys kicked off with "Could Be Worse," and followed with "Searching For Starlight," when his bassist, Max, lit up a cigarette as he plucked at the strings. Bleu belted out an incredible range of notes, sounding much like the late Jeff Buckley, as he strummed his shiny blue electric guitar. For the fourth song, "You Know I Know," Bleu handed over his guitar to his keyboardist and took over the keys as he sang yet another gorgeous song. Although the song was blues-filled and mellow, the drummer hit his drums with the same intensity as Lars Ulrich of Metallica. During the ballad, the members of the band displayed passionate facial expressions that seemed to tell the emotional story of the song, as Bleu made great eye contact with the audience.

My favorite song (along with the audience's) was "That's Life," a peppy, fast-paced pop-rock song which expressed a happy "life's a bitch" theme. Bleu and his band were incredibly energetic, especially in the middle of the song when they put down their instruments and started clapping to the beat as if they were a '60s rock band.

Although Bleu only played seven songs in a 30-minute set, it was quite evident that extreme success will be paying him a visit in the very near future.

"If we perform bad, that freaks us out," Bleu said about performing. "It's not that we don't care about the audience though."

In a pop-dominated music scene, Bleu is definitely not the missing piece of the pop puzzle. With an attitude of just trying to be himself and nothing more, he's not looking to create his own genre of music.

"It's just f__in' rock 'n roll for the people," Bleu lightly said.

As a charismatic performer with a raw sense of humor, he will definitely attract music lovers to his unique music.

"We'll probably fall miserably," he seriously noted.

About two seconds later, he looked up at me and sneaked a smirk.

"I'm just joking."

COURTESY

Bleu tickled audiences punk at Pearl Street on September 21.

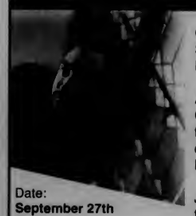
Forget free thought and speech.
College would be nothing without free checking.

Fleet Student Banking Package
Everything you need in a checking account.
- Balance your semester budget with Fleet HomeLink℠ Online Banking
- Automatically add to your summer savings with AutoSave
- No annual fee Student Credit Card*
- ATMs and branches located near campus and throughout the northeast

FREE

Forward. Thinking. Fleet

Fleet Student Banking Package offer is valid October 16, 2002. All Fleet HomeLink features are free, except [illegible] six months after you initiate your first bill payment. Thereafter, a monthly fee of $4.50 will be charged. *For Credit Qualified Applicants. age. Fleet is a [illegible] are registered marks and Fleet HomeLink is a service mark of FleetBoston Financial Corporation. © 2002 FleetBoston Financial Corporation. All rights reserved. Member FDIC.



STUDENT TRAVEL

44 Main St. (413) 256.1261
www.statravel.com STA TRAVEL
ONLINE ›› ON THE PHONE ›› ON CAMPUS ›› ON THE STREET

McMurphy's
welcomes
Live Music
THE GUITAR
DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

Bernie Choiniere

Christian Rock Concert
Sponsored by the
Newman Center

An awesome evening of Christian Rock with a fresh new voice in contemporary Christian Music.

Join us in this celebration of faith and share in the search for peace. Donations will be given to the Red Cross Relief Fund.

Date:
September 27th
Time:
8pm
Place:
Newman Center
Tickets:
Free

Theory of a Deadman pleasing

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THEORY OF A DEADMAN
Theory of a Deadman
Roadrunner Records

Judging by their name, new Canadian band Theory of a Deadman may sound harsh and unfeeling. Nothing could be further from the truth.

With their self-titled debut album released on Sept. 17, Theory of a Deadman has finally managed to develop a higher profile and make the big time. On tour with fellow Canadian rockers Nickelback through Sept. 29, the band has developed a solid following on rock radio on the strength of their first single, "Nothing Could Come Between Us." The song concentrates on the miscommunication of a failing relationship.

The album itself is full of heart. Most of the songs don't necessarily concentrate on upbeat things, but they have infectious tempos, riffs and melodies that somehow can uplift its listeners. Frontman and songwriter Tyler Connolly has crafted a group of songs to help listeners pick themselves up and dust themselves off after things go wrong in life. Everything might not be okay with Theory of a Deadman, but there's hope in their music.

The connection between Nickelback's Chad Kroeger and Connolly goes back to 1999, when the two met at a party. At the time, Nickelback was one of Canada's most popular bands. Connolly was a nobody. Nevertheless, Kroeger took a demo tape of Connolly's band and promised to listen to it. Three years later, the two are touring together, and Theory of a Deadman has become the first band to sign with Kroeger's new record label, 604 Records.

Kroeger and Connolly tightened their professional relationship quite a bit in the past year. While Theory of a Deadman was recording their album, Kroeger was invited to record the song "Hero" for the Spiderman soundtrack. While Josie Scott of Saliva got the credit for providing harmonies for the song, Connolly also was a member of its musical ensemble. The B-side of the "Hero" single, containing the raucous "Invisible Man," brought Theory of a Deadman some of their first large-scale attention. The song shows the singer's annoyance towards a girl who periodically ignores him.

With such a close bond, the two bands deserve comparison. While there are similarities, Theory of a Deadman definitely does some things differently. For one, there are no fluffy "How You Remind Me"-type songs on their album. The band has a few slow songs and many upbeat rockers, but nothing comes across as the ear candy that altered Nickelback's fan base. The closer comparison might be to Nickelback, circa its first album, The State. The band, made up of Connolly, guitarist Dave Brenner, bassist Dean Back, and drummer Tim Hart has the same cowboy-hat-wearing, Western-Canadian-hailing-swagger to them that Nickelback did before they hit it big time.

Theory of a Deadman has a riff-heavy sound that combines Connolly's two main inspirations: classic rockers like Led Zeppelin and the '90s Seattle grunge sound. Picture vintage Pearl Jam or Soundgarden a little less angry and a lot more reflective. Connolly has a raspy, strong voice that conveys emotion clearly and convincingly.

Highlights of the album include "Nothing Can Come Between Us" and "Invisible Man," but there are several others. Nearly all of them are "relationship songs" about plain-old getting over it. "Leg to Stand On" is a swaggering riff-heavy rocker displaying anger towards a girl after an argument.

"Any Other Way" is an exasperated plea about giving up on a girl. The lyrics from it are typical of Connolly's no-nonsense style: "You've tried to open your mouth but only sh— would come out/ I always wondered where you got it from/ You haven't heard a damn word I said/ You never believed in anything I did/ I don't care what you're doing, do what you want to/ Look what it got you."

The few slower songs on the album are more thought-provoking. The lyrics and emotion in "Say I'm Sorry," for one, are wrenching, hung together on the refrain "Why didn't you?/ Why didn't I?/ Why couldn't we?/ I wonder why."

"The Last Song" is the slowest on the album and is marked by a complete departure from Connolly's concentration on love gone sour. It's a tune about a man writing his suicide note, looking back on all the reasons he shouldn't be doing what he's planning. It also provided the band with their name. The song was originally titled "Theory of a Deadman," but was changed some time during production. The band wasn't sure about a name, and took the original title of the song as its moniker.

The future would appear to be bright for the band. The band has received a positive review from Billboard magazine and it plans to tour with Saliva next, from Oct. 25 through the beginning of December.

On the net: www.theoryofa deadman.com

COURTESY ROADRUNNER RECORDS

Don't let their name fool ya, Theory of a Deadman's self-titled effort is full of heart.

COURTESY ALBERT SANCHEZ

Listening to So Much Shouting, So Much Laughter, you'll think you're at a live concert.

DiFranco serves up so much stuff

By Meghan Healy
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

ANI DIFRANCO
So Much Shouting, So Much Laughter
Righteous Babe

In her first live performance since 1997's Living In Clip, Ani DiFranco puts forth a consummate follow-up with So Much Shouting, So Much Laughter.

Offering three previously unreleased tracks along with a slew of DiFranco's more contemporary concert favorites, the two-disc compilation serves as both a pleasing addition to any fan's collection as well as a proper introduction for those not yet acquainted with the wonder that is Ani DiFranco.

Divided amongst two records, subtitled Stray Cats and Girls Singing Night respectively, the 23 songs were handpicked by DiFranco herself. Disc one plays like a greatest hits album, compiling the high standards that have comprised her set lists throughout the past five years. Girls Singing Night is more representative of a DiFranco concert experience. The pace, energy and structure of the second disc will leave the listener with a raw and unguarded feel.

Stray Cats is a veritable array of concert favorites. Tracks like "Swan Dive," "Cradle and All," and "Napoleon" thrive on intense concert energy while "To The Teeth" and "Welcome To:" rely on the power of DiFranco's lyrics to win the listener. These are songs the crowd loves to hear and, considering how much passion has gone in each song, they're tracks DiFranco and company love to play.

Night opens with "Ain't That The Way," a textural mix between smooth jazz and jagged rock. The subsequent tracks range from the standard acoustic ballad to the unique form of fury-fused folk-rock that has become DiFranco's trademark. With the chillingly poetic "Self Evident," DiFranco establishes her state in a post-Sept. 11 America. In her scorching indictment she declares "We hold these truths to be self-evident: Number One – George W. Bush is not president/ Number Two – America is not a true democracy/ and Number Three – The media is not fooling me." Written just days after Sept. 11, "Self-Evident" gives a voice to all the disillusioned Americans who found no solace in over-inflated patriotism. The discs satisfyingly conclude with the encore, "You Had Time," resolving, "You are really good food, and I am full/ I guess everything is timing/ I guess everything's been said."

The only downfall of So Much Shouting, So Much Laughter is where the album draws its strength. Since the record is a stockpiling of DiFranco's high moments from a multitude of shows, it is packed with 23 amazing masterpieces. However these moments mean a little less when taken out of context of a live show. There is nothing building up to them, tantalizing the listener. They are amazing tracks but some magic is lost in the process of piecing together a hybrid show. Fans of Living In Clip may also find that the transitions between songs aren't quite as effortless here as on the aforementioned LP. There are moments, especially on Girls, where DiFranco and her formidable band are clearly leading up to something great that the listener will not hear and will instead be force-fed something that just does not fit.

It is best to listen to So Much Shouting, So Much Laughter as a sort of musical autobiography, as it aptly portrays DiFranco in all phases of her career and embraces the prolific songwriter's musical mission. It is truly DiFranco at her best, which may or may not be a good thing.

ARTS.
The other white meat.

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
$139
★Student Special★
4 months
Best Aerobics~Best Machines
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS • CYBEX • STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • V.R. BIKE • LIFEPOWER • GRAVITON
AMHERST Athletic Club Rte. 116 So. Amherst 256-0060

Seven jeans.

ZANNA

Bring it.

Bringing technology to the edge

Where it matters most.

As one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics to business aviation and special mission aircraft. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.

But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth work environment. And incredible benefits including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.

Visit our Career Booth on Tuesday, October 1 or Wednesday, October 2

So, you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside work, too.

At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Opportunities are available in the following areas:

Computer Science
Computer Engineering
Electrical Engineering
Mechanical Engineering
Math
Physics
Chemical Engineering
Aeronautical Engineering
Finance/Accounting
Human Resources

Check out our website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information, including a calendar of recruiting events. Start your job search by completing a student profile. U.S citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Raytheon

Pitting similar artists: human nature?

Comparing The Hives and The Vines has become America's latest obsession. Is it human nature or just boredom?

Human comparison can be an intriguing, yet sometimes frustrating thing. When I say this, I'm referring to the fact that it is human nature to assume that two similar yet separate bands of a similar genre are competitive and therefore [illegible]

Guess what? You may be guilty of [illegible] in fact.

The Hives and The Vines are one of the many garage rock '60s revival bands that have sprung up in the past couple years. Their emergence was preceded by the likes of guitar alt-rockers and foreign-sharing [illegible] have not only enticed a younger generation of rock-hungry teens, but has also sent a sweet tune of déjà vu to those who actually experienced real rock.

Although the two bands have similar songs, they definitely sing different tunes and come from two different corners of the world.

The Hives, who consist of lead singer Pelle Almquist, guitarists Nicholaus Arson and Vigilante Carlstroem, bassist Dr. Matt Destruction and drummer Chris Dangerous, broke into the music scene in their native country Sweden back in 1997. The Hives made it big in Sweden in 1998, but didn't hit the U.S. successfully until Burning Heart Records released their sophomore album, Veni Vidi Vicious, on April 30. Their hit single, "Hate to Say I Told You So" infested almost every single rock radio station all over America.

The Vines, of Sydney, Australia, are made up of lead singer and guitarist Craig Nicholls, bassist and background vocalist Patrick Matthews, and drummer David Olliffe. The Boys from Down Under aren't ashamed to admit that their music was heavily influenced by '60s rock namely by the hit '60s Australian rock band The Vynes, for whom they are named. The present-day Vines broke out onto the Australian music scene in the mid '90s, and finally embraced their presence halfway across the globe in the U.S. on July 16, when Capital/EMI Records released their first hit album, Highly Evolved. Their video for "Get Free" became an MTV staple and the song offered a very popular guitar riff for people to strum as they fooled around with their guitar.

Ever since the Hives and the Vines jumped onto the Billboard charts, rumors have circulated that the two bands are competing with each other and don't get along. And why is that? No one really knows. Both bands denied the rumors and actually commented on how they admire each other's music. One event that caused speculation, however, was when the Hives and the Vines shared a performance during this year's MTV Video Music Awards. As MTV News honcho Kurt Loder interviewed random rock stars and celebrities during the preshow, he constantly brought up the heated rumors of the make-believe fight between the two rock bands. Was he provoking this pretend rock feud for media purposes? Most likely. And I don't think it was necessary that two distinct bands had to share a performance. Would Bruce Springsteen and Britney Spears share a spot? I would like to think not. So why did the Hives and the Vines have to?

My ultimate question is why do music lovers assume that two similar musical artists or bands don't get along because their music is almost exactly the same? Why do people constantly assume there are bitter feuds between Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera? Ditto for boy bands, the Backstreet Boys and N' Sync.

Human nature? I call it boredom.

Yes, the Hives and the Vines may be separated at birth, but I'm sure they don't run home to their diaries every night to write about how much they hate each other. Hopefully everyone else will realize that they have better things to do.

Samara Marblestone is a Collegian columnist.

ROCK N OUT with Samara Marblestone

jazz

continued from page 5

two will join forces as twin bassists and will perform some of their best hits as well as general classics.

During their time as musicians, both Dresser and Helias have earned reviewers' high praises for their talents. Dresser has collaborated with artists Tim Berne, Gerry Hemingway and John Zorn, in addition to other "new" jazz composition and improvisation artists, to complete approximately 60 recordings over the years. Dresser has been heralded by New York's Village Voice as "one of the few virtuosos of so-called avant-garde jazz."

And this avant-garde jazz Los Angeles native is the not only one to receive praise from the Big Apple. Helias, having recorded seven albums of his own since the early 80s (his most recent one, Fictionary, was released in 1998 under GM Recordings) was called "one of New York's finest composers, thinkers and instrumentalists" by the New York Times.

In addition to performing, Dresser has composed solo contrabass and ensemble music since 1972, most impressively writing and performing the original music for the New York Shakespeare Festival stage production of Henry VI.

But it's in his handling of the instruments themselves that Dresser gains the reputation of being a unique artist, as The New Yorker once described it: "You've got to pity Dresser's poor bass. You wouldn't treat a dog the way he manhandles his instrument. But the gnarled tones and vicious swing he tortures out of it are worth the abuse."

Compounding with his interest in solo bass recital and leading a musical trio and quintet, Helias also has also performed with the New York City Opera, his debut performance in Anthony Davis's opera X, The Life and Times of Malcolm X.

Together, the men bring a harmonious balance to their music – fueling each other on and propelling one another to higher heights – and have produced a duo album demonstrating that collaboration.

"In addition to being two of the greatest bass players to emerge in the past couple of decades, Mark Dresser and Mark Helias are excellent composers, one of the factors that make their duo CD so impressive," Jazziz Magazine wrote (WERF, 2001). "Their interplay is wonderful, practically telepathic. It's a landmark effort."

The Solos and Duos series continues on Oct. 18 with Andrew Cyrille, performing his solo drum, and on Nov. 20 with pianist Ran Blake. Each of these concerts will also be held in a unique setup at the FAC Concert Hall.

Tickets for The Marks Brothers cost $10 and $5 (for Five College students). Contact the Fine Arts Center box office at 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

bones

continued from page 5

ing and changing. She has the ability to watch her loved ones on Earth, yet because she is in heaven, she cannot interfere neither to help nor to hurt, setting up a paradox, which she must resolve for herself. Sebold never lets us forget that hidden under layers of eddying sadness lies the face of a little girl trapped like the penguin in the snow cone.

In a post 9-11 world Sebold chooses to emphasize the strength of the American family as a way of dealing with disparaging heartbreak. Her characters are Susie's disenfranchised mother, the kind yet confused father, and the defiant little sister. Susie's death sends the Salmon family into a tailspin but through the healing power of time and maybe a little help from above, relationships are mended and unanswered questions are forgiven. They all deserve our pity yet do not ask for it, in a way that defines the very substance of humanity.

Infused with harrowing images and heart-wrenching scenes, The Lovely Bones incites moving emotions that the reader surely will not be able to ignore. As any good tragic writer Sebold does not forget humor, but it comes across colored in sadness; the ridiculousness of the father's attempt to find the killer; Susie's awkward first kiss by the lockers at school; and her sister's refusal to shower with the lights on.

Piercing from the start, the novel flows over time and space returning ultimately to its origins in the Salmon household. Sebold takes the reader on a journey of mind and soul, showing us not only that healing is possible in today's society, but also a way to go about it. Hope sucked into a vacuum returns gradually but surely to the lives described in The Lovely Bones.

Nathanson

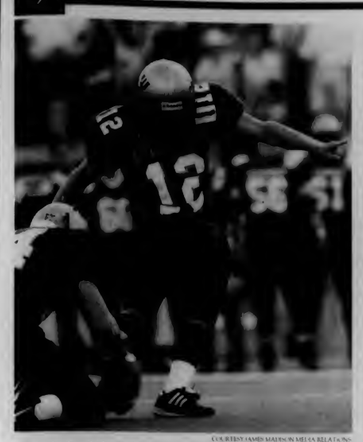
continued from page 5

how Howie and I got along that well.

DC: What is your stand on joining a label? Do you feel like it's selling out?

MN: No, I don't even know what selling out is. Some people say that John sold out, but I feel that the purpose is to get your music to reach more people. Don't get me wrong, the music industry is terrible. It's backwards ass and terribly run the way money is spent versus money earned. Ani DiFranco is a true independent, she is a really amazing human being, but I don't blame anyone who signs to a label. I think it'd be fun to try it. I think anyone who doesn't take the chance at some point just ends up shooting themselves in the foot.

DC: I noticed that you love when fans sing your songs with you during the show? What are some of the other perks that you love?



MN: (laughs) Everything! This is the best thing in the world! I mean, c'mon, being able to play and drive around and meet people all over the country. It's great! Sometimes it can be the worst thing in the world, when you're not feeling it, and then it can all turn around. Like last night (Sept. 17), I played a show in D.C. and it was off the hook. I walked in with the worst mood ever, and the crowd was killing, amazing! I was so crappy before and they made me happy. It was awesome!

DC: What are some of your future plans?

MN: Well, I'm working on my fifth record, and I'm talking to some labels and trying to figure that out. Right now I'm just touring. I'm booked through 'til the New Year. I call it the "Too Stupid to Stop" tour.

DC: For all the aspiring singers and songwriters out there, do you have any words of wisdom to offer them?

MN: Well it all depends on my mood. Don't get me wrong, I have a great gig doing what I'm doing, it's awesome, I love it. But there's always a downside to every good thing, and when I'm down there I'd say "DON'T DO IT!" But most of the time I'd just say keep doing what you're doing and continue to evolve and take risks. Push yourself even when people tell you to stop, even when they tell you "You suck!" Anything in life, no matter how great, there's always a down, but you just have to stick to your guns, even if it feels like you're beating your head against the wall. You just got to rock on.

COURTESY JAMES MADISON MEDIA RELATIONS

James Madison kicker Burke George made a 50-yard game-winning field goal in overtime against Hofstra.

A-10

continued from page 14

Blue Hens will have to unseat preseason favorite William and Mary in order to avoid falling to 0-2 in conference. Delaware started the season with an impressive 27-24 victory over I-AA playoff mainstay Georgia Southern. However, a 15-13 loss to Richmond in week two puts new coach K.C. Keeler on the hot seat heading into this weekend.

The Tribe lost its first two games of the season – to I-A Indiana and on the road against Maine – then got back on track with a 62-31 drubbing of VMI. Payton Award candidate Dave Corley has not lived up to expectations this season, and he will need to right his ways against the Blue Hens if William and Mary is to be a prime contender for the conference championship come the end of the year.

Looking to buck the trend

When UMass travels to face Heisman Trophy candidate Philip Rivers and the 15th-ranked Wolfpack, it will mark the seventh time this season that an A-10 team has faced off against a I-A opponent. So far, the A-10 is a semi-respectable 2-4, with the only wins coming from Northeastern in a 31-0 shutout of Ohio two weeks ago and in week one when Villanova beat up I-A doormat Rutgers 37-19. However, it will be the first time this season that an A-10 opponent takes on a nationally ranked team.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Northeastern offensive line stifled the UMass defense Saturday in the 42-17 Husky victory. NU moved into the No. 10 spot of the ESPN/USA Today poll and No. 14 in the Sports Network poll.

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
AMATEUR NIGHT
THURS. SEPT. 26
1ST PLACE $500 !!
CASH PRIZES - 2ND AND 3RD
500 NEW LUDLOW ROAD
S. HADLEY - 413/532-3621

18+

Study in Siena, Italy in Spring 2003!
Interested? Questions?
COME TO AN INFORMATION MEETING
On Thursday September 26 at 4pm in Herter 301

TRACFONEU
NATIONWIDE PREPAID WIRELESS
Buy Now and Get
1 YEAR
OF WIRELESS SERVICE
AND
150 FREE
MINUTES
SPECIAL STUDENT RATES
As Low As 20¢* Per Min.
*Special student rates are only available to college students in select calling areas of the U.S. See tracfoneu.com for details.

TO GET THIS OFFER, ACTIVATE YOUR PHONE WITH PROMO CODE: 66094
$79.99 suggested retail price
Everything you WANT!
• Free voice mail
• Free caller ID
• Free call waiting
• Nationwide long distance included
• Pay-as-you-go
• Minutes don't expire with active service
• Rates include all wireless taxes & fees
Nothing you DON'T!
• No contracts
• No monthly bills
• No credit checks
• No deposits
• No age limits
• No activation fees
Win $5000 cash
No purchase necessary. Open only to legal U.S. residents 18 or older. Void where prohibited. Subject to full official rules. Grand Prize (1): $5,000. To enter & view full rules, visit www.tracfoneu.com Sweepstakes ends at 11:59 p.m. CT on 11/1/02. Sponsor: TracFone Wireless, Inc. Miami, FL.
VISIT WWW.TRACFONEU.COM FOR DETAILS
TRACFONE IS AVAILABLE AT RETAILERS EVERYWHERE OR ONLINE AT:
WWW.TRACFONEU.COM
© 2002 TracFone Wireless Inc. All Rights Reserved.

THE ROAD TO RETIREMENT MAY SEEM SMOOTH, BUT IT'S LITTERED WITH TOLLS.
Fees. Charges. Hidden costs. Over time these things can erode the retirement savings you're working so hard to build. Contact us, a company known for keeping costs low. It ain't a free ride, but it's close.
TIAA-CREF.org or call (800) 842-2776
TIAA CREF
Managing money for people with other things to think about
RETIREMENT | MUTUAL FUNDS | VARIABLE ANNUITIES | TRUSTS | INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT

Northeastern University Presents...
RATDOG
With
G.Love and Special Sauce
September 28th, 2002
Doors open at 6pm

NU Students $10, Other Students $20- must show college ID
Purchase tickets at Blackman ticket Office, 109 Ell Hall, Sept. 23-27 in person (12-4pm)
Call the Council for University Programs at 617-373-4336 for details and phone sales.
Day of Show tickets sold at Matthews Arena starting at noon
No Backpacks, Cameras or Taping Devices will be allowed in the Arena!!!!
Matthews Arena-Northeastern University
CUP
COUNCIL FOR UNIVERSITY PROGRAMS

Get the essentials

Champion® women's t-shirt colors maroon, oxford, light blue
sizes S, M, L, XL
$18.00

Gear for Sports®
women's PJ Pant
assorted patterns
sizes S, M, L, XL
$22.00

U-Trau®
women's tiny tank colors yellow, purple, orange, light blue
sizes S, M, L, XL
$18.00

Russell®
women's sport short with tackle twill lettering colors maroon, black, navy, oxford
sizes S, M, L, XL
$22.00

find these—and more—at:

University of Massachusetts
UMASS. UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619

Visit us online at www.umass.bkstr.com

Merchandise subject to availability. All items shown are imported.

Lawyers take stab at Pierce

TODD FOSTER

If you are a die-hard Celtics fan like I am, Sept. 25, 2000 could have been one of darkest days in the history of the dynasty. Two years ago today could have been the day that Paul Pierce was murdered.

On that day, Pierce walked into the poolroom at the Buzz Club in Boston, and had a quick conversation with a couple of women. Shortly after the conversation started, a man approached the 6'6" shooting guard and told him that one of the girls was his sister.

Now, Pierce is a big guy and obviously didn't know what was going to happen later that night, so he could have easily beat the guy down. Instead, the Truth kept his cool, simply looked the man in the eye, and said "no disrespect."

The unidentified man said nothing to the Celtics' star and continued to give him a long, hard stare. Pierce said that he could feel a little animosity from this suspicious character.

All of a sudden, the NBA All-Star was attacked from every direction by a mob of thugs. During the assault, Pierce was stabbed eight times and had a bottle cracked over his head, the glass shattering in his face.

Security guards were able to drag the former Kansas Jayhawk to the stairwell, which was around the time that he realized the stab wounds. Soon after, teammate Tony Battie and Battie's brother Derrick rushed Pierce to the hospital. Somehow, doctors were able to save the life of the grateful Celtic great.

This group of attackers was estimated at around 20 guys. Just imagine having 20 guys come out of nowhere and just starting to beat the hell out of you with knives and bottles. Do you think you could survive something like that? Well, the man with a heart of gold did.

Trevor Watson, William Ragland and Anthony Hurston were all arrested for the stabbing and every single one of them pleaded innocent. Are you surprised that they were "wrongly accused?" The biggest thugs are always the victims, it seems.

Ragland is accused as the man who started the fight with Pierce, but of course it wasn't really him. He was in the bar room and had nothing to do with the fight. Have you ever heard a cover-up that was so pathetic?

But wait – there's more.

Watson's defense is the fact that he has a large Indian tattoo on his arm, which would have been identified in the fight. Who was going to look for tattoos during a brawl? Pierce, who had 20 guys on top of him? The security guards, who were trying to save his life? During such a huge brawl, not a single person would think to look for tattoos when lives are on the line.

Now, here's the best excuse of them all. Hurston's lawyer said he was arrested because Pierce is a celebrity, that the cops just arrested Hurston so they wouldn't look bad. Are you kidding me? All three of these guys have records and are associates of the Made Men, a well-known rap group that was involved in a stabbing at a rap concert in the FleetCenter. Of course they are suspects.

Unfortunately for Pierce, the fact that he can't positively identify his attackers, these three guys just might walk. Unless they get a few eyewitnesses, justice might not be served.

Think about how much different not only the Celtics organization would be, but also the city of Boston would be without the Truth. Forget about the fact that he is one of the five best players in the NBA; this Celtic has a heart of gold and gives a lot of his money and time to the community. Without Paul Pierce, Beantown wouldn't be the same. The man deserves justice to be served.

Todd Foster is a Collegian Correspondent.

■ nfl

continued from page 14

injured and in denial, which certainly isn't helping St. Louis' cause any. As for the Steelers, it's probably time to give up on Kordell Stewart as an NFL quarterback. And this coming from someone who drafted him in his fantasy football league.

Panthers and Chargers Undefeated

I probably shouldn't put these two in the same category. San Diego is obviously better than Carolina. However, both teams are 3-0 because of incredibly weak schedules.

The Panthers have beaten Baltimore (0-2), Detroit (0-3) and Minnesota (0-3). The Chargers have beaten Cincinnati (0-3), Houston (1-2), and Arizona (1-2). Those are six teams that will definitely not be making the playoffs this year.

Both teams will be challenged for the first time this weekend as Carolina takes on Green Bay and San Diego plays New England. Don't bet on either team making it to 4-0.

Carolina – a nice place to grow old

Speaking of the Panthers, can you believe that Rodney Peete is their quarterback? The guy has to be entering retirement age. No, not football retirement age, real people retirement age. Really. And his running back is Lamar Smith. That guy was already washed up when he was drafted.

Seriously though, Peete has had a heck of a trio of games, averaging 222 yards/contest and throwing for a 93.0 rating. Smith, meanwhile, has rushed for 298 yards (second in the NFC).

Spoiled receivers

What's with the whining? Terrell Owens. Randy Moss. SHUT UP! Neither of you are playing well; maybe it is your gigantic heads that are slowing you down. Did anyone see Moss short-arm that pass from Culpepper last week? What a supreme waste of talent, this guy could be the best player in the league.

Over-Rated

Why on earth were the Dallas Cowboys (1-2) and New York Jets (1-2) everyone's sleeper playoff picks for this year? I don't get it. Maybe all those "experts" thought the teams' respective running backs had found a fountain of youth and forgot that the combined age of Emmitt Smith and Curtis Martin is about a hundred. And their OBs are terrible. And their defenses. And...well, you get the point.

Hello Mr. Vick

I always thought a lot of Michael Vick. When he was at Virginia Tech, I couldn't wait to see him in the pros. But no one could have expected him to be this good, this fast. FYI – Vick is the NFC leader in passing efficiency three weeks into the season. Now, I don't expect him to keep that up, but it's still a pretty impressive feat.

What a start to the 2002 season: new stars, old guys playing better than ever, and big-time teams falling off the board. It doesn't get any better than this.

Baseball? Who needs baseball? Didn't they go on strike?

Jim Pignatiello is a Collegian Columnist.

American Red Cross

The American Red Cross would like to Thank EVERYONE who gave the Gift of Life so far this semester. Your donations have resulted in 591 lives saved, with 197 pints of blood donated. You should be proud of the impact you have made on these patients' lives.

To those of you who have not donated yet, please consider it.
Giving blood is 100% safe, is easy, and really makes a difference.

Each day in New England, the Red Cross must collect over 1,700 pints of blood to be sure that the patients in need of blood will receive it.

Please help us in our mission to maintain an adequate blood supply.
Share Your Health.
Give Blood Today.
10:30AM - 4:30PM
Campus Center Room 174
To donate blood, you must:
- Weigh at least 110 pounds
- Be in good general health
- Have not donated in the past 56 days

*We will also be taking blood donations on Monday September 30th
Same time, same place
If you have any questions, please see Jeff at the Red Cross table on the concourse, call 1-800-462-2229, or visit our website @ www.newenglandblood.org

Together, We Can Save a Life

■ past

continued from page 14

hope for a win."

The two coaches are on opposite planes in the present as Harvard is looking like a team on the rise while UMass is heading towards some uncharted waters – a losing season. However, both coaches know that this game means much more than a win or loss in their records.

"It is always so much fun when we play against each other. We both want each other to win and it doesn't matter what the result is."

UMass forward Danielle Carrier and the Minutewomen battle intra-state rival, Harvard, at Richard F. Garber Field tonight at 7pm.

Shea explained. "Everyone knows that it's a great rivalry and rivals respect each other."

"You have your conference rivals and your regional rivals and you always want to play well against those teams," Caples said. "UMass has had the upper hand and we want to turn that around."

The Minutewomen are looking for any sort of way to regain the upper hand on their season. This weekend, the Maroon and White lost two well-played games against national powerhouses Michigan State and Ohio by scores of 5-1 and 3-2, respectively.

The losses have added up and the Atlantic 10 portion of their schedule does not start for another two weeks. Despite no teams in the A-10 having winning records, Shea wants her team to have its heads up before the conference games begin.

"The losing has been a true test of character for us, and it's time to show the pride that all UMass athletes hold and release the true grit that's inside," she said.

The character of the Minutewomen will be tested once again tonight, as the Crimson will look to repeat on their 4-3 victory over UMass last season. Last year the contest was played in Cambridge, but this time UMass will be in its own backyard. A site it hasn't seen in competition in two and a half weeks.

The unfriendly confines of Garber Field don't faze Caples though.

"I always love coming back and playing at my alma mater," she said.

www.dailycollegian.com

the FRESH CUTS
Your alternative music source.

MEDIA PLAY
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Selection, pricing and special offers may vary by store and online.
818892 13789 Sale ends October 5, 2002. www.mediaplay.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

Alternative Art Class. My Hands Arts and Crafts Studio, Hadley, MA. 6 p.m. Weds. 6-9pm Oct 2-Nov 6 Sign up at Hadley Rec. For more info 413-584-4580

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Enjoying Push, Nevada? Valuables caught using by search-&-players. Many more chances to claim among best underground shoot.

Help Hoping Oil. Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Cooperative. Call 549-0869 or come by Commuter Services, room 428 Student Union.

Fraternities, Sororities, Clubs, Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with a proven On Campus Fundraiser. 3 hour fundraising event. Our programs make fundraising easy with no risks. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so get with the program! Broaden Contact Campus Fundraiser at (888)923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com Graduating? Graduation announcements available at the Campus Center Information Desk.

AUTO FOR SALE

1995 Honda Civic Coupe. 98,500 miles. Very good condition. Meticulously maintained. $5,250 Call Bob 253-9333.

1993 Escort Hatchback. Red, 5-speed, A/C, Clean, great shape. 549-4511

1986 Ford Explorer XLT loaded SNRF LTHR green w/ V8 5.0L Excellent shape 155K Flowmaster dual exhaust vent shade/visors well maintained engine $6800 617-416-0027

CHILD CARE

Babysitters needed: For Commuter Services online babysitting bulletin board. Visit our website at www.umass.edu/cs, then click on Family Services or stop by 428 Student Union. Live in opportunities available as well.

COMPUTERS

Used Laptop Notebooks $99.00 Pentiums with CD Rom and Monitor $129.00 10% off servers with this Ad. 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Weekly Cleaning $6.50 Hourly references. Call 549-0413 8-11am.

Night Auditor: PT, Fri/Sat. 11pm - 7am. Please apply in person at the Holiday Inn Express, Rte 9, Hadley

EMPLOYMENT

Guest Service Agents: FT/PT, must have good communications skills and be computer literate. Flexibility to work various hours is a must. Please apply in person at the Holiday Inn Express, Rt. 9 Hadley, or the Clarion Hotel, 1 Atwood Dr., Northampton (Exit 18 off I-91).

Houseman: PT, experienced all-around handy person needed for light maintenance & heavy cleaning. Please apply in person at the Holiday Inn, Rt. 9, Hadley.

Research Interviews Ideal for college students. Conduct surveys over the phone. No sales. Set your own schedule each week. 20+ hours/week. Evenings/weekends. $7.50/hour. Hadley location. PVTA accessible. Field Marketing, Inc. 1-888-423-5381

Bus Driver Wanted Looking for responsible person for morning practice for women's rowing team. From now until November. $12.00 per hour/approx. 15 hours per week. Actual driving time per day=20 min. Call 545-9484 if interested.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individuals , part time positions available immediately. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413) 584-4746

Second shift fish culturist/maintenance. Must be responsible and motivated duties including maintaining an aquaculture hydroponics facility. Must be mechanically inclined able to work alone and do manual labor 3pm-11pm training starts immediately Apply at www.bioshelters.com

Bartenders needed. No experience necessary. Earn up to $300/day. Call 866-291-1884 ext. U150

Bartender Trainees Needed. $250.00 a day potential. Local positions. 800-293-3985 ext. 516

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ & SYB Productions are now looking for Fall Semester. Call (413) 537-8527 or www.sybproductions.com

FOR RENT

Lockers for rent: Cheap! $10 for the year. Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

FURNITURE

Fridge Rentals free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

White and blue pullout couch. In good condition $40 / or bo call256-8895

Microwaves for sale Good as new $30-$40 Call 413-222-1661

Electric dryer $125, washer $150, 6 month warranty. Delivery available. (413) 568-8144

INSTRUCTION

Guitar Lessons- All ages, styles, Levels. lessons@mpwaves.com 584-7750 office. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Questions about your lease/ security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/ assigning leases/ Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

ROOM FOR RENT

Single or Double rooms available for rent on Nov. Pleasant St. for this semester/ males only/ for more info call 413-549-9262

ROOM/APARTMENT

Furnished room available; private entrance, private phone, $360/month, utilities included 253-3670

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPORTS

Need ice hockey goalie equipment. Willing to rent at any price. Tim 549-9174

TRAVEL

Sell spring break trips All the fun & all the protections American Express Worldwide Guaranteed best buy 1 Free trip for every 10 paid or Cash starting with first booking you sell – We collect payments World Class Vacations 1-800-222-4432

Early Spring Break Specials! Cancun & Jamaica From $429! Free Breakfast, Dinners & Drinks! Award Winning Company! Group Leaders Free! Florida Vacations from $149! springbreaktravel.com 1-800-678-6386

USA Spring Break Presents Spring Break 2003 Campus Reps Wanted Earn 2 free trips for 15 people Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Jamaica, Acapulco, South Padre and Florida Call Toll Free 1-877-460-6077 www.usspringbreak.com

Fraternities and Sororities; get 25% off Spring Break Packages. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or TheSpringBreakGuy.com call flip @ 800-227-1166

Earn money; let us pay you to go on Spring Break! Looking for highly Motivated campus rep. Earn $1000.00 and up! TheSpringBreakGuy.com or call Flip @ 800-227-1166

ABSOLUTELY the best Spring Break Packages! Cancun, Jamaica, South Padre and Panama City. Party with MTV. UMass only Local Spring Break Tour Operator. TheSpringBreakGirl.com or call 800-227-1166

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Mazatlan, Acapulco, Jamaica! FREE FOOD, FREE DRINKS, Lowest Price Guarantee! REPS WANTED! 1-800-293-1445 or e-mail sales@studentcity.com.

Wanted! Spring Breakers! Go on Spring Break 2003 for FREE!

Call 1-800-795-4786 or Email sales@mazatlanstyvacations.com to find out more info!

Spring Break with STS, America's #1 Student Tour Operator. Promote trips on-campus, earn cash and free trips. Info/Reservations 1-800-648-4849 www.ststravel.com.

#1 Spring Break Travel Free Caribbean, Mexico, Florida, Padre Free Drinks/Lowest Prices 1800-426-7710 www.sunsplashtours.com

Attention Spring Breakers Travel Free 2003 Get 2 Trips/Party w/MTV www.sunsplashtours.com 1-800-426-7710

Epicurean Tours Spring Break 1-800-231-4 Fun www.epicuRRean.com

Act Fast! Save $$$, Get Spring Break Discounts!... 1-888-THINK-SUN (1-888-844-6578 dept 2626) / / www.springbreakdiscounts.com

WANTED

Egg Donors Needed, non-smokers. Donors Ages 21-32. Generous compensation paid. For more information contact Robert Nichols, Esq. (781) 769-6900.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

- 2 ..... CBS/3
- 3 ..... NESN
- 4 ..... Fox Sport NE
- 5 ..... PBS/57
- 6 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
- 7 ..... WB/30
- 8 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
- 9 ..... TV Guide Channel
- 10 ..... FOX/61
- 11 ..... ABC/40
- 12 ..... NBC/22
- 13 ..... International Channel
- 14 ..... UMATV
- 15 ..... HSCN InfoChannel
- 16 ..... ESPN
- 17 ..... ESPN 2
- 18 ..... LIVE-19
- 19 ..... ESPN Classic
- 20 ..... Travel-to-Travel
- 21 ..... CNN
- 22 ..... CNN HL
- 23 ..... Weather Channel
- 24 ..... Learning Channel
- 25 ..... History Channel
- 26 ..... A & E
- 27 ..... Discovery Health
- 28 ..... Food Network
- 29 ..... NASA
- 30 ..... Home & Garden TV
- 31 ..... Travel Channel
- 32 ..... Lifetime
- 33 ..... CNBC
- 34 ..... Tech TV
- 35 ..... BET
- 36 ..... UPN 38
- 37 ..... USA
- 38 ..... TNN
- 39 ..... MTV
- 40 ..... CMT
- 41 ..... VH-1
- 42 ..... TNT
- 43 ..... TBS
- 44 ..... E! Entertainment
- 45 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
- 46 ..... Court TV
- 47 ..... Nick at Nite
- 48 ..... Comedy Central
- 49 ..... Cartoon Network
- 50 ..... Crime Show Network
- 51 ..... TV Land
- 52 ..... FOX Family
- 53 ..... Univision
- 54 ..... Telemundo
- 55 ..... College TV Network
- 56 ..... C-SPAN
- 57 ..... C-SPAN2
- 58 ..... Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. M-F

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Regular Rate: 25 cents/word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — c - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	29	30	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		America's Funniest Home Videos (In Stereo)	America's Most Wanted: Fugitive Hunt		In the Life
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)	Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)	Amazing Race 2 "Follow That Plane" (Season Finale) (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Raymond	Friends	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"	Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News			Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)	West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "Swan Song"	Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WWLP		10	News	NBC News	Friends	Extra (N)	Ed "Finale" (N)	West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Magic's Secrets	Bernie Mac (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	43	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed "Finale" (N)	West Wing (N) (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Oxymoron" (N)			News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)	National Geographic	Abalones: Cradle			Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	69	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)	Enterprise "Shadows of P'Jem"	News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!	★★ "Pride Down Below" (1987, Drama) (PA) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	45		The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Self Defense"		Biography "Frank Gifford"	American Justice: Green Beret	American Justice: Mercenary			Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	20	21	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
CGM	65	30	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Keeble	★★ "Pecker" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci			South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	62		White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island	Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	31		Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 7 — Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	67		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)	★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53		2001 MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight-Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)	U. Lo Movie	Making-Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	68		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family
SCIFI	66		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)	The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 4)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	69	28	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks	Junkyard Wars "Power Boats"	Extreme Survival "Pinecone"			Monster Trucks
TNT	63		NYPD Blue "Faith Petric"		Pretender "Fire" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal — Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA
USA	59		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Jet" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley			★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley
HBO	51		(6:45) ★½ "Hero in Earth" (2000) Chris Klein		★★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13					Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Talking Nicholas (In Stereo)
MAX	52		(6:45) ★★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)		Set Enough		★½ "Mr. Mom" (1983, Comedy) Michael Keaton			★½ "Swept Away" (2002, Romance) Madonna		Kashi Harvest PG-13
SHOW	60		★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy PG				★★½ "The Cell" (2000, Suspense) Catherine Deneuve PG			Soul Food (In Stereo)		Resurrection Blvd.

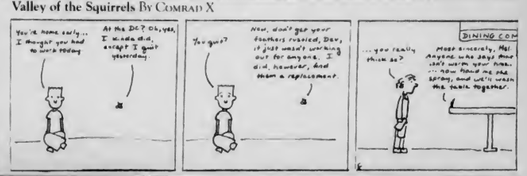
Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler

College Ruled By J.P. Fowler



Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Milanos & Espresso By Lester Edgar Helicopter

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Something inside makes me wish for my dream, where pain and hatred are obsolete, maybe one day I'll find a world like that, all my own, one that I can call my home"

-Spring Heeled Jack

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 53	HIGH: 69 LOW: 54

Horoscopes

Aries (March 21-April 19) - You're gonna piss a lot of people off.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - You're gonna meet a hot guy or girl and live happily ever after.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) - You're gonna get twice as lucky today.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) - You're a cancer, you're the light in people's eyes.

Leo (July 23-August 22) - Raaaaaawk !

Virgo (Aug 23-September 22) - Virgo is the Sylvan of Zodiac signs.

Libra (September 23-October 22) - Why don't you hop on your scale and lose some weight?

Scorpio (October 23-November 21) - Southwest is the land of blonde hair and little black pants.

Sagitarius (November 22-December 21) - Southwest is the New Jersey of UMass.

Capricorn (December 22-January19) - Sylvan maybe you should go to Southwest.

Aquarius (January 20-February18) - You are going to trade your '89 Chevorlet Beretta for a 30 rack of Schaeffer and a pack of butts.

Pisces (February 19-March 20) - Stop stealing other people's food and get your laundry out of the dryer.

Interested in working for the Collegian? Come to 133 Campus Center Basement.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Jerk Pork Strips with Vegetables Sandwich

Hungarian Noodle Bake (vegetarian)

Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Roast Turkey

General Tso's Shrimp

Thai Seitan (vegan)

THE HARP IRISH PUB

Thurs: DAZES rock n roll

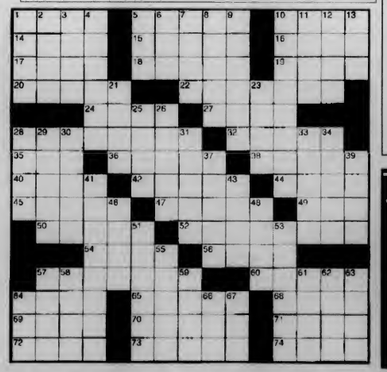
Sat: Valley Divas $5 cover special show

163 Sunderland Rd. Amherst, MA 549-6900

Start Your Own Tradition

ACROSS

1 Some tennis shots
5 Beeper
10 — Ado About Nothing
14 Give forth
15 Juliet's love
16 She, in Paris
17 Stern governess
18 Mops
19 Soon, in verse
20 Boxer's dukes
22 Gossip
24 Atoms with a charge
27 Place
28 Masked critters
32 Jewel weight
35 Can, harbor
36 Nature walk
38 Reward for bravery
41 Avoid
42 "Golden touch" king
44 Only
45 Actress Hunt
47 Fresh scent
49 Pitcher Darling
50 Type of trapshooting
52 Dregs
54 Globule
56 Throw a tantrum
57 Aviated
60 Nun's attire
64 Lion's pride
65 Districts
66 Kind of prize
69 Rainbow shapes
70 Ceiling
71 Dog in "Beetle Bailey"
72 Potpie ingredients
73 Playground gear
74 Common question



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

HALF SILOS TIPS
ALAI KNOLL ODIE
SOUR ALLEY YOKE
PEDESTAL FILED
WEEVIL APRON
TABOO MARIGOLD
IGLOO MORE CAR
LEAD CANOE KATE
INS DOZEN PILES
ALOE ONEY FLARE
PRISM POSE BUDS
EASTBAY UAIA
ERLE OSAKA SACK
LAIR PANE ALEE

10-23-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN

1 Page of a book
2 Science magazine
3 Flour holders
4 Radio noise
5 18th letters
6 Like valleys
7 Asian nanny
8 Resist authority
9 Tile design
10 Finds the width
11 Wrist-to-elbow bone
12 Sate
13 Poultry buy
21 Grime
23 Paper quantity
25 Average
26 Slow mover
28 Make it snappy
29 Embers, finally
30 Fill the seams
31 Margins
33 Love dearly
34 Hawk's gripper
37 Sillier, as an excuse
39 Advanced, as cash
41 Uncalled-for
43 Pepsi, e.g.
46 — Wolfe
48 Almost, in poems
51 Adds up
53 Pasture
55 Danger
57 Do a kitchen chore
58 Quechua speaker
59 Ms. Moore
61 Two at the same time
62 Least bit
63 Horse's gait
64 Atlas page
66 Help
67 Sault — Marie

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Andy Vogt

Photo Editor: Kristin Hall

Copy Editor: Andrew Merritt

Production Assistant: Shannon Farrington

Production Assistant: Lizzy Nielsen, Scott Pihl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Making the early NFL assessments

JIM PIGNATIELLO

Three weeks into the season is a little early to be jumping to conclusions. So, of course, I'm throwing together my early observations for the NFL season.

A GOOD system quarterback

The Super Bowl success of Trent Dilfer and Tom Brady has started a run of coaches looking for guys to run their offenses without mistakes. It isn't so much about making the big-time play, but playing within the system and refraining from blunders that hurt the team.

That's nice, although it hasn't really worked for Dilfer and the Seahawks so far this season.

The bigger mistake in judgment came in Washington. Head Coach Steve Spurrier expected his offensive scheme to create a ton of easy scoring chances. All the former Florida "Ball Coach" needed was a QB who could run his offense. Never mind accurate passing, the ability to read defenses or a strong arm; just know Spurrier's offense.

Spurrier signed Shane Matthews and Danny Wuerffel (two Florida alumni) to serve the role of signal caller for this year and drafted Tulane's Patrick Ramsey as the QB of the future.

Worked well so far, eh? Matthews and Wuerffel have played so poorly over the team's 1-2 start that Spurrier is likely to give Ramsey the start in week five (after a week four bye).

Washington's defense

Not to pick on the Redskins too much, but the defense has been an even bigger disappointment than the offense. Spurrier brought in former Raven assistant Marvin Lewis to serve as defensive coordinator. Lewis, who is considered a defensive savant, has the best linebacker crew in the NFL and one of the best duos at cornerback.

They've given up 80 points in three games. Nice.

The Bledsoe Redemption

I love the fact that Drew Bledsoe has found his old fire. He just didn't have anything left in New England. Now, in his first year as a Buffalo Bill, Bledsoe is back to being one of the top pure throwers in the NFL. Nice to see that he has taken on more of a leadership role in Buffalo as well. I'll be rooting for Drew this year, except during weeks nine and 14.

Da Rams and Da Steelers

The two "easy" picks to make the Super Bowl this year are a combined 0-3. The fact that both teams like to pretend that they won the championship last year makes that 0-fer even sweeter. Interesting that the World Champion New England Patriots taught the rest of the league how to stop the unstoppable Rams offense in last year's Super Bowl and then showed a way to beat up on the immovable Steeler defense on "Monday Night Football" in Week One.

In all honesty, Kurt Warner is

Turn to NFL, page 11

Building on the past trends

Field hockey out to earn first win

By Glen Straub
Collegian Staff

Back in 1981 the Massachusetts field hockey team, which had only come into existence five years earlier, achieved a milestone that started a tradition of winning seldom matched by any other athletic program at UMass.

That year, Head Coach Pam Hixon led the Minutewomen to the school's first appearance in the NCAA Tournament. A 17-1-2 overall record and a national runner-up spot permanently put UMass on the United States field hockey scene.

The sophomore goalkeeper on that team was a scrappy hard-nose player that went to work everyday with her hard hat on. Her name was Patty Shea. The very same Patty Shea who is now at the helm of the Maroon and White.

Like most young players, Shea relied on guidance and stability from her teammates that year to help her grow as a player and person. She is trying to incorporate what she learned then into the present as the 2002 squad, known to be young and inexperienced, has started the year a surprising 0-7 overall (0-0 Atlantic 10).

She is using what she learned from her mentor, The senior captain and All-American on the '81 squad, Sue Caples, watched over the young, up-and-coming goalkeeper on and off the field. According to Shea, Caples was an advisor to her in everyway.

"She [Caples] is my mentor," she said. "When I was an underclassmen she showed me the ropes and helped me battle the adversities."

Tonight under the lights of Richard F. Garber Field, Sue Caples will no longer look to help Shea battle the adversity as the squad she currently coaches, the Harvard Crimson, makes a trip to Amherst to duel with the Minutewomen.

"Right now we must worry about what have to do," Caples said. "In a sense, UMass is not on our minds."

Harvard is currently in a more pleasant situation compared to its regional rival. With just four games under their belts, they have a 3-1 overall record (2-0 Ivy League).

Like UMass, the Crimson are young and inexperienced, however according to Caples, they are "speedy and athletic." The athleticism has led them to impressive victories over the likes of Yale and Vermont.

As for the Minutewomen, preparing for the contest against Harvard has left Shea a little reminiscent of her playing days with her former teammate and current opponent, Caples.

"UMass athletics is built on the idea of a blue-collar effort, it always has. That is how we got that far in 1981 and how all our teams get to the points that have gotten to," Shea said. "We know our goals and it's all about taking the necessary steps."

"We got close last game to our first win," she added. "We just need to clean up the mistakes and

Turn to PAST, page 11

GERALD LINGA/COLLEGIAN
The Massachusetts defense has seen shots fly its way all season long as the Minutewomen have lost the penalty corners category in every game.

Black Bears claw way to No. 3

COURTESY: NORTHEASTERN MEDIA RELATIONS
Northeastern strong safety Kurt Abrams was named Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week after intercepting two passes, running one back 98 yards for a touchdown in the 42-17 win over Massachusetts.

A-10 lands four others in Div. I-AA's Top 25

By Matt Brady
Collegian Staff

It is often said that defense wins championships. And when a team's D-unit is nicknamed the "Black Hole" defense, it usually bodes well for the squad's success.

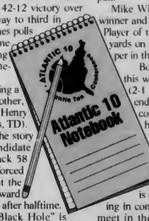
The University of Maine improved its record to 4-0 (2-0 Atlantic 10) on the season by way of a 42-12 victory over Howard last weekend to vault all the way to third in both the ESPN/USA Today and the coaches polls in Division I-AA. The Black Bears are one of three teams are 4-0 this season, along with top-ranked Montana and Bethune-Cookman.

Jake Eaton paced the offense by throwing a pair of touchdowns and running for another, and was aided by the tandem of James Henry (68 yards) and Marcus Williams (65 yards, TD).

But once again for the Black Bears, the story was the defense. Buchanan Award candidate Stephen Cooper ran an interception back 58 yards for a touchdown, and his mates forced two fumbles deep in Bison territory that the offense turned into 14 more points. Howard was limited to just 180 yards, and only 42 after halftime.

This season, led by Cooper, the "Black Hole" is allowing just over 10 points per game and about 227 yards per game, just over half what the offense has put up this season. Additionally, the Black Bears have been more than adequate on the offensive side of the ball, where they have averaged over 35 points.

Maine will host URI (1-2) this weekend. The Rams were trounced 63-17 by Div. I-A Syracuse at the Carrier Dome on Saturday. Rhody's offense was somewhat impressive in the loss, though, as it put up 332 yards in the first half against the Orangeman defense. Jason Ham had a pair of runs of 30-plus yards and Jayson Davis went seven-for-12 with no interceptions and scored on a four-yard run.



Meaningless polls

Who would have thunk it? Coming into this season, the A-10 polls showed that the coaches thought that Northeastern and James Madison would be the 10th- and 11th-best teams in the conference.

I guess those teams didn't read the polls.

Four weeks into the season, the Huskies have climbed to the No. 10 spot in the ESPN/USA Today poll and to 14th in the Sports Network poll following an impressive 42-17 win over UMass this weekend. JMU, who finished last season 2-9, has already topped its win total in 2001 following a 24-21 double-overtime victory over Hofstra, dropping the Pride to the No. 24 spot.

Northeastern's defensive front seven has arguably been the best in Division I-AA this year, with Don Brown's system being employed with staggering success. Add to that the play of A-10 Defensive Player of the Week Kurt Abrams, who snared two interceptions last week, including one that he returned 98 yards for a touchdown, and the squad from Brookline has become one of the scariest teams in the conference.

Add to that an offensive line that shoves defenses around, with averages of about six-foot-three, 300 pounds and the Huskies, who are off to their best start ever, have been the biggest surprise in the nation this season, and could easily be paving the way to Chattanooga later this season.

The Dukes (3-1) have been equally successful this year, with kicker Burke George providing the heroics with a game-winning 50-yard field goal in the double-overtime victory over the Pride this weekend. JMU moved up to No. 21 in The Sports Network poll and are 25th in the ESPN/USA Today poll.

Mike Wilkerson made a key interception to set up the winner and Rondell Bradley won his second A-10 Offensive Player of the Week award of the season as he totaled 177 yards on 32 carries, including a 75 yard touchdown scamper in the first quarter.

Both teams will have their work cut out for them this weekend as the Huskies host Hofstra, who at 2-2 (2-1 A-10) will no doubt be looking to use last weekend's emotional loss as a boost in the incredibly tight conference. The Dukes have a chance to show just how strong they really are as they run into No. 8 Villanova (3-1).

Battle at Williamsburg

In a conference as tight as the A-10 is shaping up to be, as little as three conference losses is often enough to put a team on the outside looking in come playoff time. So when a pair of powerhouses meet in the early going with matching 0-1 conference records, it is rare to find a game that is more hard-fought.

When Delaware storms Williamsburg this weekend, the Turn to A-10, page 9

COURTESY: MAINE MEDIA RELATIONS
Maine quarterback Jake Eaton passed for two touchdowns and ran for another in the Black Bears' win over Howard.

Welcome Students
to the 2002-2003 academic year!
Look what is planned for you this semester...
Oozefest
October 5
Homecoming
October 11-13
Family Day
November 2

Commonly Asked Questions about your Alumni Association

1. What is the UMass Alumni Association?

The Alumni Association is a dues-based non-profit organization. The Association sponsors many activities and programs throughout campus that focus on:

-enhancing the image of UMass
-providing avenues for alumni to become more involved in University activities.

2. What types of benefits/services does the Alumni Association offer?

As an Association member, you can expect to enjoy the online directory, the Alumni Connection - the official publication of the Association, discounts on movie tickets, car rentals, hotel rentals, and much more.

3. What has the Association done to give back to the UMass community?

Our extensive grant program allows the Association the ability to give back to many areas and programs throughout UMass. The Association has supported the following groups and their initiatives:

-The Visiting Writers Series through the MFA Program for poets and writers.
-The Short Story Journal through Short Cuts, a short story journal for the undergraduate literary community.
-New Balance Haigis Hoopla through Sport Management, a 3-on-3 basketball tournament.
-The Native American Student Association and the Native American Social, an event featuring traditional ways of life such as food, music, dance, and storytelling.

The Alumni Association keeps alumni connected and helps increase the value of the UMass education. To learn more about the Alumni Association, visit us on the web at umassalumni.com, or stop by Memorial Hall.

You were. You are. UMASS.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS

Calendar of Events

October

5th Oozefest 2002 - The second annual mud volleyball tournament
11th Homecoming Weekend - Come see your alumni friends, hear the band and cheer on your football team.

November

2nd Family Day - Here comes your family to see you!

December

12th Alumni Association sponsored Water and Candy Give Away -W.E.B. Du Bois Library Lobby 2-4 pm and 6-8 pm
13th Alumni Association sponsored Water and Candy Give Away - W.E.B. Du Bois Library Lobby 2-4 pm

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS

Alumni Association Grants Program

Your Alumni Association is dedicated to improving and enhancing student life and the image of the University of Massachusetts Amherst. The University of Massachusetts Amherst Alumni Association offers grants of up to $2,000 to campus groups or alumni based organizations.

The UMass Amherst Alumni Association provides services and programs that enlighten, strengthen and develop students, faculty, staff, Association members and alumni bodies at UMass Amherst.

The deadlines for applications for this academic calendar year are as follows:

	Date Due:	For Events after:
Funding Cycle 1:	September 23, 2002	October 11, 2002
Funding Cycle 2:	November 25, 2002	December 3, 2002
Funding Cycle 3:	February 24, 2003	March 14, 2003
Funding Cycle 4:	April 21, 2003	May 9, 2003 - October 10, 2003

Application guidelines and forms are available on the UMass Amherst Alumni Association website at umassalumni.com. Copies of these forms can also be obtained by calling the UMass Alumni Relations Office at (413) 545-2317 or stopping by the main office on campus in Memorial Hall.

Check this out...

@UMass* is a monthly, electronic newsletter containing campus news and events. @UMass is a free service and an official publication of the University of Massachusetts Amherst and the University of Massachusetts Amherst Alumni Association. To subscribe to @UMass, visit umassalumni.com and click on the @UMass logo to register your name and email address.

The "Leaders in the Making" scholarship program was created by the Alumni Association to support the academic and career pursuits of promising sophmore and junior students from diverse campus populations. Requirements for this scholarship includes providing a resume, academic transcript, and one letter of reference from a faculty or staff member, a copy of the student's bill and writing an essay. Applications may be picked up in the Alumni Relations Office in Memorial Hall from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday after October 8th.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS

OOZEFEST 2002

Don't be left out - be sure to get your team of 6-8 friends together today in this year's Oozefest 2002, a co-ed mud volleyball tournament brought to you by STARS (The Student Alumni Relations Society). Oozefest 2002 will be held behind Totman Gym this year and registration check-in will begin at 11 am.

Teams must be made up of a minimum of 6 players (maximum of 8). Teams must have a minimum of 2 females on the court at all times! Teams are guaranteed 2 games and all participants will receive a goodie bag with lots of cool stuff in it.

Look for STARS on the Campus Center Concourse or call the STARS Office (7-1490) for more information or for a registration form. The cost to play is $15 per person!

Hurry...there is a limited number of teams that can participate!

Don't be a stick in the mud - get out there and be an all-star! Oozefest 2002!

Family Day is Coming...

Mom and Dad are coming for Family Day on Saturday, November 2nd. Be sure to have your room clean and set your alarm as the day starts bright and early at 9 am. Start your day in the Fine Arts Center Lobby with a welcome by Chancellor Lombardi. You can then take your parents to a "class", have lunch with them under the big tent, take in a football game (versus University of Delaware) and find out about various programs offered to you on campus. Then get them to take you out to dinner to end this action packed day!

Be sure to register (or have mom and dad) for the days activities by either calling the Alumni Relations Office at 545-2317 or online at umassalumni.com.

8 am - 1 pm Family Day Information Center

9 - 10 am Chancellor's Welcome

10 am Live the Student Experience
Classroom lectures given by distinguished faculty from various departments
- Dick Minear: History
- Charles Schewe: Marketing
- Ed Klekowski: Biology
- David McLaughlin: Engineering

11 am Campus Tour
Commonwealth College Information Session
Isenberg School of Management Open House
College of Engineering Tour
Mullins Center Tour

11 am - 1 pm Family Day Barbecue
Shuttle buses will be available from Hadley Mall. Be sure to register for this event as it has sold out in the past.

12 noon UMass Minutemen vs. University of Delaware Blue Hens
For tickets, call the UMass Athletic Ticket Office at 545-0810.

3 - 4 pm Extra Curricular Activities - Round 1
National Scholarship Opportunities
Campus Life Forum

4 - 5 pm Extra Curricular Activities - Round 2
Learn How to Create New Businesses and Find Jobs in Innovative Companies
How to Study Abroad

UMass at the Big E:

Mark your calendar! September 13 - 29th marks this year's annual BIG E at the Eastern States Exposition in West Springfield and UMass will be there! The President's office has secured a booth in the Massachusetts Building and each UMass campus will take turns hosting the exhibit. UMass Amherst will be there six days -- September 16-18 & 20-22. Make sure to stop by and show your support for UMass! In addition, UMass Amherst has organized a series of special events, exhibits, and performances on the Massachusetts Building Lawn for the duration of the Big E.

Homecoming Weekend 2002 - October 11-13, 2002

For more information regarding Homecoming 2002, call the Alumni Association at 545-2317 or visit the official Homecoming Weekend website at umassalumni.com.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 11

1-5 pm
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House
Young Artists' Images from Israel

2-2:30 pm
Engineering Research Showcase and Laboratory Tour
Gunness Student Center, Marcus Hall

3 pm
Harold Alfond Management Center Dedication Ceremony, Isenberg School of Management. Help us celebrate the completion of a facility as remarkable as our students, and the alumni and friends who have made it possible. Please join us for refreshments, student tours and presentations on what the wing means for business education at the Isenberg School of Management.
To RSVP or for questions, call Ericka Prew at 545-5603.

3 pm
Women's Soccer - UMass vs. La Salle

7 pm
Field Hockey - UMass vs. Richmond

8 pm
Multibands Concert, Fine Arts Center
For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at (800) 999-UMAS (8627).

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 12

9:30 am - Noon
ROTC Open House, Building "9 (next to Bowden Gym)
For more information, call Major Sharon Buccarelli at 545-2321.

10 am
Harold Alfond Management Center Open House, Isenberg School of Management
For more information, call Ericka Prew at 545-5603.

10 - 11 am
Communications Department Open House, 120 South College (TV Studio)
An open house for all Communication alumni and friends of the program, including a dedication of the TV Studio in memory of Ed O'Neill. For more information, call Department Chair Michael Morgan 545-1311.

10:30 am - 12:45 pm
Homecoming Park, Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Co-sponsored by UMass Athletics and the Alumni Association. Alumni, students, families and friends are invited to enjoy special activities at Homecoming Park.

1 pm
UMass vs. Maine Football Game, Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium
Sponsored by the UMass Alumni Association. Cheer on our Minutemen under the leadership of Coach Mark Whipple as they take on the Black Bears. For tickets, call the Athletic Ticket Office at 545-0810.

2 - 5 pm
University Gallery, Fine Arts Center
"Private Eyes: Image and Identity"
A group exhibition featuring the work of photographers John Coplans and Barbara Ess, among others who consider experiential and conceptual aspects of self.

"Liz Rideal: Works 1992-2002"
English artist who lives and works in London, has made the photo-booth her primary tool for the past 15 years.

8 pm
Master Dancers of Bali, Bowker Auditorium
For more information call Asian Dance and Music Program 577-2486. For tickets, call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at (800) 999-UMAS(8627).

GET Spirited ... ARTS PAGE 5. WHAT'S IMPORTANT ED/OP PAGE 4. CAROLINA CHALLENGE SPORTS PAGE 16.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE SEVENTEEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 9.26.02

Is 'ZooMass' coming back?

Large-scale festivities attract attention to area

By Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Are large, out-of-control parties bringing back a school nickname some hoped would be lost?

Two years ago, on Sept. 21, then Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos announced to the faculty senate that the University of Massachusetts had been taken off the Princeton Review's ranking of top party schools.

The review and college preparatory service ranks schools in a variety of categories including several quality of life concerns. UMass still holds the number 17 rank in the "reefer-madness" category.

In its January 1987 issue, Playboy Magazine took the opportunity to place UMass among the ranks of party-oriented institutions. The magazine placed the higher-ed institution at No. 35 on its top 50 list, a one-time feature ranking the top party schools in the nation. The poll rated schools based on alcohol-related parties.

Tim Maki, a supervisor at Liquors 44 in Hadley, MA, said that he sells kegs as part of his business, but couldn't say whether or not college students are the primary purchasers. "They're sold regularly but I don't see an increase compared to other years."

Maki makes sure that his employees follow strict government regulations. Liquors 44 uses card scanners and also use a photoscope to take pictures of IDs. Regulations are enforced, he added, because of the close proximity to the five-college area.

However, two years after losing its standing as a top party school, recent events are drawing attention back to the party atmosphere of the Amherst campus and surrounding area. This weekend, a party at the Townehouse apartments in Amherst was broken up by officers from the Amherst police department, who arrived in riot gear.

According to a police announcement, 700 to 1,000 individuals were gathered in the "quad" – an area between four of the buildings at the Meadow St. apartment complex. The police were called to the condominiums after receiving complaints of "a large and unruly party."

It took officers 90 minutes to clear the area of partiers. Officers, dressed in riot control gear, faced cans and bottles as they tried to disperse the crowd. A beer bottle was thrown through the rear windshield of one of the department's cruisers.

Stephen M. Gill, a 19-year-old university sophomore, was arrested and is being charged with being a disorderly person. Gill, a Newton, MA native, declined to comment on the charges.

Amherst Police said there were a number of beer bottles thrown through windows and several intoxicated individuals at the party. Alcohol and parties have long been linked.

"It was absolute just masses of people crammed into what I thought was a larger space," said Jess Enos. Enos went to the party Saturday with her roommate Caitlin Crosby. Both Enos and Crosby left the quad shortly after arriving.

"It didn't have a very positive or safe vibe," Enos said. The two sophomores drove to the party. When they reached Meadow Lane, they said that "people were tumbling out into the road and bumping into the car."

The size of the party was unusual, said Crosby. The girls have gone to parties at the Townehouse apartments before, they said, but nothing as large as Saturday's gathering.

"I'm someone who likes loud parties and that's what I normally do over the weekends," said Josh Gigliotti, a UMass senior. Gigliotti left the quad after 20 minutes, unhappy with the atmosphere. "There was a huge amount of people in a small space...There were a couple brawls that were breaking out," he said.

He compared the vandalism and atmosphere of the Townehouse party to the destructive scene he has seen in the residence halls. "It was the same sort of attitude that people have in my dorm over the weekends when people rip shower curtains off."

Gigliotti said that advertising large-scale parties leads to the large number of people seen at the weekend party. A management official who answered the phone at the Townehouse office estimated that it would take more than double the number of residents in the complex to fill the quad area. The official declined to comment further, saying that she was trying to keep a very middle-of-the-road view of the situation.

At last semester's post-Super Bowl celebration, local law enforcement trained in crowd control tactics were called in to disperse a crowd of 6,000 screaming fans. Local police forces used similar tactics to disperse a crowd of partiers at the Townehouse Apartments this past weekend.

Some disagree, saying that the atmosphere of Saturday's gathering is typical and not a cause for concern.

"Personally I thought it was a great time," said Ian Gendler. Gendler lives in the nearby Puffton Village apartments. After moving off-campus, he said that he started to hear about parties in the apartments more often. However, he does not consider them a problem, and most stay more intimate.

"Usually it doesn't get to that capacity...this was somewhat organized," said Gendler. At Puffton, he added, strict policies keep residents from hosting large-scale parties. "I had a gathering at my house a few weeks ago and everything stays pretty controlled."

Living at Puffton, Gendler said that he has seen police on patrol and knows that the management is very careful about keeping things under control. "They do notify you and they do give you warnings," he said. This may be one reason parties do get out of control, he said. "I think maybe there are more restrictions now, and people try to go against authority."

Another problem, Gendler speculated, is that when parties involve a large number, a negative stigma is cast on the students who are there. The perception that Saturday night's gathering was large and unruly is inaccurate, he added. "At no point when I was there was it out of control," Gendler said. "It's a big area, but it wasn't really crowded...there was plenty of space."

Lieutenant Robert Thrasher of the University of Massachusetts Police Department deals with large parties and gatherings on a regular basis. Thrasher heads the department's crowd control team. He said the UMPD encounters large parties and "celebratory gatherings." A crowd the size of Saturday night's is part of being in a college area.

"We work in a collegiate atmosphere, you're always going to have large crowds," he said. UMPD compares crowds with hurricanes; the outer "blues and greens" are not the concern. Instead, officers try to focus on the "oranges," the students at the center of the crowd.

This core group of individuals is usually ruining everybody's night. "They [most people] want to go have a good time and part of that good time is not watching some jackass making a fool of himself or others," he said.

Events such as Saturday's party bring negative press coverage to campus, Thrasher said. Most large-scale events, such as concerts, rallies and celebratory gatherings come and go without any incidents, but officers train for such occurrences, said Thrasher.

"I wasn't up at Amherst the other night and I don't know really what happened but I think you have to expect a certain amount of this type of problem in a college atmosphere."

SGA elections commence

Dropping in

Senior Political Science major Jonathan Laubinger casts his vote at yesterday's SGA elections. Polls were located at all dining commons and the Campus Center concourse. Elections continue today. Look for full coverage of the student government elections in tomorrow's Collegian.

Contract lunch break:

Unions rally again for more funding

Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

In a show of solidarity, University of Massachusetts union workers took part in a statewide lunch break yesterday.

"We're going to keep on walking forward, never turning back," sang the "union choir" at the start of the work action. Wednesday's lunch break rally was the third work action taken by union employees in Amherst.

This rally, and previous work stoppages, was designed to rally support for contract funding. In a round of vetoes last spring, acting governor Jane Swift removed money from the state budget allocated for union wage increases.

Wednesday's rally featured members of several on campus unions. Randy Boivin, treasurer of the local AFSCME union – the food services union – spoke out as a representative of the campus "blue collar" workers.

"It's time to rattle windows and shake down the walls," he said.

AFSCME also represents on-campus employees involved in rubbish disposal, power and heat distribution and dining hall service.

"What if these services were to stop," asked Boivin. He closed his remarks by asking for student and employee continue to support the workers as they struggle for pay increases "when it gets beyond talking and it gets to action."

Ron Story, a UMass history professor, introduced legislators who support funding the increases. "Our goal over the next three weeks is to cut the list of 14 no's in half," he said after reading a list of legislators who did not respond to the union's request for support.

Legislators are not in session during campaign time. Those who are rallying to support the contracting funding are also supporting a plan to return to formal session before January, when the representatives and senators return to Beacon Hill.

"We're going to stand with you. We're going to keep working with you," said Senator Stan Rosenberg. The senator has supported union workers throughout the struggle to regain funding "one way or another."

"I feel terrible that you have to be here today," said state representative Ellen Story. Story said that she has been talking to fellow legislators who stand in support of the contract funding.

Legislative hopeful John Scibak said that he hopes he will not have to vote to override Swift's veto. "You should not have to wait till January," he said.

James Shaw, president of local United Auto Workers 2322, took the microphone and rallied the crowd with chants against UMass president William Bulger and somewhat threatening chants alluding to a potential strike.

"President Bulger – it's a fact, you signed your name on the union pact," went one such chant.

Another reminded legislators and university officials to "keep your word – a deal's a deal."

Several hundred employees then took up their signs and bullhorns and marched around the Whitmore administration building. While they did not enter the hallways of the building, union employees were hoping to penetrate the concrete walls with their rallying cries.

During the lap around the building, several workers inside Whitmore were seen waving and shaking their hands in support of the marching employees.

Shaw thanked the employees who took their lunch break rallying for contract funding. He asked that all the employees keep their signs as they struggle for contract funding. "We look for more support as this gets heavier," said Boivin.

Blair announces scholarship

Lauren Albanese
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The Office of National Scholarship Advisement held an informational meeting yesterday in regard to the Truman Scholarship.

The Truman Scholarship, named after former president Harry S. Truman, is funded though the Truman Foundation, a government foundation interested in increasing the awareness of college aged students in areas such as public and community service.

The foundation's mission is to find and recognize college juniors with exceptional leadership potential and who are committed to careers in government. More specifically, they are looking for students pursuing careers in the non-profit or advocacy sectors, education or elsewhere in the public service realm and to provide them with financial support for graduate study, leadership training, and fellowship with other students who are committed to making a difference through public service. The scholarship provides $30,000 to be used towards one year of education plus two years of graduate study at any U.S. college or university.

Louis Blair, Executive Secretary of the Truman Foundation, led the informational meeting in hopes of encouraging and guiding prospective candidates though the application process. Prerequisites for the scholarship are demanding from all angles.

Students are required to hold a grade point average of 3.75 or higher and participate in community service. In addition, they must have held previous leadership positions and must answer questions concerning the applicant's specific concerns about social issues and their ideas for possible solutions. The Foundation hopes to give young adults guidance in making decisions about future careers and portraying themselves in a professional manner.

Blair expressed what the foundation is really looking for in candidates with, "passion, piss and vinegar."

A total of 80 scholarships are given out nationally per year, distributed in a system of about one per state plus other U.S. territories. Applications can only be submitted to the Foundation through the nomination of their current college institution. There are approximately 600 applications submitted each year.

All applications must be submitted to the Foundation by January 27, 2003, although applicants must submit their application to the Truman Scholarship Board here at University of Massachusetts by Thanksgiving time.

Anyone interested in applying for this scholarship can go to www.truman.gov or by contacting Professor Susan Whitbourne at 304 Goodell for more information and application material.

Louis Blair speaks in the Campus Center about the Truman scholarship program. This competitive program is designed to assist junior year students interested in public service.

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

Spoke-en art

An intricate positioning of locked bikes on campus.

WRITE FOR NEWS
113
CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Loo Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.J. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Foulis Distribution Manager
Mia Ferolito Human Resource Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Coffmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Dear ALANA Community members and Allies,

"ALANA ia an acronym for African, Latino(a), Asian, and Native American"

Our organizations have decided to sponsor a community meeting in light of the plight of issues that have troubled our campus regarding services to the ALANA and Low Income students at the University during the last 15 years. (Ex. The Elimination of Upward Bound, The 1992 ALANA Agreement, The Goodell Incident, The Academic Support Programs Current problems, The Termination/Firing of Ric M Townes, etc.)

We would like to invite you to join us an ALANA ALUMNI TEACH IN that we are hosting to EDUCATE the campus community regarding; "The history of people of color at the UMass and their current struggles". The TEACH IN will be this coming Saturday, September 28 at 6pm in the Campus Center Auditorium.

UMass Alumni
State Rep. Benjamin Swan
12th Hampen District will be a key note speaker.

Sponsored by
Black Student Union
Black Mass Communication Project
Office of ALANA Affairs

We hope you can join us!

Prof. Stern lectures on Jewish cinema

By Caitlin M. Ott
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

One hundred years ago, Vienna was a land bustling with the energy of the innovative idea of cinematic art. Yesterday, visiting Professor Frank Stern of Ben Gurion University, Israel, introduced this and other concepts to a small audience of University of Massachusetts students, as well as several local residents. Professor Stern also spoke on Monday, making introductory remarks to the film Marriage in the Shadows.

Born in Austria, Professor Stern went on to study at the Free University in Berlin. Intrigued by the German Jewish story, he has devoted much of his life to the study of their culture and history, as well as to educating others as to its historic and cultural importance. He is currently working on a project having to do with " Images of Jewish people in German film and the Cultural History of the German/Jewish experience."

Professor Stern began the lecture with a brief history of film making in Vienna. In early 1900's Germany, the necessary materials, ideas, and technology used to construct a cinematic work of art fell into place. One such location that held all these necessary elements was Vienna. In describing this time period, Professor Stern spoke in an aesthetical sense saying, " God had died, and the angles of psychoanalysis were taking over." Attracting artists, intellectuals, students, and many others, people flocked from all over to take part in this exciting new art form.

It was during this time that as Professor Stern commented, the "Abstract image of what was Jewish began to appear in Cinema." The historical connotations of such a public viewing of Jewish culture lie in the fact that it was with these films, that this culture was able to show the rest of Germany, and the world, what it really was to be Jewish. With "3,000 theaters", as Professor stern commented, and upwards of two hundred films being produced each year, the majority of the German public most likely was exposed to at least one of these films.

Speaking about the history of the "Art of film", Professor Stern steered the lecture toward the discussion of the several decades of "film making in Vienna being fundamentally democratic." It was during this period, as Professor Stern commented, that the art and business of filmmaking became considered the "new expression of modernism." The theme of telling the Jewish Biblical story began to appear around this time period. The freedom to express the Jewish culture and history had finally been reached. It was not until the mid-twenties that this atmosphere of democracy gave way to that of the fascist laws of the Nazi regime.

Professor Stern is no longer lecturing at UMASS, but for those interested in finding out more about the German Jewish story, the film series " Shadows and Sojourners" will continue to show movies addressing this topic through out the semester. For more information go to filmtour@german.umass.edu.

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

History professor and president of the professors' union, Ron Story speaks at yesterday's coffee break rally outside Whitmore. Story and local legislators joined UMass employees to rally for an override of a Jane Swift veto that removed budgeted money for pay increases.

Helpful hints for a debt-free lifestyle

By Stephanie Hughes
SIDELINES (MIDDLE TENNESSEE STATE U.)

(U-WIRE) MURFREESBORO, Tenn. – The initiation into financial debt usually begins with the start of university life. Having to pay bills can be a shock to some students. After tuition, rent, food and utilities are taken care of, there's not a lot left over for little luxuries. Making the money stretch can be even more of a struggle.

Let's face it: When it comes to managing money, some of us need a course or two.

SunTrust sales representative Sophie Llorens advises students to do several things to manage their money:

Tip 1: Set up a savings and checking account. Even though most students are using their money for school, it's important to have a little nest egg for the future.

"Opening a savings account is a good idea for students who need to pay back student loans, want to get married or want to buy a house when they graduate," Llorens says.

Most banks require a minimum of $100 to open a savings account and limit the number of times a month a customer may make withdrawals.

"We try and help the customer save by restricting withdraws," she says.

It might seem hard to think about saving money when you have bills to pay, but stashing away a little will help later.

"I recommend putting back at least $10 a week," she says. "It all adds up by the end of the year."

Along with a savings account, students should set up a checking account as well.

"We have an economy checking plan where students can write up to five checks a month, track information about their account and pay bills online for free," she says. "I also recommend applying for a check card. It's a lot more convenient than writing checks."

Bank of Murfreesboro manager Cheryl Price believes that it's important for students to learn how to manage their money, especially if they are away from home.

"If students bring in their first month's statement, we will go over it with them, show them how to balance their checkbook and show them what to look for," Price says.

Tip 2: Use credit cards wisely. It can be a little too easy to pull out the plastic when making purchases. However, you can build credit and be responsible at the same time.

"Credit history is very important when it comes to buying a house, a car [or] any large purchases," Llorens says. "I suggest having one major credit card like a MasterCard, Visa or Discover and one other card."

Because of the high interest rates, it's a good idea to pay off the bill right away to avoid further debt.

Tip 3: Be practical. Always look for ways to save money. You don't have to buy the most expensive sweater or have the nicest television. Shop around and find the best bargains. Try to buy things when they're on sale or clearance. End of the season sales are always the best for finding good deals.

But most students open their wallets for rent and food. To save on rent, consider more roommates if you are in an apartment or house or are not married; the rent can be split between everyone. Also, don't rent the most expensive place in the city. There are some nice, affordable apartments that are waiting to be found.

Limit the amount of times you eat at restaurants. Restaurants probably get more business from college students than any other group of people. By the time you tip the server, you could've bought two meals for the price of one.

Tip 4: Date on a budget. If you occasionally date, are dating someone or are married, there are things you can do to have a great time without going broke.

Rent a movie or go to the $2 Keathley University Center Theater instead of going to the movies frequently. Cook a romantic dinner every once in a while instead of going out to eat. Buy a book with good date ideas and try something new.

There are hundreds of ways to manage your money well and to become a savvy saver.

Northeastern University Presents...
RATDOG
With
G.Love and Special Sauce
September 28th, 2002
Doors open at 6pm

NU Students $10,
Other Students $20-
must show college ID

Purchase tickets at Blackman ticket Office, 109 Ell Hall, Sept. 23-27 in person (12-4pm)

Call the Council for University Programs at 617-373-4336 for details and phone sales.

Day of Show tickets sold at Matthews Arena starting at noon

No Backpacks, Cameras or Taping Devices will be allowed in the Arena!!!!

Matthews Arena-
Northeastern University

CUP
COUNCIL FOR UNIVERSITY PROGRAMS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Politics of war:

This is no time to sway votes

With bigger fish to fry, politicians are once again turning their attention to more familiar, self-serving territories:

Themselves.

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle publicly attacked Dick Cheney at a press conference yesterday, accusing the Vice-President of politicizing the Iraq debate by using it to drum up support for a GOP congressional candidate.

Cheney was in Kansas campaigning for Republican Adam Taff, announcing to his supporters "[the] entire world knows beyond dispute that Saddam Hussein holds weapons of mass destruction in large quantities...For all of the challenges we face, the United States of America has never been stronger than we are today. And even better days are ahead of us.

"President Bush and I are grateful for the opportunity to serve our country. We thank you for your support – not just for our efforts, but for good candidates like Adam Taff who will be a fine partner for us in the important work ahead."

A fine candidate in Washington's eyes, because he supports the war effort. A fine candidate because, if he receives some help from the Vice President, he'll certainly be willing to further promote that effort. A well-rounded candidate, though? It's tough to say when the focus is so singular and partisan.

A fair amount of criticism certainly does seem to be in order here. The consensus from the Democratic Party is that the Republicans are allocating far too much time deciding how to use our relations with Iraq as a campaign device, rather then spending the time and energy more appropriately – for example, arriving at methods that may actually make progress towards a resolution. As Senator Dick Durbin (D-Illinois) stated, "...it goes to the question of what the goal is here. Is it regime change in Iraq or regime change in the Senate?"

Put simply, all actions do indicate that it is a movement by the White House to shape things in their favor, acting with only its best interests in mind rather than constructing a suitable reaction to the Iraq regime, the cause of considerable concern among citizens not only of the United States, but worldwide.

In the same vein, and in the name of fairness, couldn't we say the same about the Democrats? Responding to Republican movements, however inappropriate one might view them to be, only lessens the time spent on Iraq, and weakens any decision and movement that may ultimately result.

The amateur sparring matches taking place on a national stage are embarrassing and a distraction from more pressing matters (read: International security). If politicians are interested in impressing us as citizens and potential voters, they should abandon the stumping in favor of thoughtful decision making. Now is not the time for careless grandstanding.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

Information from www.cnn.com was used in this story.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

It never fades away

JAMIE LOO

I've tossed out three drafts of my opinion for this week and am finally left with this. I cannot think straight at the moment to write something truly inspiring or thought provoking. I sincerely apologize ahead of time for what you're about to read in place of my normal, decent columns.

At the age of 21, I have a crush. A huge crush. I didn't think it was possible to have "crushes" after high school but apparently not much changes in the game of love and loss. It's the worst kind of crush too. It's one of those crushes where you hate the person when you first meet them and then slowly you begin to respect and like them as another human being. And then one day it hits you that you like that person a lot. A whole lot, and from there the floodgates open. That person that you once hated begins to drive you crazy.

I feel like I'm re-living junior high school. I gaze at him, even if it's the back of his head from across the room. None of my girlfriends actually say "his" name. We've developed this code by referring to him as "that guy," or "him." Sadly, they've also joined in by looking for him around campus and giggling when they see him. I bet if he had a locker, we would also be dropping cute notes into it, with lots of hearts and smiley faces, just to confuse him. Well, maybe not the hearts. This whole situation is sad really.

But actually, it's not that sad when I consider it all. There's actually something really special about having a crush on one person that you forget over the college years of going on dates with people you're only slightly interested in or being in a long term relationship. It's reliving that huge infatuation that at the age of 15 you think is falling in love with someone. It's special because it's the wide-eyed innocence of just wanting to be in the presence of that one person and nothing else. It's making him laugh at something you said, or watching him smile even if it's not for you.

There's the smell of his cologne or soap as he walks by and the way he dresses. And then there's hearing his voice for whatever reason, even if it's, "Hey your backpack is open and the swans are carrying away your homework." I think the most amusing part of this is instant messenger, which I didn't have in junior high. I check his away messages to see if he's changed them over the past hour and where he is now. There's also the wait to see if he instant messages me when I take my away message off or the nonchalant way I stay online to wait for him to sign on, to see if he instant messages me.

Then there's the downside, which is the waiting game. It's waiting to see him hanging around the usual haunt, where he may or may not show up. Waiting for his instant message or phone call. Waiting in general for the moment he'll get a clue and ask you to a movie or something. Or waiting until he finds out through someone else, who comes back and tells you he hates your guts or has a girlfriend. Or worse, he find outs, tells you that he knows, and then explains why it will never work. Both of these options will make you feel like a complete dork and you will never sit next to him in class again. You will then black his screen name or create a new one so you can hide from him, embarrassed by your blind foolishness. In some cases it means getting a new job or moving out of your dorm. I'm not that extreme, but I know it happens.

"I feel like I'm re-living junior high school."

There are always exceptions to the rule, since we're not in junior high anymore. One of my close guy friends said that if he ever found out a young lady had a crush on him he would automatically ask her out. "Any girl who's taken the time to notice and get to know me deserves a chance. It's the best feeling in the world to know someone likes you," he said. Wow, that's a hopeful thought.

This whole thing seems slightly ridiculous. I should just gather up my guts and make the first move. Normally, I encourage my readers to take reasonable risks in life but today isn't one of those days. I'm a big chicken when it comes to guys. Always have been and always will be. He'll never find out, unless he figures it out for himself. None of my friends actually know him so chances of him finding out through someone else are slim. Unless I make a huge obvious mistake, (which this column doesn't seem to be, since there is no physical description or name) he'll never know. It's probably better that he doesn't know, because I consider him a friend. The last thing I want to do is jeopardize a good friendship just because of attraction. I think everyone has been in that situation at least once in his/her life. I graduated high school with all affairs of the heart settled, and I intend to do the same before I leave Amherst. I'll tell him some day on my own terms.

In the mean time, my fear will overcome rationality and I'm fairly content to spend the rest of the year gazing at him from across crowded rooms and classrooms. Stare at him, wonder and wait. It will be like junior high all over again, except that his name isn't secretly hidden in this column by a cryptic code only my friends and I understand.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

THE DRUMS OF WAR

3 Ft. Worth Star-Telegram. Distributed by NEA. Inc.

Please send yours letter to the editor to 113 Campus Center Basement or to collegianeditorial @yahoo.com

Remembering what's important in our lives

PETER TROVATO

Last Sunday, slightly after midnight, there was a knock on my door. This wasn't a typical thumping of a dorm room door, where a half-mute begs to use your printer or steal a drink. This rap was different. It was a single, subtle blow, as if the person knocking didn't want to be in the doorway. I almost passed it off as someone walking by and tapping the door by mistake, but curiosity got the best of me and I answered the suspicious noise.

Two of my friends, who are also my teammates, were standing in front of me. One had a puzzled look of confusion and the other with tears dropping off the side of his face. The latter had just received a call that his mother passed away suddenly and unexpectedly a few minutes before the ominous thud at my door. Only a first semester, eighteen year old student who is probably trying to piece his new college life together on his own and now a brick wall thrown in his path. And I am staring at him wondering what I can possibly do to help.

My legs felt like they had been filled with sand and my feet had been placed in thick mud. My tongue was tied up in so many knots I wouldn't know where to begin to unravel. Thousands upon thousands of dollars in private school education, a year of prep school, and two semesters of college and I can't find the right words to say to a friend who was just fed a big dose of tragedy; completely worthless to a fellow teammate.

A hug, which will be one of hundreds by the week's end, is the only thing I can think to do. It's the only thing anyone can think to do, as more and more friends and teammates come pouring into the hall to say that they were sorry to hear about his loss.

I felt terribly powerless. Images flew through my head of my own family. I remember driving up to school with my mother to begin my freshman year and her helping move everything into my room. I was embarrassed as she helped me unpack my suitcase and bunked my beds while younger female students did it on their own. And I was sad when I was completely moved in and she had to drive home. I forgot these images, simply stored them away, until this moment where I struggled to watch a new friend have his world turned upside down. All these thoughts filled my head, when just moments ago it was totally empty as I tried to search for some words of comfort for my buddy.

I was humbled; I don't think I will ever be able to affectively comfort someone who has just lost an immediate family member. I wish I had some words of advice or a direction to steer him in, but I didn't. I could only conjure up a brief, "I'm sorry". I'm sorry for his loss, but even more sorry that I can't help take away the hurt that he is experiencing. If there was a class given on this subject, I'd surely be the first to pre-register, but I don't think the University is offering that next semester or even the semester after that.

It is inevitable that we have to deal with loss but we are never ready. Death always catches us off-guard and when it finally sinks in we are left wondering what could have been done – what didn't I say? On the other hand, trying to comfort someone coping with a loss proved to be a monumental task for myself. I wish I had been more prepared for this type of situation. I wish there was a set way to act and make sure I abide by all the guidelines. But there isn't.

"It is inevitable that we have to deal with loss but we are never ready."

Instead I am left with the sight of a friend who is befuddled about the events that just took place in his life. The emptiness and concern in his eyes speak in terms that cannot be described with words. The look of the uncertainty that I received from my friend has made me realize that there are numerous aspects of our day that are ridiculously trivial.

What am I doing watching television for two hours a night? My computer has turned into a $2500 "Instant Messenger Box" with occasional capabilities of word processing. Whether it is checking my email, getting to class on time, or writing papers – I now realize that I am forgetting something. I must start taking the time out to acknowledge my family. I think we all could do this a bit more.

Lets take a break from Playstation 2, playing our 350 downloaded MP3's, and the Red Sox game; rather than worrying about the tough decision to go uptown on Thursday, go to a frat house on Friday, or search for a party in Hobart on Saturday, it's probably not a bad idea to start making time for more important issues. It is of great significance to start giving some instances of our precious existence to our families. This is more significant than our GPA's, an achievement in extracurricular activities, and yes, much more important than the New England Patriots.

These insignificant issues tend to take up a great amount of our time. We can't let these petty aspects of reality keep us from more important things. I couldn't satisfy myself when I tried to comfort my friend when he lost his mother. My words were useless and I could see that. And a few days later, I certainly have no greater knowledge on the subject. But I will never forget that knock on my door and the spacey look in my buddy's eyes. It has affected me in numerous ways, but significantly in how I make time for my family.

We all need to make some extra time; as a matter of fact, I'm dialing right now.

Peter Trovato is a Collegian Columnist.

arts editor:
Jennifer Eastwood

arts and living

9.26.02 FALL PREVIEW

✓music

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

As the temperatures begin to dip, music sales begin to heat up. Late September through mid-November are the optimal weeks for major releases—and this year is no exception. A slew of high profile stars are set to release records this season to maximize sales during the holidays.

OCTOBER

American Idol. American Idol: Greatest Moments – After a huge summer ratings success, it was only a matter of time before we got a greatest hits album from those pop star-wannabes. Producer Steve Lipson assembled the series' 10 finalists and recorded studio versions of 14 tracks they performed on the show. The album will have to tide you over until "American Idol" winner Kelly Clarkson finishes her album. Her full-length debut isn't due until early 2003. (10/1)

LL Cool J. 10 – Rapper LL Cool J has plenty to celebrate on his latest album. This is the rapper's tenth studio album (hence the title), and his film career continues on a successful path (Mindhunters with Val Kilmer and Christian Slater is due in 2003). On 10, LL Cool J commemorates this accomplishment with a slimmed down disc that will contain few collaborations. (10/15)

Faith Hill. Cry – On her last album, pop-crossover singer Faith Hill advised us to Breathe. Now on her follow-up, it looks like she's asking us to Cry. Hill relied on many of the same producers and songwriters used on the 1999 hit record. The album will contain the flavor of music out of the church (gospel, R&B, soul), her first influence and a surprising songwriting contribution by non-Nashvillian Pink. (10/15)

Santana. Shaman – After releasing

Turn to MUSIC, page 7

✓movies

By Lizzy Nielsen and Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Men in Black II is leaving theatres. Austin Powers in Goldmember isn't all over your television anymore. It's fall. It's a season of changing leaves – and movies. Out go the blockbusters, (fear not, they'll be back around the holidays!) and in come the horror flicks for Halloween and the expected Thanksgiving Disney fiestas. Here's a preview of what is to come this fall – what you might like and what you might not – all included in a convenient top ten-list:

Number 10: Sweet Home Alabama
In theatres this Friday, Sept. 27, Sweet Home Alabama stars Reese Witherspoon as a Manhattan designer who falls in love with the mayor of New York's oldest son. Little does anyone know that Witherspoon's character has an existing marriage back in her home state of Alabama. According to rumors, the proposal scene is one of the best in cinema history. Look for Candace Bergen as the ice-queen Mayor of New York and Fred Ward as Witherspoon's offbeat father.

Number 9: James Bond: Die Another Day
Another year, another Bond movie. This one stars of course, Pierce Brosnan. But his sexy sidekick this time around is none other than the blubbering (remember the Oscars?) Halle Berry. Bond finds some bad guys and chases them all around the world. According to rumors, there are some pretty sweet chase scenes involving hovercrafts. (Sounds a bit familiar?) Bond apparently ends up in Iceland where he experiences the power of an amazing new

Turn to MOVIES, page 9

Pioneer Valley's SOURCE for...

✓theater

By Christine Papaeidis
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The upcoming theater schedule at the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center is full of amazing opportunities to catch some of the best productions the student community has to offer. From October through early December, the Fine Arts Center will offer a variety of shows from dance to orchestra to dramas.

The first show to kick off the season is BLAST II: Shockwave, originating from the recently acclaimed 2001 Tony Award winning theatrical show BLAST. Blast II mixes drill movements and complex choreography with musical performance on brass and percussion instruments, making this innovative show something you shouldn't miss.

If you like the sounds of the piano, you'll love Jon Nakamatsu, "the poet of the keyboard" as he is proclaimed in Spotlight, a magazine published by the Fine Arts Center. In 1997, Nakamatsu was named the Gold Medalist of the Tenth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition. He is the only American to achieve this distinction.

The Mark Morris Dance Group from Brooklyn, New York would be an exciting way to spend your Thursday night. "His dancers make you fall in love again while dancing, dancing to music and dancing as instinct and life force," heralded the Fine Arts Center promotional guide. The show combines graceful modern dance with delightful melodies, complete with live musical accompaniment.

Imagine the Bread of Angels, a hip-hop inspired concert version of Martin Espada's award-winning book of dramatic poems, takes audiences back to the early hip-hop ages when music soothed the sole and influenced many people and their communities.

Turn to THEATER, page 7

✓shows

By Bill Bowce
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

